SHIP'S CREW DID NOT AID SAVING LIFE.

Captain of Anyox Said but Two of Alaska Sailors Were Willing to Help.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

VANCOUVER (B. C.) Aug. 20.—Only two members of the crew of the steamer Alaska, sunk off the California coast with the loss of many lives, were willing to man boats from the rescue steamer Anyox to go to the aid of victims of the wreck, Capt. Snoddy, master of the Anyox, declared in a statement here today.

Capt. Snoddy, in his statement, took exception to testimony reported to have been given by First Officer William E. McClintock, of the Alaska before a Federal board of inquiry Thursday, to the effect that McClintock had made two separate attempts to get a volunteer crew to go from the Anyox in search of survivors, but was stopped on both occasions by Capt. Snoddy.

"Mr. McClintock's offer was not taken seriously," Capt. Snoddy said, "as most of the boats and rafts that had been picked up were only about half full, and hardly any of those rescued were able to pull an oar or make a painter fast. Also, only two of the Alaska's crew offered their services.

"I told them they could go, but advised them the best thing that could be done was for the Anyox to continue cruising in the neighborhood of the wreck, blowing her whistle, and thus locating survivors. I refused permission for members of our crew to go, as they were needed aboard to get survivors aboard the ship from the boats. Outside of three or four men, including one steward, none of the Alaska's crew gave assistance in this work, in fact, keeping clear of the oil soaked victims. Later, when I heard voices from the water, I suggested manning boats to pick them up. Two of the Alaska's crew offered their services, but made no attempt to man the boats, nor did they offer to assist when a lifeboat returned loaded with survivors."

GET MORE MACHINES FROM QUARRY GRAVE.

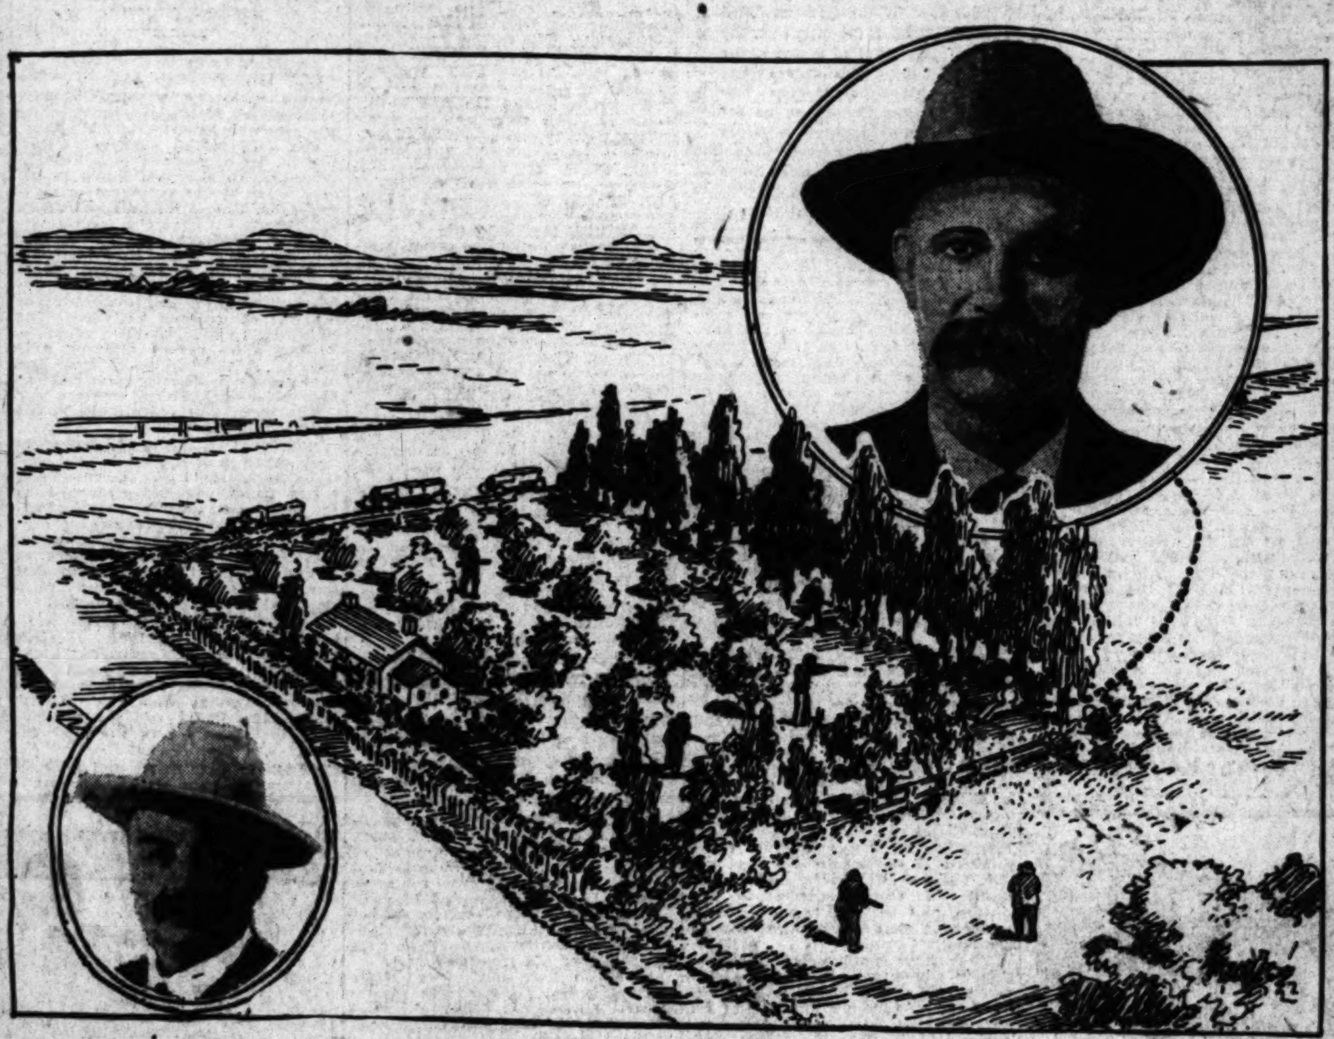
Man Hunt Reaches Climax in Gun Fight in Peach Orchard.



Sheriff E. G. McMartin (above,) Constable W. E. Kelly and Sketch Showing How Murderer was Cornered.
Brought to bay in cover of trees near Owensmouth, Mexican identified as Pedro Ramirez, slayer of the two officers, sent bullet into his own heart and was found dead after storm of shots had swept his hiding place.

SLAYS OFFICERS, FIGHTS POSSE, THEN KILLS SELF.

Trapped Murderer Ends Life After Shooting Down Noted Ventura Sheriff and Deputy.

BY ALBERT F. NATHAN,
Deputy Sheriff and "Times" Representative with the Posse.

At bay in a dense windbreak of fir trees a mile east of Owensmouth and surrounded by scores of officers armed with rifles and shotguns, a Mexican identified as Pedro Ramirez, slayer of Sheriff E. G. McMartin of Ventura county and Constable W. E. Kelly of Oxnard, shortly after noon yesterday emptied his revolver at the posse and then, reloading, shot himself through the heart.

The self-inflicted death of the double-murderer came just two hours after he had shot down the officers of the law. Fear of the hard-faced police officers and deputy sheriffs led by Sheriff Traeger overcame Ramirez's fear of death just as the pursuers were closing in on his hiding place.

The shot that ended the Mexican's life was followed in less than five minutes by another fired by Deputy Sheriff Moody, the first of the officers to discover the killer's body. The officer's shot was fired before he discovered that Ramirez was dead.

To Patrolman Thomas N. Murray, stationed at Owensmouth, goes the credit for preventing Ramires from escaping after the double murder.

Armed with a rifle and alone, Patrolman Murray took up the chase a few minutes after the first shooting. Less than 100 yards from the spot where Ramires went to hole the police officer shot him in the arm and a second shot shattered the fugitive's right leg. On his hands and knees, the Mexican crawled to cover in the windbreak surrounding a peach orchard on the J. C. Craig ranch.

Citizens armed with rifles, aroused by the shots, ruched to the orchard and stood guard with Patrolman Murray until a posse from Central Police Station here and another from the Los Angeles Sheriff's office, headed by Sheriff Traeger, arrived on the scene.

BATTLE JOINED.

Posted in peach trees, along the road, behind telegraph poles and on the roof of the Craig ranch house, officers and residents of the neighborhood poured a barrage of rifle, shotgun and revolver bullets at the spot in the windbreak where Ramirez had been last seen. From time to time shots answered those of the posse, telling the man hunters that their game still lived.

Shortly after Sheriff Traeger arrived on the scene he organized his deputies and the police officers into a long line. Men were posted all about the orchard and two wer "spotted" in a large field next to it. With the remaining men, Sheriff Traeger started to beat the orchard and the thick fir windbreak.

Five revolver shots, fired by the fugitive, followed in a short space by a sixth shot, ended the man hunt. Ramirez, wanted for three murders, was dead. A few minutes later Deputy Sheriff Moody fired one shot into the body when he discovered it propped against a tree and believed that the murderer was still alive.

A cry of "he's shot himself" went up as soon as the bleeding body of the Mexican was dragged from between the fir trees where it was discovered. A bullet wound over the dead man's heart, still bleeding and marked by powder, told the tale.

KELLY SMILES.

Just as the body was dragged to the roadside by the officers, a clanging bell announced an ambulance and, blocked by the machines in the road, the ambulance came to a stop. In it was Constable Kelly, mortally wounded. With two bullet holes in his body, he was told that the bandit was dead. A smile crossed his face and with blood trickling from his mouth, he whispered, "That's good."

He was hurried to the Receiving

MURDER IS CHARGED TO PREACHER.

San Jose Man is Taken Into Custody After Investigation Following Wife's Drowning.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN JOSE, Aug. 20.—The Rev. Dr. John A. Spencer, formerly of Santa Rosa was arrested here tonight on a warrant charging him with the murder of his wife. He is held at the County Jail. Dr. Spencer refused to discuss the charges against him, but asked who had sworn to the complaint.

Spencer leased a fruit ranch off Alum Rock avenue near this city shortly after he came here from the north. He has not done any church work in this city. The prisoner was arrested at the lost postoffice when he went there to call for a parcel which had come for him.

The warrant was issued in connection with the death of Mrs. Emma Spencer, who was reported drowned in Clear Lake, July 31, last.

Following Mrs. Spencer's death a Coroner's jury brought in a verdict of death by drowning. Friends of the preacher's wife asked for further investigation and the body was exhumed and an autopsy performed by Drs. M. A. and Charles Craig. The physicians transmitted their findings to Dist.-Atty. Churchill of Lake county and the warrant was issued.

Mrs. Spencer was alone with her husband when she died. The husband was quoted as saying they had been boating on Clear Lake when their craft overturned. His efforts to save his wife were futile, he said.

Mr. Spencer formerly was a clergyman here. He was reported tonight to be in San Jose, where police were notified to arrest him.

Friends of Mrs. Spencer tonight said the couple had become alienated about a year ago, and Mrs. Spencer for a time went to live at the home of some friends. They said that when a woman friend of the pastor moved away from town a reconciliation was affected and she returned to her husband.

CONFERENCE A PUZZLER.

France Sees Jap Bogey Loom.

Believes America Wants All of Europe to Take Sides on Pacific Questions.

Taking for Granted That Disarmament Part of Meet Will be Secondary.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PARIS, Aug. 20.—The French are as yet very much at sea about the Washington conference, taking it for granted that the disarmament end of the meeting is secondary. So far as land disarmament goes, they are disposed to believe that the conference will be a vast international bargaining affair in which America will seek, above all, to strengthen her diplomatic position vis a vis Japan.

It is more or less in that vein that comments upon the coming parley are made. Most French writers see America about to ask that Europe, to an extent, take the American rather than the Japanese end of the Pacific argument, and some go so far as to suggest that the United States might offer to cancel the Allied debt to attain that result. This bold suggestion was made by Jacques Dainville in Liberte yesterday.

HAS THESIS READY.

If President Harding's conference makes such progress that, after dealing with sea disarmament or limitation of armament, it can approach land disarmament, the French are ready with their thesis, which will be that France stands ready to reduce her army if by other means she is assured that security which a strong army gives her.

Vice versa, the French will refuse to reduce their army unless such promise of security is given. In such a discussion it is easy to see that

REAPPORTIONMENT PLAN ROBS LOS ANGELES.

Scheme Hatched by State Machine to Bar South from Obtaining Legal Legislative Representation.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 20.—The State administration, held responsible by many Southern California legislators for failure of the last Legislature to adopt a reapportionment measure, has drafted a tentative reapportionment scheme of its own, which is to be submitted to a special legislative session and in which Los Angeles county is singled out for sacrifice.

Under the census of 1920 Los Angeles city and county is entitled to a minimum of twenty-one State Assemblymen and ten State Senators, this being an increase of six Assemblymen and two Senators.

The State machine, however, more concerned in placating the injured feelings of Northern California voters, while still hoping to hang on to the political affections of the south, proposes to give Los Angeles city and county three new Assemblymen and two new Senators.

VENGEANCE VOWED.

This inspired plan is said to be the "happy compromise" occasionally hinted at by friends of the administration after the Legislature adjourned and the Los Angeles representatives returned to their districts vowing vengeance on Gov. Stephens for what they alleged to be his refusal to come to their rescue when reapportionment hung in the balance.

Los Angeles city and county lawmakers supported the Boggs reapportionment bill, giving the southern county twenty-one Assemblymen and ten Senators, although the claim was made that under a strict interpretation of the State Constitution the Los Angeles contingent should have twenty-two members in the lower house and eleven members in the Senate.

The ire of the southern county men can only be guessed at, therefore, when they learn of the scheme to hold them down to eighteen lower house members and concede them only a minimum of their claims for the Senate.

POLITICAL SCHEME.

The administration reapportionment plan does not end with a general redistricting of the State, how-

RADICAL "DRYS" WINNERS.

Amendments in Congress Liberalizing Enforcement Laws are Shattered by Conference.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Both Senate and House amendments liberalizing prohibition enforcement emerged in a badly shattered state from the secret sessions of the joint conference committee whcih reported today a complete agreement on the Campbell-Willy-Sweet bill. Outstanding features of the conference agreement were:

Disappearance of the House provision interpreted as legalizing home brewing and distilling.

Elimination of the Senate provisions designed to prevent unwarranted search of automobiles, baggage and other private property by prohibition agents.

Retention of the provision of the original Stanley amendment adopted unanimously by the Senate to protect private dwellings from invasion by prohibition agents without search warrants.

RADICAL DRYS WIN.

The results of the conference was a victory for the radical drys. Indignation ran high among the wets and the more conservative drys. The report was received with such amazement that the whole program was thrown into confusion and the recess prospects are uncertain.

Wet leaders, reinforced by some of the less rabid drys in the Senate, made it plain that they would never consent to the passage of the bill in the form reported by the committee. They made no effort to conceal their determination to filibuster against the bill to the last ditch if they found themselves unable to muster sufficient votes to reject the report.

In view of this apparent impasse, the chief hope of a recess now rests on the possibility that the House may refuse to support the conferees and agree to accept the Stanley amendment.

GLOOMY PROSPECT.

Another prospect, less promising, however, is that the weary Congress, bent on taking a vacation, will refuse to stay in Washington to wrangle about denying doctors the right to prescribe beer as medicine and will go on its holiday without acting finally on the conference report.

Two members of the conference committee did not sign the report. They were Senator Ashurst of Arizona, and Representative Dyer of Missouri. Senator Ahurst openly bolted the conference and washed his hands of the entire proceeding after the conferees decided to torpedo the Stanley amendment.

Although an ardent prohibitionist himself, Senator Ashurst contended that prohibition enforcement has run to such excesses that legislative measures are imperatively necessary to preserve the Constitutional rights of citizens.

Senator Sterling, South Dakota, laid the conference report before the Senate but made no effort to take it up today. He probably will ask the Senate to act on it Monday.

LOAD FOOD FOR RUSSIA.

Hungry Children to Eat Soon.

Stars and Stripes Soon to Fly Over Soup Kitchens in Capital Cities.

Prayers for Relief Offered Up in Moscow as Yankees Order Supplies.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

RIGA, Aug. 20.—American rations for the relief of Russia's starving soon will be under way. Enough food to feed 1,000,000 children and plague victims is being loaded at Danzig for shipment by boat and rail to Petrograd and Moscow via Riga. Under the leadership of Capt. Philip Carroll of Portland, Or., and Grand Rapids, Mich., the advance guard of Hoover's feeders will enter Russia Thursday. Within a few days the Stars and Stripes will fly over old soup kitchens in the old and new Russian capitals.

The first real program was outlined today by Capt. Carroll. Orders were given for the loading of 8000 tons of food. This stock consists of the famous balanced ration which was given to millions of children in Austria, Germany, Poland and Belgium during and following the war. It consists of milk, sugar, fats, peas, beans, rice and cocoa.

REQUISITIONS PLACED.

In the meanwhile tentative requisitions today were placed through London and New York, so that shipments can be in the middle of the Atlantic en route here by the time the feeding of the children of Russia begins. The Hooverites hope to finish a survey of the Volga district so that if they decide to organize operations through the southern ports, instead of Petrograd and Moscow, as originally planned, they can send wireless messages to the Red Cross ships in mid-ocean to proceed to Rostov and Novorossyk.

One of the first steamers will be directed to Petrograd harbor. This will test the facilities of the port and also make it possible to establish a feeding station at once.

CALIFORNIANS ON JOB.

The A.R.A. headquarters during the relief operations in Russia will be in Moscow. With Capt. Carroll are John P. Gregg of Portland, William I. Shaffroth of Denver, and Carlton Bowden and Thomas Burland of Pasadena, Cal. Kennedy MacPherson of Chicago now is at Hamburg, en route to Riga, and will probably enter Russia on Thursday.

The advance guard into Russia will split after it has gone into the interior, Carroll remaining in Moscow and Gregg heading the investigating party into the Volga district. The most important alterations in the program will depend upon the report of conditions in the Volga. Extension of relief into the Volga region from Moscow will proceed as soon as the facilities permit.

Although the personnel is limited to 100, it is expected that more men will be sent, should it be found that the Volga report warrants it.

IMMIGRANT PROBLEM GREAT.

New Law Works Hardships Among Incoming Throngs and Many Desirables Are Kept Away.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Restriction of immigration under the temporary law limiting the admission of foreign-born to a very small percentage of the number of residents of the United States of the same blood, is causing much embarrassment to the administration. On several occasions it has been the subject of Cabinet discussions and the Commissioner-General of Immigration and the Secretary of Labor are giving the problems their personal attention.

Many wealthy immigrants attempt to make this country their home and find that the quota allowed under the law has already been exceeded for the quarter. In several instances these future residents have been admitted by executive order and their entry charged against the quota of the country from which they came for the next quarter.

SOME CASES EASY.

Where the foreign-born are tourists or professional and business men, and are not coming to the United States to live, the way is easy and gradually the new regulations to fit the new conditions are being worked down to a greater smoothness, but many of the cases are distressing in the extreme and the administration is frequently in a quandary as to how to enforce the law and yet not be terribly inhuman.

Several cases of rich and able men from Australia and other Pacific points have been reported from the west coast, and while most of these have been adjusted, the present law, which will expjire in a few months, has worked many hardships and has prevented this country from receiving many desirable additions.

DIVERTED TO CANADA.

In addition to this many immigrants from the British possessions have been diverted to Canada, and the immigration authorities say that this will continue for a long time to come. In fact, those charged with the administration of the present immigration laws see little deliverance from the distressing problems as to the admission of immigrants until a new law is evolved, to take the place of this legislation, which will be more elastic and can be administered in such a way to admit the desirable and efficient immigrants while closing the door to the undesirables on which no major cause for exclusion can be placed.

Commissioner-Gen. of Immigration Husband is spending much of his time at the Atlantic ports to personally avoid as much as possible distress and desolation on the part of immigrants who cannot be admitted. In the past few weeks the steamship lines have stopped, by order of the United States authorities, the racing of ships to American ports to get the immigrants in before the quotas are exceeded. Some of the greatest misery has been caused to immigrants who have sailed half way around the world on slow boats, hoping to arrive while there is yet room for men and women from their respective countries. Details of the exceptions made are withheld because of complications that might arise and precedents established.

made coffee. The quality of all this food was excellent.

As the attendant presented me the bill I noticed it was 50,000 rubles, and I supposed that I started in amazement. Then, recalling that this impressive sum meant actually only two American dollars, I laughed and tipped the waiter 10,000 rubles.

Although, as I have written, starvation does not exist, even in the cities, the conditions as regards food are very hard and irksome, especially to the middle and upper classes, to whom only a short while ago all possible luxuries and comforts were accessible.

There is plenty of bread, such as it is, the so-called black bread, and white bread is beginning to appear as the peasants become freer and freer in circulating their produce. And there is a sufficiency of potatoes and usually enough meat to go around. But there is very little sugar, and butter and fat are extremely difficult to obtain. Milk and eggs are issued only to the children, and the sick are often denied these necessaries. It was very seldom that I saw chocolate, and I do not remember seeing oranges or lemons or pastry anywhere except in the hidden-away restaurants.

CONVENIENCES DISAPPEAR.

Almost all the conveniences of life have decayed under the inefficiency of the system. Except for Moscow itself none of the cities have regular street-car service. They are unlighted at night. Water pipes go to smash when freezing comes. The sewers are broken. Fevers and disease are rife. Medicines and the equipment of physicians are very scarce. There is a famine in salt and kerosene, and everybody needs cotton cloth, nails and wrought iron or cast-iron tools and implements of all kinds, and generally from the standpoint of the enjoyment of life existence in Russia is a grim and difficult thing.

At certain hours of the day all citizens may ride free of charge. But tickets are required and as another sidelight on the inefficiency of the Great Experiment it usually takes a day to get a ticket. Moreover for every privilege at least 100 tickets are issued. A curse of Communistic methods is duplication and still more duplication. For the street cars, the theaters, the motion-picture houses, the opera and other forms of amusement, tickets are required, but it is a wearisome thing to go through the toil of obtaining one from the proper commissionariats. As I have written before, I think, only good Communists get the tickets, and in these latter days of the soviet an astonishing number of the tavarishi are not ashamed to graft and speculate with these cards of admission.

DEPLORABLE CONDITIONS.

I was greatly interested in the care of the sick, in the hospitals and in the practice of the medical profession under Communism. On the whole it was a melancholy study. A visit to a Russian hospital, or to make the rounds with a Russian doctor these days, would easily bring the tears to the eyes of even unemotional persons. The lack of everything is pitiable. This condition is one of the great tragedies of the outlawry of Russia.

The soviet commandeered all the doctors, giving them a daily food allotment and a salary of 25,000 rubles a month. You will remember that 25,000 rubles amount to $1. The doctors then became public servants, subject to the call alike of all patients; receiving no pay. They made their visits on an order from the commissar of the district. A dreadful situation resulted from this clumsy and impossible machinery.

In a case of illness, however, critical, it was necessary for a doctor to get an order from his district commissar before he could go out to relieve the suffering or even to save the life of the sick person. Sometimes the commissar was occupied. Sometimes he could not be located at once. Then when the order was actually obtained something might have arisen to delay the doctor himself. Frequently it was two or three days before even calls to grave cases could be filled. But this is not all. On arriving at the house of the patient and diagnosing the illness, the doctor wrote a prescription. The prescription had to go to a government magazine of medicine, and before it could be filled, two or three more days might elapse. Not unnaturally the patient died in many instances. Can you imagine the mortality that would result from such a system in the case of babies whose illnesses must be attended to at once?

People who have the money or who could get it went secretly to the doctors and fed them liberally. They feed them throughout the illness, in violation of the soviet rule. Merely another example of how the immutable laws of nature, self-protection, self-interest, love or fear—insist on maintaining themselves despite the flimsy political and social machines devised by men.

The absolute lack of so many requirements is pathetically revealed in the hospitals. There are not enough medicines to go around and not enough visiting physicians to care properly for the wretched patients.

I do not say that conditions were so shocking in all of the hospitals, or even in most of them, but it is an uncontrovertible fact that the poverty and the need of the Russians, along with their characteristic "put everything off until tomorrow" spirit, and the general clumsiness and inefficiency of soviet administration, falls particularly hard upon the sick. An instance of this general lack of the most ordinary requirements was noted by me when a friend of mine, very near-sighted, broke his eye glasses. Several days later when I asked him why he had not repaired his glasses, he told me it was impossible to do so. The soviet had overlooked the fact that optical lenses do not grow upon the human face.

"People who break their glasses remain blind," my friend explained, quietly.

I made a special search for optometrists in Moscow, being curious to verify this remarkable comment. With the aid of a cabby I finally found in the obscurity of a back room in a dingy house in the very outskirts of the city, two grinders of optical lenses. They were working secretly in behalf of their friends and people introduced to them by their freinds, their only advertisement being by word of mouth and very guardedly at that. Their equipment was small and they were in need of many things they could not procure. They did what every other well-meaning person was doing in Russia, the best they could.

HARD WORK DEMANDED.

The amount of work demanded of the people by the government is overwhelming. Attendance at all meetings is obligatory, as is participation in campaigns of every sort. In addition to his daily assigned work every Communist must put in four hours weekly at such public service tasks as street cleaning, loading cars and cleaning up railroad depots and public buildings.

The Communists are supposed to follow a high and rigid standard of morals, and misbehavior of all sorts is sharply penalized. Crimes are punished severely. In theory at least Communism demands great effort, great sterifice and impeachable conduct. It is not in such moral theories and standards, but in its simple uncomprehension of human nature and of the laws of cause and effect that Communism can be attacked.

They have paid immense attention to education. One of their inspiring programs is the waking up of the people from a slumber of ignorance that has lasted for centuries. Education in Russia has traveled a slow and tortuous road. Up to Peter the Great only the clergy made desultory efforts to educate youths in the service of the church. The children of the nobles and of the wealthy families had private tutors, but the range of knowledge of these teachers was limited.

They knew little about the exact sciences and not much about simple arithmetic. As for geography they thought the world was supported upon the back of four whales. Their knowledge of medicine went back to the middle ages. Knowledge was feared as an instrument of the devil, and there is an authentic tale of a great noble who was accused of trafficking with the devil because an algebra text-book was found in the possession of his son. His property was confiscated and he was sent to Siberia. Peter the Great altered this a little, but even at the end of his reign there were only 110 elementary schools in all Russia.

CONDITIONS IMPROVE.

Then came into existence the zemstvos, the essentially democratic, elective provincial assemblies with limited self-government. These were, still are, the very cores of Russian life. They attend to building and maintaining schools, libraries, hospitals and roads and to supervising other public necessities. As those local governments grew education expanded, but even in 1912 only 7,000,000 Russians out of a population of 180,000,000 could find accommodations in the schools.

The government supervised all courses of study and rigidly limited the amount of instruction. Literature was virtually under the ban and history was more a chroncile of fables and miracles than a study of past events and institutions.

Unable to escape from his ignorance the Russian in these days of the old regime was tied hand and feet in his efforts to better himself. His letters had to be written for him, he was cheated in written contracts, he was duped and deceived on every side.

It is almost impossible for us to conceive of the abysmal ignorance of the Russian peasant who makes up more than two-thirds of the population of his country. His ignorance was such that he could not understand what the European war, or even his own revolution, was about. The most ordinary facts of world activity are a mystery to Ivan. This goes far to explain Russia's attitude in the great war.

EDUCATION BY FORCE.

Now the soviet planned to change all this. From the very outset the Communist with Lenin at their head adopted a program of education which was to be put through at forced draft. Lenin's idea was that little time would be vouchsafed him for the Communistic experiment, that it was a case of make or break.

I am surveying Communism utterly dispassionately throughout this description of my experiences and adventures in Russia. Where I detected absurdities and evils, inefficiency and blindness, I have said so. Where I have noted a trend toward fine and noble things I have marked it down. For the truth, as I have written, is usually not all white or all black. It is very apt to be gray.

All humanity is a mixture of good and bad, of wise intent and unwise execution; of limited intelligence and sometimes working with and sometimes working against the always irresistible laws of nature. I do say here that the soviet seems to be winning for Russia in a brief time what many generations have failed to gain for her previously. It is wholly possible that infinitely more along such lines of mental development will be accomplished by the downright force of soviet rule than could have been obtained under the rule of the social revolutionists under Kerensky if that man and that cause had succeeded.

I saw with my own eyes that Russians nowadays are learning under the whip many political and social lessons. They are tremendously interested in the business and the government of their country. And occasionally their attitude is not altogether that of silent obedience, for the power of Communism is based not at all on the slavish obedience of the people, but upon their support after a good deal of consideration and even opposition.

FOUNDED ON TERRORISM.

It has been said that terror is the principal weapon of the soviet. That is not now altogether true, although it was true enough two years ago. Soviet methods are drastic, it is true. They have large programs which appeal to them to carry through. They are in great haste to justify their experiment. But after all they could do nothing without the support of the vast Red army. Why, does that immense armed force of upward of 4,000,000 men remain loyal to the system? It is not particularly well fed, as I myself saw, for no man received more than a pound and a half of bread per day, and the rest of his meals included soup and porridge with very little meat. The Red soldier has few luxuries, and he is more often in rags than not. Moreover, he hates the very idea of war, he has told me many times, and yearns to go back to his village and his little tract of land.

Yet up to now he has given Communism the support of his bayonet. Why? The reason is perfectly simple, as he explained it to me himself. Where other systems and other causes failed to appeal to the truly patriotic soul of the Russian people the Communists succeeded. Where other parties and other systems intrigued with alien countries, and even with the exiled aristocrats, the Communists played a straight out Russia for the Russians game. This, as we say in the American game of stud poker, was their "ace in the hole."

They managed to weld the Russian people together in the cause of national integrity. They advertised themselves as the defenders of the country and they were so regarded. Besides, whatever their obvious faults and deficiencies, they were on the whole men of intelligence, of force and decision. They knew how to take command.

FAIL TO COMPREHEND.

Some of their edicts and regulations have been ridiculous, in their lack of comprehension of the simplest facts of human nature. They stand in grotesque opposition to the law of cause and effect, to the first principle of supply and demand.

But the Communist fitted a peculiar phase and crisis of the Russian revolution—of the development of the Russian people. The sole fact that they have held power for more than three years is enough in itself to justify all these statements of mine which sprang from careful observation and from conversation with all classes of the Russian people.

While on these matters and while specifying the good in the soviet system, let me still follow the road of truth by broadly instancing some of the evils.

I saw that in Russia there is no such thing as personal liberty. The government seizes a large share of the peasant's produce and gives him nothing for it, and he is obliged at the same time to perform hard labor at the government's command. In the cities men are virtually imprisoned in the mills and factories. They are forbidden to strike, they dare not go anywhere without a pass.

I saw that in Russia political freedom does not exist, for the soviet tolerates one party only, that of the extreme radical. The other parties dare not hold mass meetings. They dare not issue newspapers or even handbills. They suffer constantly from raids by the secret police.

USES ARBITRARY POWER.

I saw that the Tche-Ka, whose name is made up of syllables and letters of the title "Tchresvit-chainaya Komissya," the extraordinary commission to fight counter revolution and profiteering, exercises arbitrary power. Citizens are arrested on mere suspicion. Men and women are held for long periods in solitary confinement without a charge being presented against them. It descends in the night time on private houses, seizes documents and rushes its victims off to jail.

Precisely as was done by the old secret police of the Czar, it maintains a list of suspects, and men and women blanch with terror in Russia today, as I well know, at the very thought of their names being on that list. I think I have written that on the whole it diagnoses and punishes crime shrewdly and justly. The trouble is not in the justness of its operation, but in the existence of the thing itself; an institution so wholly incompatible with free government. But the point to keep in mind is that free government in Russia does not exist.

With all of this goes corruption. Later on I shall write about the grafting I recently noted, and about the change in the general attitude of the lower orders of the government toward their masters. It is a singular story. We will see in good time whither this thing called Communism is moving. I promise you that when you hear the truth you will be astounded.

DENIES CENTRAL PACIFIC DEAL.

Sproule Says Union Has Not Acquired Tracks from Ogden to San Francisco.

The Times is in receipt of a telegram from William Sproule, president of the Southern Pacific Railroad, denying that the Union Pacific has acquired the properties of the Central Pacific, with trackage from Ogden to San Francisco, as set forth in dispatches from Omaha printed in The Times a few days ago. The Southern Pacific has long had virtual control of the Central Pacific.

GOOD OUTLOOK FOR INDUSTRY.

"Fairly Encouraging" in the Mountain Districts.

Railway Activity Renewal is General Relief.

Department of Labor Has Issued Report.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20.—Observers consider the general industrial outlook "fairly encouraging" in the mountain district of Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Utah, Arizona and Nevada, according to a report made public here today by the employment service of the United States Department of Labor.

"There are increased opportunities for employment in many localities throughout the district," the report said. "While mining and allied industries show little improvement, the renewal of railroad activities has considerably relieved the situation. Several cities report building programs. A slowing up of pulic improvements is offset by seasonal demands for agricultural workers."

The report for each State in the district follows:

COLORADO—Although industrial lines other than railroad shops continue to show little improvement, better conditions are evidenced by the increased demand for agricultural workers, re-employment in railroad activities and the inauguration of public works. Mining centers reflect the general depression in that line. Building prospects are fairly good. Optimism is more general.

NEW MEXICO—Although railroad operations continue sluggish and mining is much restricted, highway construction, building and farm work have caused improvement in the employment situation. Partial re-employment in railroad occupations is looked for in the near future.

ARIZONA—Building and agricultural lines display activity and highway work offers opportunities to a limited number. On the other hand, the mining depression continues, with small prospects of early improvement. Lumber has fallen off.

UTAH—The depression in mining continues, with additional curtailments noted in several localities; no important change is likely within the next three months. Harvest labor is in moderate demand. Railroad activities and the building trades show improvement. Considerable highway work is planned, though operations so far are sluggish.

WYOMING — Employment gains are reported. Railroad activities show substantial improvement, while the outlook in mining is somewhat brighter, though no marked immediate improvement is looked for. A fair amount of building is under way. Public improvements are affording work to a considerable number.

NEVADA — With harvesters in moderate demand, public work fairly active and somewhat brighter prospects in mining, employment conditions are more encouraging.

IDAHO—With railroad occupations showing material gain and a considerable [illegible] labor, unemploy[illegible] ually reduced. On the [illegible] mining continues [illegible] sis, building is [illegible] ment work is [illegible] ber operations have [illegible] slightly.

FEWER UNEMPLOYED IN MONTANA CITIES.

INCREASED BUILDING OPERATIONS NOTED AT BILLINGS. BUTTE MINES DULL.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20.—Unemployment is on the decrease in several Montana cities, according to a report prepared here by the employment service of the United States Department of Labor.

Portions of the report covering Montana cities follow:

BILLINGS.—Employment shows an upward trend, with increased building operations, civic and highway improvements and agricultural activities offering work to considerable numbers. The outlook is regarded as encouraging.

BUTTE.—Mining continues greatly restricted, with little prospect for improvement for at least sixty days. There is a surplus of general labor.

HELENA.—Mining and allied industries continue greatly depressed. In other lines there is increased activity. Building shows improvement; agricultural lines and public improvements offer employment to a limited number; the railroad occupations are more active.

GREAT FALLS.—Railroad occupations and public improvements are showing increased employment. On the other hand, building is slack. The net result is more encouraging from an employment standpoint.

MISSOULA.—While a downward trend is noted in lumbering, this is offset by extensive building operations, greater activity, in railroad lines, and a demand for farm labor.

CITY WORKERS SPURN UNIONS.

Organizers in Drive to Beat Open-Shop System.

"Will Succeed or Die in the Attempt," is Boast.

Electrical and Plumbing Inspectors Stand Pat.

Labor organizers yesterday resumed their efforts on the sidewalk outside of the City Hall to unionize city employees as part of the drive now on to convert Los Angeles from the largest open-shop city in the world to one controlled by organized labor.

Centering their efforts on the city electrical department, the organizers tackled as many as possible of the city's sixteen electrical inspectors and attempted to obtain their promises to go to the Labor Temple to join the union.

"We are working all over the city," one organizer told an inspector, "to unionize every trade, completely, and you might as well fall into line. We are going to succeed this time or die in the attempt."

"NOTHING DOING."

"Nothing doing!" was the answer given by the electrical inspectors to the men from the Labor Temple, and the city employees were fortified by the attitude of City Electrician R. H. Manahan, who has always taken the stand that Americanism and efficiency are the only tests for city electrical inspectors, and who holds that labor union membership has no place in his department. In fact, Business Agent Conley of the Electrical Workers' Union was recently given the word to "lay off" of any efforts to spread labor union propaganda among the men in the city's electrical department.

In their attempts to obtain new members the warning was disregarded by the men from the Labor Temple, anxious to unionize the electrical department of the city so that, with unionized inspectors, the open-shop electrical contractors can be made to unionize their shops. The plan has failed, however, due to the strong stand taken by Mr. Manahan and the city inspectors themselves.

UNIONS' EFFORTS.

Similar efforts to unionize the city plumbing inspection force under Chief Building Inspector Backus have also met with failure. The union plumbers, however, are setting their plans to control the industry in Los Angeles by working through the new Plumbing Inspection Board appointed by Mayor Cryer on August 1. This board is made up of Dr. Irving R. Bancroft, who was long a member of the State Board of Health, Charles M. Swinnerton, a master plumber, and Oliver Fender.

The board was created under an ordinance jammed through hurriedly during the closing hours of the former City Council, largely at the behest of the leaders from the Labor Temple. Under the ordinance, a man who desires to work as a plumber in Los Angeles must pass an examination before this board as to his experience and ability and obtain a permit before he can get employment. The labor unions hoped, through the board, to make it easy for members of the unions to get permits, but making the way hard and troublesome for nonunion plumbers who appeared for examinations.

Mayor Cryer was warned of the plan. He believes that the men he has selected will give a square deal to all plumbers. The new board has not as yet organized, but it is expected will hold its first sessions within the next ten days.

WEARS HIS ROBES AND PAYS FINE.

Mexico Has Ruled Against Priests on Streets in Church Dress.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

GUADALAJARA, Aug. 20. Archbishop Francisco Orozoco y Jiminez, one of the high Catholic prelates in Mexico, has been fined $100 by municipal authorities here for appearing on the streets in clerical garb.

Chief of Police Rivera recently ordered the arrest of all priests appearing on the thoroughfares in cassocks, and several disagreeable incidents are said to have resulted.

KILLS OFFICERS AND SLAYS SELF.

Hospital in Los Angeles, and died twenty minutes after arriving there.

According to witnesses of the shooting, in which Sheriff McMartin was instantly killed and Constable Kelly, a deputy sheriff, was fatally wounded, the two officers called at the home of Mrs. Antonia Valarde in Owensmouth yesterday morning with warrants for the arrest of Jose Duran, alias Natividad Duran, and Pedro Ramirez, known among the Mexicans in the neighborhood as "the bad men of the valley," and wanted for the murder of Jose Garcia, a 20-year-old youth, who was shot in the back and killed after he had been held up near the American Beet Sugar factory in Ventura county at 7 p.m. on the 14th inst.

Sheriff McMartin, according to Mrs. Valarde, first asked her if Ramirez and Duran, who were known to have rented a room from her, four days before, were in the house. Mrs. Valarde, anxious to assist the officers, stated that she believed both men had left early in the morning and had not returned. Sheriff McMartin then notified Constable Kelly that a search of their room would be made.

When the officers were shown to the Mexicans' room they discovered the door locked and at once knocked. Speaking broken English, a Mexican asked their business and was ordered to open the door in the name of the law. Without further warning, six shots crashed through the door and both the Sheriff and the Conostable collapsed on the floor.

Mrs. Valarde ran screaming from the house and notified Patrolman Murray, who at once took up the trail of the murderer, after telephoning to Central Police Station and the Sheriff's office for help.

The official police account of the murder for which Duran and Ramirez were wanted states that Jose Garcia, a young beet-field worker, was held up by two Mexicans, later identified as Duran and Ramirez, while near the time office of the A.B.S. factory near Oxnard early on the evening of the 14th. When the bandits discovered that their victim had no money, he was ordered to walk down the road. Before he had taken a dozen steps he was shot in the back and killed. Ramirez was charged with the shooting while Duran, the police assert, is the man who searched Garcia.

Early yesterday morning Mexican field hands, tired of the crimes of the two valley "bad men," reported to Sheriff McMartin that the wanted men were in hiding in Owensmouth, at the home of Mrs. Valarde. The informants stated that Mrs. Valvarde did not know the two roomers were wanted by the police and had simply rented them a room.

Armed with warrants for the two Mexicans Sheriff McMartin went to Oxnard and asked Constable Kelly to accompany him. The two officers went by automobile directly to the Valarde home and the shooting followed in less than five minutes.

HUNT SUSPECT.

Scores of policemen and deputy sheriffs were detailed late yesterday afternoon to make an all-night search of the hills about Owensmouth for Duran. At the time of the first shooting, Duran, according to the information now in the hands of the police, was in the business section of Owensmouth buying food. Both of the men had planned to attend a dance last night. Duran is believed to have heard of the shooting and to have fled to the hills.

The body of Constable Kelly was moved late yesterday from the Receiving Hospital to undertaking rooms in Van Nuys. The bodies of Sheriff McMartin and the dead bandit are in the same establishment. An inquest will be held tomorrow.

WOMAN ACTS FAST.

To a woman, the wife of Patrolman Murray of Owensmouth, goes the credit of the prompt call for help received by the police and Sheriff's office in Los Angeles. As soon as Patrolman Murray left his home and took up the trail of the murderer, Mrs. Murray went to her telephone and called Captain of Detectives Moffat and Sheriff Traeger. She explained what had occurred and asked for help. Police Detectives O'Brien, Yarrow and Wood and State Inspector Boden, armed with shotguns and rifles, at once left for Owensmouth. Sheriff Traeger, heading a posse of a dozen men, rushed from his office in the same direction. An ambulance from Hollywood Police Station and a second from Central Police Station were dispatched to pick up the wounded.

Policemen from Central Station arrived at the scene of the battle before the Sheriff and his posse. They were met by Patrolman Murray, who, armed with a rifle and a revolver, was directing the posse of citizens who were holding the murderer at bay.

Patrolman Murray informed the police detectives that he had driven the Mexican into the windbreak. He stated that just before the murderer had reached his hiding place a well-directed shot had shattered his right leg and that he had reached cover only by crawling. Several shots fired by the bandit just before the first posse arrived told the waiting officer that his man was still alive.

Just after the police detectives had poured a barrage into the windbreak, Sheriff Traeger and his men arrived and took charge. The Sheriff, whose automobile had developed engine trouble, had been forced to stop a woman driving a high-powered car and order her to take him to the scene of the battle. Until she neared the spot where the Mexican was cornered, the woman driver thought she was in the hands of bandits and learned that she was not being kidnaped only after a long explanation by the Sheriff.

YEARS IN OFFICE.

Sheriff McMartin was 61 years of age. He was a Canadian by birth but with his parents settled in Mendocino county many years ago. Mr. McMartin moved to Ventura county in 1880 and became a bean rancher. He was elected Sheriff in 1902 and held the office until his death yesterday.

The dead sheriff was known throughout California as a fearless officer and many captures were credited to him. He was the victor of a dozen revolver fights and was noted as a quick man on the "draw."

He leaves three daughters, Mrs. J. W. Gastrich of Fillmore, Mrs. Fred Cook and Mrs. A. H. Horsley of Oxnard. There is also a son, Guy McMartin, living in Tehama county.

NOTED FOR BRAVERY.

Deputy Sheriff Kelly's history as a peace officer dates back more than thirty years. From his son, George Kelly of Oxnard, details were learned yesterday of the officer's extreme bravery.

The dead deputy's encounter yesterday was not the first he had had in his long police career. Twice before had criminals shot him. The first time was thirty years ago in Minneapolis, where he was a plainclothes man. A negro whom he was arresting suddenly turned on him and shot him in the leg. Officer Kelly, drawing his gun, fired four times at the negro, all four shots taking effect before the negro's body reached the pavement.

But it was at Oxnard seven years ago that Mr. Kelly displayed the grit that made him famous throughout Southern California.

He was seated in a cigar store with three other officers when a Mexican named Billy Garcia entered and, drawing a revolver, shot Mr. Kelly and his two companions. In spite of a bullet wound two inches from the heart, Mr. Kelly sprang up, seized the would-be murderer and marched him to jail after disarming him. It was not until he had turned his prisoner over to the jailer and had started away that he collapsed. For a long time the officer hovered between life and death but finally recovered and immediately returned to police work.

DESCRIBES SUSPECT.

"Deputy Sheriff Kelly was one of the most efficient officers I have ever met," Capt. Moffat said yesterday. "Although he knew he had but a few minutes to live after reaching the Receiving Hospital, and that every word he said would shorten his life, he insisted on giving us a minute description of Duran, the other Mexican wanted for murder in Ventura county. His very last words were devoted to this description.

"And shortly before he died he said to me: 'Captain, I am going out like Detective Sergeant Fitzgerald did, I guess.'"

1st ANNUAL CHINESE SALE
OPPORTUNITY EXTRAORDINARY

For years our collection of Chinese rugs have been very well and favorably known to the rug devotees of Los Angeles.
This is due to Mr. Constantian's protracted residence in China, which has enabled us to secure the very finest weaves of the Chinese art.
We are offering twenty-seven room size rugs and ten hearth size pieces to the home furnishers of Los Angeles at the lowest prices ever presented.

Come and be merry in the brightest spot in Los Angeles.

Death Grants Heart's Desire of Nursemaid.

The curtain was rung down late yesterday afternoon at the County Hospital on the final act of another of life's tragedies that occur in Los Angeles almost daily.

Kathryn Harris, pretty 18-year-old nursemaid, realized her great desire and died.

For days the girl, who, to police surgeons, described Los Angeles as "hell for a girl who is broke," has been praying for death. Ever since she swallowed a quantity of poison in a Hill-street cafeteria on the 10th inst., she has held to that wish, and she smiled at the police surgeons at the Receiving Hospital and their attempts to save her life.

"What can a girl do when she has no money and no friends?" she asked a reporter who talked to her soon after her attempt on her life. "The dream of my life was to become a graduate nurse, but, somehow, I could never get a start. I was meant for something better than to be a nursemaid to children all my life. And even work at that vocation was hard to get.

"And so I determined that I would be better off dead. I had no money, except a dollar which I gave to a man on the street, who seemed hungry and penniless. He thought I was crazy, I guess, but he seemed glad to get the dollar. I want to die and in spite of all these doctors have done for me I feel somehow that my attempt will be successful," she said.

The body was taken to the Jewel City Undertaking Company's rooms at Glendale by direction of the Coroner. The authorities have been seeking her mother, who is said to live in some small town east of Los Angeles.

MAYOR TO NAME HARBOR BOARD.

Former Police Secretary Said to be on the List.

Social Service Commission Also Appointed.

Selections Made After Weeks of Consideration.

Mayor Cryer will send to the City Council tomorrow morning for confirmation his long-expected appointments to the Board of Harbor Commissioners, and while the Mayor has carefully guarded the names of the three men he has selected, it is believed that the list will contain the name of Edwin M. Daugherty, a well known newspaper man of this city who lately has been engaged in the building and contracting business. Mr. Daugherty was formerly secretary to Chief of Police George K. Home, and during the recent municipal campaign, Mr. Daugherty was in charge of publicity work at the Cryer-for-Mayor headquarters.

In the absence of authoritative information yesterday, there was doubt as to whether or not Mr. Daugherty would be named as chairman of the Harbor board at a salary of $4000 a year, or would be chosen for one of the two other places on the board, the compensation for which is fixed at $10 for each commission meeting attended by the commissioner, though it was believed that Mr. Daugherty was most likely to be selected for the presidency of the board, a position now held by G. M. Gordon.

Among the large number of names of men presented to the Mayor for consideration for places on the board, and from which the final selections were made, those having strong backing were S. A. Jubb, formerly Harbor engineer, Charles E. Richards, president of the Richards-Neustadt Construction Company and Wm. Edgar McKee, who during the World War was a Pacific Coast official of the U. S. Shipping Board, and it was considered possible that one or more of these names would be found in the final list sent to the City Council for confirmation.

WEEKS OF CANVASSING.

The appointments to be sent to the City Council tomorrow represent the final efforts of the Mayor to secure a Harbor board, after weeks of canvassing candidates and of attempting to draft prominent business and shipping men for service on the board. While the Mayor's first choice for chairman of the board was Andrew M. Chaffey, president of the California Bank, opposition to Mr. Chaffey developed among the councilmen whose confirmation was necessary, and Mr. Chaffey declined to permit his name to be sent in when he learned that his selection might be the cause of a rift between the new chief executive and the councilmen.

Once the appointments to the new board had been decided upon, the Mayor called the Councilmen into conference and secured the passage of an ordinance, which takes effect tomorrow, establishing a salary of $4000 a year for the president of the board and the compensation for the other members, and to prevent his slate of selections from being broken by the efforts of disappointed candidates, the Mayor has maintained silence as to whose names he would send to the City Council, the official publication of the names coming when the Mayor's appointments are read in session of the City Council. Just what the fate of the candidates will be at the hands of the Council remains to be seen after the names are read. All of the members of the Council said yesterday that they had not been "sounded out" by the Mayor as to how they would vote on his appointments, and said that they did not know whose names he intended to send in for confirmation.

SOCIAL SERVICE BOARD.

Mayor Cryer will also send to the City Council tomorrow morning for the approval of that body the following five names, constituting an entire new Social Service Commission:

Dr. E. J. Lickley, director of compulsory education and child welfare in the Los Angeles schools and member of the Union League Club.

Miss Therese Levy, member of the board of directors of the Friday Morning Club, and active in Red Cross work.

Rev. E. E. Haring, chaplain at the Los Angeles County Hospital and a writer of social welfare subjects.

James E. Mahon, Los Angeles attorney and vice-president of the Optimo Club.

Mrs. Charles H. Richmond, chairman of the public welfare committee of the Woman's Club of Hollywood and a member of the Friday Morning Club.

It is believed that the City Council will confirm, after the usual one week's consideration, the appointments to the Social Service Commission, but on account of the magnitude of the task confronting the harbor board during the next two years in directing the expenditure of $6,000,000 in harbor development work, there may be some delay and unexpected developments resulting from the Mayor's appointmnets. If the harbor board selections are confirmed quickly and without heated opposition, it will indicate that the hopes of complete harmony between the Mayor and the City Council have been realized.

HIGH-HEEL SHOE KILLS THREE.

Jammed Between Rudder Bar and Guard in Airplane, Causing Crash.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MELBOURNE (Australia) Aug. 20.—A girl's high-heeled shoe jammed between the rudder bar and the wooden guard caused an airplane in flight to crash at Melbourne, with the loss of three lives, including that of the wearer of the high heels.

ARRANGES TO RETURN CAPTAIN TO ENGLAND.

MAN IN BAD CHECK CASE GIVEN ANOTHER CHANCE BY THE COURT.

Arrangements were perfected yesterday by British Consul Osburn, Attorney Vallentine and a representative of the Disabled Veterans of the World War for the return of Capt. Harold F. Davies to England immediately upon the settlement of his debts.

Capt. Davies passed checks amounting to approximately $400 without having sufficient funds in the bank. He was on probation for a similar offense committed in the northern part of the State. Judge Avery admitted him to a second probation on the above understanding and stipulated by order of the court that the funds provided for the payment of a check for $80, which was a poker debt, be turned over to the Disabled Veterans of the World War.

"I wish you long life and a prosperous one and hope this leniency of the court will have a marked effect upon your future actions and carry a message to any other countryman of yours who may be tempted to become similarly involved in this country," said Judge Avery.

Capt. Davies thanked the court and said that his lesson had been learned and that he would "go straight" in the future.

DEATH TAKES ACTOR.

Frederic Starr, Known on Stage and In Film Parts, Called Beyond.

Frederic Starr, the actor, died yesterday at his home, 1636 Maltman avenue, after an illness of more than a year. Mr. Starr was born forty-three years ago in San Francisco. He was nearly twenty years on the stage. He entered pictures six years ago in the East, but came here soon after.

Mr. Starr worked in many of Zane Gray's western pictures. Among the pictures in which he was leading man or had important parts are "Crooked Street," in which he portrayed the drunken French sailor; "Riders of the Dawn," "U. P. Trail," "The Man of the Forest," "Mysterious Rider," "Woman of Pleasure," with Blanche Sweet; the German officer, with Dorothy Dalton, in "Vive La France," and in Jack Dempsey's serial.

Mr. Starr leaves a widow and a son, Laurence. The funeral services in charge of the Elks, will be conducted tomorrow at 2 p.m. at the Overholtzer chapel, 1236 South Grand avenue.

TO ASK DELAY IN DEATH CASE.

Defense Awaits Arrival of Schenck from Arizona.

Kennedy Suspects to Appear in Court Tomorrow.

Will Not Seek Dismissal of Murder Indictment.

The defense in the Kennedy murder case will ask for another continuance when Arthur C. Burch and Mrs. Madalynne Obenchain, indicted jointly for the slaying of J. Belton Kennedy, appear before Judge Reeve tomorrow at 9:30 a.m.

This was indicated by the attorneys for the defense yesterday when a telephone message from Paul W. Schenck, chief of the counsel for the defense, now in the Nash murder trial at Flagstaff, Ariz., stated Mr. Schenck could not arrive in Los Angeles earlier than Tuesday.

Mrs. Obenchain and Burch were arraigned before Judge Reeve last Monday. The time for pleas was put over until tomorrow on the request of Warren Williams, attorney representing Mrs. Obenchain. Unless there is a change in the plans of the defense attorneys, another request will be made to continue the case until Wednesday.

Mr. Schenck will be communicated with tomorrow morning and his decision will be announced then.

It is possible that Richard Kittrelle, Mr. Schenck's associate, and Ralph R. Obenchain, former husband and present attorney of Mrs. Obenchain and Burch, will represent them in court and enter the expected pleas of not guilty, in the event that Judge Reeve refuses to grant another continuance.

INDICTMENT STANDS.

No attempt will be made by the attorneys for Mrs. Obenchain and Burch to ask for dismissal of the indictment returned against Mrs. Obenchain, Mr. Kittrelle said yesterday. The laws of California are specific on the powers granted to the grand jury, and that body's action cannot be attacked on the grounds that the evidence upon which an indictment is returned is insufficient.

In the Kennedy case, it was pointed out by the attorneys for the defense, the accused will not be given an opportunity to know what they are charged with until their appearance in court, as there is no transcript of the grand-jury proceedings. The District Attorney's office has the signed statement of each witness, but these are not available to the defense.

"The powers granted to the grand jury are such that its action can never be questioned. Assuming that there was not sufficient evidence on which to return the indictment, there is no way of raising that point, for the action of the grand jury is presumed to be judicial," Mr. Kittrelle said.

COURT'S OPINION.

"Touching on this point, the California Supreme Court said:

" 'The secret inquisitorial proceedings of the grand jury may, as they often have, work very oppressively and unjustly, for only so far as guarded and restrained by an oath, their action is generally irresponsible and conclusive in finding an indictment.'

"You can see that no matter how little evidence there may have been produced against Mrs. Obenchain or Burch, both will have to go to trial, having been formally indicted by the grand jury."

Mr. Obenchain devoted most of the day yesterday to the running down of clews that now come pouring into the defense headquarters from every direction. Information purporting to supply the missing links in the defense theory of the crime and giving asserted details of Kennedy's movements and past make up most of the clews.

GUN CLEW FADES.

Dep. Dist.-Atty. Keyes and Malcom McLaren, in charge of the State's investigation, announced that there is nothing new in the case. The much-heralded and advertised stock of a Barker shotgun, said to be the prosecution's "official shotgun" in the case, was inspected yesterday by the man who said he repaired a similar gun on July 28 and was found to be a different stock, Mr. McLaren announced.

"The gunsmith visited this office and inspected the stock. He said it was not the part left with him for repairs, so we have eliminated anything he may have said the day before," it was announced. Mr. McLaren said nothing occurred to change the prosecution's belief that the stock is part of the weapon with which Mr. Kennedy was shot.

ASKS FOR DAMAGES.

Woman Asserts Man Jilted Her After Promise of Marriage.

Emma S. Lahey demands $20,000 damages from Fred J. Finch. Last February he promised to marry her, the wedding to be in March, she says. This month he married another woman, she adds. In anticipation of becoming his bride, the plaintiff declares she informed her friends and acquaintances and she suffered humiliation from the asserted jilting. The complaint was filed yesterday through Attorneys Holzer and Greenberg.

"TIMES" SUBSCRIPTION PRICE REDUCED.

BEGINNING September 1 the subscription price of the Los Angeles Times will be reduced to 90 cents per month, delivered by carrier. This substantial reduction is made by The Times in the belief that every enterprise involving trade with the public must do its share to bring back normal price conditions as soon as business conditions warrant such a step.

Actually, it is costing more today to produce The Times than ever before. Labor expense is greater than even at the "peak" of war time. The cost of materials is as high by reason of the long-time contracts under which they were bought.

However, The Times has a reasonable assurance that the cost of its white paper will be somewhat reduced in the near future. In anticipation of this reduction, and in the desire to promptly share the saving with its readers, this 15 per cent cut in the subscription price is made effective. Telephone your order to Pico 700 or 10391.

The Times has never been inclined to tell others what they shall charge for their commodities nor when they should cut prices. The Times prefers practice to preaching. It believes that prices should and will drop as rapidly as conditions warrant and it proposes to do its part.

It may be of interest to note, in this connection, that the cost of San Francisco morning newspapers, delivered, is now $1.15 a month. In Chicago the price is $1.25 a month. In Seattle it is $1 a month.

The price of the daily and Sunday Times on the street, on news stands and by mail will not be changed at present. A recent increase of 25 per cent in the postal rate covering second-class matter makes a reduction in mail subscription rates unwarranted now.

DISCOVERS CAUSE OF FALLING HAIR

Chicago Specialist Says Greatest Percentage of Baldness Due to Alopecia Pityrodes.

Prof. John H. Austin, over 40 years a bacteriologist, hair and scalp specialist, who now has offices at Hamburger's, says that scalp disorder is often mistaken for common "dandruff."

Alopecia pityrodes starts with a scaling of the scalp, sometimes slight, commonly called "dandruff," sometimes abundant — producing thick, grayish-white, dry or greasy scales—which leads to falling of the hair. This stage lasts from two to seven years, as a rule. At first, when the hair starts to fall, it is hardly noticeable, but as this ailment, "Alopecia Pityrodes," becomes more deeply seated, and as the microbacilli multiply, as they always do, the falling of the hair increases rapidly and in time the top of the head becomes entirely bald.

Prof. Austin has found that only the most powerful microscope can determine the exact trouble with which the hair and scalp are afflicted, and has proved that the use of mange cures, dandruff cures, hair tonics, vaseline and elixirs, is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure.

Reduce Your Fat Without Dieting

This is turning an old phrase face about, but modern methods of reducing fat have made this revision possible.

If you are overfat and also averse to physical exertion during this warm weather, and likewise fond of the table and still want to reduce your flesh several pounds, do this: Go to your druggist (or write the Marmola Co., 4612 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich.,) and give him (or send them) one dollar. For this modest amount of money the druggist will put you in the way of satisfying your ambition for a nice, trim, slim figure, without fear or harm even on the hottest summer days. He will hand you a full sized package of Marmola Prescription Tablets (compounded in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription,) one of which you must take after each meal and at bedtime until you begin to lose your fat at the rate of two, three or four pounds a week. That is all. Just go on eating what you like, leave exercising to the athletes, but take your little tablet faithfully and without a doubt that flabby flesh will quickly take unto itself wings, leaving behind it your natural self, neatly clothed in firm flesh and trim muscles.

STORY IS NAMED REGIMENT HEAD.

Governor Makes Him Colonel of Guard Unit Here.

New Commander Has Long Military Record.

Promotions to be Made in Local Organization.

Walter P. Story, capitalist and clubman, yesterday received telegraphic notice from Gov. Stephens of his appointment, effective at once, as colonel of the local One Hundred and Sixtieth National Guard Regiment, it was announced by Lieut. C. O. Hively, secretary of the Infantry Regiment Association.

The telegram read: "I have today commissioned you colonel of infantry, California National Guard. Best wishes."

Col. Story was commissioned captain of infantry in the National Guard in February, 1920, and attained his majority Feb 1, 1921. During the World War he was a captain on detached service with the intelligence bureau, Department of Justice, and was awaiting assignment to a combat division when the armistice was signed.

For many years, Col. Story, who is owner of the Walter P. Story Building and an influential member of local financial circles, has been identified with military work. He was graduated from the Shattuck Military Academy in 1902. At the time of the Mexican trouble, just preceding the entrance of America into the World War, Col. Story aided in organizing Battery A, which went to the border under command of Capt. Jesse McComas. He also was influential in the reorganization of the One Hundred and Sixtieth National Guard Regiment.

FILLS VACANCY.

In assuming command of the local National Guard organization, Col. Story fills the vacancy caused by the resignation several months ago of Lieut.-Col. James S. McKnight. Since then Maj. E. E. Kirk has been commanding the organization and in charge of recruiting as the senior major of the regiment.

With the definite appointment of a new regimental commander, it is believed that whatever internal difficulties have handicapped the local National Guard organization plans in the past will now be removed. The personnel of the regiment and the public are behind the new commander and the other officers in a concerted effort to make the organization complete and efficient. Unfortunate for the guard as have been some incidents of the recent past, it is pointed out that no charges concerning the conduct of the regiment itself have been made or implied.

Announcement of his selection of staff officers will be made in a few days, it was said yesterday. Lieut. Hively is expected to be the colonel's choice for adjutant, a position he has been filling for some time.

"I am deeply grateful for the honor conferred upon me," said Col. Story, "and I appreciate the responsibility it means. I shall do my utmost to make the One Hundred and Sixtieth Regiment an organization that will be the pride of Los Angeles, as well as the officers and enlisted men. The people of Los Angeles, by their co-operation already have shown they are willing to further aid us in making the One Hundred and Sixtieth the crack outfit of the State."

PROMOTIONS DUE.

The elevation of Col. Story will result in the commissioning of two majors. A lieutenant-colonel also will be commissioned, as well as a subsequent moving up of officers to fill vacancies thus created.

Approximately 1700 men now comprise the regiment, which includes eighteen companies of which twelve are in Los Angeles. The remaining units are in the cities in this vicinity. Final plans are now being made for the Federalization of the regiment and approval by the War Department of this move is expected before many weeks.

The One Hundred and Sixtieth formerly was known as the Seventh Infantry and was organized at the time of the Spanish-American War. At the time of the World War the name was changed to the One Hundred and Sixtieth and the regiment was part of the Fortieth Division.

HELD AS PASSER OF WORTHLESS CHECKS.

Deputy Sheriffs Couts and Bell, working in conjunction with the Burns Detective Agency, yesterday arrested B. L. Ingalls, who is wanted at several different places throughout the United States on charges of passing worthless checks.

Ingalls will be tried here on the charge of having passed a check for $25 at the Sunset Inn. On the 10th inst. he passed a check on a hotel in Van Nuys for $50, it is said. It was drawn on the Industrial Trust Company of Providence, R. I., and a message was received from that company stating that Ingalls has no account there. The prisoner was out on bail for a similar offense at San Diego. He is accused of defrauding the Alexandria here with a worthless check for $25, September last.

ANNOUNCE FUNERAL OF NATHAN BAILEY.

In reporting yesterday the sudden death of Nathan P. Bailey, for many years well known real estate dealer of this city, the given name erroneously appeared as Norman. Mr. Bailey's daughter Charlotte and her husband, Maj. Matthew A. Palen, will reach Los Angeles from the East tomorrow, and funeral services will be conducted Tuesday at 3 p.m. at Bresee Brothers chapel, 855 South Figueroa street. Interment will be at Rosedale Cemetery.

BULGARIAN HEIR OF DEAD STOREKEEPER.

A surprise is in store for Toma N. Eshteff, residing in Bulgaria. Tsvetco T. Toodoroff, known as "Tony," who was proprietor of a store on the ocean front at Long Beach, died on the 9th inst. Yesterday Public Administrator Bryson filed probate proceedings testifying that "Tony" died intestate leaving cash in four different banks amounting to $4415.77, the store and stock, and that Toma N. Eshteff is the nearest relative of the deceased.

FIGHT BLUE LAWS.

Veterans Threaten Drastic Retaliation If Enforced in Their Towns.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 20.—Plans to close up tight all Oakmont and Verona stores and other places of business on Sundays, as the blue law of 1794 provides, if the church law and order committee does not "relent in its campaign of poking its nose into other people's affairs and cease trying to tell everybody how they shall live," are now being made by the Veterans of Foreign Wars Kletzley-Egil Post 441.

The veterans have adopted a resolution, which they are spreading broadcast, in which they take up the fight against the church committee, and declare for "a square deal to Oakmont and Verona merchants, who are required to open their places of business Sunday to supply the needs of the public, and for those persons who desire to engage in harmless amusement and relaxation on the Sabbath."

The action of the Veterans of Foreign Wars follows an attempt of the church committee on law and order to regulate Sunday closing of stores, the clothing of bathers at the river beaches and amusements of people within the town's limits on Sunday.

The committee recently declared that drug stores might sell soda water and ice cream, but no cigars nor cigarettes on Sunday, but more recently amended this order to allow the sale of one cigar to a customer.

The soldiers, incensed by the committee's action, called a meeting, threatening to close the town so tight that the church members could not even buy soda water, ice cream, newspapers, or even ride on street cars.

Last night the church committee brought the campaign for a closed Sunday to a head by appearing against the Burgess of Oakmont, Claude W. Hood, whom they had charged with selling cigarettes on Sunday, a violation of the law of 1794.

Burgess Hood had fought strict enforcement of the church committee's blue-law interpretation, and Burgess Crookston of Verona has refused to enforce the blue laws for some time.

AMERICAN RELIEF IN AUSTRIA CUT DOWN.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

VIENNA, July 28.—A new survey of economic conditions has caused the American Child Relief to make a severe cut in its charity in Austria. It is proposed this summer gradually to reduce the number of children fed to 200,000, and these will be confined largely to Vienna and other cities, where much want will be faced during the coming winter.

The general improvement in the rural regions is illustrated by the action of the Americans in closing sixty-eight of their kitchens in Upper Austria alone in one week. All children of parents in fair financial circumstances are excluded under the new program, as well as children of farmers. In other words, American relief will be confined to those in actual need.

TO STUDY SIBERIAN NAVIGATION PROBLEMS

EXPEDITION WILL LEAVE RIGA THIS MONTH; WILL MAKE SURVEY FOR CANAL.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

RIGA (Letvia) Aug. 5.—An expedition will leave Moscow this month for the Siberian coast to investigate the problems of navigation between Europe and the mouths of the Siberian rivers, says a dispatch from the Russian capital. The task will be to make a survey for a canal across the Yamal Peninsula, which would make it possible for ships to avoid the Kara Sea, where because of ice, navigation is almost impossible.

The expedition is to go first by rail to Omsk, thence by steamer along the River Obi, northward, while a part of the way it will have to go on horseback or be drawn by moose.

Another of the aims of the investigation is the fitting up of wireless communication with the Siberian coast, and the establishing of stores of supplies, etc., along the coast.

The party leaving will include eight professors, engineers of various technical branches, some students and others, making a whole of about 200 men. As equipment they will have two hydroplanes, motor boats, various scientific and technical instruments and as much other necessary material as can be carried.

A Subtle Compliment.

"Why did you put the sign over your desk, 'This is my busy day?'"

"It makes a good impression," answered Senator Sorghum, "when an influential constituent calls."

"But it might give offense."

"Not at all. It adds to a visitor's sense of importance when I give him a cigar and tell him I want a long chat with him."—[Washington Star.

The bond sale was indefensible and illegal, and no debate can alter these facts."

The speakers at the City Club luncheon were W. B. Mathews, special counsel, and Commissioner Haynes of the Board of Public Service Commissioners. Vice-President Nathan Newby of the club, presided, and during the discussion, said:

BOND SALE QUESTIONED.

"I have yet to be convinced that the sale of Los Angeles city bonds at a discount was justifiable. Chief Engineer Mulholland of the Bureau of Waterworks and Supply has told us that the Boulder Creek Dam project for the securing of power for Los Angeles from the Colorado River is necessary. Let us assume that our share of the cost of that project, if it goes through, will be $190,000,000. The people of Los Angeles have the right to know whether or not, as a result of the sale at a discount of the city's bonds for the purchase of the Edison lines, the credit of the city has been injured and if it will be hereafter necessary to sell all of our future bond issues, such as those for Boulder Creek Dam, below their value."

Vice-President Newby's remarks and the perfunctory applause given the speakers on behalf of the sale showed that the arguments made by them in defense of the bond sale had met with no whole-hearted approval from those present.

Special Counsel Mathews declared that the Councilmen had acted wisely and prudently in accepting the Hellman bid, declaring that in view of the long litigation which followed the voting of the bonds in 1919, and which has been started since the bonds were sold, the city was fortunate to secure the bid it did for the securities. According to Mr. Mathew's figures, the city will pay interest, under the Hellman bid, of 5.98 per cent, which is just within the six per cent legal limit, although Councilman Mushet disputes this figure, declaring that the actual interest rate is 6.36 per cent.

EXPLANATION OF SECRECY.

In defense of the secrecy with which the Councilmen sold the bonds, Mr. Mathews said that the law did not require cities to sell its securities publicly, and that this provision was placed on the statute books so municipalities could combat the efforts of "enemies who might be lurking about." Commissioner Haynes declared that the profit from the operation of the distributing lines would soon wipe out the loss from the sale of the bonds at a discount.

Chief Engineer Mulholland was introduced by Vice-President Newby as one of the speakers on the bond sale, but Mr. Mulholland declared that he knew nothing about bonds and he confined his remarks to the Boulder Creek dam project.

"As a result of the tremendous growth of Los Angeles," said Mr. Mulholland, "we must have the power to be created at Boulder Creek dam, and we are willing to co-operate with other municipalities, counties and States in developing that power. As for our attitude toward the privately owned public utility companies in the development of the Colorado River project, that is another story, but you can guess our attitude. We cannot afford to let others develop this power and put a load on our shoulders forever.

"The Aqueduct has made good, and just as the people accepted that, I know that they will be heart and soul for the Boulder Creek project. It will cost less per capita of population than did the Aqueduct. Los Angeles cannot afford to back track. We must go on."

JURY FINDS WOMAN GUILTY.

Gertrude Malmberg was found guilty of assault with a deadly weapon, with recommendation for leniency, by a jury after five hours' deliberation yesterday in Judge Avery's court. The charge against her was assault with intent to commit murder in discharging a revolver at her attorney Walter E. Smith on the twelfth floor of an office building last February. The finding of the jury reduces the penalty but calls for a commitment to the penitentiary.

The motion of her attorney, Benjamin Lewis, that she be admitted to bail was denied by the court and she was taken to the county jail where she will await sentence which is to be pronounced Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

Dept. Dist.-Atty. Burke prosecuted the case for the people and maintained in his closing argument yesterday morning that the "defendant was not insane, but merely ignorant," adding, "It is high time that punishment be invoked on women who shoot at men instead of allowing them to go free on the last resort plea of insanity."

Mrs. Malmberg had sobbed a great deal during the trial but took the verdict with passive mien.

POLITENESS IN NEW CAR RISKY.

Grocer Tries to Bow to Customer, but Runs Over Her and Wrecks Machine.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

HAMMOND (Ind.) Aug. 20.—N. Fineberg, a grocer, bought a new automobile yesterday, and while driving the car for the first time met Mrs. T. F. Edmonston, one of his best customers. With politeness he essayed to bow and tip his hat. The act was too much. He bowed, tipped his hat, stepped on the gas, opened the clutch and turned the wheel simultaneously. The car went over the curbing, threw Mrs. Edmonston on her head, crossed a lawn and was wrecked on a front porch. The cash customer was hurt severely but will recover. Fineberg is convinced that automobiles and politeness should be strangers.

ARMY DETACHMENT ROUTED BY SHERIFF.

AMAZING STORY IN COURT OF HARNESS CONTROVERSY IN WEST VIRGINIA.

MARTINSBURG (W. Va.) Aug. 20.—An amazing story of the defeat, the ignominious rout of a detachment of the United States Army by a detemned West Virginia Sheriff, armed with a machine gun, was revealed here in legal proceedings in the United States District Court, Judge William Ely Baker presiding. The action was an appeal by the United states for dissolutionl of an injunction restraining Lieut. Col W. A. Graham, Maj. F. F. Scowden and Capt. James R. Sheppard, all of the United States Army, from trespassing on the premises or seizing the property of the United States Harness Company, located at Ranson, W. Va., a suburb of Charlestown.

Nearly two years after the armistice was signed the United States Harness Company made a contract with the director of sales of the War Department to purchase 11,000 sets of heavy harness. Under the terms of the contract the company was to convert this into commercial harness and sell it, to pay the government 60 per cent and upward of the gross selling price in the event of sale, and certain stipulated minimum prices for which it was unable to sell. On June 14 last the President singned an order canceling the contract. The harness company challenged the right of the President to cancel it and declined to return to the War Department such harness as had passed into its possession.

At midnight, July 14, orders were received at Camp Meade, Maryland, directing that a company of 100 soldiers and seventy automobile trucks with motorcycle scouts, ten days' rations, drivers, etc., proceed to Ranson and there seize, "unless opposed by force of legal process," the harness.

When they reached the factory they were served with an injunction restraining them from an attempt to seize the property. The sheriff later proceeded to the camp in his automobile, which was armed with a machine gun.

He told the officers they had invaded the sovereign State of West Virginia without authority of law, and that they must retire within twenty-four hours, and that, if they did not, he would shell the encampment with his machine gun.

Early in the forenoon of July 16, Col. Graham with his troops his sixty-nine empty and one partly filled automobile trucks, his scouts and automobiles decamped and marched silently out of West Virginia on route to Camp Meade.

Judge Baker took the case under advisement, reserving his decision, pending which the injunction remains in force.

HIGHWAY WILL JOIN ALASKA AND YUKON.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DAWSON (Y. T.) Aug. 20.—Plans for highway work in this section of the sub-Arctic call for the joining of Alaska and the Yukon Territory by a road, for the first time, and eventually, for a system of roads which will lead from Valdez, on the southwestern coast of Alaska, overland to Dawson.

The run between Alaska and the Yukon will extend from Eagle, Alaska, across the international boundary, to Forty Mile, and then on to Dawson. On the American side work will begin next year. Later the road will connect in Alaska with the Richardson Highway, which runs across the mountains from Valdez to Fairbanks.

How I Won And How I Lost—Told By Dempsey and Carpentier

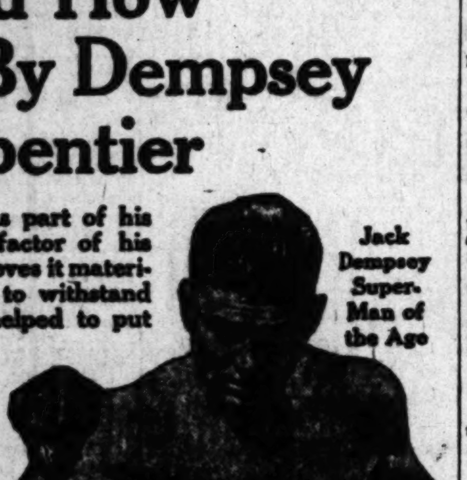
Dempsey says, Nuxated Iron used by him as part of his training was in his opinion an important factor of his phenomenal victory over Carpentier as he believes it materially helped to give him that mighty power to withstand Carpentier's hardest hits and that it also helped to put added punch behind his own blows.

In the past fight Carpentier hit Dempsey with such powerful blows that had the speed [illegible] The [illegible] saw him land [illegible] right on Dempsey's jaw, yet Dempsey never [illegible] but relentlessly he [illegible] the Frenchman with his old ripping, [illegible] power, landing terrific [illegible] on head, body and jaw until [illegible] quickly weakened and then [illegible] punch and again Dempsey [illegible] himself to be the superman of the [illegible] greatest Champion the world has [illegible]

The London Daily Mail, of July 4th, quotes [illegible] "Dempsey is the most [illegible] I have ever met in the ring. He [illegible] strong. To hit him is like hitting [illegible] To take his punches is like feeling [illegible] If I were asked [illegible] I would say the [illegible] Dempsey landed on [illegible] I was not the same [illegible]"

Dempsey says, "I feel I won through greater [illegible] fighting skill and strategy. [illegible] Carpentier's hardest blows on my chin [illegible] they landed me back they did [illegible] I am sure Carpentier [illegible] to stand the hard [illegible] neither has he the [illegible] I understand his [illegible] are entirely different [illegible] While I believe in scientific boxing [illegible] I never lose sight of the important [illegible] being equal it is the [illegible] the greatest strength, power [illegible] that is going to win. In building [illegible] most important things [illegible] your blood with [illegible] In preparing [illegible] with Willard I used [illegible] as part of my training, and I [illegible] to me that after [illegible] whenever I felt I was not [illegible] to help restore my [illegible] and vigor and when I [illegible] training for my fight with [illegible] the supreme test of my life [illegible] Nuxated Iron and I believe it was an important factor in helping me to win so easily my great victory and I would advise people who are in a weakened condition to try this wonderful strength and blood builder."

When a man as strong and physically fit as Dempsey uses Nuxated Iron, how much more important is it that thousands and thousands of others who so greatly lack physical strength, power and endurance, should avail themselves of its benefits. Nuxated Iron not only contains strengthening organic iron for the purpose of enriching the blood but it also contains the principal chemical constituents of active living nerve force in a form which most nearly resembles that in the brain and nerve cells of man so that Nuxated Iron may be said to be both a blood and a nerve food. If through worry, overwork, constant nervous strain, grief or too much excitement your blood has become impoverished and your nerve force exhausted, you will find that a short course of Nuxated Iron will often produce most surprising results. It has been used and highly endorsed by former United States Senators, Members of Congress, Judges of of United States Courts and many prominent people; even Rome having highly endorsed its use. It is now being used by over 4,000,000 people annually.



Jack Dempsey Super-Man of the Age

JACK KEARNS
Manager for Dempsey

Jack Kearns, Dempsey's Manager, says: "Knowing what Nuxated Iron had done for Dempsey in the Willard fight I strongly insisted that he use this wonderful strength and blood builder as a part of his training for the fight with Carpentier, and I believe it was an important factor in building up Dempsey's superhuman strength, power and endurance which were such important factors in winning his easy victory.

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE: From the above article the reader must not infer that Nuxated Iron will make a giant in strength or a world's champion out of the average man; but Nuxated Iron will greatly increase the red blood corpuscles and by so doing increase your strength, power and endurance, and supply increased nerve force to the starving nerve cells. You can try Nuxated Iron on our absolute guarantee that if it does not increase your strength, power and endurance in two week's time and give you perfectly satisfactory results your money will be refunded. Beware of substitutes. Look for the word "Nuxated" on every package. Nuxated Iron for the blood and nerves is sold by all druggists.

CHILDREN COMPETE WITH SANTA CLAUS.

BOSTON SCHOOL BOYS AND GIRLS MAKE ALL SORTS OF TOYS FROM SCRAPS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BOSTON, Aug. 20.—Hundreds of boys and girls of the Mary Hemingway public school in the Dorchester district have gone into competition with Santa Claus in an open-air workshop here, and Christmas time will find their handiwork scattered in many gift packages.

With work benches set up under fragrant fir trees in a natural park on Lonsdale street, the youngsters whittle and saw away making toys, furniture and unique gewgaws out of any material that comes to hand.

Toy ducks, horses and pigs or tanks, soldiers, chairs, dolls, guns and airships—all are products of the expert hands of these young enthusiasts. Even the refuse heaps furnish material. A sardine can becomes a cooky cutter, a salmon can shapes into a cruller cutter and beer bottle tops make excellent caps for tin soldiers. A jig-saw in the hands of a capable youngster produces a monkey on a trapese that rolls around like a performer in a circus.

Chair caning is a fascinating job, and mother's old arm chair gets many a new seat.

Work is carried on from 9 until 4 under the supervision of Miss L. Gertrude Howes with two manual training teachers to show the student how to manipulate the tools. A house that is used for a bad weather shop has been equipped with furniture made by the children.

OIL FIELD DISCOVERY ON COAST OF ALASKA.

PARTY FINDS SEEPAGES THAT FLOW INTO "LAKE OF OIL" NEAR POINT BARROW.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NOME (Alaska) Aug. 20.—Discovery of new oil fields in the vicinity of Wainwright Inlet and Point Barrow, on the Arctic Coast of Alaska, which it is believed here may rival in importance the MacKenzie River fields of Northen Canada, was reported today by members of a California prospecting party which had been in this district since last July 14.

According to R. D. Adams, head of the party, large seepages occurred in the neighborhood of Cape Simpson, east of Point Barrow. They appear, he said, to spring from two or three conspicuous barren mountains back of the cape and within a mile of the Arctic shore line. They flow several hundred yards into a "lake of oil."

FREIGHT RATES ON CRUDE OIL REDUCED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20.—Rate reductions ranging from 80 cents to $2.80 a ton on crude oil from Fillmore, Santa Paula and Whittier to Los Angeles, Saugus and points south thereof to and including Colton, were authorized today by the State Railroad Commission.

Rate reductions also were allowed from Huntington Beach and Balboa to Los Alamitos, Dyer, Anaheim and New Delhi.

MISSING BANK TELLER NOT IN SACRAMENTO.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 20.—The Sacramento police today abandoned search for Edwin S. Morse, absconding bank teller of Denver, and Miss Mabel Penfold, who were said to be in the vicinity of Sacramento.

Inspector of Police Arthur Ryan said the report had proven false and the couple who were supposed to be on a freight train coming from Portola here did not answer the description of the fugitive.

MARY BROWNE DEFEATED IN VALIANT COME-BACK.

Molla Mallory Wins National Tennis Championship for Fifth Time; Endurance Turns Trick.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

FOREST HILLS (N. Y.) Aug. 20.—For the fifth time in seven years, Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, a native of Norway, now resident of New York City, won the national woman's singles tennis championship today when she defeated Miss Mary K. Browne of Santa Monica, Cal., 4-6, 6-4, 6-2. The feat established a new record in the history of the American woman's national tennis play.

As a young woman, Mrs. Mallory, then Molla Bjurstedt, won her first United States honors in 1915, following the voluntary retirement of Miss Browne, who had won the title the three preceding years and who staged such a valiant come-back today.

Mrs. Mallory played one of the best matches of her career. Mrs. Mallory faced an opponent too dangerous to be trifled with at any stage of the game. Miss Browne, as a court strategist, tactician and master of a large repertoire of strokes, is unequaled. Yet this afternoon the Norsewoman, after losing the first set, four games to six, responded to the cheering and, by unequaled display of almost mannish driving and steadiness, carried to victory in the next two sets.

Mrs. Mallory said it was the hardest she had ever played and that the change of pace and variation in the lengths of her opponent's returns was a puzzling problem which she was never certain of solving until the winning point had been scored.

It was this deftness with brain and racket that allowed the Californian to carry her more burly and stronger opponent through three sets of play which were more keenly contested than even point score and stroke analysis would indicate. Mrs. Mallory clearly demonstrated that so far as speed of foot and endurance is concerned, she is in a class by herself.

FOLLOWED THE BALL.

Time and again she raced far out of the court or beyond the side lines and with a smashing drive sent the ball whirling back into play when a placement ace seemed assured for Miss Browne.

The latter tried repeatedly to pass the Norwegian on her back hand, supposedly her weaker point, and while sometimes successful the margin was not sufficient to change the result. The Californian was more successful when she succeeded in coaxing Mrs. Mallory to the net with soft returns, but the latter, realizing that fore court play is not her forte, so maneuvered her returns that she was seldom actually forced close to the corded barrier.

OVER BASE LINES.

Reduced to the last analysis it would appear that Mrs. Mallory's victory was due to her opponent's insistent lifting of the ball over the base line. Miss Browne made almost twice as many outs as the victor and in no other department of the play was there such a wide variation. There were twelve points difference at the end of three sets in the point score, but nine in earned points and three in errors. Each made two double faults and while Mrs. Mallory netted the ball forty-three times to Miss Browne's twenty-four, the fifty outs of the Californian as compared with the New Yorker's twenty-eight tell the story.

In some respects the match did not rise to the sensational heights expected. Both were inclined to play a more or less cautious game and while Mrs. Mallory drove strong and severely both back and forehand whenever the opportunity offered, there was none of the thrilling volleys which featured the first set between Mrs. Bundy and Mrs. Mallory yesterday.

PHYSICAL STRAIN.

Miss Browne elected whenever possible to play just inside the service line and from a low crouching position scaled the ball frequently to inaccessible points but this very lifting stroke far more frequently carried the ball out of court. As the play progressed the physical strain also began to tell and while Mrs. Mallory appeared to be almost as strong as when she started Miss Browne seemed to grow less confident by her stroking and footwork.

The Californian, however, gained some satisfaction and much honor for the months of training which she had spent in preparation for the return to the courts, for although her valient effort to regain the singles crown was a failure, she was successful with Mrs. Louise Williams of Los Angeles in lifting the doubles championship by scores of 6-3, 6-2. This pair now enjoys the distinction of having held the doubles title three times. They were victorious in the event in 1913 and 1914.

Mrs. L. Gouverneur Morris and Miss Helen Gilleaudeau, while rated highly in the East as a doubles team, were helpless before the slashing net attack of the Californians. The victors played easily and worked perfectly as a team.

HAVE YOU A GOLF DOG?

Al Wassberg, Green Valley Professional, Says They're Practically Indispensible.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—Al Wassberg, the professional of the Green Valley Golf Club, is the proud possessor of the original golf dog. The pup, which answers to the name of "Slice," is part bird dog and part terrier.

As his master steps to the tee and addresses the ball, Slice drops behind, quivering with excitement, to watch. At the crack of the club against the ball, Slice stands for a moment, all alert, and then is off like the wind. Invariably he has found the ball before his master gets abreast of him. Then he drops behind to watch his master's second shot. For a time Slice and Wassberg had difficulty with lost balls of other golfers. Slice found alien balls so easily that he sometimes lost track of his proper object. Wassberg gets away from this now by rubbing chewing tobacco over the ball before each tee shot. Now Slice goes straight for the tobacco ball before rounding up any strays.

Shortly after Wassberg had trained the dog to follow the ball he attempted an innovation. He taught the dog to keep score, with a bark for each shot. The accomplishment was abandoned, however. At a critical moment in an important match Slice saw a cat on the course and had counted twenty-one strokes for his master before he could be silenced.

DAVIS HITS FAST FORM.

Defeats Richards in Final Round of Meadow Club Invitation Tennis Tournament.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SOUTHAMPTON (N. Y.) Aug. 20.—Willis F. Davis of California won the invitation tennis tournament of the Meadow Club today by taking three out of four sets from Vincent Richards, last year's winner, by scores of 3-6, 8-6, 6-3 and 6-4. The new holder of the trophy also shared in the doubles bowls with Watson M. Washburn, administering a crushing defeat to the Kinsey brothers in straight sets, scores 9-7, 6-3, 6-1.

Davis played exceedingly good tennis in his three winnings as against Richards.

The doubles were disappointing after the first set. There were six successive breaks through service before Davis managed to win his own with a love game. Two errors in succession by Howard Kinsey eventually lost his side the set 9-7. The second went against the California brothers more easily at 6-3, and in the third Howard Kinsey, who had been fretting over some close decisions for foot faults, dropped the match quickly at 6-1.

TENNIS DOUBLES CARD.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BOSTON, Aug. 20.—A well-balanced draw in the national doubles lawn tennis championship, which starts Monday on the Longwood Cricket Club courts, virtually assures a feature match between national and international stars every day. William M. Johnston, former national singles champion, and his Pacific Coast partner, Willis E. Davis, appear likely to meet R. Norris Williams II, and Watson M. Washburn in the upper half of the semifinal round. Williams and Washburn will represent America in the Davis cup doubles.

Barring upsets the indications are that the other semifinals match will be between William T. Tilden II, national singles champion, and his 18-year-old partner, Vincent Richards, and the Kinsey brothers, Robert and Howard, Pacific Coast champions. Although the field is smaller than in other years, the caliber of the entrants will insure high-class tennis. Richards is entered for the junior singles, and in view of his past performances, is expected to win easily.

The prospect of seeing more than half of the top ten players and the entire Davis cup team in action has attracted many tennis fans.

Last year the doubles title was won by Johnston and Clarence J. Griffin with Davis and Roland Roberts as runners-up.

Neither Griffin nor Roberts is entered this year.

W. A. Larned, seven times winner of the national title, and W. J. Clothier, 1906 champion, form the leading veteran team among the entrants.

KING RETAINS HIS TRAPSHOOT TITLE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—R. A. King of Delta, Colo., retained his title to the Hazzard trapshooting trophy in a challenge match with Ross O. Judd of St. Charles, Ill., at the South Shore Country Club today. King broke 171 targets out of 100 pairs. Judd hit 163.

FOOTBALL TALK HOLDING FLOOR.

Already Figuring California's Chances This Year.

Believe Bear Varsity Will be Better Than Ever.

Three Men Missing from Last Year's Aggregation.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BERKELEY, Aug. 20.—Football talk has started on the campus, and California's chances are being questioned against the other teams of note whom the Bears are to compete with. "Can the Bears outstrip their 1920 season?"

"Gloomy Gus" tactics are not being resorted to, as Coach "Andy" Smith is very optimistic concerning the Bears' chances for the coming gridiron season. All the material in the wide world is in evidence. This will, of course, make the competition very keen for positions when the training season starts on September 15.

THREE MISSING.

Three men will be missing on the team, A. B. Sprott, "Cort" Majors and Karl Deeds. There will be the second and third varsity, as well as last season's freshman team after these three positions. "Dutch" Gerluss will be back this season and will most likely worry some backfield man.

After the interclass game on September 24, the fall schedule will start against the St. Mary eleven. Little competition is expected in this game.

The Olympic Club will play the Blue and Gold aggregation on October 1, and a week later Nevada will meet California on the campus. Nevada was one of the two teams that scored against the Bears last year. The Pacific Fleet match on October 15 will undoubtedly be a real battle, and will be a regular contest as well as serving as a real test for the three games which follow on the next three consecutive Saturdays. The first game will be against the University of Oregon. Washington State looks like a tough eleven, while the third game, the University of Southern California will journey to Berkeley to prove their bold aspirations.

The University of Washington will tackle the Bears on November 11, one week before the Stanford battle.

THE BIG GAME.

The big game of the season will be played on November 19, in the new Stanford Stadium at Palo Alto. Stanford is expected to turn out a much better team than it did last year. Up to date this schedule will mark the final game.

"Pesky" Sprott, the star halfback on the Blue and Gold team of 1920, has been made freshman football coach for the Bear eleven for the coming season. Sprott will long be remembered for his brilliant work in the backfield against Ohio.

Sprott came from San Diego High School and made the freshman team, as well as playing on the varsity for three consecutive years. He gained the reputation as a line-plunger and open-field runner and knows practically every trick in the game.

"Dummy" Wells, who coached the freshman team last year, has given up football and is now trying his hand at farming.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—A marine corps marksman set a new world's record in the Roe rifle match at Seagirt, N. J., yesterday, the Navy Department announced today. Private Robert C. Glenn, Newark, N. J., scored 39 bulls'-eyes at 1000 yards.

McCOMB TO FACE MANN ACT CHARGE

Banker in Erie Mullicane Baby Death Case Will be Accused, Says Official.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 20.—Elmer McComb, a banker of Lebanon, Mo., will be charged with violating the Mann Act by transporting Erie Mullicane from Springfield, Mo., to a city in Oklahoma. The announcement was made late today by Dist.-Atty. Madison, after he had reviewed the reports submitted to him by Oscar Schmitz, agent in charge of the bureau of investigation of the Department of Justice.

Erie Mullicane recently was tried for the murder of her unnamed baby in Los Angeles. She was acquitted. The girl was a domestic in the McComb home at Lebanon. McComb is a bachelor.

The investigation report states that McComb and Erie Mullicane made several trips to Oklahoma as man and wife about two years ago when the girl was only 17 years old. When her condition became delicate, according to Mr. Madison, McComb sent her to California, where the child was born, and later found dead in a trunk.

A wealthy woman befriended Erie Mullicane and came here to seek prosecution of McComb. Largely through her efforts, the girl was acquitted of the murder charge.

ANGELS BRUISE ACORNS TWICE.

Killefer's New Line-up Surely Works Wonders.

Cherubs Grab First Game by Ninth-Frame Rally.

Doc Crandall Too Much for Visitors in Second.

BY ED O'MALLEY.

Twin balm for the eyes of Angelic rooters—Los Angeles 8, Oakland 7; Los Angeles 7, Oakland 1.

Now let's proceed to the joyous tidings in methodical order. What made for Cherub success more than anything else was the shake-up in the line-up. Driven to a last desperate stand in an attempt to keep his head above water as a pennant possibility, Red Killefer presented a new club to the big crowd of fans on hand yesterday to witness the double-header.

RED IN RIGHT.

The sorrel top elected to place himself in right field, Niehoff on third and McCabe at second. This gave him much-needed speed, and the change certainly wrought wonders. According to wiseacres, the move should have been compassed long ago, as Killefer is too valuable a player to be on the bench or coaching line.

Tom Hughes projected for Killefer in the first game and was opposed by Lefty Alten. Tom got by in fine shape until the sixth stanza, when fatal errors by McAuley and Griggs put him in a sad plight—a plight that would test the cunning of the best of heavers, and which few of them would have pulled out of unscathed. This disastrous spasm reads something like the following:

JARS SINGLE.

Pinelli flied to Statz and Cooper walked. Wille then jarred a terrific single past Griggs, advancing Cooper to third. Knight, who proved to be poison for Hughes, catapulted a double against the left-field fence that almost tore the boards asunder, Cooper scoring and Wille going to third. Hack Miller was purposely walked, the big idea being for a double-play chance.

Guisto dashed a sharp one at Griggs that run up Art's anatomy and caromed towar dsecond. Wille tallying. With the bases still loaded, Ruegg lifted a lazy fly to McAuley, but the Skeeter dropped it, Knight scoring. Ruegg was automatically out. Miller and Guisto remained at second and first, respectively. Koehler then rifled an awful arch that got over Statz's head for two bags, and in a twinkling, Miller and Guisto touched the rubber.

DUM. TO RESCUE.

Dumovich then relieved Hughes. Alten, not to be denied, rapped a darb of a single to center, scoring Koehler, but Pinelli struck out.

It looked like curtains in the last half of the ninth for the Angels, with three runs to tie and four to win, but the fresh spirit instilled into the nine by Killefer's presence in the line-up asserted itself in an eloquent manner and helped to pull the coals out of the fire. The ninth-inning rally was one of the greatest ever seen on the local diamond. Here it is, boys:

MAC BRUISES PILL.

Niehoff was an easy out Ruegg to Guisto. Not so, however, with McCabe, who came through with a dandy single to left. McAuley dittoed to center a moment later and the grand stand went wild. Everyone felt it coming. Kremer here relieved Alten. Rube Ellis, like the good, old, faithful player that he is, pinch-hitting for Stanage,) trundled a singled to center, scoring McCabe. Lindimore was sent to first to run for Ellis.

Crawford, batting for Dumovich, shot a real single to far right, scoring McAuley, and putting Lindimore on second. Statz pushed a Texas Leaguer to right, putting Lindimore over with the tying run and sending Crawford to second. In consternation, Mitze shot Winn to the mound. Killefer flied to Miller.

JOY BREAKS LOOSE.

Pandemonium broke loose in the grand stand when Carroll took his position at the plate. It was up to Dixie, and he came through with a rattle, darting a terrific drive through Ruegg's legs, scoring Crawford, and the joyous proceedings were accomplished.

Harry Krause, who has been a malignant tumor to the Angels until he came here this trip, mounded for the Acorns in the second game, but he was a batters' delight for the locals after the fourth frame had been reached, and remained so to the end. Ote Crandall opposed him and, heaving one of his best games, was never in trouble. The Angels put the game in lavender in the fourth inning by scoring four runs on five bingles, and then added three more runs in the remaining innings for good measure. Double-header today, boys. O'DOWD DEFEATS SILENT MARTIN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Mike O'Dowd of St. Paul, former middleweight champion, scored a technical knockout over Silent Martin of Brooklyn in the ninth round of a twelve-round match tonight. It was O'Dowd's first bout since meeting Johnny Wilson of Boston at Madison Square Garden last March.

O'DOUL PICKS ON VERNON.

Lets the Tiger Ball Team Down With a Single Run That They Didn't Even Earn.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug 20.—Lefty O'Doul went into today's game after having had a week's rest and he pitched rings around the Vernon Tigers. He beat them 6-1 and the run they made was not earned. Rollie Zeider got a pass with two out in the second and raced to third when Faeth hit to right. Fitz's throw had him beaten by fifteen feet, but the ball took a high hop over Kamm's head and went to the stand. So Zeider scored the Tigers' only run.

The Seals got to Faeth for five hits and four runs in the fifth inning. It was young Jim O'Connell who furnished the turning point that led to the big inning. Bert Ellison had gone hitless for days but finally got one for himself on a short fly to open in the fifth.

O'Connell laid down a swell bunt along the first base line and was legging it to first so fast that Faeth had to make a hurry-up throw and he tossed the ball into right field. Ellison pulled up at third and O'Connell slid into second. Kelly struck out and Kamm hoisted bad on a couple of strikes and then whipped a single into center.

TREMENDOUS SLIDE.

Ellison scored and O'Connell followed him home, finishing by a tremendous slide. High got the ball on the first hop and made a fast throw to the plate but O'Connell beat the ball and when Hannah failed to stop the throw, Kamm raced all the way to third. Yelle batted him home and took third on O'Doul's hit to right. Schick squeezed Yelle across the platter.

The other two runs were made in the seventh on a pass to Kamm, a three-bagger by O'Doul and a two-bagger by Fitz. The score:

FENCING BOUTS ON DECK NEXT.

Great Britain to Battle the American Demons.

Three Matches Are Listed on the Program.

Army and Navy Officers to be in Line-up.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Plans are going forward for the international fencing match between America and Great Britain. The British team will sail November 1. The matches will commence November 17. There will be three matches, saber team match at Philadelphia, Thursday, November 17; dueling sword team match, Saturday November 19 at Washington with a final match with foils Tuesday, November 22 at New York. The team winning a majority of the matches wins the series and the trophy.

TO LEAD BRITISH.

The captain of the British team is Col. Ronald Campbell, chief of physical training of the British army. Col. Campbell is an officer known to all the A.E.F. as the head of instruction in bayonet fighting in the British army during the war. It will be remembered that the American army adopted the British system of bayonet fighting and hundreds of American officer-instructors attended Col. Campbell's schools of instruction during the war. Col. Campbell was captain of the British fencers at the Olympic games last summer when in a series of very close matches the American team nosed out the British.

Full official sanction has been obtained for these matches.

The groundwork of the American teams probably will be composed of army and navy officers which lends a semiofficial status to the contest.

AMERICAN OFFICIALS.

Col. Robert M. Thompson, former head of the American Olympic committee at the time of the successful trip to Stockholm, is president of the American International fencing committee. Dr. Graeme M. Hammond, president of the Amateur Fencers' League of America is vice president and Lt.-Col. Henry Breckenridge is secretary and treasurer.

The following honorary committee has been constituted: Honorary President, Warren G. Harding, President of the United States; honorary vice presidents, Sir Auckland Geddes, British Ambassador to the United States; George Harvey, American Ambassador to the Court of St. James; the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States; General John J. Pershing and Rear Admiral William S. Sims.

RAH FOR HONEYCUTT!

Maj. Francis W. Honeycutt, who captained the successful American fencing team in the Olympic games at Antwerp last summer, has been ejected captain of the American team. It is his plan to assemble the army fencers in Washington Sept. 1, the navy fencers in Philadelphia the same date, and start the civilian fencers working in the different cities preparatory to the team tryouts. America should even put up a stronger team than the one sent to Antwerp. Sherman Hall, the crack fencer of the New York Athletic Club, many times champion, with foils and sabers, was unable to go to Antwerp.

This first match in America is the commencement of a series of international matches akin to the Davis Cup Match in tennis, the American cup in yachting and the international polo matches. Every four years teams will cross the Atlantic to compete for the trophy alternately in the two countries.

KINSEY BROTHERS HANDLED ROUGHLY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SOUTHAMPTON (N. Y.) Aug. 20. Robert and Howard Kinsey, the San Francisco brothers, who are playing here in the Meadow Club tennis tournament, were robbed of cash, watches and jewelry today by three armed burglars at a cottage where they are guests. Awakened by strange noises, the brothers found pistols pointed at them. The burglars escaped.

SHADES BOXES TO A DRAW WITH MURPHY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MARSHFIELD (Or.) Aug. 20.—Dave Shade of San Francisco, and Frankie Murphy of Denver, boxed ten rounds to a draw here last night. Jimmy Darcy of Portland knocked out "Goat" Lavin of Oakland, Cal., in the fourth round of a ten-round scheduled bout.

MACHINE PLANS HAMPER SOUTH.

ever, but contemplates detailed rearrangement of precinct lines, particularly in Los Angeles county, so as to create new districts calculated to work confusion among political enemies of Gov. Stephens.

In Los Angeles county, for instance, it is proposed by the administration to gerrymander districts in such fashion as to throw two or three legislators into the same district, thus eliminating at least two of them at the next election.

Those responsible for this bold scheme, not anticipating publication of their secret until the special session of the Legislature, planned to spring their proposal at the last minute and force it through under the pretext that no other proposition would be acceptable to a majority in either house, it is claimed.

For the success of their plans the machine workers expected to depend upon their ability to frighten the south with propaganda to the effect that a majority of the Legislature would oppose any reapportionment along present constitutional lines, even to a violation of oath of office.

This attitude of "no reapportionment or bust" actually exists in San Francisco and in a few other disgruntled sections of the State, but the record of the last legislative session supports the contention of southern members that with the assistance of the administration forces a "constitutional reapportionment" can be obtained.

RUTH IS WITH TOP SLUGGERS.

Goes Into Third Place Among American Batsmen.

Heilman Retains His Grip on Leading Berth.

Roger Hornsby Has an Edge on the Nationals.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—Babe Ruth, the Yankee slugger, who registered his forty-fifth and forty-sixth homers of the season in the farewell series between New York and the White Sox in Chicago, has batted himself into third place among the batters of the American League, with an average of .374. The big southpaw also has increased his lead as a run-getter, having registered 126 times.

HEILMAN AHEAD.

Harry Heilman, the Detroit outfielder, suffered a slight slump in hitting, but continues to top the list with a mark of .407. Ty Cobb is the runner-up with .381. S. Harris of Washington added a brace of stolen bases to his string and leads with twenty-two. Other leading hitters: Sisler, St. Louis, .366; Tobin, St. Louis, .365; Speaker, Cleveland, .361; Williams, St. Louis, .350; E. Collins, Chicago, .347; Veach, Detroit, .335; Severeid, St. Louis, .340.

Roger Hornsby, the St. Louis star, suffered a drop in his batting average during the past week and also lost the honor of leading in runs scored. Bancroft of New York is leading the run-getters, having counted ninety-five times, while Hornsby scored ninety-two runs. Hornsby, however, continued to top the batters with .404. George Kelly, the slugging Giant first baseman, cracked out his twentieth circuit drive, and Frank Frisch, a team-mate, added five stolen bases to his string, bringing his total for the season to thirty.

THE RUNNER-UP.

Twombly of Chicago is the runner-up to Hornsby for batting honors with an average of .371, while Cruise of Boston batted himself up to third position with .352. Other leading batters: Cutshaw, Pittsburg, .351; Young, New York, .346; McHenry, St. Louis, .341; Mann, St. Louis, .341; Bigbee, Pittsburg, .339; Fournier St. Louis, .339; Nicholson, Boston, .337.

CONFERENCE HAS FRANCE PUZZLED.

France will carry the conversation to the subject of the Franco-British and Franco-American military guarantees which were drafted at the peace conference but have not been ratified.

But the French do not believe that the Harding conference will get that far. They are frank in regarding it as over and above all a conference on Pacific matters. On that basis they hold that the real debate is among England, America and Japan, and that their role will not be primary but secondary.

BALANCING OF CLAIMS.

Considering the conference, then as a balancing of national claims and aspirations it is but natural that the French should approach it in the frame of mind of a man who is going fishing in a lake where other folks expect to catch something, or rather perhaps of joining in a game where they might win something.

The question naturally arises of what France has to offer and what she would seek in a Pacific conference. What France seeks is economic and financial help on the one hand and security on the other. She also, of course, has her heavy colonial interest in Indo-China and her interests of a commercial nature in China to protect.

Having no large fleet, her support for either side if there are to be two sides in the conference would be largely diplomatic, which in view of France's dominating position in Europe, is no small consideration.

QUESTION OF CHOICE.

The United States having been an associate of France in the great war and also of Japan, if it came to having to make a choice between two friendships—for she has no treaty alliance with either—on the face of it American friendship would mean more to her than Japanese friendship.

Of course, French diplomats hope that they will not have to make a choice, but the eventuality is not shut out from their minds. They have no quarrel with Japan, which has not hampered their program in Indo-China, and they feel grateful to Japan for protecting French interests in the Far East during the war. On the other hand, in the post-war settlements, Japan has consistently backed the British point of view when it has been opposed to what the French regarded as their best interests.

HOLDS TRUMP CARDS.

From the viewpoint of economic interests and security, it is very plain that America holds the trump cards should she decide to bid for French support by playing the cards. France owes America billions, and she has been seeking American aid in collecting the German reparations ever since that problem existed.

In case of another war with Germany, America obviously would be a more valuable friend since the American fleet is not so far away as Japan's, and American military strength evidently far surpasses the possibilities of Japan's.

MOTOR VEHICLE FEES HIGH ABOVE LAST YEAR

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 20.—An increase of $1,187,262.02 in motor vehicle fees collected by the state Motor Vehicle Department is reported for the first half of the year over the corresponding period of 1920.

The fees amounted to $5,892,119,000, and of this sum $2,916,890.62 was apportioned to the counties and a like amount to the State. Los Angeles county gets $932,493.92 and San Francisco $290,290.25.

ERICKSON GOES GREAT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—Olaf Erickson pitched one of the greatest games of his major league career, holding Chicago to three scattered hits for thirteen innings, Washington winning, 1 to 0. The visitors also faced some superb pitching by "Lefty" Russell, a recruit from the Sioux City (Iowa) club of the Western League, who reported to Manager Gleason yesterday. Russell lost control of the ball in the thirteenth and walked three men after Smith had scratched a double down the first-base line and forced in the only run of the game. Donie Bush, formerly of the Detroit club, reported to Manager Griffith of the Washington club. The score:

END GENERAL DEBATE ON FARMER RELIEF.

SENATE VOTE ON AGRICULTURAL MEASURE IS SCHEDULED FOR MONDAY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—General debate on the Senate agricultural relief bill was completed tonight with a vote of passage scheduled for Monday.

When the House adjourned a motion by Rep. Wingo, Democrat, Arkansas, to recommit the measure was pending. He contended provisions should be added to authorize the War Finance Corporation to purchase $200,000,000 of Farm Loan bonds and to make loans directly to agricultural producers.

The bill would make $1,000,000,000 available to the corporation for facilitating the exportation of farm products.

Several changes have been made in it by the House, and, if passed, the measure will go to conference.

Rep. Luce, Republican, Massachusetts, assailed the bill tonight, charging it would work out to the benefit of the German manufacturers in "their new commercial warfare." He particularly opposed the section which, he said, would permit government loans to foreigners engaged in exportation of American farm products.

Ship Line Re-elects Officers.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

TACOMA (Wash.) Aug. 20.—Officers of the Pacific Steamship Company were re-elected yesterday at the annual meeting of the board of directors, held on President H. F. Alexander's steam yacht Aquilo while the vessel took a short cruise down Puget Sound.

HUNGRY WILL GET FOOD SOON.

Today was a religious holiday and the government departments were forced to close. Crowds packed the streets, parks and churches. Everyone was arrayed in his best gala attire, the men with clean white shirts worn outside the trousers, Chinese fashion, and the women in white dresses, waists and men's half-hose, which seem to have become regular feminine attire due to the shortage, if not total absence, of long stockings.

Maimed soldiers, cripples on crutches and beggers in rags were lined up in front of the churches asking alms. Old men and women carrying trays sold chunks of black bread, a few white rolls, apples, plums, pears and eggs along the streets. Everybody seemed to be munching something, but in a two-hour drosky ride around the city, costing 80,000 rubles, my driver was not able to find a single restaurant at which a meal could be obtained, although two or three were reported in existence since the government lifted the ban on the private sale of food.

BATHE IN RIVER.

While thousands of bells, chimes and gongs pealed out their tidings from the gilded domes and towers, thousands took advantage of the warm sunshine by bathing in the Moscow River, which was dotted from bank to bank through the center of the city with gleaming pink bodies undaunted by the bathing-suit famine. Old residents remarked on the total absence of drunkenness or drinking which was the fashion in the old days before prohibition.

As yet no authentic news from the famine district has been received. The American and English department of the soviet Foreign Office state they have no news from the stricken regions. Requests for permission to travel to the Volga region during the last two days have all been deferred, awaiting action, but the Foreign Office is not able to promise a date for departure.

Although the workers in the government offices in Moscow are turning in their gold and silver ornaments to help the famine sufferers, I have found that the official circles are more interested in the political situation. All discussions of the famine question are coupled with the subject of America's future relations with Russia.

HOOVER EXPLAINS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The agreement signed at Riga gives soviet authorities the right to expel the Russian personnel of the American Relief Administration, but not American officials or relief workers, Secretary Hoover said today. The relief administration, he explained, has volunteered, however, to withdraw any of its agents in the event of unwarranted political activities on their part.

Preliminary plans for the co-operation of children's relief organizations with the American Relief Administration in furnishing food supplies to Russia will be taken up here Wednesday at a meeting of the European Relief Council, Mr. Hoover said. These organizations were urged by President Harding to co-ordinate their Russian relief activities under the relief administration.

BRITISH GET PORT?

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

LONDON, Aug. 20.—It is reported that an English financial group has secured a long lease on the port of Petrograd from the Russian soviet government.

Dispatches from Russia last June stated that negotiations for the establishment of a company to take over the administrative power of the port were going on and that a number of London bankers were interested in the project.

At that time it was said that the company would take over control of all factories and workshops in Petrograd and that the British might extend their operations to other Russian ports.

SAN DIEGO CELEBRATES HARBOR DAY.

Thousands See Sports on Water Staged in Carnival of Midsummer.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 20.—Harbor Day in the midsummer carnival that all San Diego has turned out to enjoy, was celebrated today. This morning thousands witnessed men from the battleships and destroyers and civilians from the San Diego Rowing Club, in freak events and boat races. Canoe tilting, a greased-pole climb, fighting by sailors from the spar of a boat rigged over the water, tub races and a tug-of-war by two crews in whaleboats, were among the events. While the sports were going on in the water, thirty planes from the Pacific air-force base at North Island went through maneuvers, and a bombing plane dropped a huge torpedo into the water near the municipal pier.

This afternoon athletic events were staged in the stadium by service men. The Skeeters played the Giants, both baseball teams from the service men of the city, in a comedy game.

The day closed with a spectacular fireworks display on the bay.

Searchlights from numerous warships in the harbor played on the sea and sky, and gave a marvelous effect by playing on a smoke barrage sent up by the ships. Some of the light had colored screens, giving a varicolored effect. More than $1200 worth of fireworks was set off, and the fire tug Bill Kettner had in play great streams of water over which the searchlights sent their different colors.

The entire city was given over to merrymaking for the carnival, and every San Diegan seemed to have locked his house and set out for the carnival. Today the crowds were greater than on any day of the festival.

LIQUOR CAUSES SEIZURE OF AMERICAN VESSEL.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

STEVENSON (B. C.) Aug. 20.—Provincial authorities today tied up at New Westminster, B. C., the five ton American cruising steamer, Yankee, as the result of an alleged attempt to smuggle aboard whiskey valued at $2000. The vessel is said to have started for the international border under cover of darkness. Customs officers seized it.

A Tough Situation

"My wife and four children were dependent on me for their living. My stomach and liver trouble of five years had made me despondent as no medicine seemed to help me, and I was gradually wasting away. It was a tough situation. My cousin in Columbus wrote me about having taken Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and advised me to try it. I am now feeling better than for fifteen years." It is a simple harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. At all druggists.—[Advertisement.

Northwest Corner of Third Street and New Hampshire Avenue.

Take Western Ave. Car on Seventh St. to the Door or Vermont Ave. Crosstown Car to Third St., Walk One Block West.

Morning Sale Begins 9:30 A. M.

And Continues During the Entire Day, Tuesday Night and Wednesday, August 24th.

Evening Sale Begins 7:30 P. M.

Elaborate furniture and furnishings, oriental rugs, Weber parlor grand piano (small size) Italian renaissance electric talking machine, designed and made expressly for Miss Ward, rare antiques, including antique solid mahogany hall clock, objects d'art, Italian marbles from the Panama-Pacific Exposition which received high awards, bronzes, chest of sterling silver flatware, paintings, draperies, etc., etc.

TO MY PATRONS AND GUESTS—I consider it entirely unnecessary to go into detail regarding this sale. There are many sales that need hours of talk and explanation. "This one speaks for itself." The reputation of Miss Fannie Ward is known throughout the world, her name stands for the highest ideals, and so in her home as in her work she has shown those expressions of art that have been responsible for the wonderful success she has achieved. Besides years spent in the selection of these gorgeous furnishings there has been spent many thousands of dollars, the rugs alone costing a small fortune, to say nothing of the elegant living-room furniture, the Louis XV room of Gold, the hand-carved dining-room set of thirteen pieces, the magnificent bedroom furniture, all in addition to the things enumerated above. On account of the magnitude of this sale it will continue from two to three days, and will start promptly each day at 9:30 a.m. Every minute will be of interest both during the day and evening sales, and I suggest you arrange your affairs so as to be able to attend from the beginning to the conclusion of the sale.

Drunkenness in England Shows Large Increase.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Drunkenness increased by over 65 per cent in England during last year, according to official licensing statistics. The reaction after the war period of sobriety was shown by 95,763 convictions, compared with 57,948 in 1919. There were only 29,075 convictions in 1918.

The convictions of women were 36 per cent more than in 1919, and more than double the total of 1918.

The daily Express, while admitting the figures are startling, attributes the increase in convictions to the continuance of early closing regulations enforced during the war and suggest that "people who are denied reseasonable facilities for obtaining liquor, have taken in their resentment more than was good for them when they could get it." The paper also holds that the closing of properly-conducted saloons has led to the opening of many bogus clubs and illicit drinking dens.

Official health returns for 1920 just issued indicate, on the other hand, that the nation as a whole is distinctly healthier. Tuberculosis figures are the lowest recorded since compulsory notification came into force. The number of deaths from consumption was 33,469.

The infant mortality rate, 80 per 1000, also is the lowest recorded, while the birth rate rose from 18.5 in the previous year to 25.4, and the death rate, 12.4, shows a decline at most ages.

MONGOOSE IS BANNED IN HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

HONOLULU (T. H.) Aug. 20.—Efforts to rid the Hawaiian Islands of the mongoose, a carnivorous animal which is regarded as the worst menace to island crops, have been begun by the Territorial Fish and Game Commission, in co-operation with the Board of Supervisors of Honolulu.

The bounty on mongoose scalps has been raised from 15 to 25 cents by the Supervisors, who appropriated $499 for that purpose, and annual cash prizes ranging from $5 to $25 to be given the five persons killing the largest numbers of the banned animal.

The mongoose, an ichneumon, is a product of India, where it often is domesticated because of its ability to kill the most deadly snakes without injury to itself. Because of its destructiveness to game, poultry and crops, the importation of the mongoose to the United States was prohibited years ago.

VLADIVOSTOK LEADER IS SON OF PEASANT.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

TOKIO, July 30.—S. Merkulov, chairman of the new anti-Bolshevik government, which gained control of Vladivostok late in May, last, is a peasant's son of the Amur district. He received his education at the gymnasium and the university, and is a graduate of the faculty of natural science and law.

After completing his education he studied conditions in the Far East. Merkulov is considered an authority in Far Eastern matters, and has published many works on economic questions.

LAST DAY OF SHOW.

The final day of the big display was in honor of the Purchasing Agents' Association. The organization put on the program at the daily luncheon, which was presided over by N. L. Morse of the Southern California Gas Company. C. P. Visel, first vice-president, made the principal address in which he outlined the aims and objects of the association.

Heavy sales were reported by many individual exhibitors and it is expected that the final summing up of the buying will be highly gratifying. The attendance was the most astonishing feature to all.

Officials of the Chamber of Commerce were highly gratified over the showing made. The board of directors thanked the executives, clerks and employees who were kept busy day and night during the week. The attitude of the business world generally is summed up in statements made last night by President Weaver of the chamber and A. F. Osterloh, chairman of the committee on manufacturing, which ex-officio was executive committee for the exposition. Mr. Weaver said:

"The most stupendous event in the commercial annals of Southern California passed into history with the closing of the First Annual Trade and Industrial Exposition. It was marvelous in its scope, interesting in all its features, and lasting in its benefits.

BUYERS SURPRISED.

"The thousands of buyers from two continents were surprised as well as delighted with the developments of the week.

"Among our guests during the week were men engaged in large operations in Mexico, some of whom returned the call paid to them by the Chamber of Commerce on its two recent excursions to our sister republic a few months ago. Important traders were here from Australia, Alaska, Java, Manila, China and Japan.

"The Chamber of Commerce is proud of its work. The survival value of the exposition, the friends it made, the great publicity which was granted it, the erasing of all doubts as to the industrial development of Los Angeles, are all lasting benefits to our city.

"Los Angeles has arrived industrially and taken in combination with all the other tremendous assets and advantages of this community it means that nothing is too great to accomplish."

NEE DOF DISPLAY.

Regarding the exposition, A. F. Osterloh, chairman of the committee on manufacturing, said:

"The first annual industrial exposition has demonstrated beyond the shadow of a doubt, the need of such an event as an annual affair, which, if housed in a proper building, could be maintained and run for a period of thirty days with an immense amount of good resulting to the Los Angeles manufacturer and jobber.

"The amount of good that was accomplished through selling our local manufactures to our own community cannot be estimated. On every hand you heard the remark: 'Well, I had no idea that so many articles were manufactured in Los Angeles.'

"Where are we going to house the industrial exposition in the future? An exposition building should be built large enough to take care of this annual event and for the use of automobile shows, horse shows and other large affairs.

"All of these events would be of incalculable value in setting forth before the entire buying power of the western part of the country, Los Angeles as the metropolis of the Pacific Coast."

MRS. FRANK FILES SUIT.

As forecast in The Times on July 27, Mrs. Lucile Hellman Frank yesterday filed suit for divorce from Alvin H. Frank, senior member of the firm of Frank & Lewis, brokers.

"Extreme mental cruelty" resultant from "a cold, distant and domineering manner," and failure to "exhibit any affection" are given as reasons for the divorce petition by Mrs. Frank in her complaint, which was filed by Attorneys Lowenthal, Collins & Lowenthal.

The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Frank on June 14, 1914, was a distinct social event of that season. Mrs. Frank is the daughter of Maurice S. Hellman, vice-president of the Security Trust and Savings Bank, and both she and her husband are prominent throughout the State.

The complaint mentions that there is certain community property, the value of which is not stated.

It is understood that a property settlement has been effected out of court and that the beautiful Frank residence at 258 South Oxford avenue will be retained by Mrs. Frank.

Wm. Clayton, Vice-President and Managing Director of the Spreckels Co.—"I take a great deal of pleasure in commending the San Diego Army and Navy Academy, both from an educational and disciplinary point of view. My young ward, Miguel Sol, has made quite remarkable progress especially so in the last six months. He not only shows a wonderful improvement in his studies but what is more wonderful than that, a desire to continue to study and to advance himself educationally. . . . The effect of the discipline at the Academy has been to give him a more sober, contemplative view of life. He sees the necessity of discipline and understands the value of obedience—two very necessary factors in the life of every man. The best thing about it is that Miguel is most anxious to return to the academy, and says it is the best school he has ever attended. This should be a matter of congratulation to you. I am very glad to tell you these things, and you may make any use of my letter you please."

SOME INFORMATION REGARDING THE SAN DIEGO ARMY & NAVY ACADEMY

It is one of two military schools in Southern California which enjoy the University of California's highest scholastic rating, "Division A."

It is one of two accredited at West Point and is ranked by the War Department as "an essentially military" school.

It has a system which is unexcelled in looking after, and bringing up the work of individual students.

It has a real heart interest in developing boys along Christian character lines.

Its advantages of location, near the bay and ocean, in a charming suburb of San Diego, are unsurpassed.

A Message To Parents
"The Recollection of Quality Remains Long After the Price is Forgotten"

The foregoing well-known saying of one of America's most successful business men is more applicable to education than to any material product. You invest in the commodities of life daily, therefore you can afford to experiment with various brands. But you invest in the education of your children but once, hence you can't afford to experiment at all.

Every boy and girl should have a practical knowledge of business methods and this education should be acquired in a commercial college of the highest rank. If you desire to fit your sons and daughters for an efficient business career, place them in the highest grade business training school of the West—THE THREE C'S—Brownsberger.

REPEAL OF LUXURY TAX ADVOCATED

Chamber of Commerce in Telegram to Mellon Urges Levy on Sales.

The Chamber of Commerce in a telegram made public yesterday urges Secretary of the Treasury Mellon to support the proposition to repeal the so-called luxury tax and to substitute a modified sales tax as advocated by the United States Chamber of Commerce. The telegram, copies of which were sent to California Senators, reads:

"The business world realizes the urgent need of providing revenue adequate to meet the operating expenses of our government and loyally accepted the burden of extreme taxation when our government was called upon to face extraordinary expenditures, but we earnestly ask the repeal of the numerous excise, special and so-called luxury taxes of the revenue act of 1918. They not alone constitute a handicap and a burden to the resumption of normal business conditions but are discriminatory, inequitable and not adapted to conditions of peace.

"We urge in all fairness to business that if no better system presents itself that Congress will adopt the principles of a general or modified sales tax, which will not only be fair to vender and consumer but will distribute the burden of needed taxation equitably and by its uniform fairness and strength it will add purchasing power to the dollar, which unfortunately is decreasing in ratio to high living and business costs.

"Our Chamber of Commerce, the largest business body of its kind in the world, representing more than 8000 members in Southern California, has indorsed the principles of the sales tax. The United States Chamber of Commerce, reflecting the pulse of business throughout America in greater measure perhaps than any other great business organization, has indorsed the sales tax as the best solution of taxation, both for our government and for our people."

The new style swimming without exertion is much easier than walking, is the poetry of motion in the water; it invigorates the system and puts the body in such a state of purity that it offers no foothold for the germs of disease. By the famous Wilkinson system pupils learn to swim as if by magic. Prof. T. Wilkinson is still looking for the woman he cannot make swim in one lesson. Several sceptical elderly ladies put him to the test last week, but everyone swam in her first lesson much easier than she can walk. Practice and six lessons are sufficient to make you graceful and proficient. The Wilkinson College of Swimming, 1606 So. Flower st. Telephone 21850.

Every girl a swimmer. A new class starts next Saturday at 10 a.m. Complete course of twelve lessons for $2, and a cut rate of 25c for use of suit, towels, hair-dryer, etc. Proficiency guaranteed every girl. Prizes and diplomas awarded. The new style swimming without exertion is an unsurpassed physical exercise for girls. California's buxom damsels swarm where the water is always clean and warm. The best recreation for mother and daughter is to swim and disport in the germ-proof water. The Wilkinson Ladies' Plunge, 1606 So. Flower st. Write for folder. Telephone 21850.

To elderly ladies—learn the new style swimming without exertion and you will feel ten years younger in less than ten weeks. Proficiency guaranteed in six lessons, no matter how nervous and timid is the pupil. Prof. T. Wilkinson has taught over 254,000 people to swim, and never had a failure in forty years. Our pupils swim miles with ease. The Wilkinson system is a most delightful and exhilarating recreation for which there is no substitute. Flower st., at Sixteenth.

THE WEATHER
(Official Report.)

LOCAL OFFICE, U. S. WEATHER BUREAU, Los Angeles, Aug. 20.—[Reported by H. B. Hersey Meteorologist.] At 5 o'clock a.m. the barometer registered 29.93; at 5 p.m., 29.92. Thermometer for the corresponding hours showed 60 deg. and 72 deg. Relative humidity, 5 a.m., 94 per cent; 5 p.m., 67 per cent. Wind, 5 a.m., northwest, velocity 3 miles; 5 p.m., southwest, velocity 8 miles. Temperature, highest, 79 deg.; lowest, 58 deg. Barometer reduced to sea level.

WEATHER CONDITIONS. — Local showers occurred yesterday in the western lake region, Upper Mississippi Valley and in Arizona, but fair weather prevailed over other portions of the country. It was a little warmer yesterday morning in the lake region, but the temperature fell considerably in Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska and Kansas. In Southern California it was moderately warm. Clear or partly cloudy weather was reported yesterday morning, except near the coast, where it was foggy or cloudy at several points. Fair weather will continue in this vicinity today, with probably fog or clouds this morning.

UPPER AIR DATA. — From the surface up to about five thousand feet altitude the wind yesterday morning was from an easterly direction. It was light at the surface, but increased in strength, reaching a maximum velocity of 20 miles an hour between 3000 and 4000 feet. At about five thousand feet it shifted to southwesterly and decreased a little in force, varying between 9 and 14 miles an hour up to 8000 feet, which was the limit of observation.

SUN, MOON AND TIDES.—Los Angeles, August 21, sun rises 5:19 a.m., sets 6:33 p.m. Moon rises 8:00 p.m., sets 8:02 a.m. August 22. Los Angeles Harbor, August 21, high tides, 10:39 a.m. and 10:30 p.m.; low tides, 4:32 a.m. and 4:40 p.m.

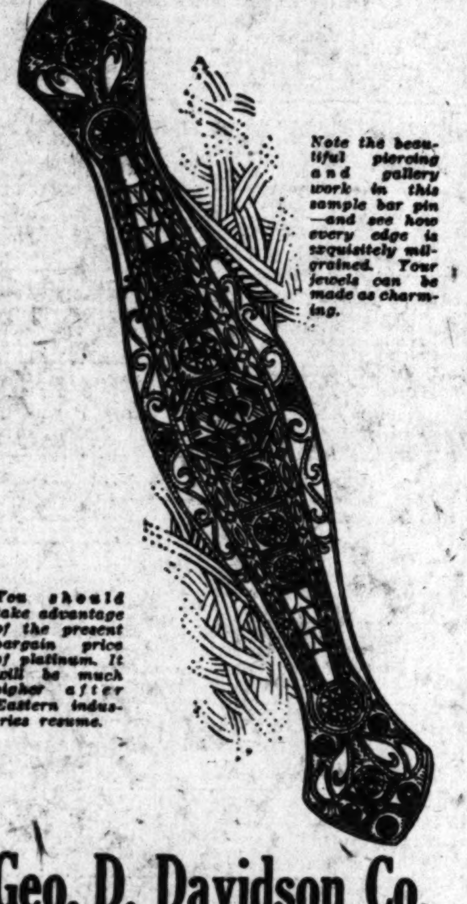
Remodeling That Pleases

It is not a difficult matter to assemble a number of precious stones into a bar pin or lavalliere or dinner ring. Almost any jeweler can do it and almost every jeweler attempts it. To combine gems into such a manner as to excite exclamations of delight and admiration—and to do it at a reasonable price is, however, an entirely different matter.

Successful remodeling is a distinct art, and we say this in the light of many years of active experience. You may have some old-style pieces of jewelry that should be made over into smart jewels for the coming season. We invite you to bring them into us at your leisure and have our artists show you, without charge, how beautifully they can be remade.

It is more than likely that many ladies in your set can show you examples of the exquisite work we do. Come in any time and welcome.



Note the beautiful piercing and gallery work in this sample bar pin—and see how every edge is exquisitely milgrained. Your jewels can be made as charming.

You should take advantage of the present bargain price of platinum. It will be much higher after Eastern industries resume.

Can the board wisely decide to deduct enough from the cost of an adequate building to pay the price of a desirable site? What would be the possibility of getting more money voted for a library? The library must be in its new home by May, 1924—can it be done?

These are some of the many problems linked inseparably with the selection of a site. All of the elements are closely related and intertwining.

The original request of the Library Board was that the City Council place on the ballot a proposition to provide for the issuing of $3,750,000 worth of bonds for the library project. This amount, it was estimated, would supply money for the purchase of a $1,000,000 site. But the bond issue favorably voted on by the people provides for only $2,500,000, thus cutting $1,250,000 from the original estimate of the amount needed.

For the building itself, based on an estimate procured by the Library Board for a structure slightly smaller than the one now deemed to be adequate, $1,850,000 will be necessary. The furnishings, including the great amount of steel stack for books, amount to $400,000 more, according to an official estimate. The board is pledged to expend $250,000 of the bond proceeds for expansion and improvement of the branch libraries, particularly the Hollywood branch. Thus it will be seen that there is a deficit of $25,000 based on the estimates of the building and furnishings cost.

NO MONEY TO SPARE.

To put it bluntly, the board has no money to spend for a site, if an adequate building is to be erected with the funds available. To erect a building large enough even for present needs, a site must be obtained free of cost, or the Library Board must go again before the people and ask that additional bonds be voted, entailing long delay and with very scant prospect of success.

Assuming then, for the time being, that the city will not purchase a site because of lack of funds, what sites are available for which no money or comparatively little money need be spent? There are two—Normal Hill and Pershing Square.

THE NORMAL HILL SITE.

Two ways of utilizing Normal Hill have been suggested to the Library Board. One, recommended by a committee of architects, would have the library building face south, looking toward the Bible Institute. This would necessitate the purchase of a series of privately-owned lots abutting on the site and valued at about $400,000.

The other plan, advocated by the City Engineer, would have the library face Grand avenue. The site so used would have a frontage of 275 feet and a depth of 600 feet, considered ample for the purpose. From the standpoint of accessibility it is but slightly less desirable than Pershing Square. It has the advantage of being on an elevation.

No actual property would have to be purchased for the site so used, but about $40,000 would be needed for grading, according to the City Engineer's estimate, with a further expenditure, not estimated, for terracing and approaches.

[illegible] the site appears the following:

Its use would entail considerable delay. It would probably have to wait on the opening of Fifth street, and certainly on the cutting down of the grade, both of which are long jobs and fraught with possibilities for delays, legal and otherwise. For example, Fifth street cannot be opened until the program is settled for the condemnation of the so-called "key" property at the extremity of the proposed cut. The Fifth-street Association has offered to buy this property and, after the job is finished, let the city condemn and take it over. Other delays may result from disputes over the apportionment of the site for the various civic-center projects, and its connection with the Park boulevard plan.

The project to face the library south from this site is regarded as hardly feasible, because of the cost of the private property which would have to be purchased. Facing east, the cost of preparing the grounds might run as high as $75,000, plus the cost of their subsequent care. This would probably not be an insuperable obstacle, if all other circumstances were favorable.

The approach to the library, if located here, would be rather difficult by reason of its elevation. Probably either a long flight of wide, easy steps or a tunnel-and-elevator approach would be necessary. The outlook, if the building faces south, would not be desirable.

PERSHING SQUARE SITE.

Of all the sites suggested Pershing Square is the most desirable from the standpoint of accessibility. It has the further advantages of being instantly available without any cost whatever. No preliminary work on the ground would be necessary nor would any legal procedure be required other than an ordinance by the Council. The people voted by a large majority in 1904 to put the library on this site and the park's availability and desirability as a library site was subsequently emphatically upheld by the State Supreme Court. No legal obstacles are therefore probable. The surroundings are ideal and there is no doubt that the library would greatly beautify them. There would be no expense to the library for the upkeep of the grounds, as this would be cared for by the park department.

The big objection urged to Pershing Square as a library site is that, according to the objectors, it would remove a much-needed breathing space in the center of the city. As a matter of fact, proponents of the plan point out, there would be more room actually available for the use of the public in the park with the library there than there is now. The building would take up less than a third of the total park area of 200,000 square feet and the rearrangement of walks would actually add about 400 feet to the space now available for park benches. The park would remain a park, the fountain would stay where it is, and most of the trees would be undisturbed. There would be two public entrances at street level and a highly attractive approach, the park forming a huge and beautiful ready-made front lawn for the library.

The ground floor space of the type of building which the board of directors wish to erect would be 60,000 square feet. A basement and three floors above the ground are proposed, to care for the present and growing needs of the library. The local institution is sixth among the public libraries of the United States in the point of circulation. Its growth has been three times that of the city's rapid population increase in the last ten years. A large library is not only desirable, but is really urgently needed, Everett R. Perry, city librarian, points out. Detroit has just completed a building smaller than the one proposed for Los Angeles at a cost of $3,000,000.

ACCESSIBILITY.

From the standpoint of actual usefulness to the public, the convenience and accessibility of the new library is of prime importance. When Chairman Monnette of the library board went before the City Council last April in a plea for a new building, friends of the library and its officials called attention to the fact that fully three-fourths of the library's business is in ready reference for busy professional and business people. Less than 25 per cent of the patrons comprise the leisurely readers of fiction. The other 75 or 80 per cent are those persons who hurry to the library for useful and necessary information. Location is of utmost importance to them.

It is on this fact that advocates of a centrally-located building place much emphasis. The new library must be located where the lawyer, the physician, the store clerk, the architect and busy people generally can obtain with a minimum of time and effort the information which they seek. It is the aim of the library officials and employees to make the institution an ideal library for the busy man.

There are now 228 distributing points, or branches, which adequately take care of the more leisurely needs of the residential districts and of the school children. To establish the main library in the residential district, as many suggested sites would so place it, would defeat in a large measure one of its chief purposes. Objections have been voiced even to the Normal Hill location because it is not so easy of access as the library now is.

Charles Owens, Times artist, has displayed pictorially, in the accompanying illustration, a conception of what a library building, giving about the required floor space, would look like in Pershing Square. The board has decided upon no architectural plans, and the illustration is not designed to show accurately just what the new library will look like. The drawing shows, however, the relation a building of the proposed size would bear to the park. It shows that by placing interior walks the length and breadth of the park and retaining half of the present diagonal walks, actually more lounging room is provided. The present walks, flanked with benches are approximately 1400 feet in length. Carrying out the suggestion in the illustration, more than 1800 feet of walks to be supplied with benches would be available.

According to the plans shown in the illustration, it would not even be necessary to remove the fountain in the center of the park. The only loss would be a few trees, which would be more than compensated for by the beauty of the library there.

In the Pershing Square site, work could be started at once. The time element is an important factor because the lease on the present quarters of the library in the Metropolitan Building expires in two years and nine months, and to renew it would be an expensive propositon.

An objection urged against Pershing Square in common with other downtown sites is that such locations would have a tendency to increase congestion of street traffic, which the city should from now on do everything possible to avoid.

AS TO OTHER SITES.

The half-block on Olive street just back of the Pacific Mutual Building has been recommended by the City Planning Commission as the library site best adapted to the civic center and park boulevard plans. The site is good from the standpoints of accessibility and availability for building, but its cost would probably be prohibitive. It is the site intended for the proposed Biltmore Hotel and is privately owned.

There are about twenty other sites for sale, all fairly close-in, but not nearly as accessible as the three heretofore mentioned. It is argued in this connection that the center of population of Los Angeles is now near Eleventh and Flower, and moving southwestward, and that, for that reason, the library should be placed on some such site, as one proposed near Twelfth and Grand avenue. However, the location of the business and shopping district is held by experts to decide where a library should be, rather than the actual population center.

Of the sites for sale, the cheapest one large enough for the library can be had for about $600,000. From there they range upward to $1,500,000. As before indicated, there seems to be no chance to pay out any such sum for a site, and in addition to build an adequate library.

Should the board decide to buy a site and ask the voters again to authorize a bond issue for completion of the building, it is regarded as almost certain delays will ensue that will make necessary the extension of the lease. Many well-informed persons have expressed the grave fear that if such a scheme is attempted, it will inevitably result in Los Angeles having no library at all. That the voters will ever sanction another bond issue for the purpose is regarded as improbable, especially in view of the ruinous, secret bargain sale of the power bonds recently.

WHAT CITY ATTORNEY SAYS.

These points perhaps were being considered by the library board when City Attorney Stephens was asked to give an opinion last week on the legal status and proceedings necessary for the selection of Pershing Square as the site. Mr. Stephens's opinion, in part, follows:

"The City Council may by ordinance authorize and direct that Pershing Square may be used jointly for library and park purposes. The authorization for this is contained in Section 89-B of the City Charter, the last sentence of which is as follows:

" 'The title of all real property that may be purchased shall likewise be taken by said board in its name as such special trustee; and the City of Los Angeles may, in its discretion, by ordinance, set apart and order to be conveyed to said board, as special trustee, any part of the real property of the city not otherwise appropriated; or to authorize and direct that any park or other real property owned or controlled by the city may be used jointly for library and other purposes.'

"Replying to your inquiry as to what relation the Park Commission would have to the matter, I advise you that an ordinance adopted by the City Council pursuant to the above section would govern as to such use. Assuming the adoption of such an ordinance, and the construction of a library building pursuant thereto, the provisions of the charter giving control of library buildings to the Board of Library Directors would govern so far as such library building is concerned; and the charter provision giving control of parks to the park department would govern as to the remaining portion of the site, used for park purposes.

"I am attaching hereto a copy of a letter written by the City Clerk, at my request, giving in detail the facts concerning the vote of 1904.

"Very truly yours,

[Signed]

"City Attorney."

How Pershing Square Would Look With a Public Library Built on It.

This drawing, by Charles H. Owens, shows a method for utilizing this centrally located site, already owned by the city, without destroying it as a park. It is accurately drawn to scale and shows 1825 feet of walks along which benches may be placed, as against 1380 feet of walks so utilized in the park at present. The fountain in the center of the park is not disturbed and the greater majority of the trees are saved. The building shown is adapted to provide for three floors and a basement, giving a total floor space of 200,000 square feet. The main entrance would face the fountain with another large public entrance and a service entrance for trucks, etc., on Olive street. The size, shape and style of architecture are, of course, merely suggestive. Arguments in favor of this site are its ideal location, freedom from cost, availability for building without any delay, even for grading, and the facts that it was selected by a vote of the people (in 1904) for the Public Library site and that the State Supreme Court has declared it legally available and desirable for library purposes. Arguments against it are that it takes away part of the park, our principal downtown "breathing space," and that it might add to traffic congestion.

LOCAL JAIL IS CROWDED AS PROHIBITION SEQUEL.

Mystifying and Enormous Increase of Prisoners Here as Cities of East Show Decreases.

Is prohibition filling our jails? If not, what is the cause of a 100 per cent increase in the number of prisoners over 1919?

There are 406 prisoners in the County Jail, and thirty-nine on the chain gang. Six months before the Volstead Act went into effect, there were 212 prisoners in the County Jail. There are in the jail three women and six men waiting appeal. Average daily number of prisoners during 1919 was 243; average daily number for 1920 was 313, and average number for 1921, down to date, 400.

BY J. H. BEAN,
Member of the Board of Supervisors.

Why has the number of prisoners in the County Jail increased since prohibition went into effect, while in practically every city throughout the East, the number of prisoners has decreased?

I find the solution to this question is not easy. Our County Jail is overcrowded and the new jail building cannot be constructed too soon accommodate the apparently ever-increasing number of prisoners. Why should Los Angeles have a 109 per cent increase over two years ago, when the big cities of the East have had from 40 to 60 per cent reduction in the number of prisoners?

WHERE SHALL WE PUT OUR NEW PUBLIC LIBRARY?

Here Are the Sites Suggested With Arguments for and Against Each One; People to Choose.

City Council had adopted an ordinance submitting to the people the question, "should a Public Library building be erected in Central Park?" Pershing Square was then known as Central Park. The vote was, Yes, 9669; No. 6492, according to the records of City Clerk Dominguez.

This expression of the will of the people is not binding upon the library board and City Council, Mr. Stephens says. It was the direct cause, however, of a legal fight that was waged through the courts of the State, including the Supreme Court, by the city when an apartment-house owner by the name of J. H. Spires brought suit in injunction.

SUPREME COURT RULING.

The unanimous decision of the Supreme Court, handed down on Oct. 11, 1906, clears all possible legal obstacles to the Pershing Square site. The decision, written by Justice Lorigan and concurred in by Justices Shaw, Angellotti, Sloss, McFarland, Henshaw and Chief Justice Beatty, was in part as follows:

"We think that the erection therein of a Public Library for the use of the same public who are entitled to use the park is not only not inconsistent with the purposes for which the park was dedicated, but is really an aid and furtherance of its enjoyment by the public . . . That the establishment of a Public Library to which the visitors to the park have access, is consistent with much public enjoyment, and tends to enlarge it, we have no doubt.

"That among the buildings which may be erected within a public park in aid of and for the better enjoyment of the public, a Public Library is included, is setted by authority. . . . It is not apparent that the erection of this library will tend to the destruction of the park at all; the site for a library is relatively but a small portion of it; and as we have seen, the erection of such a building herein is in aid of the public enjoyment of the entire park.

"The city of Los Angeles has a right, notwithstanding it be conceded that Central Park was dedicated for the benefit and enjoyment of the public, to build a Public Library on it."

That the library is not now standing in Pershing Square as the voters decided it should be and the courts that it could be, is due to a factional controversy that developed between the election and the handing down of the court decision. The appointment of a man as city librarian instead of a woman is declared to have precipitated the "library war" in which the Friday Morning Club took an active part. This lasted for five years. When the question of issuing bonds for the building of the library came up the bonds were defeated. The entire proposition was thus delayed for more than a dozen years.

Another such delay will not be permitted by the present board of directors, if either attitude has been interpreted correctly. In addition to Chairman Monnette, the following are members of the board: F. H. Pettingill, Dr. Walter Lindley, Mrs. J. Wells-Smith and Father F. J. Conaty.

The officials and employees of the library, not to mention the patrons, are now eager that the opportunity to come down from the top floors of an office building should not be missed. For years the use of the elevator system has been fraught with inconveniences and disadvantages.

FOR PERSHING SQUARE.

"I am strongly in favor of the Pershing Square site for the new library building," declared Dr. John W. Trueworthy yesterday, speaking as a former member and president of the Library Board of Directors and as a public spirited citizen who has at heart the best interests of the city and the library.

"Back in the days from 1902 to 1906 when the library problem was one of the biggest municipal questions, I had the advantage of being in a position as one of the directors, and later president, that gave me a comprehensive insight into the same problem now faced by the present directors," Dr. Trueworthy explained. "We tried at that time to get the library located and to erect a fine building.

"In connection with the project I went to New York and saw Andrew Carnegie about assisting us. He stated that he would aid financially if the city would do its part, and I brought back this report which the board took under advisement while we looked about for a site.

"At that time I favored the Pershing Square site. We looked over the situation carefully, measured the park and the proposed building and in the vote that was submitted to the people a big majority of all the citizens favored that site.

"Some objections were made that it would disfigure the park, but we were able to show that very few trees would have to be removed and that the beautiful building to be erected would more than compensate for this loss. With the library in such a central location, easy of access, the square would be a showplace of the city. We could exhibit our park and library with great pride to visitors who throng the city. It would be a great advertisement to Los Angeles.

"With as much, if actually not more, space for seats around the walks of the park with the library there, the patrons could doubly enjoy the park while reading books under the beautiful trees, flanked by the green lawns.

"This very proposition already has been put to a vote. The people decided in favor of Pershing Square then. It has been declared by the City Attorney that there are no restrictions to selecting the site. It would cost nothing.

"In view of all these advantages I am strongly in favor of the Pershing Square location. A site of that kind could not be obtained for any reasonable sum, even if the money were available. I believe the people who study the situation heartily agree with me.

"So strongly am I in favor of that site, that I believe it unnecessary to consider any other."

THE OTHER SIDE.

The Times is also in receipt of copies of two communications addressed to the Library Board protesting against the use of Pershing Square. One of these is signed by Alvin M. West, president of the Los Angeles City Planning Association, sponsors for the Biltmore Hotel site, in which he declares this site the best one available for the purpose and declares that the taxpayers will authorize more bonds to care for the extra expense.

The other letter is from the Pacific Coast Chapter, American Society of Landscape Architects, signed by President W. D. Cook and Secretary George D. Hall, who state that they are the only members of the society residing in Southern California. The communication admits the expediency and architectural desirability of putting the library in Pershing Square, but says that the sacrifice of the "breathing space" should prevent carrying out the plan.

Foreign Locations Easily Made in Los Angeles.

Film Backgrounds Here Fill All Bills, Says Read.

Producers Who Travel Afield Threaten Los Angeles.

[Photographs illustrating this article will be found in the rotogravure section of today's Times.]

BY J. PARKER READ, JR.

Millions for "home locations"—but not one cent for foreign tribute!

That should be, and in most cases is, the slogan of the Southern California motion-picture producer.

There has been a great deal of agitation regarding a hegira of prominent producers to foreign locations to use as backgrounds for their subjects. This means, of course, the expenditure of millions of dollars, heretofore deposited regularly into the channels of Los Angeles business, away from local industry and if kept up might wean away the entire screen industrial structure to other locations.

If using myself for an illustration of my argument will not be held amiss. I might say that in eleven Louise Glaum productions made in the last two years I have not found it necessary once to go afield for locations. And this despite the fact that I have a reputation for employing a great deal of exotic, or at least foreign atmosphere, in my films.

Cecil DeMille and William DeMille, noted for the variety of locale in their productions probably will subscribe to this viewpoint.

ALL MADE HERE.

Eric Von Stroheim has made his latest production which, I am told, takes one throughout Europe, almost entirely in Los Angeles, or no farther away from this city than Monterey. His previous productions, laid in the Alps, in France and Austria and other countries actually were made here.

In the picture, "Love," in which Miss Glaum is starred, there are "evidences" of trips abroad. Yet my company traveled no considerable distance at any stage in making the picture. I think a stretch of highway near Del Monte or, perhaps, Coronado was the greatest distance traversed.

In my production of "The Leopard Woman", the scenes of wich are exclusively in Africa, my company visited Palm Springs—this was the geographical limit and Stewart Edward White, the author, who knows his Africa like millions know his book, wrote me that it "completely fooled" even him. "It is marvelous" he wrote, "that Southern California can so cleverly counterfeit foreign lands."

In my Hobart Bosworth productions of the "South Seas" (note also the Cecil DeMille production of Barrie's "Admirable Crichton") Santa Cruz and Catalina Islands sufficed.

England, (note Thomas H. Ince's "Lying Lips",) France, (Mr. Tourneur's screen works in particular,) Germany, Italy, Australia—all have appeared in our American films so impeccably represented that no natives of these countries could criticise.

PERFECT COUNTERFEITS.

Our counterfeit Monte Carlos, our Cairos, our Piccadillys, our Rues St Honore—all are ocular perfection itself.

Result—money for Los Angeles structural, art and business enterprises that mounts up to millions in yearly outlays.

I shall never forget a set created for Director Paul Powell at Universal City a few years ago—an entire desert isle designed to represent a lost island whose population was discovered by modern adventurers 400 years after the island had been cut off from the rest of the world. The people and customs supposedly remained at a standstill from the moment that intercourse with the outside world was cut off. No historian could find fault with the tiny island—it was quite a revelation, I assure you.

Think of it—snow, desert, all the wonders of the universe at the doors of the City of the Angeles. Verily the gods have been good to the motion picture producers. Leave Los Angeles? Never! It's a foolish thought! Rather will all the producers in other parts of the world discover eventually that to secure the ultimate in landscapes, locations and effects they must come to Los Angeles and learn the cosmic art of the motion picture as we have found it here

BEST RESULTS HERE.

Generalizing I might give the reader an idea of the amounts expended for locations and settings for a big motion picture production. For example, "Love" cost me in the neighborhood of $140,000 to produce; locations and sets cost approximately $78,000.

"The Leopard Woman," which cost in excess of $200,000 to produce, cost $120,000 in locations and settings.

"The Lone Wolf's Daughter," made from Louis Joseph Vance's story and which demanded a complete representation of a London quarter of forty years ago or so, cost $60,000 in settings and locations though this production was considerably less expensive than "The Leopard Woman."

To have gone to Africa for my "Leopard Woman" sequences would have cost me no less than $150,000, probably more considering the time to get there and return, which must necessarily include the salaries of my company and staff. And the big point is that I would not have gotten better results by going abroad.

The biennial State convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and the Ladies' Auxiliary, A.O.H., will begin today with religious exercises and end Wednesday night with a banquet. The Hayward is the convention hotel.

The delegates today will attend high mass at 11 a.m. at the Cathedral of St. Vibiana. Rev. Edmund McCarthy of Limerick, Ireland, will preach. The initiation will be held at 8 p.m. in the Knights of Columbus council chamber, 613 South Flower street.

The business session will be held beginning at 10 a.m. tomorrow, with luncheon at noon. The delegates at 1:30 p.m. will start on an automobile tour of suburban Los Angeles, stopping two hours at Venice. The convention ball will be held at 8:30 p.m. in the Knights of Columbus auditorium.

Tuesday there will be a business session at 10 a.m. and an entertainment for delegates, members and visitors in the K. of C. council chamber.

The program Wednesday also will begin with a business session at 10 a.m. The banquet will be held at 7:30 at the Alexandria. Rt. Rev. J. J. Cantwell, D. D., bishop of the diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles, will make the principal address.

…n Learning to Fly Says Only Bolt from the Blue …ould Send Craft Hurtling to Earth; Tells of Various Types of Ships One May Fly in.

This costs only … will fly forty miles on … gas. It has a single … low landing speed of … an hour, and there-… less space in which to land—about 300 yards. This would be suitable to fly about in. There is too, the Nieuport, the French scout, of quick maneuverability and quick climb, a rotary motor and requires an expert pilot. Then there is the family bus, the standard that is used for instruction. This is slow, safe and stable. It will go nine miles on a gallon of gasoline and has a speed of sixty-five miles per hour. It requires 150 yards for landing. In contrast with these is the antiquated Curtiss pusher. It is the first naval plane that the government had on the Pacific Coast. It is 120 horse power, will hold two people and travel at the wild speed of forty miles per hour.

FOUR FACTORS.

In every airplane the factors to be considered are the high speed, the low landing speed, the climb and the weight carrying capacity. There cannot be a maximun of all. For instance, if there is a quick climb and high speed there is a low weight carrying capacity, and so on.

The controls in an auto are about five times as complicated as those in an airplane. There are no gears to shift, no differential, no brakes, no reverse—simply this round stick that extends up between the knees and one pulls or pushes it to determine the elevation or the longitudinal balance. There is no other name for this than "the stick." The sidewise motion controls the ailerons, which are the parts of the upper wings that are movable. It also enables one to "bank" or raise one wing, when a turn is made. The faster one travels through the air the greater safety there is. That is why when the nose gets in the air the instructor will shout at you. This will result in loss of a speed and loss of speed means trouble.

Tax-ing along the ground in an airplane is no easy matter. "To-day we are going to do a little ground work," said Mr. Rogers. "I'll take the ship across the lot. You turn it around, come back and stop with the nose pointing toward that building."

"How easy that will be," I thought. I turned on the throttle, pushed the control as far as I could with my left foot, and the machine kept blithely on its way—straight ahead. I had visions of running into the fence. Suddenly it turned and had gone about 360 degrees before I had sense enough to push with my right foot. Finally I brought it to a stop. A laugh from in front. "Well you are only about 30 degrees off."

"Why I'm pointing straight at the building". Followed an argument as to which building, and the discovery that I meant one and he another. So we did it again and again and again. Were I to tell how often this would read like the well known "along came another locust and carried off another grain of corn."

When we started up on my fourth lesson I had all the assurance in the world. At an altitude of 1000 feet I was to fly straight down the road. I don't know what the trouble was. Suddenly I was way to the left.

"Right rudder," suggested Mr. Rogers. Hastily I jerked the stick. Over to the right careened the ship. By this time I had forgotten the nose. It was rapidly approaching straight up. Poor Emory Rogers! He had scarcely a moment to catch his breath between instructions. I simply could not watch that strip of road and keep my ship level. I became excited and each time that I attempted to correct a wrong position I used too much control. I have no idea what the ship looked like to those on the ground, but it felt as if I were on a bucking broncho. Suddenly I heard through the tube: "If you don't change your course you will run into the mountains." A push on the rudder and a jerk at the stick and dizzily the ship swayed to the right. At last we landed, and I was in a state of mind in which I could cheerfully have thrown brick-bats at angels. Said my instructor: "This is what you might call an off day". "It seemed dreadfully windy," I countered, grasping for some possible excuse for my stupidity. "Yes, but your manner of flying made most of it."

INSTRUCTOR IS CALM.

When I got inside my little house alone and sat down to calmly review it all, the fact that impressed me most was Mr. Rogers' imperturbability. Through all the spasmodic jerking and wild lurching of the ship, he sat calmly trying to get some semblance of control into my flying. I know now that the ship is absolutely fool-proof. Nothing but a bolt from the blue will ever send it hurtling to the ground, broken and crushed.

The next time things went somewhat better. I flew straight along the road, made some turns and at last (heaven be praised) I heard through the tube the words: "You are doing pretty well. Now I'll show you how to make a figure eight. That shed will be one end and the clump of trees the other. A turn to the right obliquely across the track, turn to the left." Suiting the action to the word he made a beautiful eight. "Take the ship." I did and went around the shed. Horrors! The trees had somehow disappeared and where on earth was the track? All I could locate was the shed advertising some kind of oats, the letters as big as a house. Round and round I went. Not a sound from in front. Oh, how I longed to give him a poke. And then, so sweetly: "Splendid! You are only about four miles off your course." Would you suspect him of sarcasm? Had there been two sheds the size of Lookout I know that I could have made a wonderful eight.

BOOSTING NEEDED.

It seems such a pity that the United States is lagging so far behind Europe in the development of commercial aviation. The Literary Digest says that it is because of the lack of an adequate chain of landing wharves. Some one has said that the present situation was like the famous conundrum as to which came first, the hen or the egg. Some people think that the rapid development of commercial aviation will follow the establishment of a continuous chain of landing-fields Others maintain that when successful commercial airplanes are built it will be easy to persuade the chambers of commerce to provide the necessary funds for the fields. Mr. Rogers has given the use of his land for a municipal field and the city has not even put up a sign. Los Angeles will soon lose the name of being the center of aviation that it now has unless something is done in the way of boosting. France is extending government aid to her airplane builders and operators. Our government maintains harbors, coast-guards, light-house service and highways. Why not something for aviation?

Any questions that any one desires to ask in regard to aeronautics will ge gladly answered. They may be addressed to The Times or directly to the Rogers Airport. Los Angeles seems such a wonder city, surely something could be done in the way of fostering aviation.

RUSH FLOWER SHOW WORK.

Pronounced the State's greatest fall event, the California Flower Show and Horticultural Exhibition will be staged in Exposition Park October 20 to 26. The eleventh annual convention of the California Association of Nurserymen will be held during the show, bringing together here the best known nurserymen, florists and horticulturalists of the State.

Distinctive features have been planned for the exposition, which, in magnitude, is expected to exceed any similar show in the country. A score of nurserymen are co-operating in the construction of a seven-acre sunken garden, which will be in full bloom during the week of the show. Thousands of bulbs have been planted and plants are growing in a gratifying manner. An immense electrical fountain, dozens of walks in close proximity to the flower beds, and a brilliant scheme of illumination are being fashioned in preparation for the opening.

A second department will be devoted to flowers and in it blooms from every section of California will be on exhibition.

The Pasadena Horticultural Society will hold its annual show in conjunction with the California Flower Show.

The Pasadena shows are recognized as among the best in the western country.

A third department will be givenover to ornamental and economic plants, nurserymen's supplies and commercial exhibits. Entertainment features will be given daily.

TRUSTEES ARE HELD FOR TRIAL.

Attorney for Venice Men Enters Plea of Not Guilty to Misconduct Charge.

Superior Judge Reeve yesterday held A. C. Coles, J. G. Harrah and C. W. Holbrook, members of the Board of Trustees of the city of Venice for trial on a charge of misconduct in office. The same court had previously held J. F. Peasgood, City Treasurer, and W. T. Crawford, City Engineer.

Charles W. Lyon, representing the three Trustees, entered a plea of not guilty in behalf of his clients. It was said in their behalf that the accusation did not state facts sufficient upon which to predicate a prosecution, and that the purported acts, if they occurred at all, were in a former term of office.

The case was transferred by Judge Reeve to Department Ten for further proceedings.

The accusation sets out asserted illegal acts in regard to the Center-street pier and the deposit of funds in the First National Bank of Venice.

SHORT COURT SESSION.

Judge Bledsoe to Hear Several Cases Involving Liquor Laws.

U. S. District Judge Bledsoe will hold a short session of Federal court tomorrow morning, for the benefit of several prisoners in the County Jail, who want to plead to violations of the liquor laws. No arrangements have been made for any court in U. S. District Judge Trippet's department in the week.

THE LAST WORD.

Lloyd George says the last word has been spoken on the Irish situation. If he really thinks so he doesn't know the Kellys and the Burkes.

THE MONEY MAKERS.

Profiteering has been officially made a crime in Cuba. In this country people talk of it being a crime, but really it is more of an exercise.

A BIG PIECE.

Grover Cleveland Bergdoll has now found an asylum and retreat in Switzerland and says he cannot be reached or harmed. If he stays in that country long enough he may learn to be a Swiss cheese.

BIRDS OF EVIL OMEN.

Gen. Ludendorff sees a new war in the immediate future. He seems to be quite enthusiastic over the possibility, at that. One might imagine that even a Prussian commander had seen war enough to last for several seasons. What does he think we are going to have a a disarmament conference for? Does he figure it as merely a little poker game?

THE SPORTING LIFE.

The Mexican government is to levy a tax of 10 per cent on lottery prizes—to be collected from the winner at time of payment. If the lottery business is boomed this can assure the nation of a large revenue. Here is a hint for Uncle Sam. If he could keep the kitty in all the Saturday-night poker games it would go far in paying the interest on the Liberty Loans.

THE SMOKE SCREEN.

At Camp Meade army officers have been testing a new idea in smoke screens. It is furnished by a candle which gives off a dense white smoke that is comparatively harmless by itself and yet is more clinging and impervious than the best efforts of the coal and oil burners. It is found that the white smoke is better than the black for concealment purposes and that the men can operate in the white barrier without harm to themselves.

THE UNEMPLOYED.

The Secretary of Labor declares that there are now nearly six million workers out of employment in America. There is a halt in many lines of industry. In the building trades there is a good deal of idleness because of unnecessary and unwarranted strikes. In the metal trades there is a slowing up that has parted many a worker from his job. In no industry is there indicated unusual activity. The livest spot on the map continues to be Los Angeles; and any man, here or elsewhere, who is having steady employment and drawing a comfortable pay envelope is fortunate.

SWEEPING THE WORLD.

Prohibition is sweeping the world. We have the authority of the Women's Christian Temperance Union for it. The organization is having its national convention in San Francisco and this was one of the first disclosures made. The Bay City bootleggers do not seem to have made much of an impression upon the visitors thus far. Anyhow, they see a bone-dry world just ahead. If it takes 6000 years to fasten a prohibition amendment on one nation the rest should be easy figuring. There are only a few hundred countries worth while, anyhow, and 6000 years go by before we know it.

A GOOD SCENT'S WORTH.

Dispatches from West Virginia report the remarkable sagacity of a hooch hound. A resident of that State has a dog possessing a wonderful scent for moonshine. While out hunting with his master the dog pointed long and earnestly at a tree stump. A little patient digging disclosed a gallon demijohn of old rye. The next day the animal behaved in a similar manner before a spot in a creek bed. Some more digging revealed a case containing twelve bottles of Old Crow. The owner has been offered a million dollars for his dog, but refuses to part with him. He says he doesn't know where he could get another.

THE AGE OF DISCRETION.

Another attempt is being made to alter the French marriage laws by which a man is considered a minor until he is 30, and the consent of his parents is necessary to make the marriage legal.

Both in 1918 and 1919 endeavors were made to revise this law and lower the age to 25—but were defeated by large majorities.

The Abbe Lemire is fostering the present campaign and is declaring that, while men are capable of making unwise marriages at any age, they are less likely to do so under 25, because then they know so much more about women. Moreover, they are then better equipped to wrestle with the struggle and see the thing through.

At all events, young Frenchmen do seem to have earned the right to select their own marital encounters, even if it does lead to a little competition in divorce with the United States. Still it is noteworthy that France, one of the chief leaders and defenders of civilization, declines to regard a boy as responsibly discreet until he has passed 30—and that, ahem, no such protective creed obtains for the "weaker" sex in that country!

LENIN'S CONFESSION OF FAILURE.

When one reads the frantic appeals coming from Russia to foreign peoples to feed the starving proletariat of that country it becomes apparent why the Bolshevik government is now as much concerned in the re-establishment of a capitalist state as it was formerly in destroying one. All decrees penalizing trading for profit among the peasants have been repealed. Government taxes have again been levied and the peasants are permitted to do what they like with all their surplus products, after the tax gatherer has taken his tithe.

Soviet officials are now as busily engaged in restoring private industry as formerly in abolishing it. Concessions are offered freely to foreign corporations that will consent to engage in any form of productive can accumulate, provided the government will permit them as much profit as they can accumulate, provided the government gets its share. Most of these concessions are offered on a fifty-fifty basis. The corporations can exact what profit they like, provided the Bolsheviki get half. Robbing the proletariat through excessive profits is made legitimate, so long as the Bolsheviki participate in the loot.

Special inducements are also offered to the bourgeois class to engage in industry; but a limit of seventy employees is imposed in each establishment. A wholesale butcher can run seventy slaughter-houses with seventy workmen in each; but he becomes a public offender if he attempts to consolidate two or more of them under one roof. Small merchants are urged to reopen their former shops and the government is withdrawing from what it terms "petty industry."

Lenin now says frankly that Russia needs capital for the development of its natural resources and to facilitate the exchange of the products of the farms for those of the cities. He is convinced that the plan of trading a sack of wheat for a tin bucket will not work, that some flexible medium of exchange must be provided. In other words, society cannot exist except on a capitalistic basis, and people will not produce more than enough for their own immediate wants if they are not permitted to make a profit from the surplus.

How different all this sounds to the Bolshevist manifesto of 1918 that: "A country without capital will be a country without crime!" With what delight the radicals in this country accepted this theory and sought to secure its application here! But time and hunger have proved relentless critics. Lenin now confesses that it was a theory which would not work out in actual experience. He blames the peasants for being too stupid and selfish to aid in putting a great reform into effect; but he announces that the policy has been abandoned.

As one observes the progress of the Russian experiment it seems that there has been back of it a guiding hand to prevent interference from the outside; as though it were intended that the Russian people themselves should be convinced of their folly and that the rest of the world should learn from the object lesson. If foreign nations had interfered in 1918 to restore orderly government on constitutional lines in Russia the radicals there and elsewhere would have asserted that the greatest reform movement of the ages had been blocked by the money lords and aristocrats of the earth. If Lenin had been overthrown the Socialists would have pictured him to the working classes of all countries as a martyr to their cause and new revolutions would have been attempted in his name.

But nothing has interfered from without to prevent the carrying into effect of the Socialistic theories of Karl Marx. During the present year Russia has been practically at peace with the world. Trade agreements with Great Britain, Germany, Sweden, China and the little nations on the Russian frontiers are in effect. The Russians have had every opportunity to better the condition of the proletariat by the application of Socialist theorists; and the result has been the most widespread unemployment, famine and suffering of which modern history contains any record.

Lenin has been forced to recognize this condition. He can no longer lay the blame on enemies from without. The plan worked to his complete satisfaction and to that of the Socialists and radicals of all countries, so long as there was something in Russia to plunder. The Bolsheviki were like a band of wolves that secures entry to a sheep fold. So long as the supply of mutton held out they are red-fanged and joyous. But when the bones of the last carcass are gnawed clean and when no more sheep are herded into the fold the pangs of hunger attack them and what was once a banquet-room becomes a torture chamber.

So Lenin now publishes decrees re-establishing private industry and sends broadcast invitations for capital and capitalists to come back. Little traders are permitted to make as much profit as they can. They are to be protected by the government in the possession of private stocks of merchandise; there will be no interference with their business, so long as they pay the government tithes. That is a reconstruction of industry on a capitalistic basis. The government has gone out of the buying-and-selling business. It will no longer compete with the little trader. It still reserves the right to operate the mines and the big factories and to run railroads; but it is significant that no mines nor big factories are operating successfully and that the railroads are in a deplorable condition. Three months ago passengers were carried free on all steam and electric lines. The latest decrees have withdrawn that privilege; transportation must be paid for the same as in other capitalistic countries.

Nationalization of industry has burned itself out in Russia. Communism succeeded in closing the factories, but not in operating them successfully. The Bolsheviki discovered that where the people own nothing individually they will have no individual respect for anything, that individuals will not be content to labor solely for the public good, that profit is the one enduring incentive to industry. These things have been demonstrated among other peoples in other times; but a generation of radicals was born that refused to accept the verdicts of history as conclusive. They wanted to make the experiment themselves. They have done so. Lenin and Trotsky have proved to their own satisfaction and to that of all unprejudiced observers that Karl Marx and Henry George were impractical dreamers, that the theories they advocated will, if put into effect, wreck modern society; and that the result is a return to barbarism. The theory that a new and superior civilization would rise amid the ruins of the old proved to be an absurdity. The actual effect was as though salt had been sown amidst the debris, and when that occurs the purifying rains of seven winters are necessary before anything at all will grow.

Bolshevik Russia is seeking to flee back to capitalism as a refuge against the wolves of hunger. The Russians are not being driven back by any outside influence, but are seeking that shelter of their own accord, with Lenin and Trotsky leading in the mad race. Terrible, indeed, has been the cost to the Russian people of this hair-brained experiment with economic forces. No war in modern history ever so wrecked a country and slaughtered its people. The damage has been done; the dead cannot be recalled; but the object lesson is one that should burn itself into intellects of other peoples. The fate of Russia under applied Socialism may preserve other races and other generations from committing similar follies. If it does so, Russia and the rest of the world will benefit from the grewsome experience.

AS TO THE LIBRARY SITE.

The project of building a central library, owned outright by the citizens of Los Angeles, has been discussed for years, while the people have continued to pay a ruinous rental for totally inadequate quarters.

At the last June election, however, the voters, by an overwhelming majority, indorsed the two-and-a-half-million bond issue for the erection of a municipally owned library and so removed the project from the realm of talk into the field of action. All that remains is to choose a site, decide the style of building and start the actual work.

First in order, then, comes the choice of a site, and this choice is of supreme interest to all Angelenos who have at heart the future of their city. While the selection should be made without unnecessary delay, it should not be taken on any snap judgment. The decision is permanent and irrevocable. Wherever the new library is built, there it must remain.

Convenience for the public, economy in carrying out the project and harmonious architectural effects are the three main points on which the site choice should be based. Many places have already been suggested, boosted and in some cases exploited by those who favor various locations which they consider especially suitable for the erection of our new book-home.

On the score of convenience—and this is of prime importance—Pershing Square has an indisputable advantage over the other sites suggested. It is the very heart of the downtown district, the center of the inner circle. It is readily and equally accessible to every reading citizen from Boyle Heights to Sawtelle, from Hollywood to Vernon, from Walnut Park to Sierra Vista. And, since the bonds were voted by the citizens for the convenience of all, their verdict, to be given its full choice, demands a library site adapted to the needs of all, free from any hint of discrimination, unaffected by any public or private interest foreign to the actual work in hand.

Pershing Square meets all these requirements. Normal Hill is second. There are other sites almost as convenient, but they would require a large cash outlay for purchase.

The expense of the undertaking—which implies a fixed resolve that the money voted shall bring the citizens full value for every dollar—must be a guiding principle in the determination of the library site. Where shall it be built to the best economical advantage?

It is evidently better finance that the whole sum voted be available for a beautiful, commodious and dignified library building than that half of it be used up for the purchase of a location, thus leaving only a residue of the original bond money for the actual erection of the library.

The people already own Pershing Square. They also own the Normal Hill site, upon which, however, much work must be done before it is available for building. In Pershing Square they can obtain the full building value of the money to be spent in the enterprise. This they could not do if they had first of all to purchase by the front foot a parcel of land sufficiently large for the kind of structure the public expects. When Los Angeles passes the million population mark, do we wish to hear folks grumbling about a library building hardly adequate for half that number? Such will be the inevitable result of spending half the bond money in the purchase of a suitable site.

Finally, to make the new library a fitting monument to the artistic taste of the community and a credit to the Southland, Los Angeles has no spot so rich in architectural and scenic possibilities as the square of vivid green that at Sixth and Olive breaks the skyscraper monotony of the solid business district.

Any design, classic, Gothic, Mission, Corinthian, modern, will find a fit setting among the trees of Pershing Square. No other building will be near enough to clash with the architecture or mar the symmetry. To erect a really noble and artistic structure and then to have its effect dwarfed or nullified by the crowding in of other inharmonious edifices would accentuate the gibe sometimes uttered against Los Angeles that it is still an overgrown village.

Such a slur would be utterly refuted by the Public Library-Pershing Square combination.

Furthermore, the library by attracting—as it would—to Pershing Square the better and busier brand of citizenship would discourage the loafers, since these two elements can never mix. This is a feature by no means detrimental to either the utility or the appearance of our old-time Sixth Street Park, once under the cloud of being a hang-out for those who resemble the lilies of the field in everything except their raiment.

In 1904 the people, by a decisive majoriyt, voted for the erection of a new Public Library in what was then Sixth Street Park. At that time the legality of using the park for such a purpose was approved by the Supreme Court of California. The Times, interested only in seeing that the voters get the best possible value for their money, believes that the people in 1921 will make no mistake in repeating that decision in regard to what is now Pershing Square.

Laddie Boy, the favorite pet of President Harding, ought to be commiserated by every lover of the dog. Some eastern poet has written a "piece" about him.

A BUSINESS EYE OPENER.

The Industrial and Trade Exposition which has been held in the Union Terminal Building during the past week was a revelation to the business men of this city as well as to visitors. Market week has presented in a concrete, easily understood form evidence of the amazing industrial and commercial growth of Los Angeles.

The announcement in 1920 that Los Angeles, in addition to being tenth in population among the cities of the United States, was tenth in industry was surprising to the country generally and gratifying to the people of this city. Today the city stands seventh in point of industry, a remarkable achievement. Despite these announcements, and all that they meant, it is doubtful if their full significance had been borne home to the people who live here and who had helped to make Los Angeles business grow. Our own citizens, our business men who were here when Los Angeles was small and even its ambitions less than the realization now attained, have been harder to convince of the full fact of Los Angeles' commercial progress than observing visitors from other cities.

It remained for the 500 or more exhibitors at this, Los Angeles' first market week, to open the eyes of the hardest-headed and most conservative business men. The big exposition, with its more than 200,000 visitors, its thousands of buyers and its tremendous volume of business transacted, has been of incalculable value in enabling the business men themselves to know and appreciate the extent of our commercial achievements. Men who have been prominent in business here for a quarter of a century learned for the first time at the exposition of the existence of enterprises of imposing proportions. The tremendous scope and significance of the exposition surprised everybody who attended and it is probably true that the very men who participated in the event and helped to make it were most surprised of all.

Some time ago the United States Chamber of Commerce began sending out, at intervals, maps showing business conditions throughout the United States. Portions of the country having depressed conditions were indicated in black, those with only fair business were shown in shaded lines and such sections as had good business were shown in white. These maps have varied from time to time, except that Los Angeles and surrounding territory has been consistently shown as white. One map issued last winter, and widely commented upon, showed nearly all the United States as black or shaded, with the Los Angeles district the only white spot.

Basic reasons why Los Angeles keeps "white" in a business way are abundance of cheap water and power, plenty of skilled labor and absence of industrial unrest when other cities suffer from that cause. Everybody is busy in Los Angeles. The city has had no strike of consequence since the war. People can work to advantage and with comfort all the year. The city is strategically located as a supply and distributing center.

Additional convincing evidence that shows why Los Angeles keeps "white" on the country's business map was provided by the Industrial and Trade Exposition of the past week. Housed in the magnificent Union Terminal Building costing $1,000,000, it required all the ample room and facilities afforded it. The exposition has been surpassingly successful in volume of sales, in business relations established with other communities, including foreign countries. It has justified itself many times over, but its chief value is that it has given the industrial leaders more courage and more confidence and has opened their eyes to the magnitude of the city's commercial achievements.

The belief of those who attended that the present triumphs foreshadow further remarkable growth in the future was voiced as follows at the Home Products luncheon at the exposition last Wednesday by Capt. John D. Fredericks:

> Wiseacres would say: "It is no use, we have reached our limit; no coal, no wood, no water." But whenever stern necessity knocks at the door of the storehouse of knowledge the great Creator takes off the lock, opens the door and lets out some wonderful thought or idea. And so here, while our Aqueduct will supply, in a partial way, perhaps, the great thing we need to take the place of fuel, we are going into a mightier venture than any community ever entered. We are going to harness the Colorado River, the greatest source of power in the world, and it is going to be done within the next ten years. I will not undertake to discuss at this time the agencies by which the work will be undertaken, but it is going to be done.
> And when this is done we will have multiplied the power of the United States. And for what use? A little here to the east of us are Arizona and New Mexico lands and other lands in Imperial Valley as fertile as the sun ever shone upon, needing only water. That water will be given to them. Here is industry needing only power. That power will be given to us and our neighboring communities, and so life, after all, my friends, life. The thing that never dies, never is consumed, never wears out, never is used to destruction or to extinction, that is the great power that is going to be the central feature of our development, electricity. It will come from that great river.
> It will come to make us great. It will come to fulfill the destiny of this great courageous community, and when we have used it, like the faith of God, we have not consumed it. We can use it and use it and use it. The world has been seeking for something that would give us power without destruction or consumption. The white fuel of the Colorado River, that will be ours and our children's and our children's children's.

HAPPY SPITBERGEN.

Spitzbergen's winds are blowing, their edge is like a file, and there it's always snowing and life is worth the while; no torrid nights are keeping the citizens from sleeping; no sunstruck gents are weeping, but people sing and smile. Spitzbergen, land of pleasure, of comfort and of ease! The cold they cannot measure, for mercury will freeze; amid those wholesome rigors no voter ever figures on flies or ants or chiggers, on skeeters, bugs or fleas. Of that fair land I'm dreaming when I to roost repair, the perspiration streaming from brow and cheeks and hair; how I would like to wander among the icebergs yonder and see the groundhog ponder within its frozen lair! It seems a thing surprising that all men do not go where winds are always rising and there is always snow; why do we shilly-shally? Why don't we straightway sally to some far northern valley and sit upon a floe? Spitzbergen is inviting the weary to her doors; she beckons, at this writing, she beckons and implores; why are we here remaining, where horrid heat is reigning; oh, why is no one straining to reach her icebound shores? The summer sun is blazing, the sky's like polished zinc; and heat, absurd, amazing, has put us on the blink; and still the days grow hotter, why don't we weave and totter to where men chop the water when they would have a drink? THE LANCER.

This "should-wives-have-salaries?" controversy that is raging in the British press is ominous. In many parts of the world the happy custom survives by which a man acquires several wives—each accompanied by a cow and a load of bricks or some such dowry—who thereafter perform all the arduous business of earning the living and the household chores, while father is content to be president of the company, as it were. Civilization penalized father to the extent that the poor devil had to earn the living while, as Katherine so aptly put it, "thou liest warm at home and cravest no tribute at thy hands but love, fair looks and true obedience."

The wife's salary idea is the next step in the painful transition. After that she will assume those presidential offices and content herself with running the firm with father as chief employee. Being enterprising, she will assuredly enlarge the business and add to her staff. By that time, with luck, the profit-sharing and bonus systems may be well established, although she may elect to revert to the "whilst-thou-lie-warm-at-home" theory and exact the love, fair looks and true obedience, minus any bonuses. So there is nothing like preparedness. Perhaps we better start in right now with a "should-husbands-have-salaries?" debate and take time by the forelock.

I see the Chicago department stores are following the hotel lead and forbidding their feminine employees to paint their faces and show their knees, etc. And quite right, too. The rich and socially prominent must positively be conceded some exclusive privileges.

"Both rich and poor alike their nakedness display,
The poor because they must and the rich because they may."

But after this the poor just mustn't, that's all. It is infringing sacred property rights.

Your Lancer is part of a committee at a club that yearns to put on a series of first-class programs during the coming winter. It is a most disheartening job. You see, most of the ladies and gentlemen who aspire to spread cultural light set forth their talents and charms in innumerable little pamphlets replete with flattering testimonials—and then append their portraits. And, knowing something of the ways of photographers, we may presume they are flattering pictures, at that.

And one can't help being a bit of an amateur physiognomist nowadays. Let us say it is a musician that offers us a performance of the Appasionata—accompanied by the picture of a vapid-looking chap with a receding chin and an impossible collar. Or a dame who offers to enlighten us upon "The Truth About the Silesian Question"—picture depicting simpering, smirking, stencilled-eyebrowed, marcel-waved near-vamp. Or an erudite professor undertaking to explain the Einstein theory to us—introduced pictorially as a passe movie actor in semipreserved senile decay. No amount of effulgent literature can rekindle our enthusiasm after that.

And—er—is honesty really the best policy. It's rough on the program committee.

When the orchestras struck in New York the picture shows thrived as ever. And they lowered their prices and doubled their attendance. This passion for plaintive organ accompaniments to mushy songs, all of which seem to have the same refrain; this injection of would-be elevating music into the poor man's pastime; these "added attractions" of vaudeville stunts don't seem to be at all essential to the popularity of the films and they are evidently expensive. For my part I like my "silent drama" to be silent and when I want vaudeville I go to a vaudeville show. But with the vaudeville houses showing pictures and the picture houses showing vaudeville—why, everybody's everything and nobody is anything in particular.

It's like making us buy a dubious flowered saucer when all we want is a pound of good coffee at the best price.

Herbert Grover, Carl Rosa opera tenor, says no picture in the world is worth more than five shillings. And he was talking about art, the paint and canvas kind in which "old masters" fetch half a million dollars. And in which even a new master feels that $500 should be the irreducible minimum.

You may say that Herbert is a Philistine—but the world is full of Herberts. And incidentally some of them feel just that way about grand opera as well as art.

Which, of course, doesn't prove a thing except that it is best to raise one's boy to be a plumber.

I observe that the hospitals are bragging about the number of births that take place in those institutions nowadays. Scarcely an embryo citizen whose parents consider him of any consequence ever makes his advent in a mere home any more.

It must be quite touching how many prosperous citizens are making sentimental pilgrimages to the "delivery" rooms at the hospitals to "see the place where I was born." I wonder.

When Mary Miles Minter visited the famous "Ye Old Cheshire Cheese" in London she registered with "kinema star" after her name. Such a touching example of American film modesty.

Other professions should adopt the vogue. We may look to see Gen. Foch append "Star General of the Great War" after his name when he registers at a New York hotel, and Elinor Glyn should certainly have registered at the Hollywood Hotel as "London's premiere siren authoress." THE LANCER.

It is getting so that it is almost impossible to recognize a young woman with her fashionable hat covering her face, her hair hiding her ears and the rouge smeared on her cheeks. If you don't know the ankles you lose.

TUJUNGA MOON FESTIVAL TO OPEN BANK OF JOY.

Millionaires of Green Verdugo Hills to Stage Fiesta for Folk of Roaring Town.

Emulating the ancient Tujungans who once owned the broad and beautiful Verdugo Hills and measured their limitless wealth in terms of happiness and contentment, the Tujungans of today, a happy-hearted clan assembled from all the highways and byways of the universe with the determination to find peace and plenty far from the roaring town, have announced that they will open a community bank in the green Verdugo hills September 2.

Tujunga Enjoys Prompt Mail Service.

This bank will be open for business from September 2 to 6 inclusive. The Tujungans find that they possess more happiness and contentment than they really need, so during the first week of next month they are going to lend their surplus wealth to folks from the roaring town who are shy on physical comfort and heart-happiness. Anyone who desires this sort of a loan can get it for the asking.

The opening of this unique institution will be marked by a celebration to be known as the Moon Festival of the Tujungans. It is to be given for the benefit of Monte Vista Post No. 250, American Legion, in the green Verdugo Hills. According to James T. Fitzgerald, who is one of the leading spirits in the movement, the Moon Festival will be a sort of harvest fiesta, marked by all sorts of outdoor sports in the afternoon, and band concerts, vaudeville programs and dancing in the open air at night.

ARRANGE PROGRAM.

Yesterday linemen were stringing wires all over the green Verdugo hills to create sufficient illumination for the spectacle. Fifty concessions have already been arranged for, and vaudeville acts formerly on the Orpheum circuit have been arranged for.

Some of the professional entertainers live right there among the verdant hills. Frederick Warde, late of "The Mission Play," is expected to offer some of his very best sketches. Addison E. Wells is chairman of arrangements for the festival. Bessie Chapin, violinist, is in charge of the music. There will be a special concert on Sunday, September 4.

The committee is planning to make the festival a sort of weekend camping-out trip for a lot of tired folks in the roaring town who may welcome the opportunity to get out and pitch their tents for a few nights under the great spreading oaks of the Verdugo hills. Free camping grounds have been provided for festival visitors, and there will be an abundance of shade, fresh air, sunshine and good water, with supply stores near at hand.

ORIGIN OF PLAN.

In speaking of the forthcoming festival, and of the millionaires' club which is staging it, John S. McGroarty, sage of the verdant hills, says:

"The millionaires of the green Verdugo hills, do not measure their fortune in dollars and cents. They are millionaires of happiness and contentment. Some of them have gobs and oodles of money, and some have no money at all. The queer thing about it is that one never can tell by looking at them which is which.

"If you see two men in brown overalls with their sleeves rolled up over their brown elbows, building a stone wall or laying shakes on a little shack, among the heather and wild cherry, one of them may be just a day laborer, and the other may have money enough to start a national bank. The only difference between them is that the day laborer is having just as good a time as the other chap, and is getting $6 or $7 a day besides. The chances are that both of them are members of the millionaires' club of happiness and contentment.

"This is how the members of the millionaires' club came to evolve this big financial scheme. The only way an ordinary millionaire can make anything out of his money is to invest it in some business and then work and worry day and night to look after it, or lend it out at interest.

EAGER TO LEND.

"It is the same with the millionaires of happiness and contentment. The only way they can increase their fortune is to lend to somebody who is needy, and the needier the borrower is, the better, because he will be willing to pay a bigger rate of interest. Up in the green Verdugo hills everybody is getting so rich it is hard to find borrowers any more.

"The subject came up one evening when the millionaires were sitting on a stone wall looking out over the San Fernando Valley and the Ventura Mountains where the gold and crimson of the sunset had faded to lavendar and gray. They were watching the lights of the foolish automobiles as they raced up and down the Calabasas road, in quest of happiness.

"It was the man who used to be statistician who thought of the plan. The foolish automobiles gave him the idea. While the other millionaires were talking and wondering where they were going to find people to whom to lend their fortunes the man who used to be a statistician got out his pencil and made a lot of figures on a smooth white rock.

John S. McGroarty poet-philosopher

"'By ginger, men,' he remarked. finally, 'I have got the answer. There must be hundreds of thousands of people down in the roaring town, who need a real grub stake—people who go scooting over the country in the foolish automobiles seeking a good time—people who go to the motion-picture shows every night, and people who sit around home and feel sulky. Let's invite them all to come up here, and lend each of them enough to make him happy all the rest of his life.'

"The man who reads the papers said, by gollies, it was a fine idea and they would do it, and they would all have the dickens of a time. So they settled it that way.

The Man Who Plays Ukulele.

MILLIONAIRES BUSY.

"Ever since then the millionaires of the green Verdugo hills have been the busiest people in all creation. They have decided to keep open house for all the world from Friday, September 2, to Tuesday, September 6. Lots of people will be able to go on Friday and stay all five days. Others who cannot get away from business on Friday can go Saturday, and on Sunday everybody can go and stay over Labor Day.

"The chief of the hill tribes proposed to call it the Moon Festival of the Tujungans in honor of the old Indian tribe that used to live in the Tujunga Valley and the Verdugo hills, and as the regular moon will be taking a vacation about the time the millionaires have had to make a moon.

"The other day they had to get out their mattocks and clear the sage and heather and wild buckwheat away from the edges of the principal business streets. They hated to do that because the heather is so green and pretty and the sage smells so good and woodsy and the wild buckwheat is so full of flowers, but Socrates said that if the people from the roaring town came up here and found the brush hanging all over the edges of Sunset Boulevard they would think Tujunga wasn't a real city.

"They have cleared a place to have a camp fire every night where everybody can go and sing, and have built a big platform where everybody can dance. The children are going to have pretty costumes of bright colors with little bells to jingle, and there is the man who plays the flute and a lot of the people of the green Verdugo hills who used to be musicians and entertainers when they lived in the roaring town, so there will be free entertainment every evening."

HOW TO GET THERE.

Go to the Union Stage Depot or the Pacific Electric Railway station and get your through ticket to Tujunga, or if you have a "tin lizzie" drive out North Broadway to San Fernando Road and turn to the right on the Verdugo Road about half way to Glendale, or go out Glendale avenue to the Verdugo Road, or go north on Vermont to Los Feliz Road and follow Los Feliz until you get to Glendale avenue. Any of these three roads will take you to beautiful Verdugo Canyon, which is one of the prettiest roads out of Los Angeles. When you get to Verdugo Road follow the arrows to Tujunga. If you live in Pasadena or any town east, cross the Arroyo Seco and Devil's Gate Dam and follow the arrows. From all points north and west go to San Fernando Road and follow the arrows.

NOTED HORSES ARE ENTERED.

List More Than Two Hundred for San Fernando Fair.

Leading Owners on Coast to Aid September Show.

Plan to Make It Best Held West of Kansas City.

Applications for entry to the $1000-a-night horse show which will be held in connection with the San Fernando Valley Fair, September 19 to 24, have passed the 200 mark, with many asking to enter a large number of horses. The list includes many well known owners of thoroughbreds on the Pacific Coast. Hamilton Basset, who is in charge of the night horse show, received a letter yesterday from Dr. A. E. Graham of Grants Pass, Ore., who says he will be here to show his three famous horses, Flash H, Dave H and Cotral Harrold, which are valued at $25,000. These animals have been across the water at three shows in England. Flash H holds the record for the second highest jump in the world. Dave H. is a five-gaited stallion and is called the handsomest horse on the continent, and Cotral Harrold won first prize at the 1919 State Fair at Sacramento.

Other owners of horses who have made application for entry are: G. H. Pearsall, S. M. Spaulding, Beverly Hills; H. A. McDonald, Montecito; Lafayette M. Hughes, Denver, Colo.; Miss Maud Banks, Covina; R. P. Spaulding Jr., South Pasadena; Keith Spaulding, Santa Catalina Island; Dr. W. J. Smyth, Oakland; Piedmont Riding School, Oakland; John Spring, San Francisco; Roy M. Pike, San Francisco; Mrs. William Roth, San Francisco; D. Sullivan, Seventh-avenue Riding School, San Francisco; P. E. Bowls, Oakland; R. E. English, Pasadena; I. M. Danzinger, Los Angeles; A. A. Alderson, Los Angeles; Los Angeles Riding School; Mrs. C. B. Anderson, Pleasanton; Mrs. Winslow Anderson, Santa Rosa; T. Magnan, Riverside; T. C. Jefferson, Beverly Hills; Alfred Myes, Hollywood; Mrs. Maurice De Maud, Los Angeles; Mrs. Adelaide Gillis McCormack, Los Angeles; E. F. Hamlon, Pasadena; W. S. Tevis Jr., San Francisco; A. B. Spreckles, San Francisco; Mrs. Arthur P. Perkins, Pasadena; F. W. Matthiessen, Santa Barbara; Thomas Mason, Santa Barbara; Dr. S. E. Kramer, Santa Barbara; Maj. Max Fleishman, Santa Barbara; J. H. Rossiter, San Francisco; Edward Ceberian, San Francisco; F. J. Book, H. C. Ahlers, Fred Sinclair, San Francisco; Miss Ethel Clayton, Gloria Swanson, Los Angeles; Peter Hastings, Santa Barbara; Mr. F. Pounder, Montecito; Dr. L. C. Deming Anaheim; C. K. G. Billings, Santa Barbara; Phil. O'Connell, Stockton; Allen Russell, Los Angeles; G. H. Pearsall, Alta Loma; Jack Holt, Los Angeles; Douglas Fairbanks, Hollywood; Miss Pauline Fredericks, Los Angeles; Col. A. H. McClure, Sacramento; Charles W. Winters, Alhambra; James T. Ragsdale, Merced; H. Ormsby Phillips, Pasadena.

These owners of famous horses aim to make the coming affairs the greatest horse show staged West of Kansas City. An arena 150x300 feet in size, the largest in the United States, is being built for the show which will be magnificently decorated and lighted.

The other departments report good progress. The live-stock department under M. H. Adamson has more than 400 entries already in the cattle and swine divisions and E. I. Hammond, who is handling the poultry exhibit, declares the poultry show will break all records. Entries for the Buick, Studebaker, Dodge and Chevrolet cars were received last week for the automobile and power farming exhibition in addition to a number of entries in the implement and accessory lines.

CROWD LOS ANGELES JAIL.

Number of Prisoners Increases Rapidly Despite Dry Law and Decrease in East.

There are now in the jail 406 prisoners. Two years ago there were 212.

Those who asserted that prohibition would have the effect of emptying our jail must realize that there is some outlying cause. Is it due to bootleggers; the fact that many men during the wet time did not care to stock up with liquor and now perversely demand that they have it; idlers, tourists who flock to this mild climate, our mixed population, or just a plain increase in population that bids in a few years to make Los Angeles a city of 1,000,000 population?

STARTLING FACTS.

In the investigation by myself and Supervisor Cogswell of eastern jails and workhouses, with the view of obtaining data for our new jail building, certain facts were forced upon us as to the effect prohibition has had on the population of jails in various cities.

It surprised us to learn that in the large cities like New York, Boston, Baltimore, Washington, Detroit, Pittsburg and Cleveland, the jail population has decreased from 40 to 60 per cent.

Detroit had 400 prisoners in its jail and about 800 in the workhouse. In the wet days the ordinary jail population would have been 700 to 800 and proportionately more in the workhouse.

The famous Tombs in New York contained only 700 inmates.

Baltimore had between 600 and 700 prisoners; ordinarily the number would have been about 1200.

Washington Farm had about 500 prisoners. The usual number was from 700 to 750.

The proportion in each case was 125 women. At our visit there were less than forty women on the Washington Farm.

The condition in Pittsburg was practically the same. The wardens in the Pittsburg and Baltimore jails stated that prohibition had reduced the number of prison inmates, not to speak of the inmates of the workhouse more than 40 per cent.

The matron of the Washington Industrial Farm stated that the grounds were not being kept up as formerly because prohibition had reduced the supply of indigents from 125 to less than forty and she did not have the help to have the work done.

We found that a majority of the inmates of these institutions were men and women who were charged with penal offenses. The reduction in the number of inmates had been due almost entirely to the falling off of misdemeanor prisoners—men arrested for drunkeness and petty offenses of that kind.

In the rural districts the jails were almost empty; in many cases they were using jails for hospitals.

In Northern New York, where I formerly lived, the jail was practically empty. A farm which had been bought about ten years previously for working prisoners, had been leased out owing to the lack of inmates to work on the farm.

In the Bronx we found that the jail which had been built to handle about 1000 prisoners had less than 250 inmates.

Los Angeles has found it imperative to build a larger jail not only for the present but for the future.

One of the reasons given us in the Bronx for the falling off of prison inmates was that Judge Gibbs, besides enforcing the prohibition law, gave every man the maximum sentence, the result being that offenders thought twice before committing crime for fear of the severe punishment.

ONE THEORY.

I have wondered whether the humane impulse to let offenders off with a light sentence; also the many cases where prisoners appeal from the judgment necessitating a long stay in jail before they are released or committed to the penitentiary, is not largely responsible for filling our jails.

Many good women of this city and county are urging us to establish a farm where prisoners may work in the open air on their parole. I want to say that I find a beneficial result from the prison camp the county established in the Topango Canyon. The men and many of them were not accustomed to manual labor, seem happy and contented; they make no attempt to escape, and their health has been materially benefitted. They are robust and bronzed and I really believe their isolation from the temptations of the city, the healthy exercise they get and the time they have to reflect are making men of many of them.

RETURNS FROM TRIP TO NORTHERN POINTS.

Dr. R. P. McReynolds of 18 Berkeley Square has recently returned home from a visit to the northern part of the State. He and his brother, Justice McReynolds of Washington, D. C., attended the San Francisco Bohemian Club "jinks" and following this were guests of William H. Metson of San Francisco on a hunting and motoring trip through Modoc county.

DIVORCED WIFE SEEKS SUPPORT FOR CHILD.

Mrs. Frances Edwards, who obtained a divorce from John M. Edwards in Colorado May 29, 1918, is seeking maintenance for her daughter, Marjorie, 12 years of age. Mrs. Edwards says she has no money. The couple were married in Denver, Jan. 5, 1908.

EAT TON OF MELONS.

Officials of the Los Angeles Railway joined with motormen and conductors at the Division Three car house last night in consuming more than a ton of water-melons. The melon feast celebrated the victory of the division in a recent ten-week's safety contest. The division takes possession of the "Premier Safety Division" flag which goes to the winner of each of the ten-week's contest in accident prevention. The safety champions work out of the car house at Avenue twenty-eight and Idell street.

WILL INSTRUCT IN CITIZENSHIP.

University Will Inaugurate Special, Unique Course.

Work is to be in Charge of Prominent Educator.

Study of California School System Also Scheduled.

That a complete education embraces a study of citizenship and the problems and responsibilities which confront the future citizen was the statement made yesterday by Lester B. Rogers, dean of the school of education of the University of Southern California. In accordance with this belief, arrangements have been made for a class in citizenship and education when the fall term opens September 12. The class will be conducted by Dr. Robert A. Cummins, formerly of the State Normal school of Natchitoches, La., and who is the latest addition to the faculty of the School of Education.

Besides the new course in citizenship and education, Dr. Cummins will have charge of several other classes of interest to student of pedigogy, including an intensive study of the California school system, a course of particular value since most of the students of the school begin their teaching experience in the schools of the State. Educational hygiene, class organization and management in elementary schools, fundamentals in education and a study of elementary education are other subjects to be studied under the direction of Dr. Cummins.

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION.

In the department of religious education Dr. George H. Betts comes to the University of Southern California faculty from Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., where he has for several years held the professorship of religious education. Prior to his connection with Northwestern University, Dr. Betts served as superintendent of public schools in Iowa and later as professor of psychology at Cornell University.

He is the author of a number of books on educational subjects which are considered standard authorities by students of these branches. "The Mind and Its Education," "Social Principles of Education," "The Recitation," "How to Teach Religion," "Classroom Method and Management," and several books on the rural school are in constant demand at the public library among students of educational principles.

A course in the principles of social education will be one of the most important classes offered by Dr. Betts for the coming term.

For the first time in forty years it is possible that registration in the University of Southern California may have to be limited, because of the numbers who have filed applications for admission.

STRENGTH IN SERVICE.

"The strength of a university," said Dr. Rogers, dean of the School of Education, "lies not in the number of its students but in the quality of its educational work. We have excellent facilities in the new building to be opened to classes this fall, and we wish our students to receive the utmost advantages. This means that we emphatically wish to avoid over-crowding in classes, so that each student who registers for work in the University of Southern California may feel that he is receiving adequate personal attention. To this end, it is possible that we may place a limit upon the registration. The matter is not yet decided."

Offices in the University of Southern California have been kept busy for the last two weeks handling applications for the fall term, which will open September 12, and it is this unexpected rush in all the colleges of the University that has raised the question of the advisability of limiting the number of students to be admitted.

PRISONER SAYS HE'S JOHN D., JR.

Offers Check for Bail, but Goes to Jail on Charge of Theft Attempt.

Glen Compton was an unusual defendant in Justice Baird's court yesterday. He was charged with burglariously entering the office of the Central Hardware Company at 6673 Hollywood Boulevard. When the court asked him if his true name was Glen Compton, the defendant replied:

"No, my name is John D. Rockefeller, Jr.'

The court was not impressed with the reply and fixed bail at $3000.

"Can you raise the bail?" asked the court.

The defendant evidently thought the question was superfluous in the case of the son of the oil king, and said:

"Here's my check for $3000."

He was committed to the County Jail.

Uplifters Will Inspect Work on Clubhouse.

The Uplifters will dine together next Saturday at their ranch and inspect progress in building the clubhouse, dormitories and swimming pool, and the first annual outing there will be held in the week of September 25-October 2. The dinner will be held at 6:30 p.m.

Plans for the outing were announced last week. The dormitories will accommodate 100 and another 100 will be furnished with cots under tents. Already many have agreed to spend the whole week at the ranch, and the week-end visitors will be in great number.

The swimming pool will have been completed and clock golf and tennis courts ready for play. There will be an entertainment each evening at the campfire, "low jinks" on Friday night and on Saturday night James Foleys's and Charles Cadman's musical play will be presented. There will be a Sunday morning concert of the orchestra directed by Charles Robson.

Four-Day Fete for Torrance; Queen to Rule.

The third annual Torrance fiesta, under supervision of the Chamber of Commerce, will be held during the four days and nights starting Wednesday. The program has the united support of the chambers of commerce of the fourth district and exhibits from each town in the area will be featured. Los Angeles manufacturers will also display products in the three big tents to be used for that purpose.

In addition to exhibits there will be tent shows, airplane flights, automobile race, community singing, vaudeville, street dancing, parades, races, games, baby show and other entertaining features. A baby checking room will aid tired mothers to enjoy the celebration.

An interesting feature is the queen contest, with entries from several towns. Honors such as airplane rides, queen's ball and parade, a diamond ring and crowning will fall to the lot of the successful candidate. Torrance boasts of being the home of ten big industrial plants.

CASE AGAINST MILK MEN IS POSTPONED.

DEFENDANTS SEEK IMMUNITY ON GROUND OF THEIR AID TO GRAND JURY.

Owing to the failure of Asst. Dist.-Atty. Powell to furnish his reply brief in time, in the action brought against the Los Angeles Creamery Company and a number of individual milk dealers, charged with violation of the Cartright Anti-Trust Law, Judge Reeve yesterday put over the entire matter until next Saturday morning. The defendants have until Thursday evening to reply to the brief of the prosecution.

The motion as originally made was on behalf of G. H. Shaw, S. A. W. Carver, John Zuchainger, George B. Miller, R. D. Weaver, O. W. Strodhoft and Robert St. John Gardiner, who sought immunity from prosecution on the ground that each of the named defendants voluntarily appeared before the county grand jury and gave testimony in the case. It was argued that a defendant cannot be compelled to convict himself.

Yesterday, motions were filed in the same behalf by the Western Farms, Adohr Certified Farms Dairy, Burr Creamery, M. H. Adamson and E. Butt. In their behalf it was asserted that the books of the corporations named had been taken before the county grand jury, and evidence there discovered that later led to the indictments. These additions to the list of defendants seeking to escape trial covers almost the entire list of indicted individuals and corporations.

COURT WINS PRAISE.

Auto Dealers Laud Justice Baird for Handling of Speeding Cases.

The safety committee of the Motor-Car Dealers' Association through Chairman Dave F. Smith, has expressed its approbation of the manner in which Justice Baird is handling speeding cases. In flagrant cases, Justice Baird gives a jail sentence as well as a fine. Mr. Smith wrote that the committee is well pleased with the efficient manner in which the justice is handling cases of traffic violations.

List More Than Two Hundred for San Fernando Fair.

Leading Owners on Coast to Aid September Show.

Plan to Make It Best Held West of Kansas City.

Graham of Grants Pass, Ore., who says he will be here to show his three famous horses, Flash H, Dave H and Cotral Harrold, which are valued at $25,000. These animals have been across the water at three shows in England. Flash H holds the record for the second highest jump in the world. Dave H. is a five-gaited stallion and is called the handsomest horse on the continent, and Cotral Harrold won first prize at the 1919 State Fair at Sacramento.

Other owners of horses who have made application for entry are: G. H. Pearsall, S. M. Spaulding, Beverly Hills; H. A. McDonald, Montecito; Lafayette M. Hughes, Denver, Colo.; Miss Maud Banks, Covina; R. P. Spaulding Jr., South Pasadena; Kieth Spaulding, Santa Catalina Island; Dr. W. J. Smyth, Oakland; Piedmont Riding School, Oakland; John Spring, San Francisco; Roy M. Pike, San Francisco; Mrs. William Roth, San Francisco; D. Sullivan, Seventh-avenue Riding School, San Francisco P. E. Bowls, Oakland; R. E. English, Pasadena; I. M. Danzinger, Los Angeles; A. A. Alderson, Los Angeles; Los Angeles Riding School; Mrs. C. B. Anderson, Pleasanton; Mrs. Winslow Anderson, Santa Rosa; T. Magnan, Riverside; T. C. Jefferson, Beverly Hills; Alfred Myes, Hollywood; Mrs. Maurice De Maud, Los Angeles; Mrs. Adelaide Gillis McCormack, Los Angeles; E. F. Hamlon, Pasadena; W. S. Tevis Jr., San Francisco; A. B. Spreckles, San Francisco; Mrs. Arthur P. Perkins, Pasadena; F. W. Matthiessen, Santa Barbara; Thomas Mason, Santa Barbara; Dr. S. E. Kramer, Santa Barbara; Maj. Max Fleishman, Santa Barbara; J. H. Rossiter, San Francisco; Edward Ceberian, San Francisco; F. J. Book, H. C. Ahlers, Fred Sinclair, San Francisco; Miss Ethel Clayton, Gloria Swanson, Los Angeles; Peter Hastings, Santa Barbara; Mr. F. Pounder, Montecito; Dr. L. C. Deming Anaheim; C. K. G. Billings, Santa Barbara; Phil. O'Connell, Stockton; Allen Russell, Los Angeles; G. H. Pearsall, Alta Loma; Jack Holt, Los Angeles; Douglas Fairbanks, Hollywood; Miss Pauline Fredericks, Los Angeles; Col. A. H. McClure, Sacramento; Charles W. Winters, Alhambra; James T. Ragsdale, Merced; H. Ormsby Phillips, Pasadena.

These owners of famous horses aim to make the coming affairs the greatest horse show staged West of Kansas City. An arena 150x300 feet in size, the largest in the United States, is being built for the show which will be magnificently decorated and lighted.

The other departments report good progress. The live-stock department under M. H. Adamson has more than 400 entries already in the cattle and swine divisions and E. I. Hammond, who is handling the poultry exhibit, declares the poultry show will break all records. Entries for the Buick, Studebaker, Dodge and Chevrolet cars were received last week for the automobile and power farming exhibition in addition to a number of entries in the implement and accessory lines.

CROWD LOS ANGELES JAIL.

Number of Prisoners Increases Rapidly Despite Dry Law and Decrease in East.

There are now in the jail 406 prisoners. Two years ago there were 212.

Those who asserted that prohibition would have the effect of emptying our jail must realize that there is some outlying cause. Is it due to bootleggers; the fact that many men during the wet time did not care to stock up with liquor and now perversely demand that they have it; idlers, tourists who flock to this mild climate, our mixed population, or just a plain increase in population that bids in a few years to make Los Angeles a city of 1,000,000 population?

STARTLING FACTS.

In the investigation by myself and Supervisor Cogswell of eastern jails and workhouses, with the view of obtaining data for our new jail building, certain facts were forced upon us as to the effect prohibition has had on the population of jails in various cities.

It surprised us to learn that in the large cities like New York, Boston, Baltimore, Washington, Detroit, Pittsburg and Cleveland, the jail population has decreased from 40 to 60 per cent.

Detroit had 400 prisoners in its jail and about 800 in the workhouse. In the wet days the ordinary jail population would have been 700 to 800 and proportionately more in the workhouse.

The famous Tombs in New York contained only 700 inmates.

Baltimore had between 600 and 700 prisoners; ordinarily the number would have been about 1200.

Washington Farm had about 500 prisoners. The usual number was from 700 to 750.

The proportion in each case was 125 women. At our visit there were less than forty women on the Washington Farm.

The condition in Pittsburg was practically the same. The wardens in the Pittsburg and Baltimore jails stated that prohibition had reduced the number of prison inmates, not to speak of the inmates of the workhouse more than 40 per cent.

The matron of the Washington Industrial Farm stated that the grounds were not being kept up as formerly because prohibition had reduced the supply of indigents from 125 to less than forty and she did not have the help to have the work done.

We found that a majority of the inmates of these institutions were men and women who were charged with penal offenses. The reduction in the number of inmates had been due almost entirely to the falling off of misdemeanor prisoners—men arrested for drunkeness and petty offenses of that kind.

In the rural districts the jails were almost empty; in many cases they were using jails for hospitals.

In Northern New York, where I formerly lived, the jail was practically empty. A farm which had been bought about ten years previously for working prisoners, had been leased out owing to the lack of inmates to work on the farm.

In the Bronx we found that the jail which had been built to handle about 1000 prisoners had less than 250 inmates.

Los Angeles has found it imperative to build a larger jail not only for the present but for the future.

One of the reasons given us in the Bronx for the falling off of prison inmates was that Judge Gibbs, besides enforcing the prohibition law, gave every man the maximum sentence, the result being that offenders thought twice before committing crime for fear of the severe punishment.

ONE THEORY.

I have wondered whether the humane impulse to let offenders off with a light sentence; also the many cases where prisoners appeal from the judgment necessitating a long stay in jail before they are released or committed to the penitentiary, is not largely responsible for filling our jails.

Many good women of this city and county are urging us to establish a farm where prisoners may work in the open air on their parole. I want to say that I find a beneficial result from the prison camp the county established in the Topango Canyon. The men and many of them were not accustomed to manual labor, seem happy and contented; they make no attempt to escape, and their health has been materially benefitted. They are robust and bronzed and I really believe their isolation from the temptations of the city, the healthy exercise they get and the time they have to reflect are making men of many of them.

RETURNS FROM TRIP TO NORTHERN POINTS.

Dr. R. P. McReynolds of 18 Berkeley Square has recently returned home from a visit to the northern part of the State. He and his brother, Justice McReynolds of Washington, D. C., attended the San Francisco Bohemian Club "jinks" and following this were guests of William H. Metson of San Francisco on a hunting and motoring trip through Modoc county.

DIVORCED WIFE SEEKS SUPPORT FOR CHILD.

Mrs. Frances Edwards, who obtained a divorce from John M. Edwards in Colorado May 29, 1918, is seeking maintenance for her daughter, Marjorie, 12 years of age. Mrs. Edwards says she has no money. The couple were married in Denver, Jan. 5, 1908.

EAT TON OF MELONS.

Officials of the Los Angeles Railway joined with motormen and conductors at the Division Three car house last night in consuming more than a ton of water-melons. The melon feast celebrated the victory of the division in a recent ten-week's safety contest. The division takes possession of the "Premier Safety Division" flag which goes to the winner of each of the ten-week's contest in accident prevention. The safety champions work out of the car house at Avenue twenty-eight and Idell street.

WILL INSTRUCT IN CITIZENSHIP.

University Will Inaugurate Special, Unique Course.

Work is to be in Charge of Prominent Educator.

Study of California School System Also Scheduled.

That a complete education embraces a study of citizenship and the problems and responsibilities which confront the future citizen was the statement made yesterday by Lester B. Rogers, deaon of the school of education of the University of Southern California. In accordance with this belief, arrangements have been made for a class in citizenship and education when the fall term opens September 12. The class will be conducted by Dr. Robert A. Cummins, formerly of the State Normal school of Natchitoches, La., and who is the latest addition to the faculty of the School of Education.

Besides the new course in citizenship and education, Dr. Cummins will have charge of several other classes of interest to student of pedigogy, including an intensive study of the California school system, a course of particular value since most of the students of the school begin their teaching experience in the schools of the State. Educational hygiene, class organization and management in elementary schools, fundamentals in education and a study of elementary education are other subjects to be studied under the direction of Dr. Cummins.

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION.

In the department of religious education Dr. George H. Betts comes to the University of Southern California faculty from Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., where he has for several years held the professorship of religious education. Prior to his connection with Northwestern University, Dr. Betts served as superintendent of public schools in Iowa and later as professor of psychology at Cornell University.

He is the author of a number of books on educational subjects which are considered standard authorities by students of these branches. "The Mind and Its Education," "Social Principles of Education," "The Recitation," "How to Teach Religion," "Classroom Method and Management," and several books on the rural school are in constant demand at the public library among students of educational principles.

A course in the principles of social education will be one of the most important classes offered by Dr. Betts for the coming term.

For the first time in forty years it is possible that registration in the University of Southern California may have to be limited, because of the numbers who have filed applications for admission.

STRENGTH IN SERVICE.

"The strength of a university," said Dr. Rogers, dean of the School of Education, "lies not in the number of its students but in the quality of its educational work. We have excellent facilities in the new building to be opened to classes this fall, and we wish our students to receive the utmost advantages. This means that we emphatically wish to avoid over-crowding in classes, so that each student who registers for work in the University of Southern California may feel that he is receiving adequate personal attention. To this end, it is possible that we may place a limit upon the registration. The matter is not yet decided."

Offices in the University of Southern California have been kept busy for the last two weeks handling applications for the fall term, which will open September 12, and it is this unexpected rush in all the colleges of the University that has raised the question of the advisability of limiting the number of students to be admitted.

PRISONER SAYS HE'S JOHN D., JR.

Offers Check for Bail, but Goes to Jail on Charge of Theft Attempt.

Glen Compton was an unusual defendant in Justice Baird's court yesterday. He was charged with burglariously entering the office of the Central Hardware Company at 6673 Hollywood Boulevard. When the court asked him if his true name was Glen Compton, the defendant replied:

"No, my name is John D. Rockefeller, Jr.'

The court was not impressed with the reply and fixed bail at $3000.

"Can you raise the bail?" asked the court.

The defendant evidently thought the question was superfluous in the case of the son of the oil king, and said:

"Here's my check for $3000."

He was committed to the County Jail.

Uplifters Will Inspect Work on Clubhouse.

The Uplifters will dine together next Saturday at their ranch and inspect progress in building the clubhouse, dormitories and swimming pool, and the first annual outing there will be held in the week of September 25-October 2. The dinner will be held at 6:30 p.m.

Plans for the outing were announced last week. The dormitories will accommodate 100 and another 100 will be furnished with cots under tents. Already many have agreed to spend the whole week at the ranch, and the week-end visitors will be in great number.

The swimming pool will have been completed and clock golf and tennis courts ready for play. There will be an entertainment each evening at the campfire. "low jinks" on Friday night and on Saturday night James Foleys's and Charles Cadman's musical play will be presented. There will be a Sunday morning concert of the orchestra directed by Charles Robson.

Four-Day Fete for Torrance; Queen to Rule.

The third annual Torrance fiesta, under supervision of the Chamber of Commerce, will be held during the four days and nights starting Wednesday. The program has the united support of the chambers of commerce of the fourth district and exhibits from each town in the area will be featured. Los Angeles manufacturers will also display products in the three big tents to be used for that purpose.

In addition to exhibits there will be tent shows, airplane flights, automobile race, community singing, vaudeville, street dancing, parades, races, games, baby show and other entertaining features. A baby checking room will aid tired mothers to enjoy the celebration.

An interesting feature is the queen contest, with entries from several towns. Honors such as airplane rides, queen's ball and parade, a diamond ring and crowning will fall to the lot of the successful candidate. Torrance boasts of being the home of ten big industrial plants.

CASE AGAINST MILK MEN IS POSTPONED.

DEFENDANTS SEEK IMMUNITY ON GROUND OF THEIR AID TO GRAND JURY.

Owing to the failure of Asst. Dist.-Atty. Powell to furnish his reply brief in time, in the action brought against the Los Angeles Creamery Company and a number of individual milk dealers, charged with violation of the Cartright Anti-Trust Law, Judge Reeve yesterday put over the entire matter until next Saturday morning. The defendants have until Thursday evening to reply to the brief of the prosecution.

The motion as originally made was on behalf of G. H. Shaw, S. A. W. Carver, John Zuchainger, George B. Miller, R. D. Weaver, O. W. Strodhoft and Robert St. John Gardiner, who sought immunity from prosecution on the ground that each of the named defendants voluntarily appeared before the county grand jury and gave testimony in the case. It was argued that a defendant cannot be compelled to convict himself.

Yesterday, motions were filed in the same behalf by the Western Farms, Adohr Certified Farms Dairy, Burr Creamery, M. H. Adamson and E. Butt. In their behalf it was asserted that the books of the corporations named had been taken before the county grand jury, and evidence there discovered that later led to the indictments. These additions to the list of defendants seeking to escape trial covers almost the entire list of indicted individuals and corporations.

COURT WINS PRAISE.

Auto Dealers Laud Justice Baird for Handling of Speeding Cases.

The safety committee of the Motor-Car Dealers' Association through Chairman Dave F. Smith, has expressed its approbation of the manner in which Justice Baird is handling speeding cases. In flagrant cases, Justice Baird gives a jail sentence as well as a fine. Mr. Smith wrote that the committee is well pleased with the efficient manner in which the justice is handling cases of traffic violations.

Los Angeles and Barker Bros. Grow Hand-in-Hand!

Los Angeles—America's Wonder City of Industrial Growth.

Barker Bros.—World-Wide Leader in Successfully Furnishing Homes.

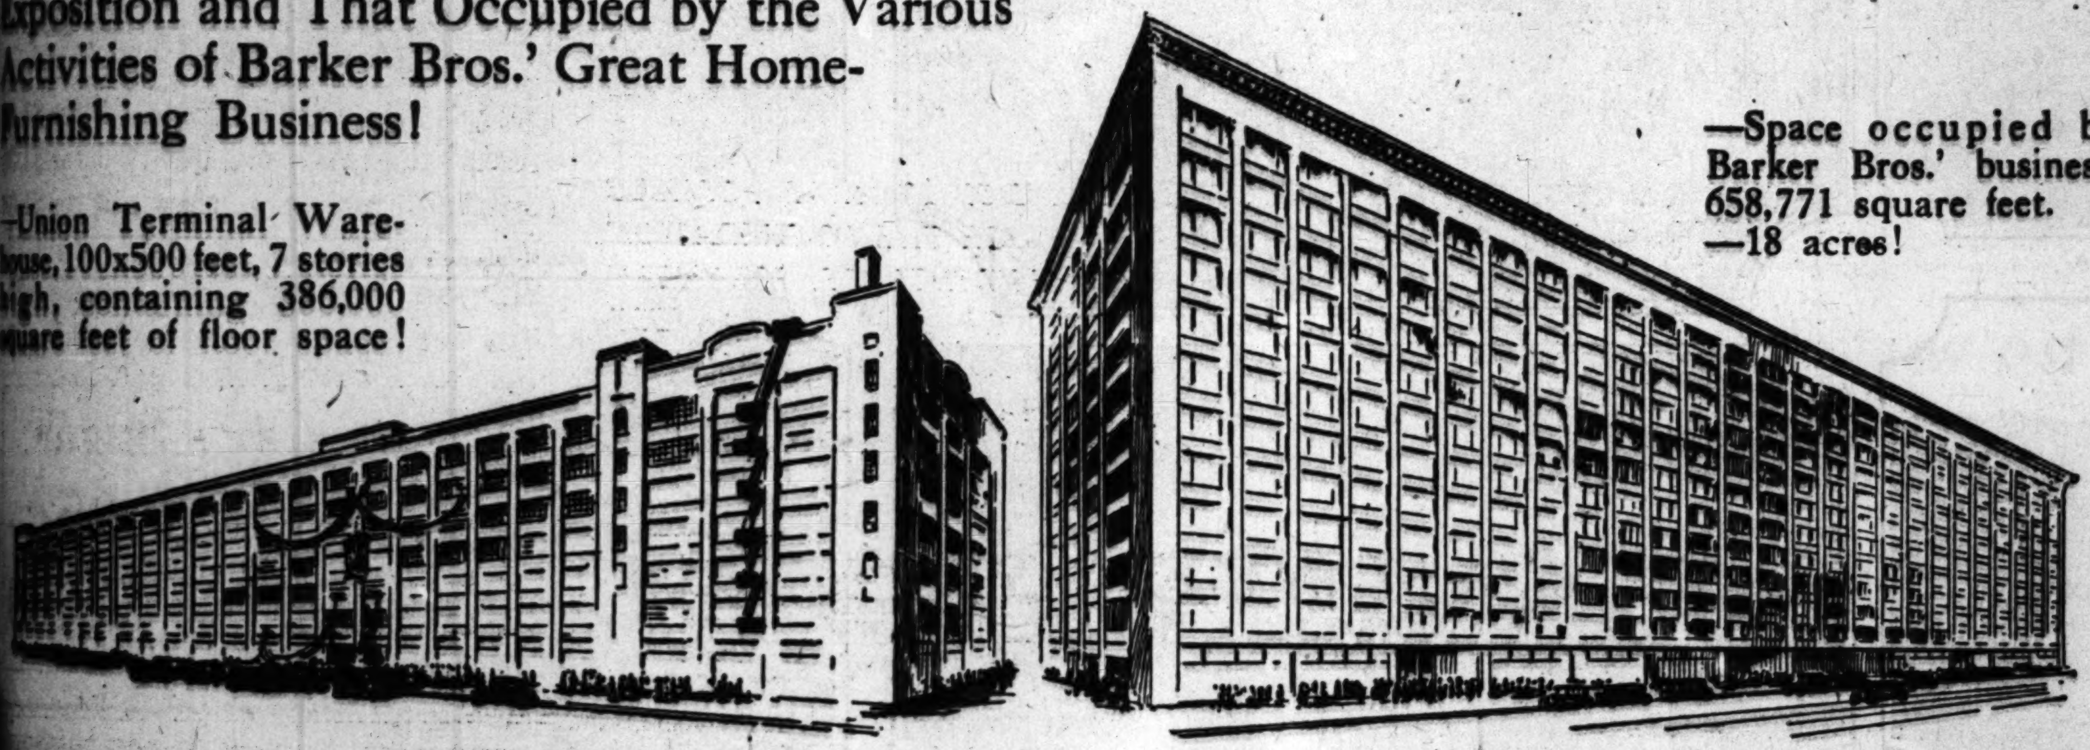
This past week's great Industrial Exposition has set forth by forceful demonstra- the tremendous importance which Los Angeles has assumed in business and trade elopment. All who have visited this remarkable Exhibit have been amazed and ed with the marvelous array of Los Angeles enterprises, and commercial lead-

So impressive has the past week's great Industrial Exhibit been, particularly as to variety of displays and vastness of space involved that opportunity has been taken of this occasion to illustrate by interesting comparison the growth and size of Barker Bros.' great home-furnishing business.

That the institution of Barker Bros. should have been favored by public appreciation the degree of attaining world-wide prominence in the field of successful home furnishing is naturally a source of real pleasure to this firm, but it is really a matter of greater pride and satisfaction to the thousands of home-lovers of Los Angeles and the far-reaching southwest, who by their own support have created in their midst and for their own benefit an achievement of such important magnitude and so much to the credit of this community. We have chosen a few figures to set forth some of the striking facts of this big business, which will give some idea of the facilities and resources as they stand today.

A Striking Comparison of the Space Occupied by the Great Terminal Warehouse Industrial Exposition and That Occupied by the Various Activities of Barker Bros.' Great Home-Furnishing Business!

—Union Terminal Warehouse, 100x500 feet, 7 stories high, containing 386,000 square feet of floor space!

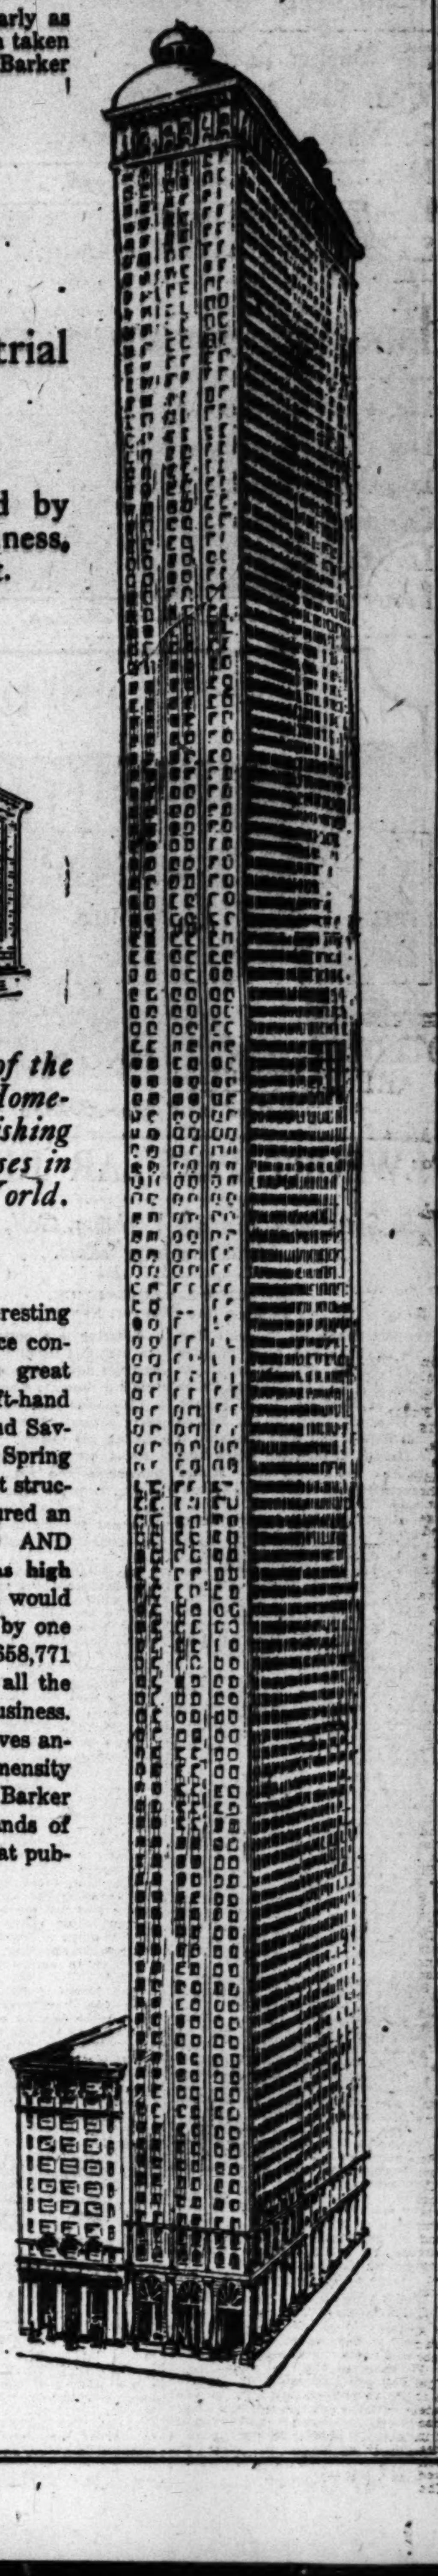


—Space occupied by Barker Bros.' business, 658,771 square feet. —18 acres!

On the left above is shown the immense Union Terminal Warehouse occupied by the past week's Industrial Exposition. It contains seven stories, and a total area of 386,000 square feet of floor space. In ground area it is 100 feet wide, 551 feet long.

On the right above, our artist has pictured another building—imaginary—nearly twice as large, which would be required to completely contain all of the floor space now occupied by Barker Bros., in retail store, manufacturing plant, warehouses, etc., which total the surprising area of 658,771 square feet of floor space, or approximately eighteen acres.

Retail les Floors Five nnecting Buildings



One of the Largest Home-Furnishing Houses in the World.

Interesting Facts Concerning Barker Bros.' Vast Business:

Volume of Barker Bros.' business approximately a MILLION DOLLARS A MONTH, or about TEN TIMES that accorded any other southwestern home-furnishing store.

Number of Carloads of furniture and home-furnishings received by rail and water and of local manufacture, and distributed by Barker Bros., upwards of ONE THOUSAND CARS A YEAR.

Number of customers visiting Barker Bros.' store, approximately 3000 to 5000 per day (as many as 10,000 and 15,000 upon special occasions) or upwards of 100,000 per month.

Area of territory reached by Barker Bros. direct motor truck delivery service, approximately 100 miles north, 100 miles south, 100 miles east; approximately 15,000 square miles, embracing upwards 150 cities and towns.

Number of truck loads of furniture and other home-furnishings delivered by Barket Bros., approximately 100 to 125 per day.

Number of calls made by Barker Bros.' Delivery Service, approximately 2500 to 3000 per day—upwards of 15,000 per week, or approximately 60,000 to 75,000 per month; which means that more than 50,000 homes per month are made more attractive, more comfortable and more beautiful as a result of Barker Bros.' service.

Number of miles covered by Barker Bros.' fleet of 85 motor delivery trucks and service vehicles, month of July, 1921, 92,681 miles.

Number of employees of Barker Bros., approximately 1400.

Number of separate and different samples displayed upon the seventeen floors of Barker Bros.' store devoted exclusively to furniture, upwards of 15,000.

Number of floors devoted to various other home-furnishing lines and sales service, twenty. One of the largest and most complete home-furnishing stocks anywhere in the world.

A Great Home-Furnishing University

Barker Bros.' Store has been likened to a great Home-Furnishing University, because of the extent to which the study of Successful Home-Furnishing has been carried, making it not only a business but a science.

Here every effort is made to help home-lovers make their homes more comfortable and livable, through the collection and dissemination of authoritative information upon all matters of home-furnishing and interior decoration, by means of expert and competent advisory service, and through Barker Bros.' Home-Furnishing Lecture Bureau, established for the benefit of the women's clubs, colleges, schools and other organizations interested, at whose command these lectures are placed without charge and entirely without commercial obligation, so that the homes generally of Southern California may become more and more famous for their charm and beauty.

At the right is pictured another interesting comparison of the amount of floor space consumed by the various activities of the great Barker Bros. business. In the lower left-hand corner is shown the well-known Trust and Savings Building at the corner of Sixth and Spring Sts., 12 stories high and one of the tallest structures in Los Angeles. Adjoining is pictured an imaginary building ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY STORIES HIGH—13 times as high as an ordinary 10-story building—which would be necessary on a piece of ground fifty by one hundred feet, to accommodate the 658,771 square feet of floor space embraced in all the various buildings in Barker Bros.' business. This comparative sketch and example gives another remarkable conception of the immensity of the many activities carried on in the Barker Bros. business in fulfilling the thousands of home-furnishing requirements of the great public of southwestern America.

Visitors Always Welcome without Obligation to Buy

The many regular and special displays throughout the store include the following: Two model Furnished Homes, Ten Morning Glory Bedrooms, Gallery of Mirrors, Model Medical and Dental Offices and the Rodezno Collection of Antiques. Open daily during store hours, 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

NEWPORT POPULAR RESORT.

Offers Swimming, Fishing, Yachting, Golf, Among Its Attractions for Visitors.

BY LEWIS A. KIRKPATRICK,
Editor o fthe "Newport News."

Newport Beach, on Newport Harbor, is an hour and forty minutes' ride by Pacific Electric from Los Angeles. The city of Newport Beach consists of Newport Beach proper, East Newport, Bay Island, Balboa Island, Balboa and West Newport. It is in Orange county, ten miles from Santa Ana, the county seat. It may be reached from Santa Ana by motor bus.

Newport Beach is a popular recreation resort of great appeal to its visitors. To spend one week-end or vacation here is to make up one's mind to spend another—and then another. This resort has grown from year to year until this year it has required a building campaign averaging $100 a day in order to provide adequate housing facilities for those who desire to spend their vacations at this wonderful beach.

Would you swim? There is a three-mile stretch of breakers to lure you into the ocean. In case you do not care for surf bathing there is Newport Bay in which to swim. Particularly at East Newport is the bay made use of.

BROAD STRAND.

Would you bask in the sunshine on the beach? A broad strand offers accommodations for many thousands.

Would you go fishing? There is a long pier at Newport Beach from which all members of the finny tribe may be caught. Mackerel, halibut, barracuda, yellow-tail, jew-fish, bass and many other varieties are caught from this pier. On any day in the summer may be seen hundreds of fishermen trying their luck. And it is rare indeed that there is not some luck.

Beach fishing for surf fish is also good here. Then if one tires of this he may go to Rocky Point and the Harbor jetty. In the harbor sharks, bass and surf fish may always be caught. Fishermen obtain boats for deep-sea fishing. Numerous skippers make a business of going deep-sea fishing and their boats and services may be obtained at a fair sum for a day's fishing.

If one wishes to go sightseeing there is the trip around the bay in the Balboa and the trips outside in the Juanita, as well as numerous other excursion trips.

Would you row, canoe, sail or motor boat? The seven-mile area of Newport Harbor and Newport Bay is at hand and the Newport Harbor Yacht Club offers rest and enjoyment between times.

GOLF COURSE NEAR.

Would you golf? The Orange County Country Club's sporty eighteen-hole course on the mesa just above the bay, overlooks the entire city and harbor, and a boat will take you almost to the first hole.

If you are interested in marine life the fishermen bringing in boat loads of fish nearly always have something interesting and extraordinary to show. Always there is a crowd gathered to view the catch and watch the fishermen dispose of their wares.

Spearing is a popular sport from the pier and usually there are some exciting adventures during the day. One day recently a small boy speared a 150-pound bass which gave him quite a tussle, but he succeeded in landing his quarry.

It is no uncommon sight to see porpoises, the sea hogs, sporting within revolver shot distance of the pier and occasionally whales are seen not far out to sea. Seals also sometimes come up to play in the surf.

Rents in Newport, West Newport and East Newport are very reasonable and usually accommodations may be secured by writing to A. J. Twist, secretary of the Newport Beach Chamber of Commerce.

There are numerous amusement concessions. At the Newport Dancing Pavilion the music is furnished by the well known Bobo-Foresman orchestra.

THE SURF SAFE.

The bath-house is equipped to furnish all comers with bathing suits and accommodations. The surf is safe and all precautions are taken to prevent accidents. There is no undertow nor tide rip at Newport.

At all times a crowd can be found on the beach, on the pier fishing, or bathing in the surf at Newport Beach. It is the nearest beach from most inland cities and just recently the Chamber of Commerce has erected signs at all important cross roads calling this to the attention of tourists, and in most instances displaying a map showing the way to arrive at the "nearest beach."

The Newport Beach peninsula is becoming more and more regarded by vacationists as one of the best in which to rest or to make permanent residence. In summer and winter the climate is ideal. All kinds of recreational privileges are at hand and the Pacific Electric and the stages give easy and rapid egress or ingress in case a person desires to go for pleasant journeys inland. Many Los Angeles business men are getting the habit of living in Newport Beach and commuting back and forth. The balmy air and the quiet peaceful nights are sufficient recompense for whatever there may be in the way of inconvenience in such a practice.

FIGHT PLAN TO CLOSE HOSPITAL AT HARBOR.

The San Pedro Chamber of Commerce has sent a vigorous protest to the City Council about the proposed closing of the branch emergency hospital in the Los Angeles Harbor district. The directors of the chamber recommend that the city provide an enlarged permanent hospital in that section, with salaried full-time health officer and nurses in attendance.

Bank Winner in Suit About Raised-Check.

Judge Hewitt yesterday decided an unusual case dealing with a bank, a salesman for a check protector company and a cigar merchant. The suit to recover on a check cashed by the salesman was against the bank and the bank was given the judgment.

J. L. Abbott, the salesman, called on Jack Fontana, a cigar dealer. Mr. Fontana had just drawn a check for $10. Mr. Abbott wanted to sell Mr. Fontana one of his devices for preventing check-raising. They argued the matter. Finally Mr. Abbott said he could raise the check and get it cashed. Mr. Fontana said:

"Try it; if you can get the cash, all right."

Mr. Abbott used his device, raising the check from $10 to $67.50, the purchase price of his check protector. He cashed the check at the bank. Then Mr. Fontana sued the bank for the money.

In handing down his decision in favor of the bank and against Mr. Fontana, Judge Hewitt held that Mr. Fontana was estopped by reason of his own act.

"If the plaintiff is permitted to recover, it will be in effect to allow him to take advantage of his own wrong," the court declared.

TO HOLD PICNIC.

Commercial Board Plans Outing at Sunset Canyon Country Club.

The fourth annual picnic of the Commercial Board of Los Angeles will be held at the Sunset Canyon Country Club, in the Verdugo mountains, near Burbank, on September 10.

The sports program will be in charge of Max Winter, formerly champion sculler of California and captain of the famous 1912 world's champion rowing club.

A venison barbecue will be one of the features. Swimming, golf, tennis and dancing will be some of the amusements. Valuable prizes will be offered.

This event promises to be the most successful affair of its kind ever staged by the commercial board. Brook Hawkins is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

VISITORS INVITED.

Liner Harvard Open for Inspection at Wilmington Today.

An opportunity to inspect the luxurious appointments and artistic decorations of the Los Angeles Steamship Company's liner Harvard will be given this afternoon to all those who go to the company's Wilmington dock at Pier 1, Shed 5.

The Harvard will be at her dock during the afternoon today and between 2 p.m. and 5 p.m. visitors will be escorted about the ship by uniformed attendants. It is expected that several hundred persons will visit the steamer.

BALBOA WATER PARADISE.

City Located on Ocean and Land-locked Bay is an Ideal Place for Rest and Pleasure.

BY LOUIS LE BARON.

So often this summer had I heard Balboa lauded as the "one place on the Pacific Coast, where both surf bathing and water sports could be enjoyed in a protected bay," that I resolved to motor to this wonder spot at the first opportunity.

False perspective too often leads to the belief that satisfactory pleasure and recreation can only be found far afield, and too frequently one, after long and wearisome quests in faraway spots, returns to find the place of his dreams close at hand. My visit to Balboa proved this.

The drive to Balboa, on the main route to San Diego, is over a beautiful highway, lined with orange groves. Every mile of it is a delight. At the end of the journey one finds oneself on a long sand pit, the ocean in front and on one side, while on the other side lies the land-locked waters of Newport Bay.

The beach along the ocean at Balboa is declared to be second to none on the coast. The throngs which frequent it attest to its popularity. The big-little town has been adopted as the playground of Riverside, San Bernardino and Orange counties. So many families from near-by towns and cities have beach homes at Balboa, and East Newport, that Balboa's streets often take on a metropolitan aspect.

TWO IN ONE.

East Newport and Balboa are divided by an imaginary line. But the width of a street separates the two places, both of which are part of the corporate town of Newport Beach. These two places have grown so closely in spirit and outline in the last few years that they seem the same community. One is impressed with the substantial homes in East Newport and feels the stability that is a part of the growth of both that place and Balboa.

One of the chief social factors of the two towns is the Newport Harbor Yacht Club. In the bay at East Newport sways at anchor the fleet of the club, sailing craft and motor boats representative of the best that can be launched. Looking over this fleet, knowing the personnel of the club, and realizing that it embodies the representative men of Orange county and thereabouts, one is not surprised that the Newport Harbor Yacht Club is a factor in cruising life.

As one wanders about Balboa, first at the bay shore and then on the ocean front, it is very evident that the wholesome beach town has everything upon which to build an ideal winter as well as summer resort. Topographically it is fortuitously situated. Every important section in the near-by counties leads to Balboa, and when one notes the miles of autos parked on its streets, one realizes that others know it also.

The many types of scenery—dashing surf, rippling still-water and the rocky shores of the Palisades, at the entrance to the harbor, with the rough, sturdy jetty in the offing—make Balboa the mecca for Los Angeles' many motion-picture companies.

CLEAN AND WHOLESOME.

I found Balboa a real, out-of-door place, clean, wholesome and generous with its hospitality and resources. Every one seemed to b having a good time, the bay was alive with activity. Every type of row, sail and power boat was in evidence, while the beach on the ocean, looked like a veritable city of tents, umbrellas, chairs and people. The beach is 300 feet wide and of clean white sand—soft and without stones—a paradise for kiddies.

One is impressed with the fact that there are so many families at Balboa, which seems to be the popular resort for folk from the vast country to the north. There is an absence of crowding, yet filled houses are everywhere.

Balboa's shops are clean and well supplied with all kinds of merchandise, and the ambitions of the populace are of a well-defined and progressive character.

The Balboa Chamber of Commerce is composed of live, wide-awake men, who are working intelligently and industriously for a larger and better city by the sea. Plans already are under way for a new pier on the ocean front; a larger municipal float; the laying of a new cement sewer system, and the paving of the streets. Within the yearseveral nw business blocks are to be built, more stores opened, and many civic betterments instituted.

If you have not seen this attractive community with all it has to offer, the accompanying illustrations will assist you in visualizing the scenes to be enjoyed there.

SCHOOL HERE GETS TEACHER FROM EAST.

R. J. Burby, A.B., C.P.A., until this year a member of the faculty of the Carnegie Institute of Technology of Pittsburg, has been engaged to teach the complete one-year course in cost accounting in Southwestern University during the coming school year, according to announcement by J. J. Schumacher, secretary of the institution.

Mr. Burby was, for a number of years, actively engaged in the accounting profession in Pittsburg. He arrived a few days ago, and is now engaged in carefully planning his course for the coming term.

Besides the cost accounting, the course in industrial management will be taught by Mr. Burby, who has been engaged for both the day and the evening classes.

NEW STREET-CAR MOTORS.

Fifty new street-car motors of the latest type have been received by the Los Angeles Railway and are being installed at a cost of about $75,000. The motors are equipped with fans to prevent overheating and develop more than fifty horse power. They will replace some of the old motors which have been in cars for several years.

HEAVY BAIL FIXED.

Suspect Arraigned on Charge of Embezzling Large Amount.

W. L. Barnard, arrested Friday night on the charge of embezzlement, was arraigned before Justice Baird yesterday. The preliminary hearing was set for Tuesday and bail fixed at $25,000. The defendant was released in the custody of a constable to raise the bail money.

Chief Dep. Dist.-Atty. Doran stated to the court he expected to lay before the grand jury Monday information in effect that approximately $35,000 had been misused by Barnard.

The case involves a mortgage belonging to Mrs. S. L. Harrington, on which $2000 was to be raised to invest in stock of the Huntington-Hawthorne Oil Company.

TO VOTE ON SCHOOL.

La Canada Residents Will Ballot on Annexation of District.

Residents of La Canada will vote on the 30th inst., on the proposal of the county superintendent of schools that La Canada be incorporated with Glendale for school district purposes. This proposal has been opposed by T. Fenton Knight, a member of the La Canada school board who is endeavoring to annex the district to Pasadena. It was learned at the office of the county Superintendent yesterday that the reason Glendale was chosen is that eighteen students of La Canada have been attending school in Glendale while only eight students have been going to Pasadena. A sharp contest is being waged in the district.

TO ATTEND CONVENTION.

To attend the annual convention of the Pacific Coast Claim Agents' Association, C. M. McRoberts, general claim agent of the Los Angeles Railway, left for Butte, Mont., yesterday. The sessions will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Mr. McRoberts will address the convention on the use of motion pictures in exposing fraudulent claims.

FRECKLES

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With Othine—Double Strength.

This preparation for the removal of freckles is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of Othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength Othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.—[Advertisement.

BABIES IN SMOKER.

Travelling Puffers Find Lost Haven in Baggage Car.

Woman's inroads upon the smoker go some years back. Woman has been known to enter the black-leather car a little stiffly, a little disdainfully, a good deal frightened, no doubt, but carrying it off bravely, nevertheless. She does not bother to reply to the conductor's warning that "this is a smoking car, lady." She sits down, looks out of the window with shoulders set, expressing disapproval and defiance. Well, defiance breeds defiance and men have been known to puff only the harder in rejoinder to those immobile and critical toque and shoulders.

It is different with babies when lugged into the smoker in the arms of tired and flustered mothers. To them, too, the conductor addresses his warning that "this is a smoking car, lady, and that there are plenty of seats in the rear car." Somehow life is so constituted that there is always plenty of room on top and there are always plenty of seats in the rear. But on a hot and dusty afternoon the average decent male would almost as soon think of inviting a mother and a baby to start climbing up a ladder for the plenty of room on top as to start walking back five cars for the plenty of seats in the rear.

So he raises no objection. He breathes no defiance. Mothers with babies in smoking cars are ever so much more apologetic than ladies unincumbered. They feel grateful for small favors. A seat on the sunny side is all they dare ask for. Men who have offered them a seat on the shady side have been repaid with such a wealth of weary gratitude that they have shamefacedly returned the itching cigarette to its pocket. Perhaps, after all, one is smoking more than is good for one. One puts back the cigarette, pulls out the comic supplement and offers it for the recreation of the baby. The baby either stares blankly at it or tries to bite it.

When the desire for tobacco becomes overpowering, strong men cast a look at the surrounding infant population, sigh, get up, and walk into the baggage car. There, with the crated bicycle and the dog in the basket, they smoke and reflect upon how many different sexes and ages it takes to make a world.—[New York Evening Post.

CHIEF YEOMAN SUES.

Wilfred Charles Parker, who, for three years has been chief yeoman at the U. S. Submarine Base at Los Angeles Harbor, filed suit yesterday for divorce from Lillian Marie Parker. His complaint sets forth that his wife attacked him with a butcher knife and drove him from their home and that on previous occasions she slapped him with a slipper and also struck him with a piece of wood. The Parkers separated on the eighth inst., just five months after their marriage.

DUKE PLAYED SIR WALTER.

The Duke of Westminster recently came to tre rescue of beauty in distress in the person of the Anglo-French actress, Alice Delysia, with as ready gallantry as Sir Walter Raleigh's when he saved Queen Elizabeth's feet from the mud.

The actress was motoring from Cauterets and sought to cross the Spanish frontier at Hendaye, but ran up against the immovable Spanish customs men, who demanded 50,000 francs, as the Spanish laws against automobile smuggling provide for a money deposit equal to the value of the car.

Not having such a large sum, she was about to turn back, when a motorist who said he had often applauded her performance in London asked if he might be permitted to offer assistance. The permission was granted and the stranger presented the customs officials a check. It was signed by the Duke of Westminster.—[St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

CONSTRUCTION RECORD.

A construction record was established yesterday when 610 cubic yards of concrete was poured into one of the overhead trusses of the new Grauman Metropolitan Theater in nine hours. The record stands officially by virtue of the presence of city building inspectors. The trusses into which the concrete was poured are the largest ever constructed.

ASK PARDON OF RALPH GROVES.

Angelenos Send Plea for Harding to Release Dry Law Violator.

A petition bearing many signatures accompanied by a number of letters, was forwarded yesterday to Atty.-Gen. Daugherty at Washington, asking that the Attorney-General recommend to President Harding the pardon of Ralph Groves, who is now serving a term of twelve months in the Los Angeles County Jail, following his plea of guilty to a violation of the national prohibition law.

On June 27, Groves was sentenced by U. S. District Judge Trippet. His brother, F. Ray Groves, was ordered to pay a fine of $2500, and another brother, Edward Groves, had to pay a fine of $500. All three were indicted for a conspiracy to violate the Volstead Act and the national prohibition law. Ralph Groves was considered the greatest offender of the three, inasmuch as he was Federal Prohibition Agent at that time.

Among the signers to the petition and those who wrote letters were Mayor Cryer, Superior Judge Crail, Col. John D. Fredericks and others.

GIVES UP FAME; WINS IT AGAIN.

Dr. E. P. Allis, Jr., Praised for Research Work.

Left Profitable Business to Study Biology.

Built Laboratories; Money Aided Scientists.

BY W. E. ALLEN,
California Biological Feature Service

A short time ago Dr. H. W. Norris of Grinnell College, who has spent most of the year at the La Jolla Biological Station, gave a lecture on the scientific work of Dr. Edward Phelps Allis, Jr., the wealthy manufacturer of Wisconsin who gave financial and editorial aid to Prof. Whitman in founding and supporting the Journal of Morphology, one of the most important scientific periodicals in the world. Dr. Allis is working in a laboratory which he established in France.

Dr. Allis was educated as an engineer, his studies along that line having been carried on at three well-known institutions. Apparently he did not give much attention to biology until he had attained both professional standing and financial success in engineering lines.

In some way he became acquainted with the biologist, Dr. C. O. Whitman, and was so infected by his enthusiasm and attracted by his genius that he decided to bring his own wealth and administrative ability to the aid of Dr. Whitman's projects. For this reason he built the famous Lake Laboratory near Milwaukee in 1887, and placed Dr. Whitman in charge. He also provided funds for salaries and other maintenance and for the publication of the Journal of Morphology, beginning in 1888.

MASTER OF RESEARCH.

Not content with such financial aids, he gave much of his own time and energy to editorial work and to research. In the field of research he especially excelled. Most of the biological work of that day was concerned with anatomy (with form and structure,) and the line of study chosen by Dr. Allis was especially difficult, as it was mainly concerned with the tracing of nerves from their origin in the base of the brain or in the spinal cord to their ends in the skin or other organs.

If one can imagine a telephone system for 10,000 subscribers condensed into the space of a few feet and then placed before an expert for tracing to each subscriber, he can get some idea of the difficulty of this work.

Doubtless the engineering skill and experience acquired by Dr. Allis in earlier days helped him in such study. At any rate the publication of the report on his very first piece of research brought him instant fame among scientists and this paper on the "Lateral Line System of the Dogfish" is still regarded as a masterpiece in that line.

BUSINESS LOSSES.

After some years business reverses caused him to withdraw support from the Journal of Morphology and it suspended publication until it was recently renewed by an eastern institution. He also withdrew from the Lake Laboratory and in recent years has spent nearly all of his time at his laboratory in France. He is a member of six important French, five American and six British societies.

Since 1888 he has published large numbers of papers, all of very high standard and especially notable for the beauty and accuracy of their illustrations. Most of them deal with the nervous system, but since the nervous system cannot be thoroughly studied without familiarity with other parts, he has included other studies.

There are several points of decided human interest in the history of this man.

First, is the fact that he was "called" from a chosen profession in which he was highly successful by the inspiration and magnetic qualities of a great scientist and that he gradually forsook all other interests for the sake of the one to which he was "called."

Second, he was able to break away from one line of human endeavor in which he had already made a place for himself and to enter a new line in which he became an acknowledged master.

Third, he has worked at his own expense and has enabled many other scientists to work by providing funds for them, i.e. he works and supports the work for love of it and not for the material gain to be derived from it. He is an amateur scientist.

TRAINING IS GRANTED.

Thirty-eight More Disabled Veterans to be Fitted for Jobs.

The Los Angeles office of the Federal Board for Vocational Training has been notified that the ex-service men listed below have been granted training under the Rehabilitation Act. This entitles them to a course that will train them for the line of work they requested when applying for rehabilitation. These men were disabled in the World War and are handicapped for the occupation they were following prior to enlistment. During training they will receive $100 or more per month from the government for their living expenses. The following are requested to report at the local office of the board, 360 Willcox Building, and make arrangements for entering upon their training:

Lowell McKinley Alright, Elva Lubelle Alt, Milton M. Burns, Robert Joseph Elder, Samuel Howell Evans., Adolph Farber, Samuel Freilich, Horace F. Frye, John James Griffin, John S. FORESTRY MEN HURT.

Supervisor and Chief Clerk Injured When Auto Hits Truck.

While returning from a forest fire north of Banning, Friday night, Supervisor Allen of the Angeles Reserve, and Chief Clerk E. V. Lackey of the local forest office, were injured in an auto accident. They were treated at the Golden State Hospital, 422 Towne avenue.

They were driving on the boulevard near Puente, when their machine collided with a heavily loaded truck. Their automobile was overturned, and Mr. Allen suffered a severe contusion of the head. Mr. Lackey's hand was lacerated.

Mrs. Mary Ann Newlin Coffin.

HUNDREDTH BIRTHDAY WILL BE CELEBRATED.

ELABORATE OBSERVANCE OF WHITTIER WOMAN'S CENTENARY PLANNED.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WHITTIER, Aug. 20.—Extensive plans are being made for the centennial birthday celebration of Mrs. Mary Ann Newlin Coffin at the Woman's clubhouse, Friday evening, September 2. The affair, which is being arranged by Mr. and Mrs. John Elihu Coffin, son and daughter-in-law of the venerable woman, will be a birthday dinner, for which 300 invitations have been issued. The Whittier Woman's Club, of which Mrs. J. E. Coffin is president, will cater, with Mrs. Charles E. Bates and Mrs. Gene Reichling in charge. Prominent guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles, Dr. and Mrs. Walter Lindley, Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Newlin, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Baldwin.

Mrs. Cowles, former president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, Mr. Newlin and Dr. Lindley will make short addresses, and Harry Williams will read his famous tribute, "Mother." Mrs. Clyde Baldwin will read Whittier's "Burning Driftwood" with musical setting by Miss Grace Dixon.

Mrs. Coffin was born in North Carolina, and later moved with her husband, Dr. Samuel D. Coffin, to Indiana, then to Kansas and thence to California. She is a "birth right" or lifelong Friend. She is the mother of five children, two of whom are living. These are Dr. William V. Coffin, of Whittier, for many years president of the board of trustees of Whittier College, and now actively engaged in work among the seven Friends' colleges throughout the United States, and John E. Coffin, also of Whittier, with whom she makes her home, and who is vice-president of the California Furniture Company of Los Angeles.

Mrs. Coffin's life has been one of unusual tranquillity, she never having cared for politics or club life, although when the women of the State were given the ballot, she was among the first to exercise her franchise, and has voted at every Presidential election but the last one. Her mind is especially alert and she reads both a morning and an evening paper, besides her church papers.

CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL SHOWS RAPID GROWTH.

MORE THAN SEVEN THOUSAND PATIENTS CARED FOR IN THE LAST YEAR.

At a meeting of the board of managers of the Children's Hospital, Sunset Boulevard and Vermont avenue, which was held Friday, the president, Mrs. Albert M. Crutcher, gave a summary of the growth of the hospital in the past six years, and a comparison of the expense of running the local hospital and some of the eastern institutions.

The local hospital has just completed its twentieth year of service to the children of Los Angeles and Southern California, and in the past year it cared for 7301 children, an increase of 3272 over the year before. The amazing growth of the institution is shown by the fact that in the past six years the number of patients has increased more than 400 per cent; and in that time the operations have increased more than 1000 per cent. The out-patient department has doubled itself forty-seven times since 1915. This enables the hospital to care for many more children, by having the crippled children live in their homes and return to the hospital for muscle training and corrective work.

With the great increase of the number of patients in the hospital, deaths have shown a most gratifying decrease. In the past six years the number of deaths has decreased more than 50 per cent.

"The growth of Los Angeles," Mrs. Crutcher said, "is typified by the growth of the Children's Hospital. We are crowded with sick and helpless children. We must have a new building immediately. We have the grounds and the organization for administering a hospital of 200 beds, and we must have the extra building."

In speaking of the comparative expense of running the local hospital, Mrs. Crutcher said:

"During the past year it cost $3.20 a day to keep a child in the Children's Hospital. Seventy-two per cent of our patients were free or part-pay cases. We have a daily average of ninety, and we have seventy paid employees. The Boston Children's Hospital, with 150 beds, has more than 200 employees, and the cost per patient per day is $5.50. The New York Hospital for Crippled Children has 200 beds, 185 employees, and the cost per patient per day is $4.61."

ROB CLERK'S SON.

Three Men Hold up A. C. Carroll near Motion Picture Studio.

Deputy City Clerk Carroll reported at the City Hall yesterday that his son, Alexander C. Carroll, 19 years old, was held up and robbed of $7 at midnight on Friday while in front of the William Fox motion-picture studio in Hollywood. Three men in an automobile did the job, according to Mr. Carroll, two of the hold-up men remaining in the automobile while the third man poked a revolver in young Carroll's face with the command "Hold up your hands." The police were notified. The young man lives at 1326 Canyon Drive.

Magnificent Home Furnishings of Film Actress to Be Sold.

Collectors of antiques and paintings as well as lovers of things beautiful in the home are expected to turn out in force Tuesday when the magnificent home furnishings of Fannie Ward, the actress, at Third street and New Hampshire avenue, go under the hammer.

Miss Ward's home was built by former Mayor Hazzard and has been one of the show places of the city. When Miss Ward forsook the legitimate stage to appear in motion pictures, she took possession of it and furnished it lavishly, it is said. But the demands of her profession took Miss Ward to Italy, where she will remain for some time. Hence her decision to sell the contents of her home. Italian marble statuary, antique bronzes, gorgeous oriental rugs and beautiful Louis XV furniture will be included in the goods to be auctioned by L. S. Hart.

GRAY HAIR NOT INSIGNIA NOW.

Mothers to be Pictured as They Are.

Claire McDowell Brings New Type to Screen.

Others Break Away from Tradition, Too.

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT.

If somebody should become suddenly poetical in your vicinity and ask you which was the most appropriate flower to associate with the films at the present juncture, it would be perfectly safe on your part to reply the white carnation. The reason? Because it happens to be mother's day in the movies.

We're having an era of character portrayals—of both genders, and it seems that mothers fall within that class in the pictures, although we'd probably knock a man down who would remark that they did in real life. And it may come to pass in time that we'll go so far as to give a haughty glance to anyone who so considers them as characters even in the films. That is the impression which I gather at any rate from Claire McDowell, who will bring us the new type of mother—who is not a character—but a simple, natural, un-aged woman in "Mother O' Mine", the Thomas H. Ince production which will show this week at the Kinema Theater.

Before I tell of the new mother, however, I'd like to retrospect just a bit on this subject of film motherhood. The greatest example to date has perhaps been Mary Carr in "Over the Hill"—well that is if you exclude Vera Gordon in "Humoresque," or Pauline Frederick in "Madame X." They were all great in their way. But I believe that Mary Carr is the most typical of the popular idea of the film mother.

In practically every instance outside of these we retain a picture of the mother as a woman with graying hair. It is the insignia of the role.

Miss Frederick avoided the conventional idea by giving us a woman whose tokens of age were the result of extreme dissipation rather than natural changes. Miss Carr retained the signs of youth during the early part of her picture, but the change at the close when her family was grown, was decidedly radical, in fact too arbitrary. Vera Gordon shaded her make-up and interpretation toward age rather than youth, adhering to the traditional lines to some extent.

TOWARD YOUTH.

It will be noted that in these various characters there has been a breaking away from the conventional style of hairdress and the make-up of wrinkles. In "Mother O' Mine", however, there has been a very definite attempt to bring the modern youthful mother into the foreground.

"When I was engaged for the part," said Miss McDowell, "I asked Ince whether I should make up with gray hair as was the usual requirement. He said 'No, that isn't my idea. Why should mothers always be played as if they were grandmothers? Let's avoid the signs of age this time.'

"This was just what I desired. I had been thinking for a long time that the mother type usually seen on the screen isn't true to life. Your own mother, I'm sure, isn't gray and aged. Nor, as a rule, is the mother of any young man.

"I'm a mother myself and have two sons who are fast growing into manhood, and I know I'm not getting older, any more rapidly just because they're growing up. And I don't expect to look much older than I do now when they are in their twenties. I think that mothers are in general very much maligned in this matter of age on the screen."

And Miss McDowell, with one son 13 years old and another about 11, has a perfectly convincing argument in her own personal attractiveness. Her hair only reveals a few of the silver threads, while her face reflects that indeterminate bloom of the woman who is neither quite mature nor quite youthful.

MANY "CHILDREN."

She has been the mother of dozens of screen stars. Of course, only in the picture plot. She began by playing the mother of Mary Pickford in "Heart of the Hills." Re-

PATHE COMPANY NOW AMERICAN.

Executive Announces Plans for Reorganized Concern.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—With a view to making the organization 100 per cent American, Paul Brunet, president of the Pathe Company, has returned to this country with the control of the reorganized film concern in his pocket. He indicated in the course of an interview that the company will not be limited for capital to carry out its plans.

"While the Pathe exchange will continue to specialize in short subjects, it has some deals pending for products of other description," he declared. "The details of these will be divulged when they are entirely closed. There also are some deals pending for additional short subjects."

The Pathe Company has always been associated with French backing, but this, it is said, is a matter of the past.

"THE BREAKING POINT" IS HIP ATTRACTION.

Sunday brings an especially large film attraction to the Hippodrome in H. H. Van Loan's "The Breaking Point," with a cast headed by Bessie Barriscale and including Walter McGrail, Joseph Dowling, Wilfred Lucas, Pat O'Malley and Ethel Grey Terry. This production ranks with the foremost pictures of the year and should attract overflowing crowds to the popular Hip.

An especially interesting vaudeville show is also booked and headed by the Melody Festival, a pretentious and scenic song spectacle with a sextette of society soloists. Jack Reddy, in character studies from life, will offer twenty minutes of bright fun, and Harry Mason and company offer the humorous one-act comedy, "Getting the Money."

Dell and Ray, in delightful version of music, smiles and song, will please, as will the Two Davies, Australian comedy jugglers.

PICTURES POPULAR IN FAR-OFF AUSTRALIA.

That the motion picture has taken first rank by a wide margin in Australian amusement circles is indicated by information received by E. E. Shauer, manager of the foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

The total attendance at motion pictures during the last year was 67,466,657, or more than thirteen times the population of the country, while the revenues paid to the State in the form of taxes were almost half of the entire sum collected from all amusement enterprises during the year.

The rapid strides made by the motion-picture industry have far outclassed the revenues received by all other amusement, such as the theater, racing, dancing and skating, concerts and miscellaneous attractions.

OLD PANTAGES HAS "TOO MANY BABIES."

"Too Many Babies" is the title that Frank Samuels has selected for the new show to be presented at the Pantages Broadway for one week, starting Monday.

The scene is laid in the Wilshire district of Los Angeles, where "Oklahoma Bob" Albright is living in solid comfort until he receives word that his uncle is coming for a visit. Bob is supposed to be a married man, and the fun starts when Abie (Henry Sherr) is sent out to secure a temporary wife and child for the uncle's visit.

Ruth Albright will be seen as Dorothy Rea, very much in love, while Frank Samuels, Ethel Gray, Vera Vaughn and Minor Reed have been given parts that will show them at their best.

Joe Kemper, who arranges and directs the musical numbers, promises a real treat for the lovers of jazz, for Joe has selected his numbers for the new show with some specially arranged jazz music.

Elaine Hammerstein will be seen on the silver screen in "The Girl From Nowhere."

NOBODY KNOWS WHAT THE CUTIES WILL DO.

If you want to know what it's all about, a glance at the title of the new Hi Jinks production, at the Burbank, "Where Do The Mosquitoes Go?" won't explain.

Ten to one, the chances are in favor of the mosquitoes, because they have probably made up their minds just where to land. But the Hi Jinks company is to provide some unusual entertainment in the musical comedy line, with this new show, since judging from the title, there will be plenty of action, if nothing else. Mosquitoes are bound to make everybody step lively.

So Burbank audiences may rest assured that the new musical revue will leave nothing to be desired in lively amusement. Several of the beauty chorus maids have an idea that when the mosquitoes begin the selection of their own personalities in an experimental way, the producer has a surprise number all in readiness, especially for the edification of the t.b.m. in the baldheaded row.

Whatever it all is about, Burbank patrons may rest assured that the musical and optical entertainment is up to the highest standard.

Grauman's Bill Holds the First Stanlaws Film.

Observing in a brilliant fashion the first showing anywhere of "At the End of the World," to be held at Grauman's Monday, Sid Grauman announces a series of attendant presentations to mirror the artistry of this production, which is the first directed by Penrhyn Stanlaws, world-famous artist, and which marks Betty Compson's return to the Paramount colors as a star.

The prologue, "Night Scenes in Canton," will elaborate the art with which Mr. Stanlaws has imbued the picture, the action of which is laid in China. Adapted from Ernst Klein's original stage play by Adelaide Heilbron and scenarioized by Edfrid A. Bingham, "At the End of the World," through Mr. Stanlaws's eyes, opens a new field of romance heretofore unexplored.

The supporting cast boasts such players as Milton Sills, Mitchell Lewis, Casson Ferguson, Spottiswoode Aitken, Joseph Kilgour and Goro Kino.

In addition, Gregory W. Golubeff, guitarist, will play numerous selections. A feature in itself is "At Twilight," a musical number in which Henry Murtagh, accompanied by Phil Cohen, violin virtuoso, and by a 'cello player, will render a series of pieces at the Wurlitzer, surrounded by various artists in the orchestra pit, which will be converted into a stage set. The conductor of the orchestra has arranged an interpretative orchestral score to accompany these many features.

STANLAWS LIFTS THE MEGAPHONE

Noted Artist at Home in the Photoplays.

Suggests New Unity in Pictorial Effects.

Directs Film Version of "Little Minister."

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

It's not an easy matter to get a painter to talk about himself or his work. "I've said my say on canvas," is his brief answer to your pertinent or impertinent questions. "My pictures will tell you all you want to know." Not all, Mr. Painter, or at least not all that our insatiable curiosity prompts us to ask for.

Even when the painter happens to have been a motion-picture director for almost a year the case is not much better. As I found out when I lighted a cigarette or two with Penrhyn Stanlaws out at Lasky's the other day, a comprehensive questionnaire carefully tucked away in the dim archives of my memory.

Mr. Stanlaws was affable and friendly, but he didn't seem to realize that my numerous readers would like to know "all about him." Perhaps, however, if I had handed him a megaphone he would immediately have become sonorously expansive—perfectly at home.

'Way back in the time when Penrhyn Stanlaws was the magic name signed to the drawings of beautiful ladies in Life, Puck, Judge, et cetera, I used to think that the artist must be a foreigner, perhaps a Pole. When I met him face to face he looked decidedly Irish, until he explained that he was Scotch. He came to America when he was 13, and was educated at Princeton, so, of course, he's solidly American.

But he has traveled back and forth many times, has lived and studied in Paris, has produced a highly successful play in London, has painted innumerable portraits in New York—all of which makes him agreeably cosmopolitan.

THE PAINTER'S VIEWPOINT.

All of which, too, when it comes to that, makes him particularly fit for the post of motion-picture director. When he was asked to come West he didn't demur. The motion picture makes a strong appeal to the artist of pencil and pigments, and when that artist has also written plays the appeal is doubly strong.

That wonderful composite of the arts, the motion picture, needs just now exactly such men as Penrhyn Stanlaws. It has always needed them, of course, but the producers have not always known that it did.

"What an astonishingly fine director Hogarth would have made!" Mr. Stanlaws exclaimed. "With his sense for crowds, for types and for effective pictorial arrangement of these elements, he would have given us delightful social satires in motion pictures.

"With them he would have wrought—as he did with cartoons—important changes and reforms in the bodies social and political. But the great Hogarth isn't here, so we must do the best we can without him."

Mr. Stanlaws was cautious. He would not commit himself on the question of the need of reform—artistic reform—in motion pictures. He seemed to think that they were pretty good as they are, and he leaned, as most directors do, to the dramatic side of the photoplay. And yet—well, of course, the picture must be there every time, though it need not always be beautiful. Nor artistic? Well—yes, it should be artistic.

However, Mr. Stanlaws's first motion picture for Paramount, "At the End of the World," which also happens to be the first really important picture he has so far directed, and which shows at Grauman's tomorrow, will inform us pretty thoroughly as to what his theories and practices really are in photoplays.

I think we shall find them very fine and sound. I feel sure that "At the End of the World" will be full of the beauty that only a painter-director could give it.

It follows as the night the day that this photoplay will be both artistically and dramatically satisfying. Penrhyn Stanlaws has surrounded himself with lovely women of his own creation all his life—Junoesque creatures that yet have

A Varied Experience Offered in Beautifying Your Home

Perhaps in no other spot in the world do such varied types of architecture and such uniformly beautiful homes prevail as right here in Southern California.

It has been the privilege of the California Furniture Company for the past sixteen years to design the interior decorations and supply the furnishings for many of these charming homes.

This same variation in architectural types—this same love of beautiful homes that prevails, have presented opportunities to accumulate a rich and varied experience in home furnishing, and this, coupled with the wealth of new styles and innovations with which the "California" is always in close touch, has placed the California Furniture Company in an enviable position in the realm of interior decorating art.

This experience is ever available to anyone interested in beautifying the home, whether it be a modest bungalow or imposing manor. Suggestions and advice are cheerfully offered at all times with no obligations implied or understood.

Faded Pictures.

Only two patient eyes to stare
 Out of the canvas. All the rest—
 The warm green gown, the small hands pressed
Light in the lap, the braided hair.

That must have made the sweet low brow
 So earnest, centuries ago,
 When some one saw it change and glow—
All faded! Just the eyes burn new.

I dare say people pass and pass
 Before the blistered little frame,
 And dingy work without a name
Stuck in behind its square of glass.

But I, well, I left Raphael
 Just to come drink these eyes of hers,
 To think away the stains and blurs
And make all new again and well.

Only, for tears my head will bow,
 Because there on my heart's last wall,
 Scarce one tint left to tell it all,
A picture keeps its eyes, somehow.

The Pictures Again.

For two weeks we've been rambling together among the pictures of the loan exhibition at the park, and today we purpose to draw our pleasant loiterings to a close. From now on, to September 5, the interested reader and "earnest seeker" must go alone or side by side. It is to be hoped that they will go often and stay long, for some of the pictures are worth much more than the casual attention we have hitherto bestowed upon them.

If you are one of the earnest seekers, don't take the say-so of the critics, professional or amateur. Don't be led by the nose into a perfunctory lip-homage. When you worship at any or divers artistic shrines, do it with your whole heart and soul. Know what you like, and then seek to know why wou like it. Take a quiet, undisturbed lesson in appreciation. You'll find yourself having a mighty good time, and you'll learn something.

After that you may turn to the critics. They won't be of much use to you, but you may have some fun with them. There's a big element of play about art, in spite of the solemn seriousness of some of the artists, and there's a delightful element of play in the study of pictures. Else, how do you suppose the editor of this department could have written about art for something else seventeen years without complete mental and physical wreckage?

Know what you like. After you have made this comparatively easy step in art education—for "so do the little monkeys in the zoo"—turn about face to what you don't like. Try to know why you don't like it. Maybe your eyes need opening. Open them wide—wide—wider. Does the picture look better to you now? If not, turn to another distasteful canvas. Then to another, and another. Then go back to the first.

Now yau may turn to the critics if you're too discouraged to go it alone. They may be able to enlighten you—and they may not. But you never can tell till you try 'em. Some of them make it their business to be dogmatic, and some of you can't see anything that doesn't bear the hall-mark of dogma in plain print. If you positively refuse to make picture-seeing a happy game of chance, if you nobly scorn the hit-or-miss process, know that the critics have been invented by the inscruitable powers for you. They are your appointed guides, philosophers and friends. They don't know much, but treat them kindly.

The editor of Art and Artists is not a critic, of course. He's merely a humble reviewer. He, too, knows what he likes, but can't always give good and logical reasons for his choice. He believes that art is not invariably—or even usually—a matter of logic. He thinks there's a good deal of feeling connected with it, both in production and appreciation. Now, it's not easy to put your finger on feeling. You can't pull it out and weigh and label it. It's not to be found with a microscope. It eludes the knife, the scalpel and the penetrating pin. Yet we all know when we've got it.

If, after due assistance from outside and inside—from the critics and from "feeling"—you don't see or feel anything attractive in a picture, you may as well make up your mind that this particular canvas is not for you. You're out of its zone of influence—whatever that may mean. The psychologists use the phrase, so it must be all right. You're not en rapport with the artist who painted that picture, your temperaments are antipodal. This unfortunate hiatus isn't your fault, and it isn't his. But it exists, and you may as well recognize it first as last. We can't have everything, but we may have much if we train ourselves to the muchness.

But after such a pouring of caper sauce, let us turn to our muttons. Plenty for everybody, for you, the critic and the reviewer. Here are Charles Walter Stetson's two landscapes with figures, right to our hand. I don't particularly care for them, but you may. To me the landscape part seems brown and rather mushy, lacking in what we know as quality—an almost indefinable thing, like "feeling," though we sometimes recognize it when we find it. The figures, however, are full of action in "Decorative Landscape," and they show bright and attractive spots of red and green.

John O'Shea's "Landscape," a solitary poplar placed on high ground against a sky magnificent with color, is very lyrical—it is a true poem in paint. Hanson Puthuff's "Laguna Hills" strikes an even deeper and fuller lyrical note with its superbly modeled tawny slopes; it is Southern California's summer in epitome. William M. Chase's portrait of C. P. Townsley is notably well characterized, and its technique is the admirably easy one of this famous American master, who seemed to surmount every difficulty without effort—every difficulty except that of color, for he never became much of a colorist.

John Carlsen's "Silvered Stream" is one of the loveliest things in the show—a snow scene of extraordinary charm and finesse. Here, earnest seeker, is feeling for you, and here is nature's most subtle truth added to it by an artist who is ten times more than a craftsman, though he is also a wonder in technical dexterity. Hats off, you are in the presence of beauty! If I rave, it is not without reason.

Two fine landscapes by William Wendt are here, the noble "Mantle of Spring," a large canvas recently donated to the museum by the Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs (a royal gift, ladies!) and a smaller one, "Simi Valley," of great charm in a key of gray-gold and dull lapis-lazuli. One fine landscape and one figure by J. H. Sharp, "Snow Clouds, Taos" and "Indian Medicine Man." "Snow Clouds" is both powerful and subtle, it is alive with truth. "Medicine Man" is painted with the meticulous care and multiform knowledge that characterize this artist's studies of the red man's life. It is also very beautiful, full of sympathy.

An attractive simplicity and directness of attack are noted in Edward Butler's "California Wheat," an understanding of drawing and tone, a love of nature that is almost naive in its expression. "Stringing the Bow," by Martin J. Hennings, a large study of an Indian girl and man, is impeccable in drawing, though perhaps inclined to a punctiliousness that leans to hardness, and its color, though not brilliant, is admirably true, without overinsistence, to the facts. Not an imaginative canvas, not tenderly poetical like Sharp's "Medicine Man," but one that the student of painting will enjoy for its sureness of touch. A picture may be attractive for one reason or another, but only the great ones can respond to every demand of the lover of art. And a true lover demands much.

Admirable canvases by various painters have already been touched upon in these columns. Among these are Carl Oscar Borg's "The Lone Rider," William V. Cahill's "Thoughts by the Sea," Henri Farre's "Portrait of Capt. Georges Guynemer," Armin Hansen's "Boy With Cod," H. O. Tanner's "Daniel in the Lion's Den." All are good, more than worth your while.

There are two notably fine pieces of sculpture in the room, small bronzes by Frederick Macmonnies and Gutzon Borglum, two of our greatest American sculptors. The Macmonnies bronze is the famous "Bacchante," two figures of riant life and motion, the child especially having a touch of the strange and eldritch. We find pathos and beauty in Borglum's "The Dying Chief," both man and horse being modeled with consummate mastery. This little gem in sculpture is the gift of Elizabeth Borglum to the museum.

Our joint pilgrimages among the masters are over. Do you, as suggested above, make some more trips to the gallery without a cicerone. Then your adventures and discoveries will be all your own, good to remember and priceless to keep.

Intimate Portraits.

Mrs. T. W. Dewing's article on the late Abbott H. Thayer in the August issue of the International Studio is noteworthy for the intimate manner in which she speaks of George De Forest Brush, Carroll Beckwith, Helena De Kay and the great John La Farge himself. The younger members of the group were all studying at the old Academy of Design, then at Twenty-third street and Fourth avenue. "Dear, good and sympathetic Mr. Wilmart" was the teacher, and the whole class labored under his direction at copying Greek casts.

"I was myself," writes Mrs. Dew-

A Rare Opportunity for the Purchase of Diamonds

THE VALUE OF THE DIAMOND AT ITS source has undergone no change whatsover and indications from the London Diamond Syndicate "controlling ninety-five percent of the world's output of diamonds" point to even higher values for these precious stones.

However, owing to temporary economic conditions, some of the big diamond importers and cutters are liquidating their choice gems at lower prices and thus opportunities are presented Feagans & Company to purchase select stones at prices greatly below their real basic worth.

Following out the policy that has helped place Feagans & Company in a preeminent place among the diamond merchants of the world, these opportunities immediately are passed on to our patrons by a downward revision of the prices of gems in the famous "Feagans" collection.

And so today you may buy "Feagans" perfect diamonds for very much less than their intrinsic worth. Bearing in mind the assurance we have received from the Diamond Syndicate that diamomds in all probability will revert to prices even higher than heretofore, we believe that at the lower prices now in effect here this is a real opportunity for the purchase of diamonds.

But Thotmes was not satisfied with the plunder. He said that to take Megiddo was like taking a thousand towns, since all the important chiefs were inside it, and he proceeded to starve out the city by guarding every possible entrance. Finally, Megiddo surrendered. The princes and warriors filed out of the gate and agreed to pay Thotmes yearly tribute. The city was then sacked, perhaps burned, and valuable works of art and the jewels and gold of a remarkably wealthy city carried off to Egypt, as well as such trophies as the scepter, royal tent and furniture belonging to the King of Kadesh. Thotmes had it all recorded and went on to other unconquered regions.

This was only one of the numerous battles fought at different times at this strategic spot.

Some years ago, 1903, a German Palestine Society sent an expedi- plore the old foundations and see if any relics of the battles were left buried there. For nearly three years the scientists worked, with the result that traces of seven cities were found in different strata below the present surface. The oldest city, they believed flourished back in the neolithic, or stone, period. Pieces of walls, skeletons, temple and palation to the city, now a ruin, to exace ruins, a seal marked as the property of "Shema, the servant of Jereboam," King of Israel, all helped to identify the times when different civilizations held the important fortress.

The expedition had to give up its work before the possibilities of the site were exhausted. And later the war put a stop to any but utilitarian digging in the Near East. So the ruins of Armageddon are looked upon as still holding many secrets.

The reference to Armageddon in the Book of Revelation has been taken by some scholars to mean that the last war of the world is to be fought on this old traditional battle ground. The book, written as if the events prophesied had already happened, says that the kings gathered together in the place called Har-Mageddon.

But of late years the new term Armageddon has been taken more as a symbol. Some students of the mysteries of Revelation still hold that the recent war was the proesied war of Armageddon, and that Belgium, where the fighting was begun, met the conditions of being the Armageddon referred to in the prophecy.

Some of the interpreters have been able to apply almost every mysterious reference in the book to the recent war, even to naming the beasts of the visions as the nations in the conflict, and comparing the reference of blood up to the bridles of the horses to the fact that the dead were sometimes piled four and five deep, about the height of a bridle, after some battles in the World War. They found it significant to point out that the verse about hailstones weighing a talent—the heaviest measure of weight known in Bible days—coming down from heaven upon men could be applied to the heavy bombs and shells of modern warfare.

A NEW CHINESE ALPHABET.

China has fifty-seven varieties of dialects, often three in one province, and the user of one dialect rarely understands the other. Canada has only two languages, but look at the trouble they cause. The English language has only twenty-six simple letters that a child of 5 can learn easily; the Chinese written language has 10,000 different characters or symbols, whose meaning the person with a classical education should know. Germany before the reformation had twenty dialects as different as Flemish and Danish, and it had no recognized national language until Luther created one by translating the Bible into the dialect of Upper Saxony, which became the modern German and united the nation.

Now Chinese scholars and patriots have worked out thirty-nine simple Chinese symbols, which in various combinations fulfil the same purpose as the old 10,000 characters. Their general use will enable the entire Chinese nation, not only to learn easily how to read and write, but also to understand one another. When that goal is reached, China will be a real nation. The land-grabbing by foreign nations will cease, the present spoils will have to be returned.

Verily, the pen is mightier than the gas shell.—[September Sunset.

FILM KISSES CAUSE DEBATE.

British Women's Organization is Opposed.

London Managers Looking for New Shows.

Drury Lane Theater is Being Remodeled.

[SPECIAL FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Aug. 16.—While the British public is discussing eugenics and divorce, film censorship boards are devoting much thought to the subject of "Is Kissing in a Motion Picture Film Destructive of Public Morals?"

Most of the women think it isn't. They think it's rather nice in films—and perhaps elsewhere. But there is a National Women Citizens' Association here which evidently thinks differently.

But kissing will not be eliminated from the British films, although those osculatory exercises which are known as "clutch kisses" are likely to be modified.

The theatrical season has been quite successful and the managers are taking stock now of material for next year. The situation puzzles them somewhat. There is no dearth of musical show writers, either of the "books" or music, but the big plays—dramas—are not appearing steadily.

If you were to be transported tonight into the interior of the famous Drury Lane Theater, you wouldn't know where you were, no matter how familiar you may have been with the celebrated home of pantomime and spectacle even so recently as last winter.

BUILDING BEING REMODELED.

The historic old building is being entirely remodeled as far as its interior goes. Its decorations are all down and even its inner brickwork. Its boxes and seats will be entirely changed when it reopens next season and an absolutely modern ventilating system will have been installed.

It will have two brand-new curtains, which it is said will be of an entirely novel character, but Arthur Collins, who has produced many amazing spectacles in the old playhouse, sits around and watches the workmen with a face that winces every time they put their destructive hands upon some historic detail of the old interior.

RUMOR OF GREAT FINDS.

There is a rumor to the effect that two things were found by the demolishers, one a necklace lost in one of the boxes many years ago by some unknown lady who probably tried to hang it for a moment on a projection in the wainscoting and let it fall behind, and the other nothing less than the part or all of a manuscript by the author of "The Two Orphans."

The policy of the great theater will not be changed with its decorations. It will remain the home of sensational melodrama with the pantomime thrown in at Christmas time, in accordance with tradition.

FORMER CEMETERY SOUGHT.

Somewhere in Mt. Auburn there is a small tract of land that William J. Pierce, of Alameda believes to belong to him by right of heritage. This tract is something that Newbold L. Pierson, secretary to Mayor Galvin, is trying to locate, for it seems to have been overlooked so long a time that it has become "lost."

It was part of a cemetery—in fact it was a burial lot in the old Methodist Protestant Cemetery, also known as the old radical burying ground, in Mt. Auburn, according to Pierce.

According to the best information Mr. Pierson could obtain the old cemetery site is now the location of some of the best homes in Mt. Auburn. It now is occupied by Vernon Place, which contains some of the handsomest residences in that section, including those of the late John R. Holmes, former safety director, W. R. Goodall and others.

Just where Pierce's tract is located in this district is something that Mr. Pierson cannot be determine. He said it was owned by his grandfather more than a half century ago.—[Cincinnati Enquirer.

In Different Classes.

A visitor in an Australian home inquired of his host's little son, "Do you go to school now?"

"Yes, sir."

"And what do you learn—reading, writing, sums?"

"Oh, yes, and I learn religion, too."

"Religion?"

"Yes, I learn the little religion which teaches that we all come from Adam. But my older brother is in a higher class; he learns the big religion and that teaches that we all come from monkeys."—[Boston Transcript.

ARKING BACK OVER THE YEARS.

Reminiscent Meditation on the Good Old Days on the Farm.

Last night, I could smell the perfume of the clover as it came across the years.

I could see the old farmhouse and the grove of evergreen trees and mother standing among them.

How we loved to listen to the ghostly whisperings and watch the splendors of the setting sun and talk of that land that is fairer than day till in the olden golden twilight I could almost glimpse the glories that fadeth not away.

Last night it all came back so plain over the years and tears and miles that have intervened.

The summer night; the whispering pines; the glory of the evening star above the band of burnished gold that marked the trail of dying day; the holy hush of heaven over all at eventide, as I talked and dreamed with—mother. [Hattie Belle Burrell in Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

ing, "a hard worker, and I tried to do the Venus de Milo. I did her full length and half length and only the head and shoulders, and finally I painted her against a Venetian leather background with a full palette, and it was on this occasion that Thayer held a week-long discussion with me on my going in for the luxury of beauty, he, for the severe truth, and I said that art was beauty, and he said it was nobility, and I said beauty was noble. So wise we were at 20.

"It was on the occasion of this argument that I remember Brush, who was an adorer and henchman of Thayer's, coming and joining us and holding up his hands in his funny way and saying, 'Well, well,' and feigning to be completely overcome by the painted Venus."

How to Address a Lord.

There was considerable perturbation in and around the White House as to how Viscount Northcliffe ought to be addressed. "Right this way, Lord," was the formula chosen by one functionary. "Lord Northcliffe," it was said, was quite a proper and adequate form in conversation, and after the title had been used once, plain "Sir" would suffice.—[Washington Correspondence of Philadelphia Ledger.

Autumn stocks, though complete, are always changing. New styles are arriving daily. You may view them within two hours after their arrival.

We are just as sincerely concerned about value as style. You may pay less, but never more at the New York Store.

Glimpsing the Modes in

AUTUMN FROCKS

Colors

You must have at least one BLACK frock this fall—that's Fashion's decree. After that you may add any of the following shades to your wardrobe—Beet root and bronze, copper and a deep, rich brown; a new blue, dark, yet full of life; a new variation of the henna shade, called feuillet d'automne.

These shades, gorgeous, yet subdued, are wonderful in the new autumn silks and charming in the wools.

Trimmings

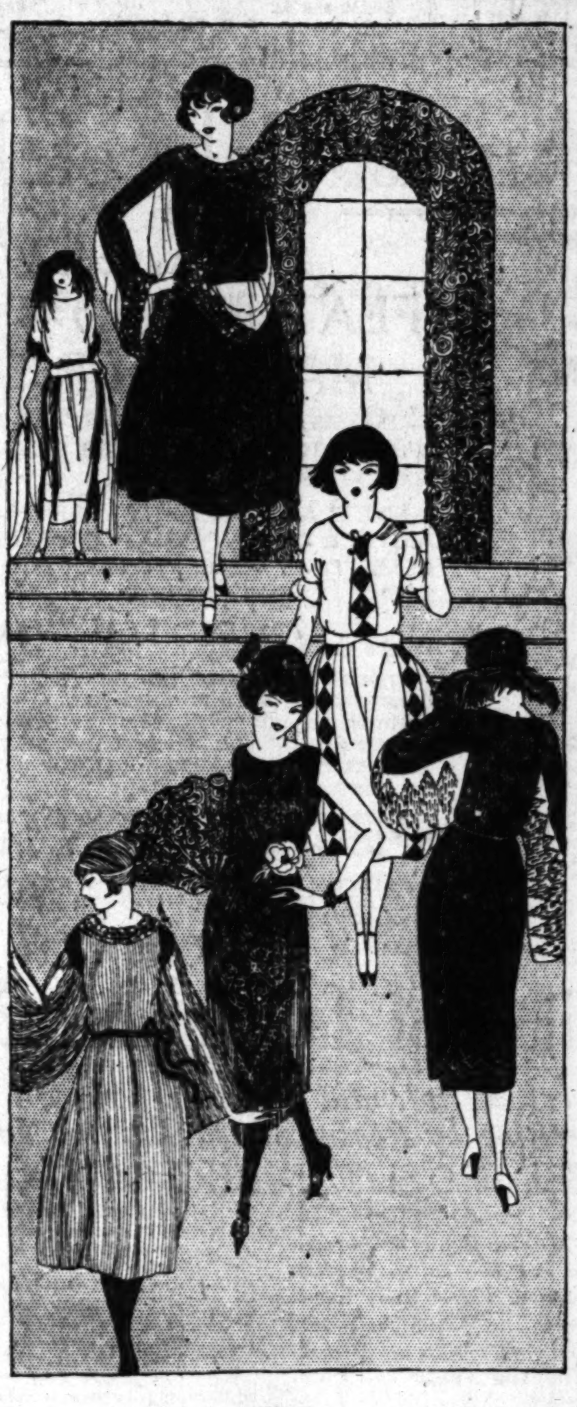
The most elaborate beading that has been seen in many seasons, almost obscuring the frock itself, is here on some of the smartest gowns.

But if one doesn't care for beading, or for heavily padded ribbon embroidery, then there are plenty of absolutely plain frocks, relying solely upon line and color, that will prove most intriguing.

Prices

Here's interesting news, too! News of $39.75 where you would expect $55; of $49.75 where you would expect $75; and news of $125 where you couldn't see how it could be other than $175 at least—so much lower are the prices at The New York Store this season.

We are trying to forget the war period with its out-of-reason prices. We are searching for and demanding good styles which we can sell for $39.75, $45, $49.75 and $55. And we are finding them.



Materials

Your smartest frocks this season, Milady, will be of crepe. They may be of Jacquard (a lovely brocaded weave), whippo'will, satin-backed crepes, heavy Canton crepe, or a dozen other crepes. Old favorites such as tricotine, twill cord, charmeuse and duvetyn, are used also.

Every one of the new materials is ideal for the new autumn frocks—and each one seems to be lovelier than the other.

Hems and Sleeves

Hems hang nearer the floor this season, and on many a smart frock they hang unevenly. Drapery may be the cause, or a loose panel, or sash—but whatever the cause, the uneven hem is the effect.

And as to sleeves, they are graceful, flowing and fascinating. And one may choose the length and cut thereof to suit the contour of one's arm.

Hats to Wear With These Frocks

The vogue for black is nowhere stronger than in millinery. You may choose a very dull black or a very shiny black. There are also lovely bright colors to relieve the sombreness of your black gown or dark coat. They run from fuchsia red to purple.

—Spanish effects are most popular, while hats showing ostrich feathers and colorful ornaments are very numerous—and very smart.

SOCIETY.

BY VIRGINIA WOODS.

Mrs. Booth.

Mrs. Willis Booth, who, with her son Ferris Booth, has been the central figure in honor of whom so many smart and distinguished affairs have been planned, is expecting to return to New York early next month. If Mr. Booth can arrange it he will meet Mrs. Booth in San Francisco for a visit with his mother, Mrs. E. A. Booth, and then go to New York shortly before [illegible] 1, when they are to sail for Europe, Mr. Booth going on [illegible].

They will remain abroad several months and will visit various parts of France, England, Italy and Belgium as well as other countries. Ferris Booth will not go abroad, as he will soon return to Columbia University, where he is a student.

Friends of Mrs. Booth have kept her on the go socially every day since her arrival and there is not to be a lull in these plans until the last day of her stay.

Mr. and Mrs. William May Garland are entertaining with an all-day party at Bolsa Chica Club today in honor of Mrs. Booth. Mrs. Garland's young sons, Marshall and [illegible], and their house guest, Louis [illegible] of Chicago, and Ferris Booth are among the younger members of the party.

Mrs. Horace B. Wing is arranging to give a luncheon in honor of Mrs. Booth on Wednesday and is to have a company of twelve.

The luncheon that Mrs. George I. Cochran gave in honor of Mrs. Booth was one of the smart affairs of the week. Mr. and Mrs. Cochran have since gone to Del Monte.

Mrs. Edward Laurence Doheny, who has been in Catalina with her family all week, is planning a luncheon in honor of Mrs. Booth. Mrs. Samuel Kreider gave one for her on Friday.

For Miss Valentine.

Miss Julia Valentine, who is soon to become the bride of William [illegible] Stewart, Jr., was on Thursday evening the guest of honor at a delightful dinner and dancing party at which Mr. and Mrs. Henry [illegible] entertained at the [illegible] Grove in the Ambassador.

For Two Matrons.

Mrs. Willis Booth of New York and Mrs. Edward Laurence Doheny, who is just returned from New York, were inspiration for a tea [illegible] at which Mrs. I. N. Van Nuys entertained nearly one hundred guests on Thursday afternoon at her summer home in Santa Monica and which marked one of the smartest affairs of the summer. Mrs. L. J. Selby sang a charming group of songs accompanied by her [illegible], who also gave a group of [illegible] solos.

Tea was served out of doors in the patio and also in the dining-room. The tables were centered with miniature ponds of water lilies in all the lovely pastel shades. Throughout the house pink and lavender asters were used abundantly and some rare potted plants added to the charm of the setting.

Mrs. Booth appeared lovely in a [illegible] afternoon frock of jade green [illegible] covered with crystal [illegible]. With it she wore a big hat of [illegible] brown lace. Mrs. Doheny was [illegible] attired in a [illegible] frock of white lace and chiffon with which she wore some handsome jewels.

Invitations Out.

Invitations to the wedding of Miss Mary Gertrude Dockweiler and William K. Young, which is to take place Wednesday evening, September 7, at the home of the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Isidore B. Dockweiler, were issued Thursday.

Only relatives and the most intimate friends of the couple have been invited. A reception will follow the ceremony. Misses Rosario and Ruth Dockweiler are to serve as maid of honor and bridesmaid, respectively, and Lyndol Young will be his brother's best man.

The couple will leave shortly after the ceremony for a honeymoon trip through the Canadian Rockies and upon their return will reside in a cosy little flat in the Wilshire district until their own home is built.

On Tuesday afternoon Miss Dockweiler showed her trousseau to a group of girl friends who were assembled at a tea. Thursday afternoon Miss Wilma Hynes gave a tea in honor of Miss Dockweiler.

A Welcome Home.

To welcome home Miss Emeleen Childs and her mother, Mrs. Ozro W. Childs, who have just arrived from New York and Europe, Mrs. Albert Carlos Jones gave a charming auction tea on Friday afternoon.

Miss Childs is here for the first time in five years. She went to France to take charge of a hospital and later was appointed by the Mayor of Paris as head of three important military hospitals.

After the war Mrs. Childs joined her daughter in Paris and they returned to New York and Washington last autumn. While abroad Miss Childs was a guest of the King and Queen of Belgium, who sent to Paris for her in their private car and entertained her most charmingly.

Masses of gray-hued flowers were used about the house and on the tea table, dahlias and roses being the principal blossoms. Large, shaggy yellow dahlias were in the library, while various shades of rose and pink dahlias were used about the drawing-room. The tea table was centered with a big basket filled with Columbia roses and maiden hair ferns.

Assisting Mrs. Jones were Mrs. Frank S. Hicks, Mrs. Robert Frank Gross, Mrs. Michael J. Connell, Mrs. E. B. Meyler, Mrs. William May Garland, Mrs. James Soutter Porter, Mrs. William T. Bishop, Mrs. W. E. Dunn, Mrs. James Rathwell Page, Mrs. Walter Brunswig, Mrs. James G. Scarborough, Jr., Mrs. Robert G. Meyler, Miss Josephine Cook and Miss Albertine Pendleton.

New Orleans Visitors.

Charming visitors from New Orleans and Avery's Island, La., are Mrs. William Preston Johnston and her niece, Miss Sara McIlhanny, who have been visiting Col. and Mrs. George J. Denis since Thursday morning. They are en route to Santa Barbara, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle and then over the Canadian Pacific to their home.

Mrs. Johnston is Mrs. Denis's sister-in-law and is a society leader in New Orleans.

Miss Bacon Returning.

Miss Rose Bacon, who has been visiting her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Hall in Lewiston, Mont., for the past three months expects to arrive home the first of next month.

Her mother, Mrs. Frederick T. Bacon accompanied her on the way to Montana, but came back a month ago. They and Mr. and Mrs. Hall had a delightful motor trip all through Glacier National Park last month. Mr. Hall is in the oil business in Montana.

Figures in Weekly Affairs.

Miss Wright is a Philadelphia girl and Miss McTague a St. Louis girl, both guests at the Ambassador. They were snapped while dancing at a tea-dansant given at the Ambassador Golf Club at which Mrs. Charles Jeffras was hostess. Mrs. Hervey is a charming matron of Santa Barbara, who, with Mr. Hervey, has been visiting at the Ambassador a few days. While here they attended the Pilgrimage Play. They have returned to their home at the Samarkan Hotel. Miss Clarkson gave a tea in honor of Mrs. Mark Crosby (Adele Vance.) Mrs. Hufford, before her marriage ten days ago, was Miss Dorothy Strohecker. The pictures of the Misses Wright and McTague are by F. M. Litchfield, staff photographer of The Times, while that of the others is by Witzel for National Illustrated News.

Mrs. Johnson's Tea.

A charming affair planned as a courtesy to Mrs. Edward Laurence Doheny and Mrs. Willis Booth was the tea at which Mrs. Fred O. Johnson was hostess last week.

Col. Winston Here.

Friends of Col. Edward Thomas Winston, U.S.A., retired, who has been for some time on active duty in Atlanta, Ga., will be glad to know he is visting his daughter, Miss Charlotte Winston, at 144 Los Flores avenue, Altadena. He is expecting to be called back any day.

Commander and Mrs. Mayfield.

Commander and Mrs. Irving Hall Mayfield, who have been abroad for the past five months will remain away several months longer and then expect to come to Los Angeles for a visit with relatives and scores of friends.

Commander Mayfield is attached to a ship at Cherbourg, France, and he and Mrs. Mayfield spend much time in Paris. They also had an interesting trip to London.

Mrs. Rodman's Tea.

As a compliment to Mrs. Gertrude Workman Furman of Yonkers, N. Y., who is visiting her mother, Mrs. W. H. Workman, and for Mrs. Horace B. Wing, who has just returned from her country place at Three Rivers, Mrs. Willoughby Rodman gave a smart tea on Friday, at which she assembled fifty guests. The rooms were a brilliant bit of floral color with astors and dahlias in various shades being used throughout the house.

Assisting were Mrs. Hancock Banning, Mrs. John Percival Jones, Mrs. James Rathwell Page, Mrs. George Griffith, Mrs. Albert Crutcher, Mrs Robert Murray, Mrs. R. H. Hooper and Misses Roberta Crutcher and Mary Kincaid.

At Avalon.

Dr. and Mrs. Granville MacGowan and daughter, Miss Eleanor MacGowan, will leave the first of this week for Avalon, where they plan to remain two weeks.

Invitations Out.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles David Griffiths of Covina, have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Elleane Louise Griffiths, and Lieut. Wilbur Sturtevant Nye, U.S.A., which is to take place Wednesday evening, September 7, at the Holy Trinity Episcopal Church at Covina. Lieut. Nye, who is stationed at a camp in Kentucky, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Putnam Nye (Myra Nye) of Covina.

Bishop and Mrs. Stevens.

Rt. Rev. and Mrs. Bertrand Stevens, who are spending the summer at Coronado gave a handsomely appointed dinner party Monday evening at the Blue Lantern in honor of the clergymen of San Diego and their wives. Plates were set for twenty guests, including Rev. and Mrs. Charles L. Barnes, Dr. and Mrs. George Wallace, Rev. and Mrs. William Bedford Jones, Rev. and Mrs. R. A. Kirchoffer, Bishop Osborne, Miss Deer, Rev. and Mrs. Alfred R. Taylor, Rev. and Mrs. H. E. Clowes, Rev. Charles Murphy, Chaplain and Mrs. Thompson and Deaconess Wile.

Mrs. Benedict's Luncheon.

Mrs. E. J. Benedict of San Francisco who is visiting her son, George Gillson, at his country estate at Covina, gave a luncheon on Thursday that provided a charming courtesy in honor of Mrs. Kate Greenwood Locke of Pasadena, who is leaving soon for the East, and for Miss Ethel Shorb of San Francisco. The function was held at the Ambassador in the Cocoanut Grove.

The table was centered with a huge basket of dahlias massed with other summer blooms. Besides Mrs. Locke and Miss Shorb, places were arranged for Mrs. John Percival Jones, Mrs. Seymour Thomas, Baroness Arpad Paszthory, Mrs. E. Burke Holladay, Mrs. J. B. Winston, Mrs. Roy Jones, Mrs. James Keeney, Mrs. M. Buckler, Mrs. Herbert Herbine, Mrs. Frank Simpson, Mrs. E. Wilson, Mrs. Jack Winston, Miss Olga Simpson, Mrs. Alexander B. Barrett, Miss Georgia Kean and Miss Helen Holladay.

At Handsome Luncheon.

Mrs. W. D. Jeffries was hostess on Friday at a beautifully arranged luncheon at the Flintridge Country Club, planned as a courtesy to her aunt, Mrs. M. F. Le Roy and her daughter, Miss Dora Le Roy and daughter-in-law, Mrs. Allen Le Roy.

The twenty-four guests were seated at small tables adorned with yellow and blue flowers. Mrs. Le Roy and her daughter, who recently came here from Iowa, are to make their home with Judge and Mrs. Stephen C. Hubbell, Mrs. Le Roy and Mrs. Hubbell being sisters. Mrs. Le Roy, Jr., will return to her home in Chicago in about a month

Col. and Mrs. Fowler.

Col. and Mrs. William Eric Fowler (Emily Jarvis Earl,) whose marriage was one of the most talked of events of the summer, are leaving today for Washington, D. C., which is to be their home. With them will go Mrs. Fowler's four children, Edwin E. Earl, Jr., Miss Emily Earl and Jarvis and Chaffee Earl, who will enter school in Washington in the fall.

On Thursday Mrs. Fowler was incentive for a beautiful luncheon at which Mrs. Lloyd L. Krebbs entertained at the Valley Hunt Club. The big table was centered with yellow dahlias and sapphire-colored delphinium. Besides Mrs. Fowler there were places for Mrs. George T. Marye of San Francisco, Mrs. Fowler's house guest and Mmes. Hancock Banning, John Percival Jones, James Soutter Porter, Howard Huntington, H. Page Warden, William A. Brackenridge, Jotham Bixby, Jr., Charles Jeffras, West Hughes, Claude Griffith, Neil P. Snow, Thompson Buchanan and Robert Finkbine.

On Wednesday evening Mrs. Charles H. Sharp gave a most enjoyable buffet supper party at her summer home in Santa Monica in honor of Col. and Mrs. Fowler. Twenty-five guests were there.

To Entertain for Two.

Mrs. Force Parker is to be hostess on Tuesday afternoon at a tea in honor of Mrs. John Percival Jones of New York and Miss Lucy Smith of Smith College, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. Robert London.

Former Los Angeles Belle.

Society here, especially in the old Spanish set, will be much interested to learn of the approaching marriage of Miss Josephine de Nieto y Viosca of Mexico City, Sonora, Mex., San Francisco and Los Angeles, a former well known Los Angeles society belle, who is to be married within the next two weeks at the home of her sister in New Orleans to Farquar Oglivy Laing of Farnley

THE WEEK IN SOCIETY.

Grange, Northumberland, Eng. The bride-to-be is the sister of Mrs. William Revilla, (Miss Rosita de Nieto) and Mrs. Angel Echevarria, (Miss Marie Eloise de Nieto) of Buenos Aires, Argentina.

The wedding date has not been definitely set as Miss Nieto is awaiting the arrival of her aunt, Baroness Von Rosenzweig, who is now in New York. The wedding will be a quiet family affair owing to the recent death of the bride's mother, Mrs. Rosa Viosca de Nieto. The bride and groom will spend part of their honeymoon with the Robert Goelets at their Newport cottage before sailing for England, where they will take up their residence at Mr. Laing's estate.

Gen. Rodrigues and Bride.

Gen. Avelardo L. Rodriguez, commander of the Mexican Federal forces in Lower California, and his bride, who were married at Calexico Saturday evening, are spending their honeymon at the U. S. Grant Hotel in San Diego. Mrs. Rodriguez is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Meier of San Diego and has lived here for several months. Gen. Rodrigues is commander of Federal troops at Mexicali and Tijuana. He was educated in Arizona. He first came into prominence when he was sent with 3500 men against former Gov. Cantu. Since then he has been commanding all the Mexican Federal troops in Lower California.

Back from East.

After a two months' motor trip all through the East and through parts of Canada, Mrs. A. L. Swobdi-Meade of 356 South Manhattan Place is home. She joined some friends in Chicago and they motored to New York and Montreal, visiting many other delightful places near Montreal and as far as Quebec. Later they motored all through the Adirondacks and the White Mountains, returning to New York, where Mrs. Meade was much entertained by friends.

St. Louis Visitors.

Mrs. S. Rosenberg and her sister, Miss Flora Siegfried of St. Louis, are at the Merritt-Jones Hotel at Ocean Park.

At Del Monte.

Del Monte is now the mecca for many Angelenos who, from all accounts, are enjoying the sports as well as the gay social life there.

Golf is the outstanding attraction. Among those to be seen on the golf courses or at the Lodge each day are Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Letts, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Hutchason, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Mines, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Godfrey, little Miss Patricia Mines, Mrs. Sloane Orcutt, Mrs. Matthew S. Robertson, Mrs. A. C. Bilicke and her party including Miss Nancy Bilicke, Constant and Archie Bilicke, Felix Chapman and Miss Dorothy Campbell.

Mrs. Bilicke and her party motored to San Francisco but returned to Del Monte. Miss Campbell is visiting them from Seattle.

Arthur Letts enjoyed the distinction of winning the honors and a cup in the third flight of the summer golf tournament last week-end.

From Pasadena are Miss A. C. Parson, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Cravens, Col. and Mrs. J. Hudson Poole and children, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Fertig, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pitcairn and A. M. Andrews, who is host at a house party.

Mr. and Mrs. William S. Hook and their children are domiciled at their new home at Pebble Beach. Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Murphy and their family are occupying their summer home at Pebble Beach and Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Flint and daughters are in their home next door neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Murphy.

Married in Honolulu.

A cable from Honolulu has just announced the marriage in that city of Miss Kathryn Michael Ryan of this city and Louis Baron of Honolulu. Miss Ryan left for Honolulu in June to stay two months in connection with business, but was persuaded to defer her return indefinitely by Mr. Baron who is manager of the insurance department of Theodore H. Davies Company, Ltd., and is prominent in business and social circles there. They will make their home in Honolulu, Manoa Valley.

All Day Birthday Party.

In celebration of her eighteenth birthday anniversary, Miss Annabelle Ralphs gave an all-day party on Thursday at the home of her mother, Mrs. George A. Ralphs, in Hollywood.

The twenty-two guests were assembled first for an elaborate breakfast, after which they enjoyed a dip in the handsome Roman plunge. They played tennis in the afternoon and enjoyed an al fresco dinner in the gardens, after which they danced the rest of the evening.

Among her guests were Misses Avis Hughes, Carmilita Geraghty, Valeska Barklage, Mary Ellen Reed, Marie Rotel, Janet Prendergast, Priscialla Wilde, Rhea Ferdon, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ralphs, Jack Reed, Rust Hughes, Bud Riggins, Norman Chandler, Ralph Grace, Dana Todd, Kenneth Rublee, Len McKay, Allen Tomblin and Felix Chappellet.

Last evening Mrs. Ralphs gave a handsomely appointed dinner party at her home for forty guests.

Back from Tour.

Dr. and Mrs. A. Lincoln Desser have returned to Los Angeles after a two months' wedding trip to the East. They visited Toronto, Montreal, Quebec and took the famous Sagonan, St. Lawrence and Hudson River trips. On their return they visited Chicago, which was formerly their home city. They are residing at 927 South Gramercy Drive.

Assistance League.

On last Wednesday Mrs. Jack Foster was in charge of the Assistance League tea and arranged the auction party which preceded it. It was another gay day and Mrs. Hancock Banning and other society women interested in the league are making Wednesdays popular days for devotees of auction who can go there to play without arranging large parties.

Among some of those present on last Wednesday besides Mrs. Foster and Mrs. Banning were Mrs. John Percival Jones, Mrs. Carlos Jones, Mrs. Charles H. Sharp, Mrs. Everett H. Seaver, Mrs. Jaro Von Schmidt, Mrs. Ozro W. Childs and numerous others.

Miss Drew Home.

Miss Mary Drew of 3866 La Salle avenue has just returned to the city after having spent two weeks at Hermosa Beach as the guest of Mrs. Henry F. Grady (Lucretia del Valle).

Told at Auction Party.

At an auction party arranged by Mrs. Emily Y. Henry of 1412 South Burlington avenue Thursday, announcement was made of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Mabel G. Henry, and Clifford M. Amsden, son of Mrs. Lois C. Amsden of Boston. The wedding will take place in October. Miss Henry is a graduate of Stanford while Mr. Amsden graduated from Tufts College of Boston. He is efficiency expert for Los Angeles county.

Pilgrimage Players Guests.

Under graceful cypress trees, which add to the beauty of her garden, Miss Bertha Fiske entertained at a garden tea yesterday afternoon at her home, 957 Manzanita avenue, in honor of fifty women, all connected in some way with the Pilgrimage Play, in which Miss Fiske has been taking the leading role of Mary Magdalene. Miss Mildred Wheat and Miss Nancy Jackson, both of whom are co-stars with Miss Fiske in the Passion Play, gave a program of music. A number of society, literary and artistic folk were the other guests.

Mme. O'Davoren Holds Salon.

Mme. Vesey O'Davoren (Mme. Ivy de Verley) held her regular weekly salon at the Scarab studio. This popular rendezvous is now the artistic, literary and theatrical center for many gatherings. Among her forty guests were Mrs. James Everard, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Austin, Gerald Alexander, Raymond

Have You a Dependable Watch?

Quality is not patentable. No manufacturer controls it. Style is a matter of intuition, training, taste and experience.

But while Quality and Style are the "open door" to Reputation in making dependable Watches, not many makers have passed the threshold.

The answer to our success in having so many satisfied watch customers may be read in the fact that few jewelers have set so high a standard in watch accuracy at moderate prices.

We reject more than half of the different makes of watches offered us, knowing full well that our standard of reputation cannot be maintained unless we ourselves believe in their accuracy.

Let our watch department show you some of the new dependable watches.

Closed all day Saturday during August.

wedding was that of Miss White of El, and Paul Harvey, also of El Paso, which took place at the home of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Herbine of Windsor Heights. Rev. Percy Knickerbocker, also of El Paso, performed the ceremony in the patio of the home, which was gorgeously adorned with flowers and ferns.

Two-year-old Charlotte Herbine was ring bearer. The musical program was given by Mme. Emilie Cole, prima donna of the Savage Grand Opera Company, who sang "Love's Coronation" and other songs. She was accompanied by her husband, George Cole, with 'cello obbligato and by her young daughter, Miss Frances Cole, who was at the piano.

The couple left at once for a motor trip to Santa Barbara and other places of interest. The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Zach T. White of El Paso, who are spending the summer at the Ambassador. The groom is the oldest son of Charles M. Harvey, president of the Security Trust and Savings Bank of El Paso, and is a student at Princeton University, where he will resume his studies in the fall, taking his bride East with him. Mr. Harvey, Sr., and two other sons are spending the summer at Long Beach. Because of the recent death of the senior Mrs. Harvey, the ceremony was witnessed only by relatives.

Wedded in Church.

The Wilshire Boulevard Christian Church was the scene of the marriage of Miss Marion Strange and Kenneth Cline Albright, which was performed Wednesday morning by Rev. M. Howard Fagan, the pastor, in the presence of 200 guests.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Harry F. Perry, was matron of honor and the bridegroom's brother, D. Z. Albright, was best man. The bride's father, Agathus Strange, gave her away.

The bride wore an afternoon frock of white Canton crepe with hat to match and carried a shower bouquet of pink rosebuds and delphinium. The matron of honor wore honey dew crepe with a girdle of orchid and nile green. She wore a black hat and carried yellow rosebuds. After the ceremony there was a breakfast at the home of the bride's parents at which relatives and the bridal party were guests. The bridegroom is the son of L. W. Albright of 755 North Kenmore avenue, Los Angeles, and is an architect.

Bay City House Guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Finley Pugh of 600 N. Hobart Blvd., have as house guests Misses Louise and Katherine Pugh of San Francisco, who will remain through the month of August.

Weds Army Officer.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Mabel McPhail and Capt. Leslie Norman Conger at the home of Rev. J. M. Schaefle of the Pico Heights Congregational Church. The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Jorgensen. They have gone to Atlanta, Ga., where Capt. Conger is stationed.

Little-Monteverde Wedding.

Miss Katherine Little and Andrew J. Monteverde were married on Friday afternoon at the home of the bride's father, P. F. Little of this city. Rev. M. Howard Fagan performed the ceremony under a bower of ferns and orange blossoms. The bride was exquisitely gowned in white georgette trimmed in handmade rosebuds. She carried a shower of roses and lilies of the valley. The bridegroom is a young business man of Tulare, where he has taken his bride to reside.

Surprise Shower Held.

A miscellaneous shower that was arranged as a surprise to Miss Louise T. Kline, a teacher and fiancee of James M. Wilmot was given on the sands near Long Beach on Wednesday by members of her class, who entertained also with a picnic luncheon. The couple will be married in September.

Wedded in Pasadena.

Miss June Juhl and Horace B. Cattermole were married last Sunday afternoon at the home of Rev. J. A. Wood, the officiating minister, of Monterey Road, in the presence of close friends. The bride wore a frock of lavender and white organdie and carried a shower bouquet of pink rosebuds. They are spending their honeymoon at Catalina and after the 30th of August will be at home at 355 West Fifty-seventh street.

In Honor of Daughter.

Mrs. H. B. Summers of South Hobart Boulevard gave a picnic luncheon party in honor of the fourth birthday of her daughter, Barbara Jane. Pink and white flowers adorned the table. The affair was held at Exposition Park. The children present were: Natalie Snow, Nancy Fogwell, Dorothy Shrey, Virginia Shrey, Betty Elden, Loraine Lynn, Dorothy Hering, Billy Sefton, Alfred Olson, Robert Stevenson, Carl Stevenson, Jack Holmes and John Elden.

Weds Arizona Man.

A recent wedding of interest was that of Miss Avis Beryl Claire Spangler, daughter of Mrs. Martha Spangler of West Washington street, this city, and Steven Townsend Adderton of Phoenix, Ariz. Rev. Wilsey Martin performed the marriage rites. After an extended honeymoon trip the couple will reside at 1314 Fifth avenue, Los Angeles.

Here from San Diego.

Miss Flora Toward and Miss Elizabeth Ellis of San Diego are visiting the former's grandmother, Mrs. Flora Fairbanks, of 1224 Arapahoe street.

Entertain House Guests.

Mrs. Anna R. Cowan of Cheyenne, Wyo., and Miss Cornie Cowan of Oskaloosa, Iowa, are house guests of Mrs. J. L. Downs of 1829 Manhattan Place. Miss Helen Downs, who has just returned from a two weeks' outing at Big Bear, has as a house guest, Miss Rachel Rhoades of Chicago.

Lloyd-Bird Wedding.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Mrs. Phoebe L. Lloyd and Edward Taylor Bird at the home of Mrs. C. Davis of 1405 El Molino street. Rev. J. H. Schaefle performed the ceremony.

Chicago Guest Honoree.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Maginnis of South Gramercy Place were hosts at a Sunday evening buffet supper party in honor of Mme. Ragina Linne of Chicago. The rooms were decorated with masses of pink flowers, with blue and pink blossoms in the dining-room. A charming impromptu musicale program was furnished by several of the guests including Miss May Orcutt, Mrs. Gertrude Ross, Raymond Harmon, Miss May McDonald Hope, Charles Wakefield Cadman and Mme. Linne. Forty guests were assembled. Mr. and Mrs. Maginnis have moved since to their new home on South Van Ness avenue.

At Home Again.

Mrs. Hartwell Bradford and mother, Mrs. L. W. Potter, returned Tuesday from a visit to Yosemite Valley, San Francisco and the bay cities. Mrs. Bradford was a delegate to the Woman's Federation of Clubs convention held in the Yosemite Valley in May, then going north where they visited Mr. Potter and their many friends in Oakland, San Francisco and in Marin county. They also took a steamer trip up the Sacramento River with friends through the wonderful fruit country to Sacramento. Mrs. Bradford and Mrs. Potter visited many of the women's clubs in the various northern cities and were much entertained.

Wedding Announced.

A bit of news that will be of interest to their many friends is an announcement of the wedding of Miss Genevive Bowen Stevens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Stevens, and Mr. Howard Beal Riggs, on the 11th inst. The ceremony was performed by Rev. L. Cook, assistant pastor of Temple Church. The wedding was very quiet, the only attendants being the bride's mother and father, and Mrs. Leslie Merrick and Mrs. F. V. DeLeot. Miss Stevens is concert dancer with Ruth St. Denis. After the ceremony luncheon was served at the Alexandria Hotel. The couple are having an extended wedding trip through the north and later will make their home in Stockton, where Mr. Riggs is engaged in business.

Birthday Dancing Party.

In celebration of the birthday anniversary of her husband, Charles Raymond Toller, Mrs. Toller gave a dancing party Saturday evening. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. August Hartmeyer, Miss Alma Voght, Oliver Deleany, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Watts, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Stratton, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Bloomberg, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Innis, Miss Lelia Norris, Mrs. Selma Norris, Mr. and Mrs. Harold West, Harry Cotone, Harry Rose, Robert Lee, Miss Evelyn Armstrong, Mrs. Flora Weston and A. G. Bagley.

Crane, John Myers, Olerce Abbott, Florence Brooks, Ezra Keeny, William Brown, Ruby Henderson, Emanuel Daveler, Louis Schooeger, L. Rutt, Eduard Dyer, Vida Reynolds, Minnie Quill, M. Stuart, Edward Lower, W. Hoofsteitler, William Haskell, A. Smith, Misses Anna Parker, May Maddron, Frances Eisele, Helen Keeney, Emma Mort and Dorothy Reynolds.

Out-of-Town Society.

PASADENA.

Many pleasant social events are beguiling the summer days and nights in Pasadena.

A big social event of the week was the mid-August ball and dinner-dance last night at the Vista del Arroyo Hotel, attended by members of the summer colony and many resident society people. There was dancing and entertainment in the patio room and the main lounge, as well.

Miss Esther Kirk, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Kirk of South Pasadena avenue, and Basil W. Miller were married Tuesday night at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. Frank C. Edwards was the officiating minister. They will make their home in Santa Paula, where the bridegroom is a teacher in the high school.

Mrs. Robert J. Burdette is at the Maryland Hotel, after a trip of a number of weeks duration in the Pacific Northwest and Canada.

Miss Varilla Sawyer and Ernest Koyen were married Wednesday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Sawyer, 155 Oakland avenue. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. C. Loomis. The bride is a graduate of Pasadena High School of the class of 1918.

Former service men and women at La Vina Sanatorium were entertained at a garden party by the Pasadena Center of the Drama League, Wednesday afternoon, at the home of Miss Eleanor Bissell, 572 Prospect Boulevard.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ordway Foote of San Pasqual street, have returned from a motor trip to Yosemite, Lake Tahoe and Del Monte.

WHITTIER.

Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Harrison, who have been spending the summer with relatives at Whittier, were the honor guests at a delightfully appointed afternoon affair at the home of Mrs. Harrison's sister, Mrs. A. C. Johnson, corner Friends avenue and Bailey street, Thursday afternoon from 3 to 5. The Harrisons are leaving soon for their home in Indianapolis, Ind. Mrs. Case Arthur Reed, who with her husband, Dr. Reed and their little son, are spending the summer with Dr. Reed's mother, Mrs. A. L. Reed, added to the pleasure of the occasion with a group of piano numbers. Among the guests were Mrs. Tom Elliott, who with her husband is a guest at the Allen U. Tomlinson home, en route to China; Mrs. Case Arthur Reed, who leaves soon for Smyrna, Turkey, where Dr. Reed is dean of the International College; Mrs. W. M. Howard of Rivera and her house guest Mrs. M. Mededith of Lindsay, Mrs. S. S. Myrick, sister of the hostess from Hollywood, Miss Gertrude Mills of Pasadena, Mrs. Gilchrist of Indiana, house guest of her sister, Mrs. A. Rosenberger; Miss Lucille Rosenberger of Denton, Tex., summer guest of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. A. Rosenberger; Miss Retta Cook, who recently arrived home from two years spent in China in educational work; Mrs. Louis Test of Lafayette, Ind., a house guest of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. L. M. Green; Mrs. J. J. Jessup and daughter, Miss Mildred Jessup of San Diego.

Mrs. H. W. R. Strong of Los Angeles and New York, whose ranch near Whittier is one of the show places of Los Angeles county, entertained a number of the recent graduates from the Whittier Union High School at a theater party and supper Saturday evening, in compliment to Miss Louise Samson. The party at the Scenic Theater was followed by a supper at the Poinsettia Sweet Shop and the guests were Mrs. M. W. Samson and the Misses Louise and Esther Samson, Chloris Coppock, Julia Miller, Evelyn Lofland, Mary Lester, Marian Smith, Mildred Lee, Helen Friebel, Ethel Hatch and the Messrs. Tristram Coffin, Harold Sharpless, Robert McWhirter, Harold Samson and Orville Waer.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Matteson have returned from a motor trip to San Francisco and other places of interest in the north. While at Vallejo, they were guests at the home of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Magill. Mrs. Magill accompanied her parents to Whittier for a visit. Before her marriage, Mrs. Magill was one of the most popular of the local high school students, and has a wide circle of friends who will doubtless make her visit a pleasant one, as she is usually extensively entertained while visiting her parents.

RIVERSIDE.

A wedding or two served but to emphasize the fact that social events have ceased until late September shall indicate to inland folk that summer and summer outings are over until June, at least. Local society awoke but once the past week, and that was to note with surprise the announcement of the wedding of Miss Gladys Moore, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Moore of 1455 Orange Grove avenue, to Russell Austin. The marriage was performed Sunday at noon at Corona, in the presence of only the parents of the bride and groom and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilcox of this city. The honeymoon is being spent in San Francisco. The bride graduated from the Girls' High School with the class of 1921.

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Pitzer will be at home to their friends after August 20 at 188 North Lemon street. The wedding of Miss Daisy Moore to Mr. Pitzer was solemnized within the week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Bunch of Highland.

An announcement of local interest was that of the betrothal of Miss Mary Hayward of St. Cloud, Minn., who has spent the last two winters with her aunt, Mrs. Jean McClure of 1484 Fifth street, to Ross Carter of this city. Friends learned of the betrothal at Newport Beach, where the bride-to-be is spending the summer with Mrs. McClure. The prospective wedding has been noted in the date book as an event for October, next year.

A pleasurable event was the birthday party which honored the fifteenth anniversary of Miss Nina Porter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Porter of 181 North Adams street. The guest of honor was the recipient of many attractive gifts at the hands of her friends.

OLINDA.

Motor parties to the surrounding mountains for a day or week were Mr. and Mrs. Julis Slay, Mrs. Knok Sellers and daughter Mable, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Stone and family, and Mr. and Mrs. John Bryan.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. McElbany of Montebello and Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Wright of Placentia were guests of the B. F. McElberys at a beach party at Huntington Beach Sunday.

Miss Avis Coffey has just returned from a two weeks visit with friends in San Francisco and Santa Cruz. Saturday evening she was hostess to Miss Lorel Davis of Hollywood at a dance at Balboa Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Fladding entertained with a chicken dinner to a number of friends on Sunday. Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Schults and Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Lee of Orange.

PLACENTIA.

Mrs. Leland Smith entertained recently at an afternoon and evening to former Fullerton Union High School associates and friends. The color scheme of pink and green was carried out beautifully throughout the entire house. Pink crepe paper and pink china asters with ferns made a pleasing setting for the hours of merry fun-making. Five hundred was played by the following guests during the afternoon: The Misses Ruth McDavid, Beth Marshall, Alice Wilber, Hilda Blatz, Wanda Jackman, Mrs. Leo Porter and Mrs. William Berkenstock. The evening was spent with cards and the guests included Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Lempke, Mr. and Mrs. W. Berkenstock, Mr. and Mrs. W. Blattner. Prizes were won by Mrs. Leo Porter and Mrs. Blattner and Mr. Lempke, who received first, and Miss Alice Wilber and Mr. Blattner who were consoled by the booby. Delicious refreshments were served both afternoon and evening.

Mrs. Hartwell Bradford and mother, Mrs. L. W. Porter, have returned from an extended trip to the northern part of the State. Mrs. Bradford was a delegate to the Women's Convention held in the Yosemite in May and has since visited many women's clubs in the North. Other visits were made to friends residing in San Francisco, Sacramento, Oakland and various other cities, taking side trips up the San Joaquin and Sacramento Rivers, and visiting interesting points.

ALHAMBRA.

Of much interest to their many friends here was the mairriage of Miss Violet Halbe and Clyde N. Sutton at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Charles D. Lewis of the Vermont Avenue Methodist Church, Los Angeles, Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. A wedding dinner followed the ceremony and later the young people left for Catalina. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bunker, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bunker, Miss Gertrude Suter and Alfred Challoner were guests from Alhambra. The bride had made her home in Alhambra for the past year with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bunker, former eastern friends. The groom is a well-known star high school athlete and overseas veteran. After September 1 Mr. and Mrs. Sutton will be at home to friends in Santa Paula, where Mr. Sutton is associated with an oil company.

A charming affair in honor of Miss Virginia Moore, a visitor from Berkeley, was the dance given Saturday evening by Lloyd and Wyman Rogers. Those present were Miss Caroline Johnson, Miss Dorothy Bodinus, Miss Ethel Huff, Miss Dorothy McCarthy and Charles Lockett, Thurlow McComb, Edwin Roodhouse, Robert Hutchins.

Miss Ollie Blackburn, an August bride-elect, was honor guest on Saturday afternoon at a tea and china shower given by Mrs. R. E. Pierson and Mrs. L. M. Perkins at the latter's home. Among those invited were Miss Homer Stewart, Mrs. Roy Eastman, Mrs. J. B. Blackburn, Miss Welthea McNeill, Miss Violet Hutchinson and Miss Gladys Lillie.

Accompanied by her mother, Mrs. W. P. Campbell, Miss Catherine Campbell left on Wednesday for Berkeley.

SAN LUIS OBISPO.

The parlors of the St. James Hotel were the setting for a pretty wedding Monday afternoon, when Miss Arley Myrtle Slack became the bride of Robert James Troeger, with Superior Judge T. A. Norton officiating. Miss Virginia Heaton attended the bride and Guy K. Heaton was best man. The bride was gowned in a shimmering white wedding gown with veil and orange blossoms and carried an arm bouquet of white roses. The veil worn was an heirloom in the family. The bridesmaid was gowned in pink organdie and carried a shower bouquet of Cecil Brunner roses. A reception followed the ceremony, during which refreshments were served. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Slack and the late John Slack, and was born and raised in this section. Mr. Troeger is the son of R. W. Troeger and formerly lived in Los Angeles. During the war he served as expert machinist and was one of the six that made up the prize crew at San Pedro.

At a quiet wedding on Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock, Miss Ethel Hunter Hay was married to Walter Roy Eastman by the Rev. J. H. Chase. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's brother, W. W. Hay, in Monterey street. Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Franklin of San Francisco were the attendants, Mrs. Franklin being a sister of the bride. The Hay home was attractively decorated with pink and white roses for the affair, and the same color motiff was carried out in the luncheon, which was served at the conclusion of the ceremony. After the luncheon, Mr. and Mrs. Eastman left by automobile for the southern part of the State to spend their honeymoon.

Miss Bliss Stone, who has been the guest of her cousin, Mrs. Harold T. Avery, has gone to Yosemite for a stay before returning to her home at Mobile, Ala.

PASO ROBLES.

Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Ayers were hosts at a delightful dinner party on Sunday evening. Among the out of town guests included in the guest list were Miss Florence Wilson of San Diego, Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Engle and Miss Helen Engle of El Monte, and Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Schroeder and daughter of Pasadena.

Dr. and Mrs. G. L. Sobey and daughter Kitty, have left for a motor trip to the Sierras. They intend being gone a fortnight.

The birthday gift of M. Ignace Paderewski, former Premier of Poland, and famous pianist, to his wife, Mme. Helena Paderewski has been completed. The gift is a scenic road on the Santa Helena Rancho, which is Mme. Paderewski's personal property, purchased as a gift for her by M. Paderewski some three years ago. The new scenic road is a winding mountain way, ascending to a height almost on a level with the top of Bald Mountain. Four years ago M. Paderewski presented Mme. Paderewski with a scenic road on their San Ignacio ranch to Merritt Springs as a birthday gift.

The thirty-eighth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pemberton was celebrated on Friday evening at the Pemberton home. Music and dancing were enjoyed and a delicious supper was served.

SOCIETY WOMEN ON THE GRILL.

New York Play Satirizes Them and Film Scribes.

Novelty Predominates in the Latest Productions.

Betty Compson Fascinates in "End of World."

BY HARRY CARR.
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—The theater got away to a flying start this week. One of the most amusing of the new plays of the season is "Duley," in which the authors, G. S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly, deftly satirize the type of society women who perpetrate bromides and platitudinous remarks.

One of the characters in the play is a motion picture scenario writer who is at work on a superpicture, which is not be released on a regular program and which is to be entitled "Sin." It begins with Noah's ark and flits down the sins of the ages.

Long before the author has finished describing the outline of his masterpiece the curtain descends to indicate the passing of a half hour. When the curtain goes up again the author is saying "Then Fred rushes to the edge of the cliff and looks over, but the weasel is dead."

Another very amusing character is a young advertising man who has made the country "Forbes conscious."

Roy Cooper Meggrue has a new play at the Times Square Theater entitled "Honors Are Even" in which Lotta Fisher and William Courtenay are featured.

It has a queer beginning. When the curtain first goes up the audience is confronted by a big drop curtain with three door-like panels. A light comes into one of these panels and you see a girl and a man at a table. Then a little curtain slides up in front of the panel and you hear her being proposed to by a young English aristocrat. She turns him down and the lights are turned off.

Then the second panel is lighted and you see the shadow of Belinda and another young man. This time the tiny curtain rolls up from the panel to disclose Belinda turning down a young boy who loves with the agony of puppy love. The house darkens again.

Then the third panel is lighted and the third little curtain shows Belinda turning down the third lover who turns out to be the villain of the piece.

The play, as a whole, is faintly amusing and gay.

CUCKOO PLAY.

The most extraordinary of the new plays is "Johnny," by George V. Hobart. It is suggestive of a cyclone in the brain of an old actor. It is a wild jumble of blind and sobbing mothers who lose sons in the war, of a noble young man who takes the place of the dead young man whom he resembles.

And it is all flavored with jazz, fancy dance steps, male quartettes and maudlin tears. It is the first play I ever saw where they come out and do a few fancy rag steps while the villain is trying to fool the poor blind mother. It is about crazy enough to be a success.

There are two interesting movies in town. At the Strand is Constance Talmadge in Salisbury Field's comedy, "Wedding Bells." This was one of the most delightful plays seen on Broadway for many years.

Although a successful picture, it inevitably limped behind the spoken version. It is a story of a young bride who divorced her husband in a fit of temper and then spent the rest of three acts trying to prevent his marriage to another girl. That is all there is to it.

Like many of Miss Talmadge's plays, it is brilliant and charming, but a little thin. It was well directed by Chet Withey.

Penrhyn Stanslaw's first picture as a director is "The End of the World," at the Rialto this week, with Betty Compson as the star. It is a story about a girl whose father ran a rough roadhouse in Shanghai.

With the plot stretching the probabilities to the groaning point, the lady's three rival lovers find themselves in a lonely lighthouse on a reef in the middle of the Pacific. Presently the damsel herself comes floating along on a log to add to the complications.

I could have swallowed all that, but I did marvel at the coincidence when her trunk also came floating ashore on the surf, filled with the necessary changes of clothing. It seemed as though Providence were too darned accommodating.

In spite of these rather gulping coincidences, the story had a lot of quick interest and spirit. The settings were unusual and interesting. For that matter, it would be hard to find a story which Betty Compson could make otherwise than interesting. She has such poignant and vivid beauty, and gives such fascinating evidence of brains and culture and ability that you don't care much what the story is about. You are content to watch her doing anything.

"Mother o' Mine" Ince Photoplay at the Kinema.

Thomas H. Ince's latest production, "Mother o' Mine," which is now playing at the Kinema, it is said by those who have already seen it, that while the heart and soul of its auditors are touched by the pantomimic rhapsody of its humanness, the serene pictorial beauty it possesses aids greatly in the beholder's pleasure.

"Mother o' Mine" is a drama of the greatest love in the world—the love of a mother for her son. The fact that the Kinema, the first-run house of First National attractions, has booked this Ince production, argues in advance its unusual merits.

A cast including Lloyd Hughes as the son, Claire MacDowell as the mother, Betty Ross Clarke as the girl, Joseph Kilgour and Betty Blythe as the more sinister characters, Andrew Arbuckle and others, were intrusted with the principal roles.

An unusual atmospheric prologue has been staged to precede the unrolling of the feature. As a comedy attraction, the latest Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton Mermaid laugh-provider, "Robinson Crusoe, Ltd.," has been added to the program.

Some Unusual Jungle Heroes at Symphony.

The fourth and final book of the massive thirty-reel animal production, "The Miracles of the Jungle," starts today at the Symphony, where the other three books have been shown.

The showing of such a production in a series of four eight-reel books is something that has never been attempted before, and the success of the idea is being eagerly watched by other cities.

Seldom has an animal picture been produced that had such an appeal, and despite adverse weather conditions and counter-attractions, "The Miracles of the Jungle" has gained steadily every day since the first performance of the picture.

In the fourth book the animals are tigers, elephants, chimpanzees and 110 alligators. Principal comedy honors go once more to Mike and Mary, the chimpanzees, and to little Nikko, the monkey. If anything, the fourth book, which is the "punch" book of the production, is more interesting than the preceding three.

Some of the most thrilling of the scenes are where the "heavy" meets his fate in the lion's lair, and where Gunda, the elephant, saves the life of her master by protecting him with her huge bulk from the bullets of the "heavy."

Mike and Mary offer a novel idea in the manner of rescuing their friends and contribute more comedy than ever.

One of the principal animal actors in the fourth book is Zero, the striped Bengal tiger, that was reared by an Airedale dog. When Zero was born it was discovered that his mother could not nurse him, so an Airedale was secured to act as foster mother, and for months the little tiger followed the dog around the studio. Even when Zero weighed 200 pounds and was all bone and steel muscle, the lighter animal who has nursed him, still bossed him about the cage. No matter how ferocious Zero was to trainers and others who endeavored to put him through his paces, a cuff from the Airedale was enough to cow his spirit.

It was Zero who attacked Frederick Peters during a scene, and Peters, who has the role of the giant Zulu, barely escaped with his life. In the action of the story, Zero was supposed to attack the actor, but when the animal leaped and landed on the shoulders of the huge player, the bare body of the actor offered no safe hold for the claws of the tiger. So, the three-inch claws were unsheathed and raked the shoulders of the actor for a number of inches.

"TAILOR-MADE MAN" REFUSES TO MOVE ON.

"A Tailor-Made Man," the phenomenal comedy success which has been holding the boards at the Morosco, enters its sixth big week with today's matinee.

Seldom has a play been received with such enthusiasm by theater-going Angelenos. To begin with the play is one of the best comedies of the past three seasons. It was written by Harry James Smith, one of the foremost American playwrights.

The Morosco company gives the piece a splendid presentation. Gayne Whitman is given an opportunity for excellent comedy interpretations, and he achieves singular success in the principal role. Bertha Mann, charming leading lady, also scores heavily in the piece. The principals are well supported by the regular Morosco favorites, in addition to a number of new people who appear in the piece, owing to the size of the cast.

MUCH MUSIC AT THE METRO.

If you're going to produce a photoplay with a musical theme as its main plot, it's a good idea to surround it with musical people.

That's what Maxwell Karger did with "The Golden Gift," which Alice Lake and her Metro company are now working on. It was suddenly discovered that almost every actor in the cast is a musician. We may, therefore, confidently look for "real atmosphere" in "The Golden Gift."

For three years previous to making her picture debut, Miss Lake was a student of the piano, her ambition being to become a piano instructor. While she finds but little time for practice, the star enjoys seating herself at the instrument and playing. Any time a piano is placed on one of her sets her company can be assured of good music between scenes.

Director Karger gained nationwide repute as a violinist before taking up his screen work. For several years he served as first violinist for the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York, previous to which he acted as leader of an orchestra.

John Bowers, who is playing opposite Miss Lake in the leading male role in the production, has made a study of stringed instruments since boyhood. His favorite is the guitar, which he keeps with him even during his hours of work at the studio. Also, he can play the banjo and mandolin with equal skill. Mr. Bowers delights, between scenes, to permit his fellow-players to call the names of popular airs for him to play.

Harriet Hammond, who is enacting the leading feminine role in the supporting cast, also is a pianist of ability. Before she decided to don a bathing suit and appear in screen comedies she was participating in recitals and concerts and gaining prominence in this field of endeavor.

Josef Swickard, who also has an important part in the production, was a violinist in his "home town" orchestra. He has not forgotten his early training and the instrument still is one of his hobbies.

It was through coincidence rather than intent that the principal players, as well as the director of this production, which deals with the adventures of an operatic star, were musicians. Musical instruments of all kinds, found to be used only as stage props, have been put to practical use during the filming of the story.

The photoplay was written by June Mathis and Florence Hein, of Metro's West Coast story-producing department, both of whom have been lifelong students of music. The possibilities of the story were developed, says Mr. Karger, largely because of this interest in its vital theme.

How the Angels Might Interpret Our Home Life.

Next week's vaudeville headliner at the New Pantages gives us intimate and alluring glimpses into a gay little home accommodating Frank Sinclair, Mary Collins and Cliff Dixon.

Added to these regular occupants of the joyous domicile are a bunch of their friends who unite to make things interesting for both the audience and the gay little home-makers.

In "A Gay Little Home" we are permitted to see on the stage a few scenes that would be unfolded to the angels if the roofs were removed from some of those beautiful Hollywood bungalows where our movie stars make their abode.

"A Gay Little Home" was staged by George Choos under the personal direction of Mr. Pantages during his recent visit to New York.

The LeGrohs, three men and a woman, prove that the impossible can be done with the human limbs and body by painstaking practice. Beside their elastic gymnastics, the LeGrohs are graduates in comedy and past masters in pantomime.

"Harmonyland," beside its other attractions, offers a young trap drummer who recalls Ethel McDonough. Mason and Berry are two Dixie lads. Henry and Adelaide are also listed, and Adonis, with his clever dog, return to delight old and young.

"The Last Door," a Selznick picture in which Eugene O'Brien is featured with Martha Mansfield, is probably the best of O'Brien's recent pictures. Action from start to finish—a five-reel film whose events occur between dinner and breakfast indicates speed—is the predominating characteristic of "The Last Door." The story was written by Ralph Ince especially for Mr. O'Brien and Miss Mansfield.

LINK LIVES BUT NOT IN SAME ROLES.

Many Married Folk Agree on Everything but Acting Together in Films.

Not all wives or husbands of motion-picture celebrities care to appear on the screen, either with or without their other halves.

Natalie Talmadge Keaton is quite content to stay at Buster's Hollywood home. "Managing Buster's home is enough of a task," says Natalie. "I'm through with pictures."

Mary Hay, wife of Dick Barthelmess, busies herself with household duties at Mamaroneck, N. Y., while husband Dick is up in the West Virginia mountains filming "Tol'ble David."

Rudolph Cameron is too busy attending to the managerial details of the Anita Stewart company to play roles in his wife's company.

John Pialoglu, the young New York tobacco "king" who married Constance Talmadge, is much too occupied with the fragrant products of Macedonia and the south shore of the Black Sea and our own Virginia, to bother about a picture career.

Norma Talmadge, in real life the wife of Joseph M. Schenck, head of the Constance and Norma Talmadge and Buster Keaton organizations, has invited friend husband to take part in her pictures on many occasions, but Mr. Schenck has always excused himself on the ground that his varied interests required too much of his attention.

Miriam Cooper, who appears in many photoplays made by her husband, R. A. Walsh, declares that "R. A." likes producing and directing too well to go back to acting.

"I would like to retire myself," says Miss Cooper, "but when 'R. A.' can't find the type he wants for his parts he calls upon me and gets real 'riled' when I protest that I would rather stay home and boss the maid."

Dorothy Phillips, wife of Allen Holubar, producer of "Man, Woman, Marriage," says that Mr. Holubar would rather handle a director's cornucopia than act in his own pictures.

"It would be impossible for Mr. Holubar to direct, attend to the business details of his organization, engage players, edit films, adapt plays and novels, plan effects, hunt locations, and be 'the big boss' of his productions, if he were also playing in pictures," says Miss Phillips. "He is wise in not trying to do too many things."

On the other hand Carter De Haven and wife, Flora Parker De Haven, are always seen together in their photoplays. They have been inseparable on the vaudeville and dramatic stage. Even though Mrs. De Haven busies herself constantly with the De Haven home in Hollywood, she manages to play roles in her husband's productions.

Mobs, Battles and Chariot Races to Thrill.

Fox Spectacle is Booked at Auditorium.

Betty Blythe Has Role of Famous Heroine.

Yet again is the spectacular drama, elaborated with historical backgrounds and legendary interest, to assume sway in the domain of the film theater. "The Queen of Sheba," made under the direction of J. Gordon Edwards at the Fox studios here, will have its first local showing, beginning September 5, at Philharmonic Auditorium. The presentation promises to be one of the principal motion-picture events of the year.

For more than a year the spectacle was in process of filming at the studios in Hollywood. The majority of people in this city were acquainted with the activity, because, in motoring past the Fox "lot" on Western avenue, they could view the upper sections of the temples and palaces built for the processions and battle scenes.

More than 3000 persons were at times engaged in the mob scenes. These episodes gained further splendor through the presence of hundreds of orientally caparisoned horses and scores of chariots.

"The Queen of Sheba" is said to be one of the most picturesque films in its costuming. Particularly beautiful are the creations worn by Betty Blythe, who plays the title role.

The chariot race is one of the most vivid episodes in the picture drama. So, too, are the great battle scenes, where horses and chariots were actually driven up into a great fortified tower during the warlike engagement.

So realistically were these scenes carried out that several of the extras who wielded swords and battle axes, became so excited over the combat that they could hardy be separated.

Miss Blythe has the most prominent role of her career in this production. She is said to give a remarkably romantic interpretation, while achieving the exotic in her garb and make-up.

The main interest is in the love story of the Queen, but there are also the sinister political elements of greed, envy and jealousy.

An interpretative musical score has been arranged for the showing, to be played by a specially engaged orchestra.

Mabel Normand,

One of the featured players in "Tillie's Punctured Romance," which is being revived at Miller's Theater.

MILLER'S PROMISES MUCH FAST COMEDY.

Another great fun show will open at Miller's today.

It consists of the six-reel Mack Sennett feature comedy, "Tillie's Punctured Romance," which has been proclaimed one of the greatest comedies of its kind ever produced. Charlie Chaplin, Mabel Normand, Marie Dressler, Mack Swain, Charles Conklin and a host of other funmakers, all of whom have since become stars in their own right, appear in this production, which is said to contain as many laughs as there are feet of film.

The other side of this double laugh-show introduces Harold Lloyd, the bespectacled hero of Giggleland, in "High and Dizzy," said to be his funniest and admitted to be the most thrilling feature he has ever appeared in.

The usual news, scenic and musical features complete the program.

"DOGS IS DOGS."

Mix Intimates to Stranger That They Have Their Place.

The public know Tom Mix as a man of action, but his friends know him as a man who will say what he thinks, anywhere, any place or any time. Tom, as everybody knows, is a great lover of horses—especially Tony—and of dogs, but he is firm in his belief that the place for dogs is in a barn or a ranch corral.

A few days ago, Mix went down to the Salt Lake Route station to meet an incoming friend of Mrs. Mix. As he stood chatting with Charlie Pike, the urbane Salt Lake Route passenger agent, the train rolled in. From it alighted a youthful matron, who rushed wildly across the platform to a waiting limousine.

From the rear seat the young woman rapturously seized a small toy bull dog, and wildly imprinted a dozen lavish kisses on its damp nose. This finished, she turned and kissed her husband. This was too much for Mix. Politely removing his spreading hat, Mix approached the young woman—a perfect stranger—and said:

"Why in hell didn't you have the folks bring the cow along? I know she would have been glad to see you."

The husband offered no protest as Tom walked away to join his wife and her just-arrived friend. "You didn't bring a dog with you?" querried the film star. "You didn't? That's good. Now we'll go home."

Claire McDowell.

GRAY HAIR NOT INSIGNIA NOW.

call the picture of about two years ago. May Allison, Conrad Nagel, Frank Mayo, Enid Bennett, Marguerite De la Motte, Lloyd Hughes, Carl Gantvoort have been among her children.

Never, though, has she felt quite as much at home in a mother role as in the new Ince picture, she declares, because in this instance there was nothing to detract from a natural expression of herself. She played the part as she felt it herself, as a mother.

"Just because I have been a mother is, however, no reason why I should play the mother role well," she emphasized. "That doesn't follow at all. One of the best mothers on the screen is dear Kate Bruce. She is a sweet lovable spinster in real life, but she has the mother instinct more strongly than lots of women who have brought children into the world. I believe that this instinct is a gift. Either a woman possesses it or she doesn't. Some women can go through the experience of becoming mothers, and yet never acquire it."

Of course, Miss McDowell began playing in the pictures long before she commenced interpreting the mother. In fact, her career dates from the famous old Biograph days—which corresponds to the Mayflower era in America history. For many years she assumed straight leads and second leads, with character parts now and then. But she seems to have fulfilled her destiny in this newer era of idealizing motherhood.

In "Mother O' Mine" she pictures a beautiful devotion to a son who is imprisoned through deceit and treachery incident on the murder of his father. In the final scenes the mother and the mistress of the father have a terrific tussel, the result of which is that the latter confesses her own guilt and frees the boy whom she had maligned.

Betty Compson the Attraction at California.

The new Betty Compson production which opens today at the California is a Goldwyn release entitled "For Those We Love." The story, written by Perley Poore Sheehan, was directed by Arthur Rosson.

In this picture Miss Compson will be seen as a simple country girl, too unsophisticated to know the dangers she runs in befriending one of the evil characters of the town. However, her unguarded faith is justified by the change her friendship effects in his life.

The unprincipled gambler realizes that everyone is not spurred by the same motives of gain that have led him and his companions on their precarious ways. Of course, he falls in love with the girl, who has never felt other than a friendly interest in him. With the realization that she is beyond him, the real test of his character is made.

Miss Compson's good looks, as well as her compelling personality and charm, are said to be more than ever in this pictorial melodrama, which is made of the stuff of life.

An unusually fine cast has been chosen to support the star. Lon Chancey has the role of the gambler. Richard Rosson, brother of Arthur Rosson, director of the picture, has an important part as the knavish brother of the heroine, and Frank Campeau, an actor of long experience, plays the part of an unregenerate gambler.

Other seasoned actors in the company are Harry Duffield, Camille Astor, Bert Woodruff and Gearge Cooper.

Kathleen Kirkham, well known stage and screen star, is featured in person in the sensational one-act play, "The Retake," written by Joseph A. Jackson, Goldwyn publicity man, and produced under the personal direction of Paul Bern of the Goldwyn forces.

DE LUXE PHOTOPLAY "MADE IN HEAVEN."

"Made in Heaven," with Tom Moore in the leading role, is the offering at the De Luxe Theater, for three days, beginning today. This Goldwyn photoplay presents the ever-genial Tom Moore in a humorous character study. As in his recent picture, "Hold Your Horses," he is an Irish immigrant who naturally becomes a servant of the city.

In "Made in Heaven" Mr. Moore is a fireman who rises eventually to a position of affluence and power. The plot centers about a romantic marriage the young fireman contracts shortly after his arrival, and the attempts of the bride to continue playing the debutante. The difficulties in which she finds herself when a persistent suitor has to be appeased, together with the silence she has imposed upon her husband, create situations that make the play a sure cure for the tiredness of the tired business man and his wife.

Added to an unusually good comedy story is the fact that Tom Moore is supported by two leading ladies, Helene Chadwick as his romantic wife and Molly Malone as her friend, as incorrigible matchmaker. In the cast also is Miss Rene Adoree, whom Moore met while making "Made in Heaven." Shortly after the picture was finished, Miss Adoree and Tom Moore were married, pointing the moral of the photoplay that some marriages are "Made in Heaven."

"Home Talent," the special Mack Sennett comedy, will be featured as an added attraction.

ALL ABOUT ALICE.

Meteoric Advance of Miss Terry in Motion Pictures.

The things that happened to a certain Alice in Wonderland were no more to be gasped at than the sudden pictorial elevation which came to the golden-haired Alice Terry, when Rex Ingram took her from screen obscurity and placed her in the leading role of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." Her success was instantaneous, and he next cast her for the feminine lead in "The Conquering Power," which is now playing at the Mission.

Alice Terry is 18 years old. Nature has dowered her with beauty, rather above medium height, her figure is lissome and graceful. She is of the type which painters are reputed to go mad about. An oval face, crowned with a mass of spun-gold hair, eyes of Alice-blue, nose of Grecian contour and a mouth that always wants a smile.

Twelve months ago Alice Terry was attending high school in Central Illinois. She came to Los Angeles on a pleasure trip with her parents, first as a curiosity-seeker and later as a devotee of the art. Then she received an offer. It was an offer which stunned her, though it was but for a small part. "She did atmosphere." But she "registered," and from that time on she was busy. Her first real part was in Ingram's "Hearts Are Trumps." Then came her success in "The Four Horsemen," and her fame was made. In "The Conquering Power" she essays the role of Eugenie Grandet, winsome daughter of an old miser.

Playing opposite her is Rudolph Valentino, who also portrayed the leading male role of "The Four Horsemen." "The Conquering Power" enters its second week at the Mission next Wednesday.

HE IS YOUNG YET.

The teacher of the primary class in the First Presbyterian Sunday school in Franklin, after opening all the windows and trying to see that the tots were comfortable said: "Now I want all of you to tell me of something we have to be thankful for this morning."

Up went all the chubby hands, but one youngster was more anxious than the rest.

"All right, Bobbie," she said, "what do you think we should be most thankful for?"

"For the nice hot weather," he replied.

With the thermometers registering around 90 the teacher just smiled.—[Indianapolis News.

SEE NEW FILM HUB IN WEST.

Move to Make Distributing Center Here Gains.

Plan May Chiefly Affect the Independent Group.

Gap Between Interests in Present System.

A new movement is in progress in the film world to take the palm of supremacy away from New York by establishing Los Angeles as a distributing center for pictures. The scheme is not new, but it has possibly never before assumed such definite shape, and there is a greater likelihood of the project reaching fulfillment now than ever before.

Not long ago, it was apparent that one of the largest distributors in New York had in mind the creation of a separate, if minor, distributing agency in Los Angeles. This was heralded when a suite of nine offices was leased in one of the downtown buildings, but then came a tension in the money market and the plan went in abeyance.

Of late, again, one concern has recently made definite announcement of a policy of western distribution, while several others are contemplating it as a possibility. So the project is on foot once more.

There are three cardinal reasons advanced by local men interested in this movement as to why Los Angeles should be the distributing center of the world:

(1.) Closer co-operation between producing and selling departments.

(2.) Personal supervision of laboratory work.

(3.) Retention in Los Angeles of the profit derived from distribution.

The last specified item is, perhaps, the most important feature, for, when it is stated that the distributing charge against a picture ranges from 20 to 40 per cent of the gross it will be seen that Los Angeles bank clearings would be swelled in a considerable degree.

While there are several big laboratories near the eastern coast one of the largest, which makes thousands of positive prints, is located in Chicago. This company has only recently built a Hollywood laboratory at a cost of some hundred thousand dollars.

So important has become the tinting, toning and printing of positive film from the negatives made in Los Angeles that it is a common practice to send a representative of the producers to New York or Chicago to see that the work is done right.

GAP NOT BRIDGED.

The gap between the producing and the selling departments has never been successfully bridged, for the office of distribution and that of production are probably more widely separated than in any other line.

A glance at the personnel of several of the releasing concerns, it is believed, shows how, through co-operation, distribution could be handled as well from Los Angeles as New York. The Associated Producers comprise Thomas H. Ince, Maurice Tourneur, Marshall Neilan, Mack Sennett and J. Parker Read, Jr. Necessarily most of the decisions of policy in this corporation must be made in Los Angeles.

The United Artists Corporation is composed of Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin and D. W. Griffith. Hiram Abrams is the president, but policy questions are largely decided by the four artists, only one of whom, D. W. Griffith, is now working in the East.

F. B. Warren has just recently organized another distributing corporation, and while his office address is New York he does most of his business in Los Angeles.

THE INDEPENDENTS.

But it is in the independent field that the greatest likelihood of a permanent releasing organization in Los Angeles is possible, it is contended. Some of the biggest money-making pictures of the last few years have been handled, that is, distributed from Los Angeles, those interested point out.

Heading this list, of course, is Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation." This was financed principally in Los Angeles and a number of fortunes were made by those who bought the State rights.

Several years ago Sol Lesser saw possibilities in film distribution. He bought State rights on such pictures as "The Spoilers," "Hearts of the World," for twenty-two States; "Yankee Doodle in Berlin," and numerous other independently produced pictures. Several additional pictures that come to mind and which were distributed from Los Angeles were "Ramona," "Eyes of the World" and "Intolerance."

Lesser believed, as film men still believe, that it was necessary to maintain a New York office, but this was closed by him recently.

FROM WESTERN HUB.

With the increasing number of independently-produced pictures in Los Angeles, Irving M. Lesser organized the Western Pictures Exploitation Company, which maintains offices exclusively in this city. All of the forthcoming Jackie Coogan productions will be distributed through this organization, as well as a series of eight five-reel pictures being produced by the Doubleday Production Company with Lester Cuneo as the star; and a series of David Butler productions.

Through an alliance formed with Mike Rosenberg of Seattle the activities of the Lesser enterprises will be enlarged. Rosenberg occupies in the Northwest relatively the same position that Sol Lesser does in California. Rosenberg is associated with the Jensen and Von Herberg Company, operating a string of theaters, and he is the head of the De Luxe Film Corporation of Seattle.

There has never been, any substantial reason for New York being the single point of distribution for pictures except that, up to the last year or so, picture producers looked to New York for their financial backing. This point of advantage is being gradually overcome by local investors, who are studying more closely the opportunities for profit.

Merely to put money into "a picture proposition" some investors have discovered is not the answer to the problem. Heretofore it has been necessary for a producer with a completed picture to go to New York at heavy expense, maintaining his local organization the while, to dicker the best possible distributing terms. Rather than add considerably more money to his investment the producer ofttimes has accepted terms below this expectation.

Gloria Swanson,

Who is gaining success in a new type of interpretation in "The Great Moment" at the Rialto.

"THE GREAT MOMENT."

Elinor Glyn's Photoplay Draws Large Crowds at Rialto.

With a fortnight of success to its credit, Elinor Glyn's "The Great Moment," entering its third week at Grauman's Rialto today, is showing indications of creating as much discussion as did "Three Weeks."

Particularly is this true of the snake-bite incident of the production, about which a great deal is being remarked, pro and con. Filmed truthfully, with a bona fide rattlesnake leaping toward the shoulder of Gloria Swanson, this passage stands out as one of the most daring episodes ever attempted on the screen.

Startling throughout, the locale of "The Great Moment" surges from semibarbaric revels in Petrograd to the solitude of the Rocky Mountains, and finally to gorgeous happenings in Washington, D. C.

Sam Wood, who directed, was assisted through the entire course of filming by Mrs. Glyn, who offered numerous valuable suggestions.

Besides Gloria Swanson, the cast numbers several of the most prominent players in the cinema: Milton Sills, Alec B. Francis, F. R. Butler, Arthur Hull, Raymond Brathwayt, Helen Dunbar, Clarence Geldart, Julia Faye and Ann Grigg.

The accompanying features to "The Great Moment" are an original dance creation by Olive Ann Alcorn, "most perfect woman;" film novelties; Herbert Burland's organ solo, "Lonesome Nights;" Allen Lane's rendition of "Gypsy Love Song" at the Wurlitzer, and the interpretative musical score.

BIBLICAL FILMS SOON ON SCREEN.

Episodes from Creation to Deluge to Release in Early Fall.

Authentic, it is said, as to detail and of nonsectarian character, the first episode of the biblical pictures made by the Sacred Films Corporation are to reach the screen by October 1. The initial reels in the series visualize four different narratives taken from the Old Testament. These include Creation, Cain and Abel, Noah and the Ark and the Deluge. They will be followed shortly, it is announced, by the stories of Abraham and Isaac and Joseph and Jacob.

The pictures were filmed at Burbank under the direction of Raymond Wells. The theological authenticity of the stories is sponsored for by a group of clergymen, who endeavored to reach a noncontroversial meeting ground in the assistance they gave. The actual research work was done by Dr. Edgar James Banks, archaeologist, who was field director in an expedition sent out by the University of Chicago to excavate in the Babylonian city of Bismya in 1903.

Many educational institutions have arranged for showings of the films, it is stated, including the Academy of Music of Philadelphia, the Society for Visual Education of Chicago, the Church Club of New York and various ministerial organizations.

ARTIST LIKES LABOR ON LOT.

the insouciance and charm of the ingenue.

When he steps out on a set he is again surrounded by lovely women who have the charm of the ingenue—but these are alive, can move about, can be made to laugh or weep at his command. They're not stately Junos, but graceful nymphs. An artist directs them, and we look for a series of pictures as rhythmically composed as paintings in a gallery.

AN ART UNITY.

"The pictures in a photoplay," said Mr. Stanlaws, "should all be made in the key of the story, in the tone, grave or gay, of the episode. The hard white light should be used with caution, but when rightly placed it gives accent and contrast.

"Many scenes need a tender, enveloping atmosphere—suffused and delicate grays, hints of color. Strong situations need, of course, strong contrasts, decisive handlings. That's the painter's method, and it is equally the method of the motion-picture director, who's both painter and dramatist."

That admirable screen actress, Betty Compson, has the leading role in "At the End of the World," and she also will assume the most important feminine role, that of Lady Babbie, in the picture Mr. Stanlaws is just about to begin work upon, J. M. Barrie's "The Little Minister."

Being Scotch and knowing Thrums, Penrhyn Stanlaws will enjoy himself hugely with "The Little Minister," and we cannot doubt that his enjoyment will be passed on to us in the form of beautiful art.

"The Woman in the Case," filmed from the drama by Clyde Fitch, was completed this week. Its appearance will be looked for with interest.

MUSIC TALENT PLEASES.

The Community Service Players were a feature of the entertainment program at the Industrial Exposition Thursday night, with a band concert and several special attractions. Among those who appeared were Marian Tracie Whiting, a versatile musical entertainer of concert and vaudeville stage; Wee Jessie Smillie, a dancer find of the Community Players; Lillian Byington, soprano, and Ed Shank, baritone. Director Jack Wald has augmented the band with several new players and soloists.

Nothing to Say.

"Tobe, what's that you're saying about your bride?"

"Remember, you took her for better or worse."

"I ain't kicking much, suh. It might have been worse."—[Louisville Courier-Journal.

Miss Thelma Thelmare,

Who will take part in the musical presentation at the Cinderella Roof.

THELMA THELMARE AT CINDERELLA ROOF.

The outstanding feature at the Cinderella Roof for the coming week is Mlle. Thelma Thelmare, dramatic soprano, with a voice of phenomenal power and range.

Mlle. Thelmare has been singing on the roof for the past week, winning unstinted applause and appreciation. It was her first appearance in the Far West, and no one seemed to know anything about her. Then it was learned that she was with the Metropolitan two years ago, and with the Chicago Grand Opera Company, under Mary Garden, last year. She also sang at Shanley's, in New York, for twenty-six consecutive weeks.

The first woman to pass the final examination for the English bar is a twenty-three-year-old girl of Hull. She cannot be called to the bar, however, until she has put in twelve terms, which will not be till next year.

Ethel Clayton Will Allure in "Wealth."

William D. Taylor's latest production for Paramount Pictures, "Wealth," with Ethel Clayton and Herbert Rawlinson enacting the leading roles, is the attraction which begins a week's engagement at Tally's Broadway on Monday.

Mr. Taylor has given this Cosmo Hamilton story a remarkably complete and satisfying production. It is a drama of the care-free life of New York's Greenwich Village. Of the mad, futile life of New York's millionaires, and of the finer, truer life that a young girl found when she gave up wealth and fame and sought for love.

Miss Clayton has proved herself a versatile and finished actress, as delightful in light comedy scenes as she is in more dramatic interpretation. In "Wealth" she stands at the peak of her art, and with Herbert Rawlinson, long a star in his own right, as support for Miss Clayton in this production, the patrons of Tally's Broadway will look for unusual entertainment next week, and they will not be disappointed.

"Dog-gone Kids," a funny comedy, new news events and a pleasing musical program are the added attractions for the week.

WRITES NOVEL OF LOVE AND REGENERATION.

Since her arrival in Los Angeles, Elinor Glyn, author of "The Great Moment" at the Rialto, has written a new novel which, at present, is in the mail on its way to a New York publisher, it became known yesterday.

"It is called 'Renaissance.' The story carries the identical general interest that 'Three Weeks' did," said Miss Glyn. "The story appertains to the regeneration of a young Englishman who has lost an eye and a leg in the war. That regeneration is brought about by his love for a girl, through her noble, noble character. It deals with the effects of the war, but it isn't a war-time story.

"It is told in the form of an autobiography. While I was working on 'Renaissance' my thoughts were those of a man. At times, in fact, I felt as if I had actually lost an eye and a leg. The story is psychological in action. It is the innermost expression of a man's feelings and an analysis of women and their relations with men.

"The father of the hero is an Englishman; and the mother a French woman, whose mother in turn is an American woman."

Asked whether she thought to film this novel, Mrs. Glyn replied: "No, I think 'Renaissance' is too psychological in action to be motion-picture material."

California THEATRE

Betty Compson once again lives up to her reputation. Her beauty reigns supreme upon the screen—loveliness, plus a wealth of personality and charm, endows her with a power to make audiences live through every dramatic scene.

LIECHTENSTEIN BUBBLE BURST.

Principality's Dreams of Great Wealth Fade.

Venture in Postage Stamps Leaves Deficit.

Instead of No Taxes, Heavy Levy is Made.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BERLIN, Aug. 20.—How the principality of Liechtenstein, swept by an epidemic of speculation in postage stamps, was induced to change its currency from an Austrian crown basis to one of Swiss francs and, frenzied by failure to realize its speculative hopes, stood for several weeks upon the brink of a revolution, is a romance that hitherto received no publicity.

The Liechtenstein government, on the advice, of its financial and business councilor, an Austrian privy-counsilor, Dr. Josef Peer, gave to an Austrian business corporation exclusive rights to print and sell the Liechtenstein postage stamps to stamp dealers throughout the world, the principality retaining a profit-sharing interest in the contract.

PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

The Austrian consortium, calling itself "The Philatelic Sales Department of the Liechtenstein Principality Postage Stamps" in the endeavor to win for itself popular support of its concession, began a publicity campaign throughout the principality advertising the profits that could be derived from its business.

Untold wealth was promised the community. Taxes were soon to be abolished. Electrical power stations were to be established from the money made out of postage stamps.

As an asset in its sales and profiteering campaign, the "The Philatelic Sales Department of the Liechenstein Principality Postage Stamps" induced the government to change its currency to the Swiss franc basis, thus heavily increasing the face value of these stamps for retail sales purposes in foreign countries.

EXCITEMENT INTENSE.

For two years popular excitement was intense and the interest on the part of small shopkeepers, mechanics, and peasants in the popular indoor sport of stamp collecting was indescribable. The population was busily occupied with its stamp speculation. Everywhere one heard bits of conversation about "watermarks," "perforates," "gold standard and postal value," "profits in kronen exchange," etc., etc.

Everywhere, people were dreaming of futures in luxury and idleness, when last December, the Liechtenstein legislature met, and balancing the state budget, found increases in the taxation rates.

The crash was quick and sudden. The popular fury knew no bounds. Protest demonstrations were held everywhere. Resolutions were passed, committees were formed to take action, circulars expressing the popular indignation were printed and distributed.

The government grew uneasy. "Prince and Fatherland" were declared to be in danger. A "general staff" for peace and order was established. Warrants for the arrest of leaders and agitators were issued.

PROCESSION OF PROTEST.

While the government was still busily occupied in preparations for its own defense, a large community procession of protest was organized and marched upon the palace, and, to the astonishment of the startled court, came not upon a mission of dethronement, but to pay their respects and give expressions of honor to their Prince, petitioning him to end the scandalous postage-stamp "normalcy" by exiling the arch deceiver, Royal Privy Councilor Dr. Josef Peer. With the granting of this request, peace was again restored to Liechtenstein.

So ended the Liechtensteiner's South Sea bubble and dreams of luxury and Lydian delights. Stamp collecting has become most unpopular as an indoor sport throughout the length and breadth of the principality of Liechtenstein.

SIZE OF GREENLAND.

Would Cover United States From Canada to Mexico.

"The largest island in the world (if Australia be classed as a continent,) the land reaching closest to the North Pole, the country harboring the northernmost civilized community, and the one land mass where conditions of the great ice age are now dominant—such is Greenland," says a bulletin issued by the National Geographic Society in connection with a visit now being made by the King of Denmark to his bleak American colony.

"Mercator of map fame has unwittingly confused the mind of the world in regard to Greenland," continues the bulletin. "Because the sphere is flattened out on many maps as though its surface were stretched, Greenland, vast as it is, is made to appear many times larger. It is as though the country were reflected in one of the mirrors set up at country fairs to make the thin appear fat.

"But viewed properly, the great northern island bulks large enough to command respect. If its northernmost point were placed at the Canadian border in North Dakota, its southernmost point would reach to the mouth of the Rio Grande, the southern extremity of Texas.

Orpheum Retains Its Headliners Another Week.

When you get hold of a good thing, hold to it tight. That's the rule that the Orpheum is following for the coming week, for it is retaining Gus Edwards and a new edition of his song revue, and also Bronson and Baldwin, as two of its feature acts.

This makes the third week for Edwards, it is true, but even so, he has so much talent in his troupe, and it is all so versatile that he can offer almost a complete new show, and he will. Sandy will be in the act again, and Gus expects to introduce some of his locally acquired proteges, notably the Connor twins, Velma and Thelma, two vivacious youngsters of beauty and ability in the stepping and singing line, as well as some others who have been added to his troupe from the Coast beauty ranks.

Jean Adair, who is the featured newcomer, will be seen in a clever playlet, "Any Home," wherein the lights and shades of domestic bliss (and otherwise) will be portrayed. Miss Adair has been here before in two other playlets, but this third one is said to be the most entertaining and humorous of the lot. She plays the mother. Miss Adair's talent needs little adulation here.

Jack Inglis is "one of the neighbor's children," and as they usually tell a lot of what they shouldn't, it is quite likely that Jack will follow their example in his chatter and "spill the beans" of the entire block.

Billy Frawley and Edna Louise will demonstrate that "It's All a Fake," but let no one suppose that she is—or that he is, either. Jean Barrios will show some stunning gown and frock creations in the song impressions that hedge them about, and a deal of actual smartness as well. Lady Tsen Mei will sing, and as she is the only Chinese prima donna, much may be expected of her also.

Wanzer and Palmer in their clever patter act will also be on the bill, which will further include the topics of the day and the new Aesop's Fables, which are a hit.

The cut in prices will prevail right along now, to add to the joy of Orpheum going.

One Wild Week at Clune's With Bebe Daniels.

"One Wild Week," starring Bebe Daniels, will be the chief attraction at Clune's Broadway this week.

This picture gives the vivacious star another amusing "naughty girl" role of the type she best graces. This time she portrays an orphan who is brought up very strictly by a spinster aunt. The girl has such a dreary girlhood that she determines to make up for lost time as soon as she reaches her majority.

Miss Daniels has a whimsical personality and an elfish beauty which especially fit her for roles of the good-little-bad-girl type—the girl who is always up to mischief and always in trouble because of her high spirits, not because she is wantonly bad. There isn't anyone else on the screen just like Bebe Daniels. She doesn't imitate anybody and one never hears the comment, "Oh, that's just like so-and-so." Miss Daniels's expressions, gestures and manners are as individual as her beauty.

The story of a girl who never had any fun or any pretty clothes and who breaks away from stern discipline the very morning she attains her eighteenth birthday is all most amusingly told in "One Wild Week."

This lively story was written especially for the star by Frances Harmer, who confesses she is 63 years young, but who refuses to admit that she is an old lady or has old-lady ideas. In fact, she says she feels and thinks as young as ever.

Anyway, picture devotees who see the production during its run will have an opportunity to judge for themselves whether the story by the 63-year-old author has up-to-date qualities or otherwise.

Bebe Daniels is said to have a role well suited to her temperament and style. Frank Kingsley plays opposite the star, and other well-known screen players include Maym Kelso, Edwin Stevens, Frances Raymond, Edythe Chapman, Carrie Clarke Ward and "Bull" Montana.

Carmel Myers in Crook Role at the Superba.

"A Daughter of the Law," this week's attraction at the Superba, offers a swiftly moving drama declared to be one of the greatest "crook" stories screened since "Outside the Law."

It presents a fascinating picture of the underworld of New York with a beautiful girl caught in the toils of a desperate gang of criminals and compelled to participate in their villainy.

The original story of "A daughter of the Law" was written by Wadsworth Camp from the record of the metropolitan police department. It will be recalled as "The Black Cap," a story which appeared in a popular magazine and aroused interest throughout the country.

In the leading role, Carmel Meyers is said to have a characterization of unusual charm and appeal, portraying a young nd talented girl, reared in an atmosphere of refinement, who suddenly finds herself an associate of criminals and frequenting of her own accord the underworld of a large city.

How she becomes involved in the meshes of the criminal gang and how later she extricates herself and assists in bringing the group of notorious gangsters to justice forms the theme of the picture, which has many thrilling incidents, an interesting thread of mystery and intrigue, and speeds to a conclusion as unexpected as it is terrific in its force.

Jack O'Brien, who plays opposite the star, portrays the role of Jim Garth, a handsome secret service man engaged in running down the criminals. The romance between him and Nora Hays, the young heroine of the story, forms one of the appealing situations in the dramatic plot.

In addition to the feature picture, the Superba for this week offers several other interesting attractions.

Bertha Fiske,

Who portrays the role of Mary Magdalen in Pilgrimage Play.

TREMENDOUS SUCCESS OF PILGRIMAGE PLAY.

ATTENDANCE FAR AHEAD OF ALL RECORDS AT ITS SHOWING A YEAR AGO.

With the opening of the seventh big week of the Pilgrimage Play tomorrow at El Camino Real Theater, in Hollywood, the second annual production of this dramatic and beautiful Passion Play is outrunning the first production of 1920, which was only a six weeks' season.

Definite announcement was made yesterday that there will be only two weeks more of the production.

The demand for seats in the picturesque little open air theater in the Hollywood hills is pouring in from every section of Los Angeles city and county, from practically every point in Southern California, and from visitors from almost every point in the world. From all nations they have been flocking to see the Pilgrimage Play, and its fame is growing daily.

In addition to demands for pictures and stories on the play made by some of the biggest daily newspapers and magazines in the country, technical publications have been writing about the Pilgrimage Play. A new York textile trade paper published a long description and pictures of the beautiful oriental costumes worn in the play, while an automobile trade juornal wrote a laudatory article on the manner in which the parking problem had been handled at the theater in the hills.

Two special nights are already engaged for the ensuing week. Pasadena will hold her third big special night at the play on Thursday, while Long Beach will make a third pilgrimage next Friday night.

With the conclusion of the production in sight, the demand for seats is increasing daily, and directors of the Pilgrimage Play are anticipating a big week there beginning tomorrow night.

Alhambra Shows Colleen Moore in Strong Story.

Following its release throughout the country as a high-class road attraction, Hugh E. Dierker's photodrama, "When Dawn Came," is now showing at the Alhambra for the first time at popular prices.

One of the most significant and outstanding features of this seven-reeler is its timeliness, coming as it does with the nationwide movement for clean films and the interchurch campaign.

The theme of "When Dawn Came" depicts on the screen the redemption of a lost soul, through the love of a blind girl for an ideal. Seldom, if ever, it is said, has a photodrama called for such a variety of localities or episodes as this play. Opening in the slums; changing quickly to the haunts of the dwellers of the underworld; shifting suddenly to the beautiful California missions, including scenes of the early settlers of lower California—with episodes of "Old Jerusalem"—the spectacle called for exceptionally effective portraitures and direction.

That results have been obtained will undoubtedly be made convincing to playgoers through the criticism which has everywhere been accorded the film—opinions being generally extravagantly flattering.

The cast is headed by Colleen Moore as the blind girl. Others are L. C. Shumway, James O. Barrows, Kathleen Kirkham and William Conklin.

So distinctive is the character draying, and so widely contrasted, that entertainment of the highest quality is promised with the screening of "When Dawn Came."

The Alhambra is rounding out its screen bill with various other features.

"Ruined Lady" New Comedy at Majestic Today.

Suppose you were a girl and became engaged to a charming man who called you "darling," and after a lapse of eight years you were still engaged and you were "old girl" to a complacent bachelor who had the habit of taking things for granted. How would you feel, and what would you do?

This is the situation that confronted Ann in Frances Nordstrom's brilliant comedy, "The Ruined Lady," which Thomas Wilkes will present at the Majestic this afternoon. The play was the starring vehicle for Grace George. It made New York roar with laughter.

Ann, however, has a mind of her own, and with the aid of a friend, conceives a plan whereby the stupid Bill will be made to realize what a selfish person he really is. How the plan works out forms a series of side-splitting situations throughout three acts.

Mary Newcomb will be cast in the role of Ann, and Edward Everett Horton will return to the Wilkes cast in the role of Bill. Supporting these principals will be seen Sarah Sothern, Marie Curtis, Fred Cummings, Forrest Seabury, Stanley Taylor and two new members of the company, Eloise Clement and Gertrude Workman, the latter a Los Angeles girl.

EAST WHITTIER.

Rev. George Deshler of Boulder, Colo., has been called and has accepted the call to the East Whittier Friends Church and with his family is now en route to the Golden State. The family left Colorado, August 9 and are making a leisurely journey by auto, intending to reach East Whittier some time the latter part of the month. The congregation has been without a regular minister for some time, but has been supplied by volunteer speakers every Sunday morning. Last Sunday Rev. Eliza Armstrong Cox, well-known woman minister of the Friends church, spoke to a large congregation.

Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Carey and Mrs. Carey's mother, Mrs. H. J. Bever, have returned from a pleasant outing at Camp Baldy where they occupied the Eaby mountain cabin. Their return was hastened by a temporary illness of Mr. Carey, from which he has about recovered.

An all day meeting of the East Whittier Woman's Missionary Society was held in the church bungalow Tuesday and was well attended. The time was spent in making comforts and warm clothing to be sent September 1 to the needy people in Europe.

The George McWhirter home in East Whittier was the scene of pleasant informal entertaining Thursday when the following named guests were entertained at dinner: Mrs. C. H. Peterson and son Stanley, Mrs. A. E. Collins of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest A. Collins and two daughters, the Misses Ellen and Katherine Collins of Anaheim.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Needham and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wyatt have returned from a pleasant motor trip to Big Bear Valley. They were gone two weeks and covered many miles during their outing, much of the road being unimproved. Mr. Needham's mother, Mrs. Harriett Needham, aged 91 years, accompanied them in all their journeyings and enjoyed the trip as much as many of the younger members of the party.

Dr. Elmina Cook and daughter, Miss Mabel Cook of Los Angeles, were guests Tuesday at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Farquhar of Russell street. Rev. Mr. Farquhar and Dr. Cook are brother and sister.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Gregory have just returned from a motor trip to Santa Barbara, where they went to visit their daughter Miss Marion Gregory, who is a member of the public library staff in the Channel City.

Friends of Lawrence Estabrook will be interested to know that he is now convalescent after a recent illness.

Mrs. J. Wilson of Arlington, is a guest in the Omar Mendenhall home during the present week.

FULLERTON.

One of the most delightful social functions of the summer season took place Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Charles Earl Bacon, West Wilshire avenue, when Mrs. Bacon was hostess to sixteen of her friends at an auction-bridge party in honor of Mrs. L. B. Fairbairn of Boston, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. Frank Mulrein of this city. Invited to meet Mrs. Fairbairn were Mrs. Edwin T. Hall, Mrs. C. B. Hutchinson, Mrs. Ralph Brown, Mrs. J. T. Kimber, Mrs. Frank B. Mulrein, Mrs. F. P. Wood and her daughter, Mrs. Malcolm Wood, Mrs. F. Hyett, Mrs. J. E. Jones Jr., Mrs. E. Bege, Mrs. King and her daughter Miss Hattie Thompson, Mrs. M. H. Heldman, Mrs. James Green, Mrs. W. R. Ritchie.

The members of the Veritas club of the Methodist Sunday school to the number of fifteen, were guests Friday of Wallace Witty of West Commonwealth avenue, the occasion being the celebration of the host's birthday anniversary. A very delightful program of sports, music and literary numbers was enjoyed. The guests presented their friends with a fountain pen in testimonial of their regards.

The second mid-day luncheon was given by the members of the Fullerton Kiwanis club Tuesday in the Odd Fellows hall with forty-two men attending, including Trustee F. H. Bloodgood, Chief of Police Jernigan and Theodore Winbigler of the Santa Ana club. Trustee Bloodgood was the chief speaker, directing his remarks to the aims and aspirations of the organization and setting forth in detail the methods to be employed in accomplishing the desired ends. According to Field Representative E. W. Westcott, there are now forty-two members in the local club, eight more being required before a charter will be granted and a permanent organization can be affected.

Another popular Fullerton couple joined the ranks of the newly-weds Monday, the groom being F. Strauss of Strauss & Company, and the bride Miss Esther May Crowley, for the past two years superintendent of kindergarten work in the Fullerton high school. Felix Stine, also of Fullerton was best man. The ceremony was performed in Los Angeles, only relatives being present. Mr. and Mrs. Strauss left Tuesday evening on a honeymoon trip to coast cities, announcing that they would be at home to their friends Sept. 15. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Belle Curtis Crowley of Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben F. Dupuy of North Spadra road, have for their guests this week Mr. Dupuy's mother, Mrs. Marietta Dupuy of South Pasadena, who expects to leave in a short time for a year's visit in Ohio.

GLENDALE.

Miss Aileen Sullivan was the guest of honor at a pretty prenuptial affair, Tuesday evening, given by Misses Corinne Orff and Ruth Ryan, at the Ryan home, 332 West Acacia avenue. Bachelor buttons, over which blue birds hovered, centered the supper table. The guests included Misses Louise Ayala, Lillian Schick, Dorothy Hunt, Naomi Berrier, Isabel Yates, Ruth Spafford, Miss Sullivan, and Mmes. Harry Ryan and C. J. Orff.

Mrs. J. P. Thompson, 405 West Myrtle street, entertained informally Saturday evening, in honor of her house guest, Miss Isabel Bradler.

LA HABRA

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Davies, a recently married young couple, were hosts at a dinner of attractive appointments Thursday evening at their home on Florence street. Guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Robertson, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Peabody, Miss Hattie Robertson and Harold Robertson.

Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Hudspeth motored down to Laguna Beach last week for a fortnight's stay, expecting to be there during the moonlight pageant given by the art colony.

Prominent Los Angeles musicians and speakers attracted a very large audience at the Methodist Church Sunday evening at the concert planned by the pastor, Rev. W. Grant Smith. There was an interesting address by Mr. L. Liddecote of the Midnight Mission, and J. C. Hall gave a humorous talk. Soloists were Mrs. Helen Stadden of the First M. E. Church, Misses Louise Sherer and Mary Liddecote and Lee Arthur Meyers.

Mrs. I. F. Proud was guest of honor at a dinner party which was a birthday surprise given by her sister, Mrs. L. L. Chandler at her home on Whittier Boulevard on Monday. Guests included Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Brown of Fullerton, Mr. and Mrs. Ellwood Proud of Los Angeles, F. E. Proud, Miss Beatrice Proud and Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Leuhm. Mrs. Proud was also pleasantly surprised the following evening at her home on Central avenue, guests being a few members of the Whist Club, and the evening was spent at their favorite game.

On Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Launer were hosts at an informal gathering of friends at their hame on Central avenue. Avocado ice cream was a delectable feature of the refreshments served, and those present were Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Launer and their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Stephens of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. John Leuhm, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Hart, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Leuhm and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Launer.

CORONA.

Friends of W. D. Brockman will be interested to learn of his marriage on Saturday at Santo, Texas, to Mrs. A. V. Bofley, which was solemnized in the parlors of the Parker Hotel of that city, by the Rev. Jewell Matthews, of the Christian Church. The marriage was witnessed by a few intimate friends of the couple. Mrs. Bofley has been a resident of Santo for a number of years, where she has a large circle of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Brockman left immediately after the ceremony for Alexandria, Minnesota, where Mr. Brockman has business interests and will remain there until late in October, after which they will return to Corona to make their home.

Miss Ada Hester and Miss Verna Kinmber, teachers from Torrington, Wyoming, were week-end visitors at the Paxton home, 1018 Howard street. The ladies have spent their summer vacation and entire year's salary in touring the Pacific Coast from Seattle to Corona, and they say it was well worth the money. They were delighted with Corona and surroundings and only regret they could not stay longer. They departed Monday morning for their home, via Grand Canyon.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cunningham of 1112 Garretson avenue are rejoicing over the arrival of a nine-pound son, at their home Friday afternoon.

The stork made another visit to this city Monday, this time leaving an eight-pound daughter at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. Kitchen. Miss Mary is reported as doing very nicely.

Mrs. R. L. Willits has as her house guests this week her mother, Mrs. Edward Hyatt and Miss Carmelita Silvas, both of Sacramento, and her little neice Virginia Kerr, of Los Angeles.

VAN NUYS.

Miss Katherine Whitsett of Sherman Way recently returned from a delightful six weeks' stay at Big Bear Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Petit and Stanley Petit spent the week at Catalina.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Nordvold and son Donald left Monday for a six weeks' visit in Minneapolis, Minn.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Streeter, and Miss Clara Wheatstone, have gone to Catalina for a short stay.

Miss Mary Jane Keffer was a house-guest at the home of her aunt, Mrs. William Minech, in Alhambra, this week.

Mrs. Stanley W. Williams was the charming hostess Friday, at her delightful summer home in Topanga Canyon, when she entertained Mrs. Ida Bailey, Mrs. G. W. Scott and Miss Martha Jean Scott.

Mr. and Mrs. Vance and Olin Vance of West Sylvan street are spending several weeks in Long Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Kellogg returned this week from a pleasant vacation at Catalina.

Mr. and Mrs. William Andrew have been spending their vacation in making delightful trips to different resorts, such as Long Beach, Catalina, Laguna Beach and San Diego.

"Sleep is the Most Important of all Living Functions---the Thing that makes Life Possible."

Yet fully three-fourths of the world's adult population do not sleep well; they awake unrefreshed and unrestored, and although twice the necessary number of hours may have been given for this purpose, the result is anything but satisfactory.

The reason is that they sleep on beds that do not fit their bodies and thus make impossible the first requisites of sleep—perfect relaxation and composure. Hence the bed which fits, which makes composure and relaxation possible, is the most important of material things because it Makes Sleep Possible.

BARKER BROS.' OWN-MAKE MATTRESS on a Barker Bros.' Spring, both chosen for resiliency and tension to fit the user, form a bed that gives support at every point. It conforms to the contour of the sleeper's body in any position, and its comfortable surface invites composure, relaxation and SLEEP.

If you take advantage of the price-savings made possible by BARKER BROS.' ANNUAL AUGUST SALE—you may select your bed from Barker Bros.' ENTIRE line of SIMMONS METAL BEDS AND SPRINGS, the entire stock of Barker Bros.' BOX SPRINGS and most of the better grades of BARKER BROS.' OWN-MAKE MATTRESSES—all of which are priced at important reductions.

SOCIETY.

of little friends at a little party at Atascadero Lake. A very pleasant afternoon was spent in playing games and other amusements, at the close of which a delicious supper was served.

Mrs. John Ittner and son Nicholas returned on Friday from a ten day visit in the south.

Miss Edith Street and her mother, Mrs. Jannie Street, are spending their vacation camping at Morro.

A large party, including the William Crilley and Frank Koch families, Mrs. Minnie Marsh and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Ledeboer, Miss Mabel Anderson and family, Dr. and Mrs. L. L. Kimerer, A. L. Wood, Miss Marthalene Filley and the Victor Oldson family, spent Sunday exploring the Rincanda Cinnabar mine.

The J. W. Francis family are enjoying a real reunion, since Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tenney have arrived from New York, after a long motor trip around through Texas. Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Francis have come from Milwaukee, and Mrs. James Ash has come to join her husband and children, making a total of two daughters and a son, with their husbands and wife and two grandchildren, all visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Francis.

SOUTH PASADENA.

On Monday afternoon Mrs. H. M. Ostrander gave a most enjoyable party at her home, 1011 Magnolia street, in honor of the fourth birthday anniversary of little Miss Dorothy Werden. Fifteen small friends of the honoree responded to Mrs. Ostrander's invitation to be present on this happy occasion. The afternoon was spent with games and fancy dancing. Delicious refreshments were served, among which was a birthday cake, bearing four candles, which greeted the eyes of the little folk as they were seated at the table. It was a great day both for the guests and the young guest of honor.

The home of Mrs. Ola M. Fraser, 1688 Laurel street was the scene on Wednesday afternoon of a jolly birthday party which Mrs. Fraser gave for her son Edwin on the occasion of his thirteenth anniversary. It was decidedly a "stag" affair, and a large group of boy friends helped Edwin to celebrate in the proper fashion. Games and other amusements were enjoyed on the spacious lawn of the Fraser home until late in the afternoon, when an elaborate luncheon was spread, picnic style. This is the first function over which Mrs. Frazer has presided since her return with her family from their summer cottage at Balboa. Miss Virginia Fraser was among the local young folk who left last week to enter Mills College at the opening of the fall semester. Miss Priscilla Jane Fraser is at present the house-guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Wilder and family at Balboa.

Mrs. George D. Wheeler was hostess on Thursday at a beautifully appointed luncheon at her home, 1336 Monterey Road. Covers were arranged for Mrs. A. Roscoe of Highland Park, Mrs. D. C. Love, Mrs. A. M. Thayer, Mrs. F. S. Taylor and the hostess.

Miss Gladys Boekenoogen entertained on Monday with a luncheon at her home, 1014 Magnolia street for a group of fellow-students of Occidental College. The affair was in honor of Miss Eva Atkinson, daughter of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Ralph [illegible] of this city, who leaves next week for Seattle to visit for a short while with friends, [illegible] for China, where she will [illegible] coming year in the Christian [illegible]versity at Hang Chow. Miss Atkinson goes as Occidental's representative. It is the custom of this institution to send each year one of the students of the senior class to this great university in the Orient as teacher, and this year the honor [illegible] to Miss Atkinson, who is es[illegible] well fitted to serve her alm[illegible] in this capacity. With her go[illegible] best wishes of a host of friends who predict great success for her in the service which she has been chosen to render.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Babcock gave a delightful informal affair on Sunday evening at their home on Stratford avenue for the young people of the Oneonta Congregational Church. The time was spent with conversation and music. Mr. Babcock rendered several vocal selections. Miss Helen Blattner entertained with a number of choice readings. Light refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Babcock leave shortly for Pomona, where the former has accepted a position as teacher of music in Pomona College. They will be greatly missed in South Pasadena, where they both have been prominent in musical and club circles.

Thursday evening of last week marked the marriage of Miss Florence Erwin and Mr. Merritt Arthur Davidson, which was solemnized under the oaks of the W. C. Bondies home, 904 Mission street. The ceremony was read by the Rev. C. W. Abberley of Pasadena, in the presence of a company of fifty guests. The bride was attired in a gown of white charmeuse and rose point lace, and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and gardenias. She was attended by Miss Julia McEniry as maid of honor, who wore orchid organdie and carried Ophelia roses and purple heather. Mrs. J. L. Woods, as matron of honor, was gowned in orchid organdie and carried Columbia roses and blue larkspur. Edward Bull of Pasadena acted as best man. Following the ceremony, refreshments were served from tables beautifully decorated with yellow flowers. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Effie Erwin of Pasadena. Mr. and Mrs. Davidson will reside at their new home in Alhambra.

BREA.

Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Harold of Pasadena, who have been visiting at the home of Mrs. R. Harold, accompanied the later to Balboa Beach, where they will remain for two weeks. Other guests were, the Misses Mary and Pearl Burris, of this city.

Breaites returning from their summer vacations are Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Pickering, and Miss Myrtle Pickering, who have been in Topango Canyon for a camping trip. Miss Ruth Wise, from a visit in Los Angeles, Louis Dutcher, from San Francisco, and F. A. Criss and family, who are on their return trip by motor from Scott City, Kan.

Returning Monday from a 2000-mile motor vacation trip, J. D. Seivers and family, report a most delightful outing. While away they visited the Big Basin country, Lake Tahoe and other points along the way. Mr. Seivers has large citrus ranch interests and is glad to be home again.

Accompanying a class of boys to Santiago Canyon, where they will camp and hunt, the Rev. Dr. Marsh and David Goodwin left Thursday with the following young men: Edwin Wood, Herman Goodwin, Valney Siebenthal, Glen Rowe, Clyde Rhone, Wilson Rowe and Francis Siebenthal.

DELANO.

Mrs. Jennie Dorsey, Mrs. Jessie Cornelison and her son Robert, Elmer Dorsey and Herbert Stanley, have returned from a delightful outing at Porterville Beach.

Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Copeland, are home from a short sojourn at San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Curtis Clark are spending several weeks at Long Beach.

Mrs. Claud Richardson celebrated the fifth birthday anniversary of her twin daughters, Betty and Jean, at McFarland, by inviting a dozen youngsters to the Richardson home. The hours were from 4 to 6. Games were enjoyed on the lawn followed by a peanut hunt. The climax of the event came when the children were invited to the dining-room, where they were seated at a daintily arranged table.

VENICE.

One of the big affairs of the summer season was the birthday party given at the home of George N. Briggs, 46 Clubhouse avenue, in his honor, by a number of his friends. The Briggs residence, which is one of the beauty spots of Venice, was decorated with flowers and smilax, and two wonderful birthday cakes were prepared as a surprise for the honoree. A large number of guests were present and several musical artists rendered a fine program. Hostesses of the evening were Mrs. Jennie Berentsen, Mrs. Rose Mary Amo, Mrs. Clyde Koehler, Mrs. Jack Ripple, Miss Grace Yale and Mrs. Jensen.

Mrs. Telford Works of Selma, and Mrs. B. C. Bradley of Del Rey, are visiting with their mother, Mrs. W. T. Handley, of 927 Victoria avenue.

A birthday dinner was given in honor of Mrs. Grace M. Doty at her home, 15 Breeze avenue, on Saturday evening, which was attended by a large number of friends. Pink carnations and sprays of gypsophila together with other flowers, formed the decorations. Mrs. Doty was the recipient of many pretty gifts.

Or., Mrs. Carleton Gilbert of San Francisco, Mrs. E. Lechner of El Segundo and Mrs. Ruth Stanley of Los Angeles. The playing of 500 occupied the after-luncheon hours. The hostess was assisted in receiving by Miss Helen Venable.

Saturday was the third birthday of Master Pierce Venable, and in honor of the occasion, fifteen little tots were invited to spend the afternoon at the home of his parents Mrs. and Mrs. P. S. Venable. Balloons, and pretty toys from a grab-bag, afforded amusement for the guests. Light refreshments were served. Those who enjoyed this happy birthday party were Misses Claradell Heath, Frances Mary Ridgley, Helen Trowbridge, Helen Houston, Virginia Heath, Elizabeth Perry, Marjorie Nielsen of Santa Barbara, and Phyllis Forker of Inglewood, and Masters Jack Duffy, Ralph Dickinson, Raymond Dusendschen, Ernest Heath, Jr., David Wright and Billy Gilbert.

Miss Reta Klinger left Monday for Lake Charles, Louisiana, where she will spend a year at the home of her sister, Mrs. B. Champion.

Mrs. John Perdue spent a few days this week in Altadena with Mrs. J. I. Lechner, who is there recovering from a severe illness.

W. R. Albee returned Monday from San Francisco, where he has been visiting at the home of his son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Albee. Mrs. Albee, who accompanied him on this visit, remained for a tw oweeks' longer stay.

Mrs. W. Inman De Garmo entertained the Bridge Club at her home Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. P. S. Vanable and Mrs. Leon B. Stern were guests of the afternoon. Tea was served at the close of the playing.

BAKERSFIELD.

The engagement of Miss Belle Lindenbaum of Los Angeles and Abraham Chain of Bakersfield, has been announced to local friends of the bridegroom-to-be. Formal announcement of the event will be made Sunday, August 21, at a reception and dance at Paulais in Los Angeles. Many Bakersfield people will attend, as well as friends of the couple from San Francisco, New York, Philadelphia and Los Angeles. The date of the wedding has not been definitely announced, but it will take place in October. After an extended trip to the Hawaiian Islands, the young couple will make their home here.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Williams, 2509 Parkway, have returned from a delightful motor trip, which they have been enjoying for the past two weeks. Motoring up the valley, to San Francisco, they made the Half Moon Bay trip, then down the Coast to Long Beach, Los Angeles, and other points of interest, returning home yesterday by the Ridge Route.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Patterson have returned from a honeymoon trip to Los Angeles and Santa Barbara, and are at home at the Alta May Apartments. Mrs. Patterson was formerly Miss Florence Tibbetts.

Mrs. C. E. Ball, her two children, John and Dorothy, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Wayer of Long Beach, have departed for Chicago, where they will join Mrs. Ball's sister, Mrs. Owen C. Cover. From Chicago the party will proceed to the Cover summer home on Lake Wawasee, to spend the remainder of the season, returning to Bakersfield the latter part of September.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Sanders have returned from two weeks' stay in San Francisco and vicinity, a part of the time as the guest of Mrs. Sander's sister, Miss Evelyn Murphy.

TAFT.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard B. Clarke have returned from a honeymoon trip in the mountains and are making their home in Taft, where Mr. Clarke is assistant manager of the Security Trust Company. Mrs. Clarke was formerly Miss Mary Z. Matlack.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. McCrea of San Emidio street have as their guest Mr. McCrea's father from Oil City, Pa.

Mrs. S. Van Reed has gone to Fillmore to visit freinds. She will be away several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Kirker spent the week-end in Los Angeles visiting freinds.

WEEK'S HOSTS, GUESTS.

left today on a trip to Pismo and the Santa Cruz Mountains.

The regular meeting of the Neighbors of Woodcraft, which was to have been held Monday, has been postponed until Monday night, August 29.

Mrs. Gertrude Gilmore and son Frank left Sunday for Santa Monica. While in the south they will visit relatives in Whittier and Los Angeles.

RIALTO.

W. S. Pendleton, partner with his father, W. W. Pendleton, in Rialto's department store, is spending the week on the desert near Brawley at work with Raymond Hatton in his "Back to the Wall" a typical western drama. Mr. Pendleton, who until about a year ago, made his home in the conservative East, expects to have a great deal of varied experience. He will be in the saddle several days out on range location and will also take part in several close-up interior scenes. Mr. Pendleton's first real work in the movies was with Roscoe Arbuckle in "Freight Prepaid" at Famous-Players Lasky studios.

Tuesday night Bereans of the Methodist Sunday-school, enjoyed their annual picnic outing at Urbita Springs, San Bernardino. All being free to seek pleasure as individual fancy dictated, some took a swim in the plunge, others wandered about in the beautiful moonlight until serving of sumptuous lunch beneath tall trees brought enjoyable conclusion to the evening's festivities. About fifty Bereans had pleasure of the trip.

The beautiful ranch home of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Uts on East Etiwanda furnished settings for a charming little week-end house party, guests numbering Mrs. Charles Killen, Miss Dorothy Killen and Harold Killen of Chicago, Mrs. Meickly of Marshalltown, Iowa, Mrs. Kate Elliot and Robert Elliot of Los Angeles and Miss Margaret Munson of Alhambra.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Huston and little daughter Lucille spent Sunday in the Angel City as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Pearson. In girlhood days Mrs. Huston and Mrs. Pearson taught together in school at Upland.

REDLANDS.

The forty-ninth wedding anniversary of the Rev. and Mrs. W. P. Clancy, who have made their home here for several years, was celebrated by about twenty of their friends who gathered at the home of Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Curtiss. It was a moonlight affair in the gardens at the Curtiss home and one of the most enjoyable in every way. Dr. and Mrs. Clancy received heartiest congratulations.

Word has just been received here of the marriage of Harold Elder, popular young business man of the city, who left recently for a visit in his old home, Columbus, Mo. He was married there last week to Miss Georgianna Gallagher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Gallagher. The young people are now touring the Middle West and plan to make their home here after September 1.

The most interesting wedding of the week to society folk here was that of Miss Anna Van Winkle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Livingstone Van Winkle of San Francisco, and Dr. Kenneth L. Dole of this city. The wedding was at San Francisco last evening. During the past week Mrs. John Smith gave a large tea for her. Mrs. Dennis O'Sullivan and Mrs. Shepherd French also entertained for her.

Mrs. E. D. B. Newton entertained informally during the week in honor of Mrs. Mattie McMillan of Nashville, Tenn. Mrs. McMillan and Mrs. Newton are cousins and are greatly enjoying their visit together. Mrs. McMillan will be here several weeks.

Miss Doris McCready, who has entertained with house parties during the summer for school friends, has returned to Berkeley and will reenter the university there.

A wedding of great interest was that of Miss Alice Mitchell, popular teacher in the schools here, and Charles Hunt, well-known fruit man. They were married quietly at Riverside, a great surprise on their friends. They will make their home here.

Miss Margaret Johnson entertained at her home on Sunset Drive in honor of Miss Helen Fitzsimmons, who will soon be married to Horace Smith. She was assisted by Mrs. H. A. Johnson, Mrs. M. F. Fitzsimmons and Mrs. Grace McCready. Those present were Mrs. John Harris, Mrs. Fred Palmtag, Misses Mildred Farquhar, Beauah Paul, Doris McCready, Frances Welton, Belle Findlay, Katharine Mehaffey and Marian Glann of Ohio.

Mrs. Sarah M. Utt, formerly of this city, but now of San Diego, has announced the wedding of her daughter, Miss Anita Lee to Signor Juan Romero Rodriguez, the ceremony taking place in Minneapolis. The romance began on shipboard two years ago when Miss Utt made a trip to Spain.

A double wedding at the Christian Reformed Church, performed by the Rev. John Groen of Los Angeles, united Cornelius Viss and Miss Wilhelmina Leest and German De Vries and Miss Maetina Zoeteway. About 200 friends of the young people attended the wedding. Following the wedding there was a reception at the Leest home.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Page entertained at their home on Highland avenue, honoring Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Broughton of Dallas, Tex., who are their house guests. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Bennett Wilson of Oklahoma, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brouse, Mr. and Mrs. G. Wilson and Miss May Wilson of Riverside, Mrs. Flora Waite Collins and E. F. Waite of Long Beach and Eugene Spivey of Holtville.

Miss Lydia Browning, popular young woman of this city, and Frederick William Sinclair of San Jose have sent announcements of their wedding to friends here. They will live in the northern city.

YUCAIPA.

One of the most delightful events of the summer season was the garden fete at the home of the George Lees on Sixth avenue, Friday evening. Under the direction of Mrs. Joy Ebermayer a splendid and amusing program, consisting of musical numbers, skits and stunts was staged before a large audience. Mrs. Floyd White had charge of the refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Allender have with them as guests for the week A. W. Wilson of Napa, Mrs. G. E. Patterson and daughter of Shadron, Neb.

With Mrs. Clapp, Mrs. J. C. Parrish and Mrs. O. D. Hennan as hostesses, the Woman's Union met Thursday for their monthly lunch, business and program. In the afternoon a splendid program of information upon the Near East was provided.

Mrs. F. R. Davis and daughters Muriel and Lorna have returned home from a several months' visit at Watsonville. Mr. Davis motored to Los Angeles Monday, and from there the family returned with him.

Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Hennan entertained with a picnic party in Wildwood Canyon last Sunday. Those who enjoyed the occasion were Mrs. F. A. Wentworth, Mr. Joseph Bowers, Mr. Joel Linnenger and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Parrish.

On Thursday afternoon the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church gave a splendid program, after which the subject of "The Deaconess and Her Work" was made the feature of the afternoon. A dainty collation was served by Mrs. G. D. Lee as hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Sweeter and family and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Weisner have returned from a delightful vacation spent at Long Beach.

DYNAMITE FIRST USED IN 1890.

Alfred Nobel, the great chemist, invented dynamite, and its first public test, made at Merstham, July 14, 1868, established beyond doubt its tremendous potentialities. A German, Von Dahmen, improved on the manufacture of dynamite in such a manner that the "safety" variety could be produced. This process was patented in 1889.

The United States government, realizing the incalculable value of dynamite, ordered an official test October 9 of the same year. This proved satisfactory, and Lieut. Graydon, U.S.N., carried on experiments until he produced a variety of dynamite which could be used in shells, and which was officially adopted as one of the Navy's weapons in April, 1890.—[Detroit News.

Autumn Sweaters

IN CALIFORNIA the trend of the mode of the Sweater is quite as important as that of the Suit, or Coat, or Frock! For the Sweater in its versatility sometimes takes the place of all three!

One orchid Silk Sweater brings in a new note in a revere-Tuxedo collar. Another, of a luscious mint shade, takes on Norfolk lines and a broad sash of contrasting color to make it French as well as English. A third is braided all-over in white, if it is black; in plum if it is orchid.

Then there is the Sleeveless Sweater—

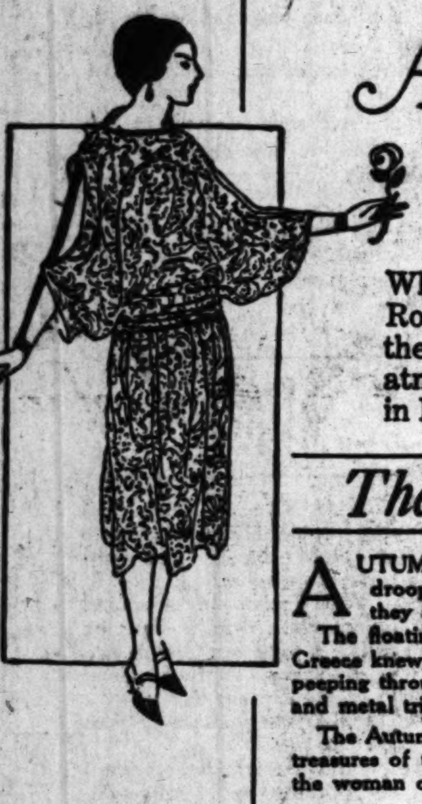
THIRD FLOOR

One Autumn Blouse

PROCLAIMS its Medieval origin in flowing sleeves of Moroccan, a new shade resembling henna with sunlight in its tone. The sleeve material is georgette and it has embroidered bands of navy satin. The body of navy satin is softly gathered into the monk collar and at the bottom embroidered in bright yarn.

THIRD FLOOR

Dinner Gown



THAT will vanquish all comers, made of velvet brocade of old blue. Steel cut beads on an American Beauty velvet ribbon make a graceful line from shoulder to wrist where they form—a bracelet!—A reason for the open sleeve!

Girls' Fall Coats

GIRLS rightfully may feel very grown up and very attractive when they learn of the fabrics and colors and styles that have gone into the making of their new fall coats.

Veldyne, Polly Anne, Pauvelaine, Evora, Gerona, Marvella and Bolivia vie for her favor.

Also do Sorrento, Oriental and Ming Blue, Cardinal, Mohawk, Trooper Brown, Sumac Red, Marabou and Bay Leaf.

And the favorite fur trimmings are squirrel, beaver and oppossum.

Robinson's New Autumn Coats for girls from 6 to 16.

GIRLS' SECTION—FOURTH FLOOR

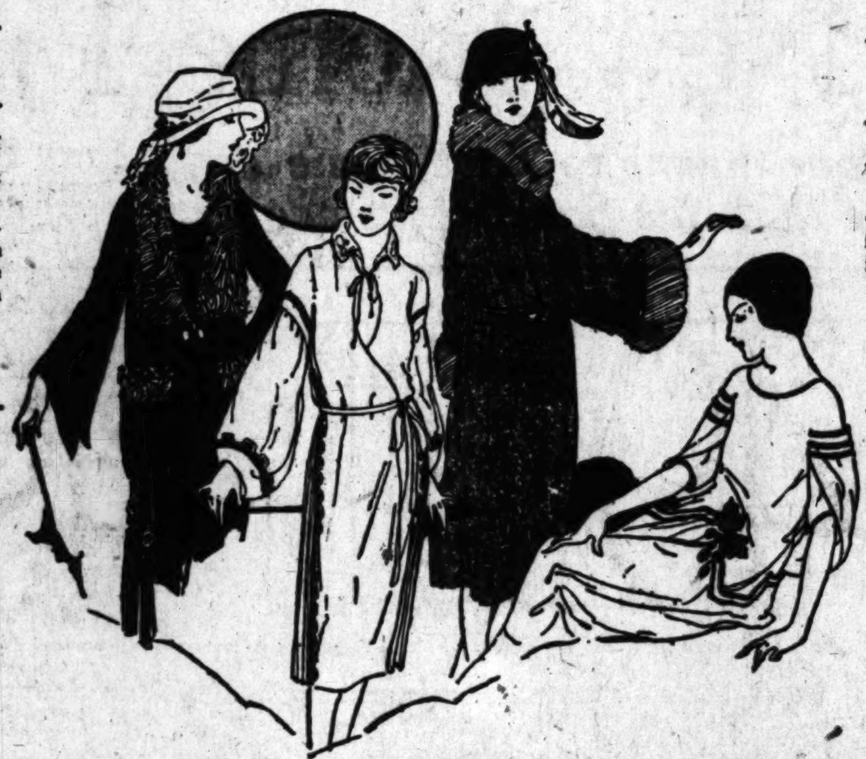
A New Pump

THAT has the Autumn Frock in mind is patent leather. It is called "The Arona." Two straps of field mouse kid cross the instep and another strap runs around the top.

This good looking bit of Fall Footwear is also being shown in black kid, beige, brown buckskin with contrasting straps.

It is priced at $16.50.

FOURTH FLOOR



The Suit of rust-colored duvetyn is topped with krimmer, a bit of which adds a last touch to the pockets. A satin sash, finished with tassels of Oriental splendor, falls at the side of the skirt, which is plain.

The Frock—black velvet and Crepe de Chine, set off with a trimming of bright red leather and gold braid.

The Coat displays that new shade of red, so deep, yet so very much alive that autumn favors. Australian opossum for the collar and cuffs.

The Frock—Navy Crepe de Chine, so heavy as to seem like Canton crepe, is bound across the arms with black silk braid. The full cape, back lined with light blue duvetyn, the blue grapes and blue-lined pockets, mark it as one of the different new Frocks.

Advance Showing of New Fall Styles

When Knighthood was in flower, Chivalry stirred the hearts of men and women and Romance held the world in joyous captivity. The clothes of the women reflected the spirit of the times. It was perhaps the high tide of the ages for dress, whose atmosphere and color the designers have brought to the Autumn Mode, as expressed in Robinson Apparel.

The Autumn Frocks

AUTUMN Frocks! Juliette wore sleeves like these. They droop low on the shoulder and fall to the wrist where they are caught in a tiny cuff.

The floating draperies — the maids of Ancient Greece knew these—and in the happy bits of color peeping through the darker tones, the embroideries and metal trimmings, Medieval Italy lives again.

The Autumn Mode has indeed taken to itself the treasures of the ages and laid them at the feet of the woman of 1921, here at Robinson's.

The Autumn Suits

THE Autumn suit brings color and fabric richer than usual. If one is very young and very slight, one may have the coat rather short, but one may be young and slender and choose the longer coat, with equal regard for the mode. For the coat of this season is permitted many moods and many lengths, some almost to the hem of the skirt. And whether long or short the coat will probably have the new full sleeve, one of the new collars and some of the new braid or embroidery trimmings.

THIRD FLOOR

Coats and Wraps

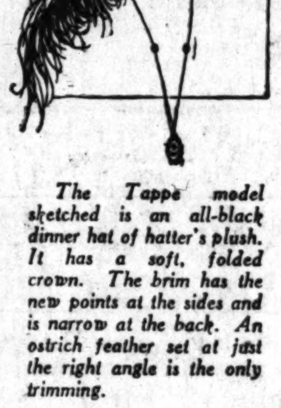
MOUSSYNE, Veldyne, Mochatex, Marvella are the fabrics one finds in the Autumn Coats and Wraps.

Marabou, Marmot, Taupe, Volnay Red, Navy Blue and Black, the colors.

The styles evince fullness somewhere, with full cut sleeves. Fur collars that look well worn high or low. The embroideries, often profuse and always beautiful, bring to mind the days when time was plentiful and needlework was a fine art.

And each wrap is endowed with that subtle something characteristic of the styles at Robinson's.

THIRD FLOOR



The Tappe model sketched is an all-black dinner hat of hatter's plush. It has a soft, folded crown. The brim has the new points at the sides and is narrow at the back. An ostrich feather set at just the right angle is the only trimming.

Hats from Tappe

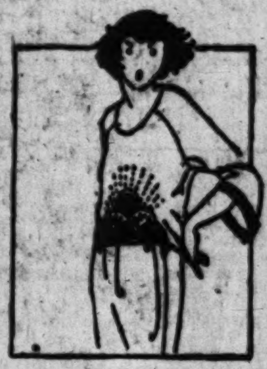
HATS from Tappe have the touch, the indefinable something that sets them apart from other Hats. Tappe Hats are known in the fashionable circles of every great American city

Black Hats, with trailing feathers, Black Hats, draped with filmy lace of black that sometimes reaches almost to the waist.

Hats in the autumn shades of brown and red and blue, each with its distinctive Tappe air—Each hat a marvel in itself.

These and many more of the New Autumn Hats are being shown, upon request, at Robinson's.

THIRD FLOOR



Distinctive Furs

FURS are by tradition conservative, and fine Furs remain to a great extent, conservative.

But Fashion cares only for what she cares for and she has dared many new and striking modes for the Furs of Autumn.

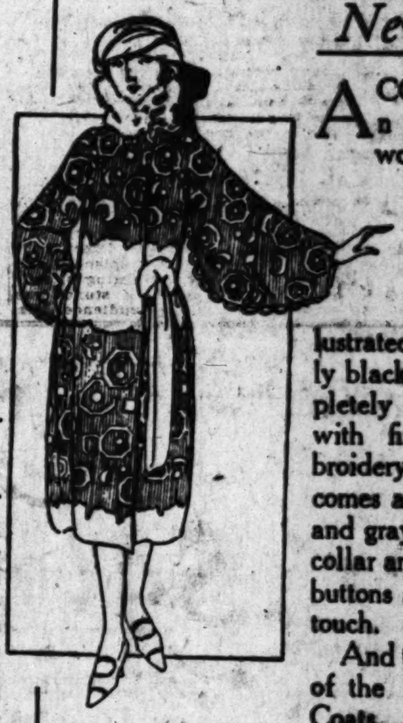
Robinson's selection of Furs preserves the elegance and beauty of the conventional while it brings out for those who prefer it, the season's ultra mode.

THIRD FLOOR

Another Blouse

MIGHT easily have come from Egypt, with its conventional design and odd shades of green and red and yellow. It is not all embroidery, this design. It is made of silk covered cords caught into place and supplemented by metal and colored threads. The Blouse itself is of navy crepe de chine.

THIRD FLOOR



New Coat

A COAT that is not different would be difficult to find among the new fall arrivals.

The one illustrated was originally black. But so completely is it covered with fine wool embroidery that it becomes a coat of black and gray. The squirrel collar and the big gray buttons add the final touch.

And this is only one of the new Autumn Coats.

THIRD FLOOR

New Hosiery

THE autumn Hose remains important, for the frock will be short and the hem uneven, this Fall of 1921.

There are clocks—of course. Lace clocks of unusual design, broad or narrow; tall or not so tall. But "the clock's the thing!"

Robinson's Autumn Hosiery expresses the mode in many charming ways, but in none better than the styles priced at $4.75. Pure silk Hose, lace clocks, in the new shades—$4.75.

FIRST FLOOR

Men's Suits

MEN'S New English Suits are so agreeable to slip into that they make a man feel as though they were old friends. Yet they have a certain smartness that makes them different. They come in the rough homespuns and in the finest tweeds, each bearing the stamp unmistakable of English make.

The coats made to Robinson Specifications have patch pockets and half belts. They are priced at $35.00.

The trouers or golf knickers will be made to order to match any coat at the low price of $15.00.

FIRST FLOOR—HOPE STREET ENTRANCE

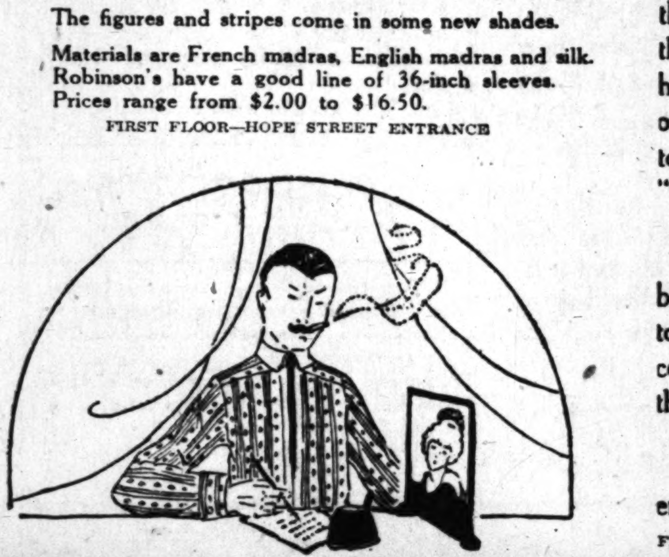
Men's Shirts

MEN'S New Shirts for Autumn without being venturesome have all the charms of being different. Men will like them and women will like them.

The figures and stripes come in some new shades.

Materials are French madras, English madras and silk. Robinson's have a good line of 36-inch sleeves. Prices range from $2.00 to $16.50.

FIRST FLOOR—HOPE STREET ENTRANCE



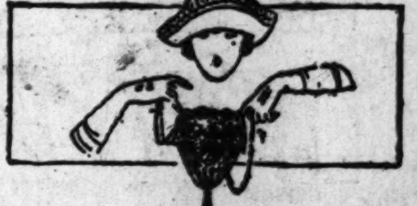
Men's Coats

MEN'S New English Overcoats. There is nothing like them. No other coat will ever take their place for the man who once has had the satisfaction of wearing one. They are neither too light nor too heavy. They have that easy "feel" that is comfort itself.

These Overcoats have been made by a famous English tailoring house to Robinson's order. They show the conservative taste and perfect fit of the finest London made Coats.

They nevertheless have the moderate price of $65.00.

FIRST FLOOR—HOPE STREET ENTRANCE



New French Gloves

THE Autumn Sleeve makes new demands on the Autumn Glove.

France designed the Sleeve, then made the glove to match.

Just arrived are these New Gloves from France.

They are long—16 button—(the new sleeve is often short or slashed.)

And they are soft—the softest of glace lambskin or suede—with smartly embroidered backs.

They come in the lovely new fall shades of beige, beaver, mole, brown and white.

They are priced low—$6.50 a pair.

BLUE AND WHITE BASEMENT

For the Living Room

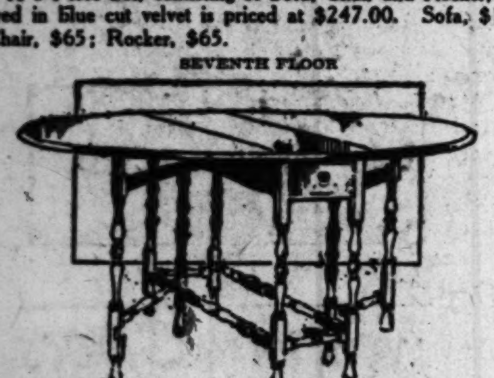
IN THAT home one means eventually to have, one always must think of the Living Room.

Robinson's Oversuffed Furniture is now being sold at unusually low prices. Among the many pieces on sale are

A Cut Velvet Settee with Marshall spring cushion, covered in gray, priced at $98.75.

A 3-Piece Set, consisting of Sofa, Chair and Rocker, covered in blue cut velvet is priced at $247.00. Sofa, $117; Chair, $65; Rocker, $65.

SEVENTH FLOOR



Gateleg Tables, $39.75

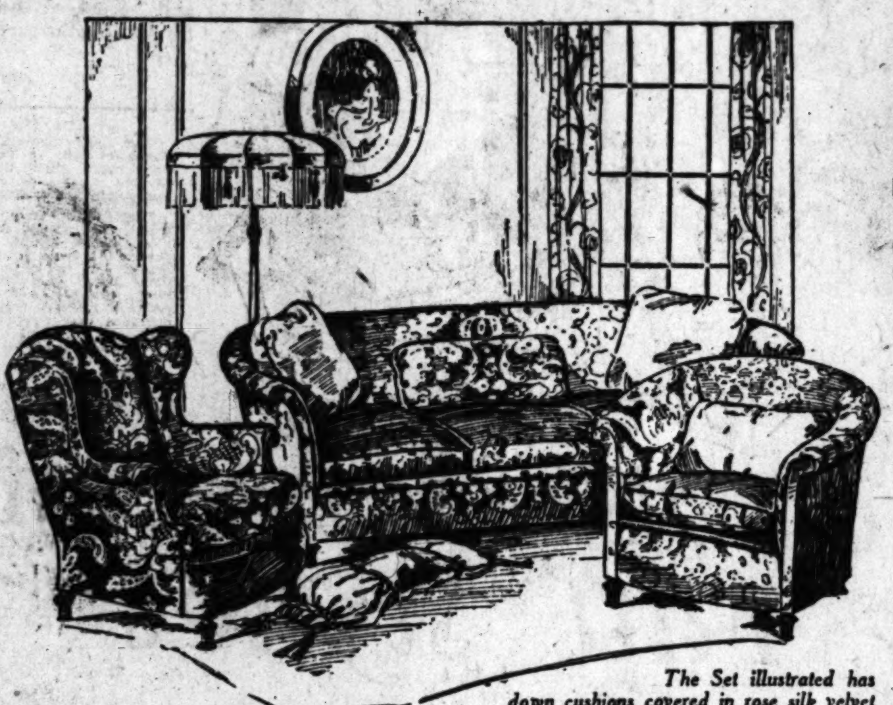
THERE is always that place in the home that belongs to the Gateleg Table. Perhaps it is a corner of the living-room or perhaps the breakfast-room. But it is there—somewhere.

Gateleg Tables of a convenient size are of solid mahogany in either the natural or mahogany finish. They are priced at $39.75.

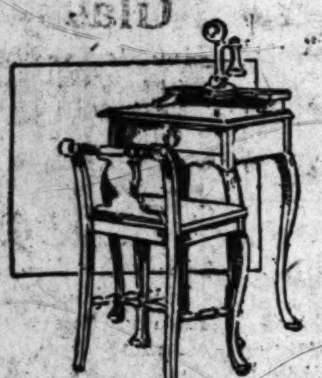
The same Table in walnut in natural wood finish may be had at $45.75.

Prices will be quoted on Tables and Chairs, hand decorated to match any desired color scheme.

SEVENTH FLOOR



The Set illustrated has down cushions covered in rose silk velvet and blue brocatelle. The Sofa is $319; the Wing Chair, $139.00.



Phone Sets

THE Telephone Set is a decorative asset to a room as well as a necessity.

These Sets are of walnut or mahogany and consist of a table and chair in several different designs.

They are priced at $29.75, $34.75, $37.75 and $42.50.

The Telephone Set illustrated is priced $29.75

OTHER EXTRA VALUES

60 Wash Frocks at $18.75 Each

EXQUISITE summer Frocks —60 of them—at an "end of the summer" price. A manufacturer's concession of mid-season stocks that bring three times their value to the purchaser.

Many of them are worth more than three times as much.

There are white voiles and colored voiles in the shades now favored for autumn wear. And the styles are those that autumn frocks are showing.

Hand hemstitching—yards and yards of it—on both skirts and blouses give each Frock a nice distinction, while hand embroidery in harmonious colors carries out the French look.

Monday, they will be on sale at the very low price of $18.75.

THIRD FLOOR—HOPE STREET SIDE

New Wool Dress Goods at $1.65

IN the history of the Department there is no record of any such sale as this one.

500 yards of Autumn Fabrics offered include cut velours, new novelty effects in stripes and plaids, fancy tweeds, crepe poplins, Melrose, skirtings and suitings—a cloth for every purpose that the mode requires.

The low price is below half the present value.

Widths are 54 and 56 inches.

Without reservation this lot of 500 yards of materials will be placed on sale at 9 o'clock on Monday morning at $1.65 a yard.

SECOND FLOOR

Wool Coatings, Event, $2.35

300 yards of Wool Coatings at less than half their present worth.

Soft, warm fabrics similar to Camel's Hair in the heather shades of green, brown and gray. Coatings that make warm but light weight wraps. They are 54 and 56 inches wide.

Monday $2.35 a yard.

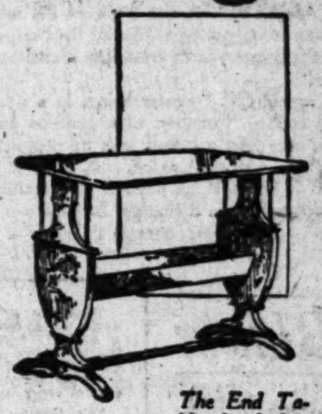
SECOND FLOOR

End Tables

SOLID Mahogany End Tables come in a variety of attractive styles, all at low prices.

The one illustrated has a little trough underneath for books and magazines.

Other styles run as low in price as $9.75.



The End Table sketched is priced at $16.75.

SEVENTH FLOOR

Fine Irish Linens

LINENS! Pure Irish Linen from Belfast for the table—

Towels soft and absorbent, of pure linen and part linen—

Bed Spreads in crochet and satin Marseilles styles—all these and many more are now on sale in the Linen Section at Robinson's. They represent savings half in many instances.

Their values are reasons why one should replenish one's Linen stocks in August.

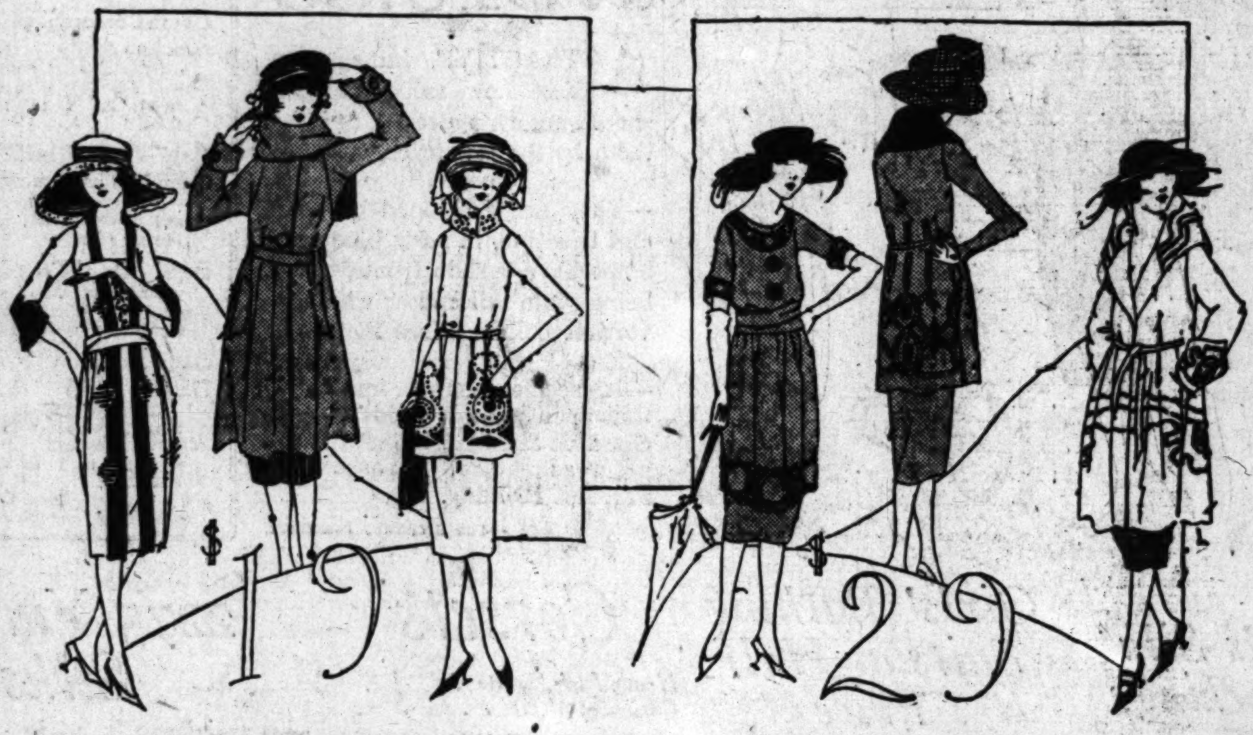
Make Way for This Notable Purchase of

New Fall Suits $19 and $29
New Fall Dresses $19 and $29
New Fall Coats at $19 and $29



—A double price opportunity is presented to those who come, Monday, to the Garment Section, Third Floor—an opportunity that I consider one of the most important that has been presented since the sale began.

—Garments that were purchased in the New York market and rushed forward in time for this fifth Monday.

—Whether it be a coat, suit or dress that you have in mind, you should be able to find it at one of the two prices that are to be featured this week, beginning Monday.

The Dresses at $19.00 and $29.00

—Those at $19.00 are of Canton crepe, satin, taffeta, in a goodly color range including brown, sand, Copenhagen, navy, as well as black. Long lines, girdles, in blouse effects. Some are heavily beaded and embroidered. Extraordinary indeed at $19.00.

—At $29.00—A price that in no way indicates the quality of the garments. Canton crepes, satins and taffetas in dresses of the better sort. An unusual color range which includes the new fall shades of brown, navy, Copenhagen as well as black. These are exceptional indeed.

The Suits at $19.00 and $29.00

—are in each instance priced far below what you'd expect to pay for suits of this character.

—At $19.00 there are suits of tricotine, serges, broadcloths, mixtures and velours, braided and embroidered models. Some are plain tailored, others more ornate styles These in black, navy, brown and Rookie.

—The Suits at $29.00 are of duvet de laine, tricotine, broadcloth and fancy mixtures. Braided and embroidered garments in fancy and tailored styles. Some with fur collars.

—Choice of black, navy, Sorrento blue, Malay and Rookie. Sizes ranging from 16 to 44.

The Coats at $19.00 and $29.00

—represent new fall purchase lots. Very remarkable coats, indeed.

—At $19.00, velours, novelty mixtures, Bolivias. Some are button trimmed, some are embroidered. Silk lined, plain or with fur collars.

—Choice of rookie, navy, brown, taupe.

—At $29.00, velours, fancy mixtures, Bolivias, plain and novelty coats with small or large collars.

—Some are plain, others fur-trimmed. Coats that should create buying activity on the Third Floor, Monday.

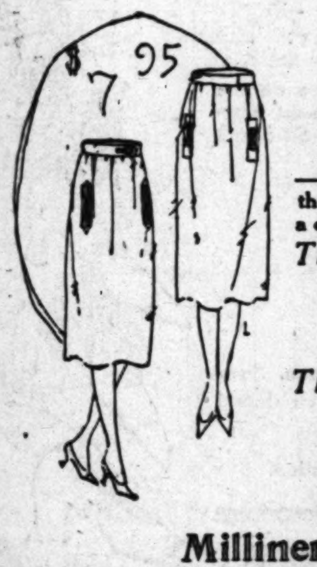
A Remarkable Sale of

Smart Furs at One-Fourth Less

—includes the very furs the season will demand. Hudson seal and Marmot coats, squirrel coats; also scarfs in lynx, wolf and fox.

—An unusual assortment of chokers in marten and squirrel; the price means a saving to you if purchased now at 25% less.

—The Broadway—Third Floor



Two Notable Lots of

Sports Skirts at $7.95 and $10.95

—Each price represents an important saving because I secured the garments from a manufacturer who was desirous of making a quick clean-up.

The Skirts at $10.95

—are of baronet satin, Cambridge crepe, crepe de chine, poplin, fantasi; plain and pleated models.

—There is an unusual color range and the size range includes those for large women, 32 to 38.

The Skirts at $7.95

—embrace the very materials that Fashion is demanding—baronet satins, Cambridge crepes, crepes de chine, poplins, fantasi; plain and pleated models. There is a good line of colorings; and the saving is so unusual that many women will buy two or three at the price.

DLE CLASS UNION IS BUSY.

ement Being Led by Militant Dean.

Group Has Endured Real Hardships.

Strike Now Being Advocated.

CORRESPONDENCE.]

Aug. 15.—The Middle Union is getting to be a quite under the leader- the distinguished Dean Inge. is, of course, a clergy- he is of the militant type, fashion, to some slight ex- of Dr. Parkhurst, America's preacher, who closed York's disreputable houses, aft- them and preaching of scandalous procedure, or the of London, who flagellated when the war was on and has been flagellating the and other uncon- persons.

meetings of the Middle Union (which actually is and operative to a degree) are very inter- They are given over very to expression of the feeling the salaried group and the with moderate fixed incomes ground to powder between of rank and position strikes and labor profiteering. however, sees in En- not much danger of a Bol- tendency, although some he errs. But, while he has of revolution, he says that method is not found for preservation of the middle class, a steady, and perhaps sharp decline, in the end must utterly destroy the United Kingdom and perhaps the Empire.

INDICTS MODERN SYSTEM.

Far more pessimistic is the famous Sir E. Marshall Hall. His indictment of the modern British system is scathing and unsparing.

"The sins of society in modern England, in these after-the-war days," he says in substance, "are intense selfishness, acute love of self-advertisement, and appalling apathy and lack of sympathy."

He draws very sharp, unfavorable comparisons between the spirit of the British people and that of France and Belgium, and predicts that unless Englishmen forthwith make up their minds to go to work not only German competition but that of the Allies will wipe them off the economic map.

He says, furthermore, that among the middle class, which he, like the Dean, upholds as suffering most, there is so much snobbery and nonsense that sometimes he gets weary of it.

TALK CONSUMERS' STRIKE.

In the meantime, there is much real and earnest talk here about the possibility of a consumers' strike against high prices. At the annual conference of the Middle Classes Union at Connaught Rooms the other day, Dean Inge talked freely in strong advocacy of such procedure.

Points which are made by those who worry is that Britain is without worthy leadership in the House of Commons, and that, as a people, the United Kingdom, through the profiteering of the powerful and the greed and laziness of the workers, has lost 60 to 80 per cent of its purchasing power.

JAZZ HEARD IN CONGRESS.

The House of Representatives knows what "jazz" is, and on occasions hears quite a bit of it. Witness one of the recent symposium outbursts, this one from Representative Frank Crowder of New York, under general debate on the tariff bill:

"Of course, the Democrats on a tariff bill always sing, 'Swing low, sweet chariot; come for to carry me home.' But Joe Fordney composed a song, 'Up, Up, Just a Little Bit Higher,' and as for the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Blanton,) his sweet singing always reminds me of Maggie Cline singing 'Who Threw the Overalls in Mrs. Murphy's Chowder?' [Laughter and applause.] And Brother Tinkham, on this side of the House, and Gallivan of Massachusetts, on the other side of the House, singing that charming ditty, entitled 'When the Bloom is on the Rye.' [Applause and laughter.] Another gentleman from Texas (Mr. Sumners,) disguised as a troubador, in the last session serenaded the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Blanton,) singing a beautiful ballad entitled 'I Don't Care If You Never Come Back.' [Applause.] Then they kept finding fault with Phil Campbell because the rules that he brought in did not satisfy them, and they wanted to change the name of 'Rule Britannia' and call it 'Rule, Phil Campbell, Phil Campbell Rules the Waves.' Then a third gentleman from Texas (Mr. Young) every few days asked the leader on this side of the House in musical tones about the packer bill, "Oh, where, oh, where has my packer bill gone, oh, where, oh, where can it be?"

"Then we occasionally had the entire minority singing in a grand chorus, 'I am always blowing bubbles, Pretty Bubbles in the Air,' dedicated to the Democratic party by Woodrow Wilson."

LONDON LIKES LINCOLN PLAY.

Martyred President is Hero to British Public.

Drinkwater Production Draws Crowded Houses.

Moved from Small Building to Irving's Theater.

BY DAVIS EDWARDS.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, Aug. 15.—The American film invasion never ceases. Without American films London's film theaters, from the smallest to the great Stoll's, would close. But English men and women frequently object to details of the "Yankee pictures," and with good reason, too, as, for instance, when some Thirty-ninth-street actor, gone to California quite by accident, gets a chance to "double" as a British lord and Chinese cook and does one about as well as he might be expected to do the other.

Exactly this has happened in an American film seriously sent over here and (for one night) shown at a good film theater.

In the main, London likes American pictures. Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin and half a dozen others are as well known and popular on this side as they are at home. But I should be delighted if no more films containing caricatures of British—stage Englishmen—were sent across. They seriously harm American prestige.

BRITISH WORSHIP LINCOLN.

The British like America and some Americans they almost worship. There is, for instance, Lincoln. More books have been written about Lincoln in England and by Englishmen than have been written about Gladstone. The Great Emancipator is a hero to the British schoolboy, his homely wit is a tradition among British story-tellers, his statesmanship is referred back to oftener in the Commons and the Lords than that of most Englishmen. And now the play "Abraham Lincoln" is being done here to packed houses six nights and two matinees every week.

The author of that play, as of course you know, is John Drinkwater, one of the most English Englishmen I have ever known, and his sympathetic treatment of his subject has brought tears and laughter, thrills and deep appreciation to the hearts of tens of thousands of Americans. It is curious that never once has the charge been brought against the play that it anywhere shows lack of understanding of the great American, an amazing circumstance when it is recalled that Drinkwater scarcely knows the States at all.

BORN IN ENGLAND.

The Lincoln play was produced at first apparently with some timidity, for it was born in England at a little highbrow theater, the Lyric, in Hammersmith, where such plays as "Romance" and such players as Miss Doris Keane have been habitual. The rental of the theater did not make the try-out a great speculation. The managers feared that not enough of popular interest existed in the American martyr to make large crowds a possibility.

Now they are delighted to discover that they were quite wrong. "Abraham Lincoln" has been moved down to the Strand, where it is packing the tremendous Lyceum Theater, once Henry Irving's professional home and the only theater in London, by the way, to have been struck by a German air-raid bomb.

HALL CAINE'S PRAISE.

Among those who have seen it more than once and who, when they speak of it, curiously enough discuss not the play or any of the actors in it but the man whose wonder-life it pictures, have been Hall Caine, Lord Charnwood (himself the author of a stirring life of Lincoln) every member of the British Cabinet, including the Prime Minister. And an especial command performance has been given before royalty with great satisfaction to everyone concerned.

Lincoln has become almost a British hero in the minds of Englishmen upon the streets. There is much talk here, now, of having made for London a replica of the famous Borglum statue of the martyred President which was designed, I think, for Newark, N. J., and which shows him seated calmly and majestically on a bench in contemplation.

SUMPTUOUSLY PRODUCED.

The new production of the play is on a sumptuous scale. Every inch of the old scenery has been scrapped and new substituted. A little book is now in preparation telling briefly the interesting history of the detailed study which preceded the production of the costumes used, including Lincoln's nether garments. It seems that there was quite a controversy as to just the cut the garment had which actually was worn by Lincoln at the time selected for portrayal in the play. The garment in the new British play is more near to perfect accuracy than was that worn in New York city by Frank McGlynn, the wonder-actor who depicted Lincoln there. The appearance of the American Ambassador on the opening night attracted great attention from the newspapers and public.

Mark Twain's Bicycle.

News dispatches from Hartford, Ct., home of Mark Twain, state that the old 'cycle on which the famous humorist used to ride through the streets of that city has been presented to the Connecticut Historical Society by Franklin G. Whitmore. Thirty-five years ago Mark Twain gave the 'cycle to Mr. Whitmore, who was then his secretary, explaining that he was tired of a means of locomotion which resulted in so many bruises and bumps. Albert Bigelow Payne, in his biography of Mark Twain, gives an amusing account of the would-be 'cyclist's countless falls while learning to ride.—[Kansas City Star.

Wedding of Heirlooms.

At the wedding of Miss Caroline Cummings Seward, daughter of Clarence C. Seward, near Middletown, and Halsey Emory Crosby of New York, the bride was attired in the dress worn by her grandmother and was married in the same room where her mother took her marriage vows.

The bride's cake was cut by the bride with the sword carried by the bridegroom's father and later by the bridegroom during his service in the Navy. The bride is a relative of the Secretary of State in Lincoln's Cabinet.—[New York World.

ARE NOT EAGER FOR ROYALTY.

American Girls Now Sidestep Bankrupt Titles.

Emir of Katsini Secludes Two of His Consorts.

Keeps Wives Locked Up While He Sees the Sights.

BY LADY MARY.
[SPECIAL FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Aug. 15.—"I have to laugh!" an American girl visiting London said to me yesterday.

It was an "Americanism." (We call so many things "Americanisms" and then presently adopt them, as, for example, Sunday papers, chewing gum, dentists, divorce and running water in our houses.)

"You have to laugh at what, my dear?" I asked.

"Oh, all these funny royalties—your kings and kinglets and their womenfolk!"

It rather startled me. As a matter of fact, during the years (more than I will admit to you or anyone, dear reader) since I have been observing the unimportantly picturesque among humanity on this side of the ocean, that is, the titled and the powerful through tradition, not achievement, I have noticed that Americans above all people bow to titles, stand aside with respectful awe to let the royalty nothings pass, and worship kings and queens and kinglets and princesses.

ALL QUITE TRUE.

Don't protest, my dears; it's all quite true. Americans of bygone days have been the world's very greatest snobs. I've seen some of the loveliest American girls sold by the pound (the pounds sterling that their gold and diamonds and stocks and bonds would buy) to some of the worst European bounders; I've seen solid American business men come over here and make fools of themselves in order to get the privilege of talking to a duke (perhaps you'll guess just whom I mean) whose own family scarcely would speak to him; I've witnessed some of the most painful spectacles of snobbery humanity has ever known, and with regret and wonder have noted that the sufferers were from America. So this little American girl who "had to laugh" surprised me. Has the war killed snobbishness among American women? Frankly, I hope so from the bottom of my heart.

AMERICANS GRIN AT ROYALTY.

There seems to be some hope of it. It's noticeable. American respect for kings and queens and all that sort of thing has lessened mightily since 1914. What is the reason? Is it the pitiful exhibition which Royalty in Germany and Austria made of itself? Royalty in England did quite well, thank you, as all will agree who know. Is it the spectacle of Norway, Sweden and Greece, where kings were afraid to fight, or in Turkey, where royalty didn't know how? Is it the awful nonsense that went on beneath jeweled crowns down in the Balkans? Is it the sadly tragic spectacle of the greatest despot of them all, the Czar, proved to be a mere weak fool, and the Czarina, led to all sorts of insanity by a lecherous, crazy, greasy, crooked priest—Rasputin, the utterly unspeakable?

Whatever is the cause, it certainly is true. Americans this summer do not flock to Windsor as they did and stare with open eyes (and open pocketbooks;) they do not gape, amazed and humble, as the king or who not passes by upon the streets; they would hiss a German or an Austrian princeling; Scandinavian royalty would make them titter; the "Little Queen" of Holland (now far from little, rather fat, in fact) would not move them to ecstacies.

I heard them whoop it up (that's what you say in the United States, isn't it?) for the King and Queen of Belgium, but then, as man and woman, they have won the whoop-it-ups of all the living world and history. You know, I really believe Americans have actually, in their hearts as well as in their Independence-Day addresses, made up their minds that royalty and even titles generally are what my charming, free-tongued little friend would name as "bunk." Really, you know, and for the first time, actually. "Hot air"—and you'll get what I mean. She's teaching me to talk American.

EMIR'S SAFE SYSTEM.

And while I'm talking about royalty, I must tell of the good Emir of Katsini.

He has a safer system than that of American husbands, who bring their wives across and let them go out upon spending "sprees," as some of them delight in boasting.

He brought, not one, but two wives, with him, and when he went out sight-seeing they stayed tight in their hotel rooms, attended (possibly, I do not know) by handmaidens (or perhaps he brought a eunuch with him for the job,) and doubtless bored to death while the Emir saw the sights—all kinds, is the gossip. Those he mentioned to the pressmen were fine horses, tramways and such, but these dusky potentates who come to London always have far sharper eyes for pretty white faces and trim ankles and—er—so on than they do have for less flirtatious live stock and electrical appliances.

Beethoven as Tenant.

Beethoven was a bad tenant. During the thirty-five years he spent in Vienna he lived in twenty-eight different houses. Where he was living just 100 years ago the most diligent of antiquarians are unable to determine. The longest he ever lived in one place was from 1810 to 1815. The explanation of this protracted stay is easy. Baron Pasquali, his landlord, understood him and appreciated him. Beethoven, enraged because some little thing went wrong, would move out, but the baron always refused to show a "To Let" sign, saying in his affable way: "Ah, he'll come back." And the creator of nine symphonies did, until Pasquali died.—[Indianapolis News.

Not on the Race Card.

They were in a railway train and were discussing Dickens. "Well," said one, "John puts 'Bleak House' first and 'Martin Chuzzlewit' second."

"Excuse me, gentlemen," said a husky voice from the seat behind. "I don't know your pal, John, but you're bein' steered. There ain't no such horses runnin'."—[Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Blue Laws Would Ban Tobacco and Stop Brutality, Sponsors Say.

REFORM WONDERS PAINTED.

Five Proposed Federal Amendments Get Enthusiastic (?) O. K.

BY DAN CAREY.

We are with the preachers, absolutely, and to the last ditch, in the fight for this new constitutional amendment which is going to prohibit prize fighting and brutality of all kinds in the United States. In fact we are for all of the proposed amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

The success with which the Eighteenth Amendment—that is, prohibition—was eased into the people while a part of them were fighting the war, and while the rest of them were not looking has caused all persons who have a desire to compel the rest of the world to think and act as they do to turn to laws, lawmaking and lawmakers as the easiest method of accomplishing their object. A great deal may be said for the system, because it does away with a great deal of hard work at poor pay, intensive thinking and difficult exhortation; but if we read history correctly the system failed at Rome in the early days of the Christian era.

"You can lead a horse to water, but you can't make him drink."

However, as we were saying, we are for all the proposed constitutional amendments. At present the following are proposed:

(1.) Preventing prize fighting or other forms of brutal contests.

(2.) Preventing the use of tobacco.

(3.) Enacting Sunday blue laws.

(4.) Prohibiting the manufacture and sale of guns, pistols and ammunition.

(5.) Prohibiting the use of the word "male" in all laws, thus giving men and women the same standing in law.

Few persons know about the fourth of these proposed amendments. We quote from a writer in a recent publication:

"Why not have another amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America? Why not prohibit the manufacture and sale of guns, pistols, firearms of every description to everybody, private individuals, officers of the law, corporations, business concerns, everybody? Why not? If nobody had a gun nobody would need a gun."

That is all sight. But suppose that somebody violated the Eighteenth Amendment and took a drink. The policeman who noted the violation of the law, being unarmed, would remove his perfumed handkerchief from his breast pocket and give the Chatauqua salute, which by this time would be the recognized signal to the culprit to consider himself under arrest. The lawbreaker, however, being emboldened by an excess of one-half of one per cent of alcohol, would probably say, "Aw go on, you big stiff," whereupon the policeman would be compelled to either allow the criminal to escape or himself be guilty of violating the new constitutional amendment by engaging in a brutal contest.

Yes, we are for these new constitutional amendments.

Take this recent prize fight, between Dempsey and Carpentier, a few weeks ago. We were not gathering local color, like some of the preachers, and we did not have a free ticket like some of the newspaper men, so we did not attend. The consequence is that our remarks must necessarily be based upon what we read rather than upon what we saw. We admit freely that before the fight we thought it was going to be a very respectable affair, but our opinion was changed on the morning of Sunday, July 3, when we read the story by rounds, as printed in one of the morning dailies. We then knew that we had missed attending a very wicked, wicked affair.

In the account that we read Carpentier "whipped a wicked right" three times, he "whipped a wicked left" twice, while Dempsey responded "wickedly" four times.

Wickedness is something that must be eradicated from sports, even though an amendment to the Constitution of the United States be required.

However, we will admit, if you really want to know, that wickedness and morality are merely a matter of opinion, rearing and environment.

We once went on a camping party with a young lady who was very religious. The first Sunday we were in camp a number of us secured our bathing suits and invited her to accompany us.

"This is Sunday," she said.

"So it is," we replied.

"I don't go swimming on Sunday," she remarked.

"Sorry," we answered.

"Oh, please understand that I am not trying to regulate your conduct. If it doesn't violate your conscience go ahead, but it would mine."

"Sorry," we repeated, and our party went for a swim in the refreshing water of the lake, while she stepped into a rowboat and rowed all over the lake for a couple of hours, returning to the camp thoroughly tired and with the necessity for a sponge bath, while we returned refreshed and invigorated.

We never could understand her viewpoint, never could realize why swimming on Sunday was sinful, while rowing on Sunday was not sinful. It was simply her opinion, her conviction, and while we disagreed with her we admired her for her strength of character.

One of the most religious men we ever heard of was a moonshiner in the mountains of the South. His eldest son was delivering a run of liquor in town one day when a street car ran over him. Two claim agents went to the house of the old man up in the mountains to settle for the death of his son. They reached the farm about sundown.

When they had stated their business, the old man told them that the following morning would be the right time to discuss the case. Meanwhile, they were to come in, have supper and spend the night. They accepted his hospitality.

When the supper was placed on the table our two friends made the regulation boarding-house reach for the hot biscuits, but the old man raised both hands over the table above his head, palms down, a gesture which plainly told them to wait.

"My friends," he said, "we haven't much up here in the mountains ex-

... of the South reminds us that what we recently wrote in a letter to the editor about Chief Justice Taft turned out to be exactly true. Of course, we believed it to be true all the time, because we by instinct and nature keep one ear on the ground, and we simply wrote as we heard.

When the announcement was first made several weeks ago that Mr. Taft was being considered for the place of Chief Justice, it was also stated that objection to his appointment would probably be made by southern Senators.

We wrote a letter stating that it was unthinkable that Mr. Taft would be opposed by southern Senators, and announcing that we did not believe it, because we knew Mr. Taft to be very popular in the South, where he is a very frequent visitor. We concluded our letter by stating that the South was not passively for Mr. Taft, but actively for him.

Now, what happened? When the appointment went to the Senate, opposition developed among a few (a very few) northerners and middle-westerners. What did the South do? Actively fighting for the appointment of Mr. Taft as Chief Justice of the United States were the brainy Underwood of Alabama, the splendid Broussard of Louisiana, the fearless Smith of Carolina, and North Carolina's excellent Senator, Lee Overman.

No, the South makes some bad mistakes, because it also is peopled by human beings; but her mistakes are rarely those of ingratitude.

However, we were talking about amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and not about the appointment of Chief Justices. We think one of the first amendments should be that one about the blue laws, and we hope to see included a special provision about kissing or being kissed by one's wife on Sunday. It shouldn't be allowed. There is many a man goes home on Saturday night having violated the Eighteenth Amendment at 50 cents a throw in every saloon on his route, fully determined to assert his manhood, strike for his rights, declare himself, take charge of his own house and operate it in the future the way it ought to be run.

He mumbles this over to himself on his way home, and his mind is fully made up. After he eases the key in the night latch and sees her sitting up for him in a kimono with a rolling-pin in her lap, he realizes that the thing had better be postponed until Sunday morning. So he forgives her belligerent attitude and snores himself to sleep, but before he closes his eyes he rehearses mentally what he will say in the morning.

Sunday morning she brings a glass of ice water to the bed, tells him she will not quarrel with him because it is Sunday and she is on her way to church, so she forgives and kisses him. That kiss on Sunday morning ends his good resolution. He is a weakling for another week, soft, pliable putty in the hands of a woman.

No, sir; something ought to be done for the protection of men. The blue laws will help. These preachers, they know.

It reminds us of a story told us recently by our friend Gershom Smith, one of the certified public accountants with W. B. Richards and Company. He says an Englishman had been making love to the wife of a friend of his. Finally his conscience began to hurt him and he decided to make a clean breast of the whole affair to his friend.

"I say, old chap," he told him confidentially at the club the next day, when they found themselves in a quiet corner, "I hope you will not be angry with me, because really I intended nothing wrong, but I think you ought to know it."

"What should I know, old top?" said the second Englishman.

"Now keep the old bean steady while I tell you. After dancing with your wife at the ball of the Duchess last evening we went into the conservatory, and I kissed her."

"Dear me, old top, I'm amazed. How many times?"

"I say, old thing, I'm confessing to you, not boasting."

"Sleep—chief nourisher in life's feast"

THERE'S food for thought in the mere suggestion that one-third of our life is spent in sleep.

Stands to reason, then, that sleep must be essential. To properly nourish, it should be sound, restful sleep, which comes only when the body is completely at ease.

The soothing ease afforded by the Stockwell Never-Stretch Mattress produces the most beneficial sleep.

Any mattress bearing this Trade-Mark Label makes any bed a better bed.

Don't Squeeze Blackheads—Dissolve Them

Squeezing and pinching out blackheads make the pores large and cause irritation—then, too, after they have become hard you cannot get all of them out. Blackheads are caused by accumulations of dust and dirt and secretions from the skin and there is only one safe and sure way and one that never fails to get rid of them—a simple way, too—that is to dissolve them. Just get from any drug store about two ounces of calonite powder—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet sponge—rub over the blackheads briskly for a few seconds—wash off and you'll be surprised to see that every blackhead has disappeared, and the skin will be left soft and the pores in their natural condition—anyone troubled with these unsightly blemishes should try this simple method.—[Advertisement.

MUSICAL.

ENSEMBLE PROGRAM.

ATTRACTIVE EVENTS HERALDED FOR NEW SEASON.

Once again there is promise of a highly artistic season of ensemble music in this locality. Certain it is that the progress in this branch of musical entertainment has been unusual during the past several seasons.

Combinations of instrumental talent have acquired a permanent position in the esthetic life of the community. So many indications have been given of this that even in the instance of visiting artists it has been found advisable to combine soloists, and joint recitals or the like are generally very popular.

The Zoellner Quartet, which has established a reputation by its appearances here during the past few seasons, will again be in the foreground with a series of concerts, beginning in October or November. This ensemble has been in the East making records, but rehearsals for their coming season are soon to start here.

The plans of the Philharmonic Quartet, composed of virtually the same membership as the Noack Quartet, heard for the past two seasons, have been announced. These will include a group of afternoon recitals and out-of-town appearances. The personnel is made up of Sylvain Noack, first violinist of the Philharmonic Orchestra; Henry Svedrofsky, second violinist; Emil Ferir, viola player, and Ilya Bronson, cellist.

Definite announcement has yet been made regarding the Los Angeles Trio, but it is understood they are to resume concerts in the fall.

It is also likely that the Saslavsky Chamber Music Society will again be heard in a series.

Faculty Vacationing.

After an active school year extending into midsummer, members of the Davis Musical College faculty have adjourned for a vacation.

Dr. Eugene Davis, president of the college, and Mrs. Davis, head of the vocal department, left for a two weeks' auto trip north yesterday morning. They will travel leisurely, visiting friends at Oxnard, Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo and Atascadero, and will spend a week in San Francisco, during which Dr. Davis may join his fellow-Bohemians at their picturesque mountain grove.

Stanley Park Lodge and Wheeler Hot Springs will mark their return route to Los Angeles, and they will arrive here early in September to attend the opening of the fall term.

Various new features will be introduced during the fall. Owing to the growing number of applications, the staff of the violin department has been increased, Sol Cohen joining the faculty. Mrs. Walter Wessels has won warm recognition during the past year.

Dr. and Mrs. Wessels are vacationing at Flathead Lake, Mont., whence they will proceed to Portland, Or., on their way home.

Dr. Ray Hastings, the popular organist, has just returned from his annual holiday jaunt to San Francisco and the Bay region, where he gave several recitals before large audiences.

Miss Henrietta M. Russell, the successful member of the piano department, is dividing her holiday time between San Diego and Coronado, figuring prominently in many social events.

Two Concert Courses.

On the eve of his departure for a few days' vacation, L. E. Behymer announced that for the forthcoming season there will be two Philharmonic artist courses. Of these the first will be the Tuesday evening series, opening with Mabel Garrison, the American coloratura soprano. This gifted artist needs no introduction to the music lovers as her debut here two years ago established her vogue.

The second artist will be Arthur Rubinstein, pianist; this will be his first appearance here.

The return of Emmy Destinn, the Bohemian dramatic soprano, is next. She will arrive in New York, October 3, coming direct from Paris, where she has been having success.

Louis Graveure, fourth of the series, will sing just before the Christmas holidays.

After the first of the year, Renato Zanelli, the Chilean baritone, and Grace Wagner, American soprano, will be heard in joint recital, presenting a program of operatic arias, duets and songs.

Helen Stanley, Reinald Werrenrath, Vasa Pridoha, violinist; Percy Grainger, pianist, are booked, beside a performance by Pavlowa and her entire company; a recital by John McCormack, and one by Galli-Curci.

The Saturday afternoon Philharmonic artist series will include Ernestine Schumann-Heink, the Cherniavsky Trio, just returning from another round-the-world tour; Cecil Fanning, baritone; Percy Grainger, pianist; Amelita Galli-Curci, and a program by Pavlowa and company.

Symphonic Program.

Postponing his European trip for several days, at the request of Sid Grauman, Ota Gygi, the violinist, will appear on the concert platform at Grauman's Theater tomorrow morning. This will mark Mr Gygi's last appearance in America for many months, since he leaves August 25 for an extended foreign tour.

The only soloist on the all-symphony program, which has been arranged by Mischa Guterson, Mr. Gygi will render Concerto in E Minor, Op. 64, by Mendelssohn.

The orchestral program will feature Tschaikowsky's "Fourth Symphony." The work is in four movements—Andante Sostenuto, Andantino in Modo di Canzona, Scherzo Pizzicato Ostinato and Finale, Allegro con Fuoco.

"Capriccio Espanol," in five movements, written by Rimsky-Korsakow, will also be rendered.

Becomes Honorary Member.

Brahm Van Den Berg has accepted the invitation of the Glendale Junior Music Club to become a honorary member of that organization. Mr. Van Den Berg plans to take part in several musical affairs in Glendale, where he resides, the coming season and will incorporate some novel ideas into his work there.

Band Concert at Bowl.

The Greater Los Angeles Municipal Band will give a concert this afternoon at 4:45 o'clock at the Hollywood Bowl. Antonio P. Sarli will conduct.

Following is the program: Choral, "Onward Christian Soldier" (Carter,) Chimes Obbligato by O. F. Rominger; Rhapsody, "Slavonic" (Freedman;) Review of 1921 Songs (Sarli;) Duet for cornet and trombone, "The End of a Perfect Day" (Bond,) Mr. John Hughes, cornet, Mr. S. R. Donaldson, trombone; grand opera selection, "Bohemian Girl" (Balfe;) descriptive humoresque, "Ain't We Got Fun" (Lampe;) Concert March, "The Hollywood Bowl" (Cronshaw,) dedicated to the Hollywood Bowl Association; Our Country, "The Star Spangled Banner."

Returns from Canada Tour.

Miss Margaret Messer, lyric soprano, recently returned from an extended visit of four months in Toronto and Hamilton, Can.

While in the East Miss Messer devoted her time largely to her studies with Arthur Blight of Toronto. She also made several appearances in concert, chief among which was her engagement as soloist at the luncheon given by the Canadian Club to the Duke of Devonshire, Canadian Governor-General.

Miss Messer will resume her professional work here.

Egan In Recital.

With a program of operatic selections, and French and Irish songs, Thomas Egan, the Irish tenor, is to be presented in concert the 29th inst. at Columbus Auditorium. This will be his only appearance prior to his departure for Mexico City to take part in opera, it is announced.

Assisting him on the program will be Lillian Breton who will sing several operatic numbers, and ballads.

Mr. Egan has been spending the past several weeks resting in this city. Following his Mexican engagement he will return to California, and then go East to fill a series of recital dates. After that he will return to his home in Dublin.

Incidental Melodies.

A special musical program has been arranged for the screening of "Mother O' Mine" next week at the Kinema theater. The overture will be Keler Bela's work written for a Hungarian comedy. This will be played under the direction of Rene Williams who will also conduct incidental orchestral music.

The program of selections includes Nevin's "Country Dance," Karganoff's "Romance," Zamecnik's "Ecstacy," Greig's "Erotik," Tschaikosky's "Le Lac des Cygnes," Flotow's "Stradella," Sibelius's "Finlandia" and Beethoven's "On the Death of a Hero," as well as a number of popular pieces.

Organist Returns.

Herbert Burland, organist, who has been playing at the T. & D. Theater in Oakland, has been engaged for the Rialto here, according to announcement by Sid Grauman. He has many friends in this city because of a former association with Grauman's theater. He left that house to undertake the engagement in San Francisco just finished.

Known as a composer, as well as interpreter, Mr. Burland started playing theater organs some seven years ago for the Keith circuit on the Atlantic Coast. For three years he played for vaudeville and pictures in a Montreal theater. He came to California about two and a half years ago.

He believes in the use of simple melodic numbers, in keeping with the picture presented, rather than a display of repertoire and technique.

Summer Engagements.

During the summer months Ann Thompson, pianist, has made concert appearances in San Francisco, Carmel-by-the-Sea and at Arrowhead with George Austin Moore, of the Orpheum circuit. The last mentioned affair was for the war veterans.

Prize Competition.

Announcement has been made of the postponement of the Paderewski Prize Fund Competition closing date from September 20 until December 31, in order to allow competitors more time. The prizes offered are 1000 for the best symphony and $500 for the best chamber music composition, either for strings alone or for pianoforte, or other solo instrument, or instruments, and strings, as decided by a group of judges, it is announced. The judges will be Charles-Martin Loeffler, Wallace Goodrich and Frederick Stock.

The contest is open only to American-born citizens or those born abroad of American parents. The works offered must never have been performed in public, and never previously offered at a competition. The standard of works required for public performance is also emphasized, and each orchestral score must be accompanied by an arrangement for the pianoforte, four hands.

There are other rules governing the sending of manuscripts and decisions.

The compositions submitted, it is announced, must be sent to Mrs. Elizabeth C. Allen, secretary of the Paderewski Fund at the New England Conservatory of Music, Huntington avenue and Gainsborough street, Boston.

Visits Native State.

Gertrude Auld, prominent vocal teacher of New York, is visiting here. She expects to return to the East to reopen her studios in the course of a week or two.

The singer was born in this State. She made her debut abroad in opera, and appeared extensively in Italy and Hungary, later giving recitals in New York for three seasons.

Gives Resident's Songs.

Mme. Patterson Wessitsh, soprano, who is visiting here, sang a program of Grace Adele Freeby's songs last Sunday evening at the Vista Del Arroyo in Pasadena.

Art Center Meeting.

At the meeting this evening, the Los Angeles Art Center will have as guest Mme. Genevra Johnstone-Bishop, the soprano. The host of the occasion will be Dr. Bruce Gordon Kingsley, and the hostess Baroness Ryhiner Morrell. The meeting will be held at 3108 West Seventh street.

Reviews Records.

During her stay in New York this summer Frieda Peycke made four records of her own compositions for the Brunswick Company. These have just been received by her in this city.

The numbers include "The Annual Protest" ("I don't want to go to school,") "Chums," with words by James W. Foley; "Woes of a Boy," and "Us Twins," with words by Elizabeth Gordon.

Miss Peycke spent some time studying with Nelson Illingworth, the song interpreter, while in New York.

Contralto Back From Tour.

Lela Johnstone, dramatic contralto, has just returned from concert engagements in the East. She will be heard in recital during the winter season. At present she is rehearsing programs with Grace Adele Freeby, as accompanist.

Plans Active Season.

Having inaugurated a series of morning musicales and a number of evening concerts during the past season France Goldwater, concert manager, announced her intention of enlargin the scope of her work this year She states that she will specialize in programs for women's clubs throughout the State, and that she has received endorsements from presidents of many clubs and from officers of the State federation with this in view. She will manage the professional affairs of a number of musicians and others.

Organ Dedication.

The dedicatory service and opening recital of the four-manual organ in the First Presbyterian Church will be held September 1.

The organ is the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert G. Wylie and is the largest and finest church intsrument in the city, it is said.

The solo and echo organs are located in the tower. The windows will be opened at the will of the organist so that the chimes can plainly be heard for nearly a block along Figueroa street.

Sibley G. Pease, organist and director, will give the opening recital. A large choir will assist.

Their Melody and Harmony Will Delight Concertgoers.

Needed Embellishment.

"Does it make you nervous to see a reporter taking down one of your speeches in shorthand?"

"Yes," said Senator Snortsworthy. "But that insures strict accuracy."

"That's why it makes me nervous. An orator never knows how good he is until a smart reporter has 'dressed up' his speech a little before it appears in print."—[Birmingham Age-Herald.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

Much summer work has been accomplished by the girls and boys of the Junior American Red Cross. The juniors have aided in garment production; in many summer schools desks and benches have been constructed for shipment to Europe to equip schoolhouses in devastated districts in France and Belgium; clubs have been organized, and there has been much to keep the youngsters busy during the vacation period.

A big opportunity to get busy has been opened to the children of the Junior Red Cross in connection with the collection of clothing for the people of Central Europe, a project being carried on jointly by the Red Cross and the American Friends Service Committee. Not only will the juniors, themselves, make contributions of clothing, but they are being called upon to act as messengers in the collection of bundles, to do clerical work, to aid in packing and to assist the chapters in many ways.

A contribution of $5000 to the Reed College loan fund made by a prominent Portland business man was made public at the college office last week. The name of the donor was withheld on request. The Reed loan fund was created some ten years ago to aid worthy students otherwise unable to continue their college education.

More than 230 students have been enabled to continue their schooling and $12,000 has been utilized and repaid as a result of the fifteen loan funds already established. The funds have ranged from $25 to $4000, the smallest of which has had a triple turnover. Not less than 103 loans have been made from the largest fund, which has been considerably swelled by the interest income. Loans totaling $3214 have been made from the original loan of $725. Interest received to date from all loans has been in excess of $370, making the total amount of the funds $7545.35.—[Portland Oregonian.

At Millwood, N. Y., there is a little farm that caters only to the wants of aged, helpless or otherwise unfortunate animals. It is supervised and was founded by Mrs. J. M. Ehrlich, who is president and founder of the Horse Aid Society of New York. Since the war ended she has taken many horses that served in the conflict and were either injured or made homeless, under her care. When Mrs. Ehrlich arrives at the farm in her motor truck ambulance the animals run to greet her.

More than $3,500,000 was expended by the American Red Cross for the relief of disabled ex-service men and their families during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, according to the annual report of the organization.

According to the report at the end of April there were 3402 active Red Cross chapters in the nation, with between 17,000 and 18,000 branches. Eight hundred and fifty-eight of them have paid executives.

There were 997,140 visits paid to the 11,690 patients in Army and Navy hospitals, 1,550,580 cases of service by chapters to World War veterans and their families, 32,495 loans made to men—85 per cent of which were paid back—and 148,032 claims of various kinds handled.

During the year the Red Cross had 280 workers assigned at regular Army hospitals and posts, 448 workers in public health service and similar establishments and 4794 nurses assigned to various duties.

There are now 37,787 nurses registered. Last year 499,800 patients were nursed. About 260 Red Cross chapters have established civilian health centers, where 6284 clinics were held last year, with 90,253 persons attending.

RATTLED.

"Oh, well, the Germans are rattled."

Samuel Untermeyer, the noted New York lawyer, was talking in Palm Beach about some of the German absurdities that were enunciated at the London conference.

"Lloyd George," he continued, "went at the Germans too hard. They lost their heads before his onslaught. It was like the case of the schoolboy:

"The principal of a school dashed into a school room, shot his finger out toward a fat boy, and yelled:

"'Hi, you there in the corner, do we eat the flesh of the whale?'

"The boy turned white. 'Y-yes, sir,' he stammered.

"'And what,' roared the principal—'what do we do with the bones?'

"'Why, sir,' said the boy, 'we l-lay them on the sides of our p-plates.'"—[Unidentified.

PIERRE KEY'S Music Article

BY PIERRE V. R. KEY.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20. — How many readers of this column, I wonder, have listened to and been thrilled by the playing of a good public school children orchestra, and to good singing by a chorus of boys and girls who have been taught by a music supervisor? On several occasions within the past year I have had both experiences. Each new experience has impressed me still more, because I see in the teaching of music in our school systems potentialities much too broad for anything like a correct estimate at the present time. Many people no doubt regard music in the grade and high schools as a fad; and in the light of common ignorance in the matter they can scarcely be blamed. Instead of ripping into these folk it is our business to endeavor to show the advantages of teaching the children to play musical instruments and to sing. The task will not be easy. Indifference is one of the most difficult elements to combat successfully, but the public interest in proper measure can be aroused through intelligent and patient effort to enlighten those who will respond to such appeals.

What encourages us to predict that we are approaching widespread response to the public school music movement is the advance it has made in the past few years. In certain parts of the United States doubters have been transformed into enthusiasts by what they have heard and seen. And by these successes we are justified in proclaiming that what has once been done can be done again . . . and, in this particular matter, will be done.

If there had not arisen proof indisputable of the value of music as a subject in the school curriculum we should not pledge ourself to cooperate in extending it. Since such proof is available we intend to argue the cause, and to become identified with every well-meant and intelligently organized endeavor which will carry it over the top.

We intend asking newspaper assistance in the granting of space sufficient to lay regularly before the people the advantages to children of being taught in a proper manner, and by unquestionably capable instructors, something about music. The time to cultivate the love for music in the child is during the childhood period. Many a man and woman who has always been inherently musical has been compelled, through force of circumstances to wait for the joys music brings until they reached maturity.

Is this right?

It is, on the contrary, both unfair and unnecessary.

FOR COMMON WELFARE.

First steps are being taken to organize all over the country groups of citizens to get back of the music-in-the-schools movement. A national music newspaper published in New York, which wields a tremendous influence because of its integrity and independent policy, is interesting itself in this public school music cause by sending broadcast a questionnaire which should be uncommonly fruitful.

The National Music Supervisors' conference and the Eastern Music Supervisors' conference will bring to bear the full strength of their respective members.

The women's music clubs may be counted on to increase the work in this direction which they have already done.

Individual patrons of the musical art, who recognize in public school music a vital force in every community, will be approached for a proper indorsement of the work—and the lending of such direct assistance as they find possible.

Educators and educational organizations (a number having already pledged their co-operation) will contribute the influence they command.

Finally, municipal, State and national officers and bodies are to be appealed to to harness a force which is but waiting to be utilized into performing a country-wide service.

I don't wish to fatigue the reader by devoting the whole of this article to details essential finally to know. I will set them down from time to time. Meanwhile I only ask that some thought be given to a subject which is ultimately to enlist the consideration of the majority of our best citizenship . . . a subject which under conditions anything but the best has demonstrated its inestimable worth as a developer of the mind, a source of uplifting pleasure during our leisure moments, and a force for stimulating the best that is in us.

CARUSO WIDELY LOVED.

In all music history we have no record of a man or woman, who passed on, leaving so many people sorrowing as people are for Enrico Caruso. He gave so much unalloyed pleasure to so many thousands that we appear unable to bear the thought that we are not to see and to hear him again.

Memories now are packed with touches of sadness. He suffered so deeply from pain for so many months; yet uncomplainingly. And for all that has been written of his doubts of ever recovering so that he might have returned again to his beloved Metropolitan Operahouse—well, down in his heart he must have felt that he would come back.

The memorial services—musically and in other ways—which have been held will be followed by movements to keep constantly fresh the memory of this great artist and generous man.

A little later I shall have more to write of Caruso; just now it is a difficult task, for he was my friend.

STRIKING MUSICIANS.

As I write these lines the orchestra musicians of the Mutual Protective Union have left their places in the largest motion-picture theaters of New York, and the vaudeville houses. They refused to accept the 20 per cent cut which the various managers said was necessary and, in the circumstances, right and proper.

There will come an adjustment, of course. But for the moment it looks as though there was a bit of stubbornness on the part of some of the union leaders. A large number of the union members have expressed themselves as absolutely against the arbitrary stand taken by the officers, who are termed "radicals."

It should not be long before a truce will be called. The autumn approaches, and winter must be provided for . . . by the musicians who want to earn money to put in the necessary supplies of coal.

LOU TELLEGAN, MISS FARRAR.

Lou Tellegen is indignant that his wife, Miss Geraldine Farrar, should have locked him out of her home. The breach between the singer and the actor has been widening for some time, and the climax came a few days ago in a letter written to

The People and Their Daily Troubles

DOROTHY DIX TALKS

Don't Take a Man's Love For Granted

BY DOROTHY DIX.

"Why is it," asked an old bachelor the other day, "that almost every woman believes that every man who comes about her is hopelessly in love with her? They do, you know, and the older, the homelier and the more unattractive a woman is the more firmly convinced is she that she is a vamp that nothing in trousers can resist.

"In my long social day I have been best man or usher or ring bearer, or served in some other function at some fifty or sixty weddings of my girl friends, to not one of whom did I ever utter one sentimental word, yet when they asked me why I don't marry myself I have only to draw a melancholy look and say, 'You should know the answer to that question,' to make them put on the smile of the cat that has just dined on the canary. Every one of them is perfectly convinced that she broke my heart by marrying somebody else.

"And every bachelor knows that all he has to do to make himself persona gratia with any married woman is merely to sigh and say, 'Oh, if I had only met you in time!' Even Caesar's wife is not proof against this time-honored jolly. Hand it to her and she swallows it hook, bait and sinker, and puts your name down at the head of those who are always invited to dinner and week-ends, and she treats you with the gentle tenderness befitting one to whom she has done a deadly, though unintentional, wrong.

"Why women should believe that men cherish this secret passion for them, heaven only knows. Common experience ought to teach them that there are mighty few bashful men in this world, and that when the average man wants a thing he not only doesn't hesitate to ask for it, he hustles out and tries to grab it.

"And this is true of women, as well as other things. Possibly there may be a swain too timid to tell, telephone, telegraph, or write his love, and who lets concealment gnaw upon his damaged cheek. But I've never met the gentleman. Neither have many women. The reason the men they know don't pop the question is not because they are afraid, or for some strange, mysterious reason the woman herself can't guess, but because they don't want to get married, or don't crave that particular woman for a wife.

"Women put too much stress on man's attentions, anyhow. They never seem to understand that there are many men like myself who are celibates by nature. We are lone wolves to whom the thought of being caught in the matrimonial trap, and domesticated, and tamed, is full of terror and we are bent and determined on escaping that fate if human guile can accomplish it.

"But while we would be bored to death if condemned to a perpetual duet with one women, we like to join in the chorus with many women. We enjoy feminine society as a whole. We like to go out with a pretty woman. We like to automobile, to golf, to play tennis with sporty little girls in smart sport togs. We like to discuss poetry and the last problem novel and play with soulful ladies over a dying fire. We like to pour out our troubles and tell our hopes and plans to some sympathetic feminine ear.

"Oh, there are a thousand reasons why men go to see women, and adore petticoats, and take them to theaters, and teas, and dinners, besides love. There are lots of men who hang around the women who feed them. There are other men who spend their evenings with their women friends because they have nowhere else to go. Mary Bell's parlor that is warm in winter and cool in summer is cheaper than a club, and just as comfortable. Besides the majority of men are simply bound to have a feminine audience, for a man will tell a woman things that he couldn't bring himself to tell any other man.

"So a man will get into the habit of going regularly to see a woman because he is hungry and wants home cooking, or is lonesome, or he wants to talk about himself, and he thinks he squares it with her if he takes her to the theater every now and then, or sends her a box of candy. He never dreams of being in love with her, or of having any intention of marrying her, but she, poor credulous creature, is sure that he is just breaking his heart about her, and she wonders why he doesn't speak, for she is obsessed by the feminine theory that she is a siren that no man could be around and not fall for.

"Then, after awhile, the man goes away, or he marries somebody else, and very often the result is real tragedy, for the woman has allowed herself to become interested in him. I have been called on to weep with more than one of these forsaken damsels, and always the burden of their moan is, 'I was sure he loved me. He must have loved me, because he came to see me two or three times a week for years, and he always took me to places, and I thought that the reason he never told me he loved me was because he was bashful, or he just was not one of the love-making kind.'

"To which I always reply, 'My good girl, there is no such thing as a bashful man, or one who hesitates to tell his love when he is in love. Never take a man seriously until he comes and pops the question at 11 o'clock in the morning, and brings along the engagement ring and names the day. Imitate your grandmother, who never permitted herself to even think of a man until after he had proposed, and who was then so surprised that all that she could do was to ejaculate, 'This is so sudden!'

"Then, there's the woman who can read sentiment into every word a man says, and every act he does. If you ask her to pass the salt at the table she considers it equivalent to a declaration of your undying affection. If you discuss Harding's foreign policy with her, she thinks you are feigning an interest in world politics to hide your broken heart, and she goes through life numbering you among her victims, and giving everyone to understand that the reason you never married was because you couldn't get her. Funny, isn't it?"

"Vanity," I replied, "is God's consolation prize to women."

HOT WEATHER BEST FOR THE BARBER.

The Warmer the Atmosphere the Faster the Hair and Whiskers Grow.

"Every trade has it's good season, and ours is the hottest time of the year," said the barber as he stropped the razor.

"What has the weather to do with the barber business?" a friend asked.

"The hotter the weather the faster a man's head of hair and beard grows," answered the razor wielder. "Hot weather opens the pores and allows hair to grow freely. The difference in growth between the hot summer months and the winter time is considerable, but it is not noticed, especially by the average man, because the change comes about so gradually."

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES."

Should Play the Game.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 15.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In the Los Angeles Times of August 9, appears a communication from the president of the Automobile Club of Southern California, Mr. Valentine, in response to an editorial (also printed, just below it) in the San Diego Union, in which Mr. Valentine defends the lack of a more aggressive policy in dealing with the serious delinquencies now so apparent in the State management of California's highways.

The matter presented concerns very deeply, not only the taxpayer's pocket, but the comfort of the large public which uses automobiles, and will, at no distant day, affect the reputation of California in more ways than one. Comments from the public, like the one I am now offering, seem to me not only timely, but positively called for.

The editorial in the San Diego Union, criticising the Automobile Club for insufficient action in the matter, seems to me timely, needed and justified; while Mr. Valentine's answer to this criticism seems to me inadequate. He informs the people that the club has not only been long cognizant of the distressing fact that the automobile roads of California, constructed at enormous expense, are rapidly going to pieces by reason of insufficient knowledge and experience in their builders, plus the effects of growingly heavy traffic over them, but that it has very carefully explored and verified these facts through its own body of engineers, and has made recommendations.

All this was good, so far as it went, but to stop at this point is to really accomplish nothing. When Mr. Valentine concludes that "the club feels that it is performing its duty by making public the facts of highway failure, the reasons therefor, and has fixed the responsibility," it leaves the people with a feeling that its rights are still unprotected, and that it is likely to continue to be at the mercy of politicians and gangsters, who "take all and give little," quite the same as if no expensive and exhaustive efforts to discover the facts had been made.

Experience ought long ago have proven to Mr. Valentine that politicians care very little about "exposing the facts," so long as the business stops at mere investigation and recommendation; it is only when a "club" is actually held over their heads that they take notice!

And so I would suggest that there is probably no more suited agency in the State to really "get after" the politicians and hold them to account than the Automobile Club of Southern California with its 57,000 members, each one of whom is personally interested in "getting value for the money" he expends to enjoy the roads.

The people, being merely disintegrated units, without coherence, can only look on and wonder why some one with authority, or some organization, does not confront and cure the trouble. And so "the people" puts it up to the Automobile Club to institute and continue such proceeding at law, as will actually bring about the needed cure.

Investigation has been ample and conclusive; now get into action, Mr. Valentine, the people are back of you! G. B. PRICE.

Was Capt. Kidd a Pirate?

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 11.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I was very much interested in reading in your article on Capt. Kidd, that the penalty of hanging hovered between the Earl of Bellomont, the Lord Chancellor of England, the Secretary of State, and the unfortunate Capt. Kidd, who, of course, was the one whose neck was ultimately twisted.

But, I think it is only fair to that same Secretary of State, William Blathwayt, my great-great-great-grandfather, that I should attempt to bring forward some proof that he did not really deserve the fate that your columns so delicately suggest he did deserve.

Eleven years ago I was looking over some old letters, and state papers, which had been lying in a dark cupboard in the old family home of the Blathwayt's, between 200 and 300 years. They had never been touched since they had been thrown in there by the Secretary of State himself. Amongst these letters, which included a number from Cardinal Mazarin to my ancestor, I found a very long letter from the Earl of Bellomont to William Blathwayt, in which he told Blathwayt all about his capture of Capt. Kidd, whom he described as the greatest liar and thief in the world.

In this letter he writes "Kidd has left his Moorish ship hidden in a little creek in the West Indies, of which he only knows the name, with a cargo of 30,000 pounds on board (in money of course,) while his own sloop contains 10,000 pounds. I am forced to allow the Sheriff 40 shillings a week for keeping Kidd safe, otherwise I should be in some doubt about him. He has, without doubt, a great deal of gold, which is apt to tempt men that have not principals of honor."

This letter was of such enormous length that at the end of it Lord Bellomont yearily says, "I have writ myself almost dead."

On the whole, I consider this official, authentic letter, is fairly good proof that Kidd himself was an undoubted pirate. And I am quite sure that the boys, both of England and of America, will be as disgusted as I am, when they learn that a Boston iconoclastic lecturer should venture to stand up, and, as Mr. Briggs would say, take all the happiness out of people's lives. Kidd has been a pirate in boyish eyes for nearly 300 years, and I don't see why he shouldn't go on being so until the end of time.

RAYMOND BLATHWAYT.

Agrees With Morris.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 14.—[To the Editor of the Times:] I was interested in Governor Morris's open letter in your paper this morning. I did not see his other letter, but I certainly agree with him in much he has to say. The Pharisaical thought is rampant today in human consciousness. Jesus bade the Pharisees of his day to beware of just cleansing the outside of the platter. The cleaning process should come from within. What we need is more love for our fellow men. We have enough laws. I read somewhere "If you keep on expecting it long enough, people will live down to your wildest suspicions. Let us see more good in people and thus aid them in living up to our highest expectations."

It is ridiculous to think people can be made religious by law, or merely by the outward observance of the Sunday attendance at church. Did anyone ever love to go to church or to read his Bible because he was compelled to do so? Robert Ingersoll was made to learn long chapters in the Bible as a punishment for wrongdoing, and as he grew up he learned to disbelieve in both the Bible and God. I go to church and read my Bible constantly because I love to do it, and I was not brought up with any religious training. My religion is not just for Sunday, either, but for every day in the week.

I have never been accustomed to attend theatrical performances on Sunday, yet many as good people as I am do so. What right have I, or as anyone else to tell others how they shall spend their Sundays? In the Bible we read, "The Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath", and we are enjoined to "pray without ceasing". If we do that then every day will be a Sabbath or Holy Day. If a man lives right and "does unto others as he would have others do to him" he will need no "blue laws" to regulate his living for one day in the week. "God is Love", and "Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is Liberty".

We are not going back to the dark ages and once more have the "Gibbet" the "Stocks" and the "ducking stool" to force the opinions of a few "fanatics" on us. Our forefathers came to this country to found a government under which we could have liberty to worship God in accordance with the dictates of our conscience. We want, and will have, no BLUE LAWS.

SAW NEW RAPID FORMED.

How a landslide completely changed the topography and created a new "rapid" almost before his eyes is entertainingly told by Lewis R. Freeman in the September Sunset. He says:

"When that ground-shaking rumble assailed us in a raw, rough wave of savage sound as we pulled around the bend, Blackmore was not sufficiently confident of his "dope theory" to care to get any nearer to it without a preliminary reconnaissance. Landing a hundred yards above where a white "eye-lash" of upflipped water showed above a line of big rocks, we clambered down along the right bank on foot. Presently all that had occurred was written clear for one who knew the way of a slide with a river, and the way of a river with a slide, to read as on the page of a book.

"'A new rapid and a whale at that!' gasped Blackmore in astonishment; 'the first one that's ever formed on the Columbia in my time!'

"The amazing thing that had happened was this: Some time in the spring a landslide of enormous size, doubtless started by an avalanche of snow far up in the Selkirks, had ripped the whole side of a mountain out and [illegible] down all the way across the river. As the pines were hurled backward for a couple of hundred feet above the river on the right or Rocky Mountain bank, it seemed reasonable to believe that the dam formed had averaged considerably more than that in height. As this would have backed up the river for at least ten or twelve miles, it is probable that the lake formed must have been rising for a number of days before it flowed over the top of the barrier and began to sluice it away. On an incalculably larger scale it was just the sort of thing we had heard and seen happening on Trident Creek, opposite our Kinbasket Lake camp."

would cause in any American State that I can recall.

The reformers who demand that the age should be reduced to, say, 21, are cursed by the conventional French advocate of the old order as iconoclasts, who would tear down the holy institution of the French home completely and thrust the nation into a vortex of irresponsibility, leading, inevitably, to some horrible situation comparable with that which is supposed to maintain in America.

Some strange facts are being brought out in the arguments. One of them is astonishing France and will, perhaps, equally astonish you in the United States. It is the apparent proof, backed by statistics which, of course, may be completely misleading, but on their face do not appear to be, that most of the unhappy marriages in France are contracted between couples one of whom has reached the age of thirty years or more.

CRUX OF QUESTION.

The question is: When does a man or woman reach an age of real discretion in this important matter?

A very few believe that this discretion comes as early as discretion is supposed to come in business matters, at the age of 21; but they are very few indeed. Far more say that marriage without the advice and consent of older people, especially of the parents, before the age of 30, will endanger French matrimonial institutions, and, therefore, the safety of the nation.

A happy medium is struck by those who now are busily arguing the question here and there and everywhere, and especially in the press.

The arguers are full of tales of prudent men and women who have waited long, but married unwisely, and there are those who rise to say that only widows and widowers can marry late with any reasonable chance of happiness. It is their contention that a man or woman who has lived single past the age of 30 has lost the mental and spiritual elasticity necessary to adaptation to another's personality to a degree which possibly could make a marriage happy.

CASES CITED.

Cases innumerable are cited to show that caution in marriage is one of the worst signs for the future, unless that caution be financial—and that is universally acclaimed in France, the land of "dots,' or "portions" taken by the bride to her adoring but not quite impetuous bridegroom.

And another thing is frankly and generally directed to attention by the disputants on one side. It is this: France's birth-rate is decreasing rapidly and needs to increase if she is to pull back to her old population, which was so seriously impaired by war losses.

Elderly couples proverbially have few children, and it is said that the first children of elderly parents are likely to lack physical stamina and mental energy. France needs both physical and mental "pep," and it is said that she cannot expect to get these unless matrimony is encouraged in all ways among the really young.

"The children of youth have youth," one states. "The children of age have age."

One wonders what the judgment of an American public on this question might be.

A curious contention is that the middle-aged affections almost always are silly, and likely if they permit themselves to search at all for objects to entwine themselves about to show exceedingly bad judgment in the choice.

Women Like to Cool Feet.

About half the women who drop into shoe stores to try on new pumps and the like have no idea of buying, says a clerk in one of the uptown stores who has been keeping tab on customers. They simply want to cool off their feet. During the hot weather the percentage of nonbuyers runs high.—[New York Sun.

PRINCESS MARY REAL HOUSEWIFE.

Cares Little for Strenuous Outdoor Sports.

Loves Children, Acts as Judge at Many Shows.

Dislikes Display and Wears but Few Jewels.

[SPECIAL FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Aug. 15.—Princess Mary continually grows in popularity. She has many of the characteristics of her brother, the Prince of Wales, and, had she his dash as well as her really notable mental brilliance, she would be a sort of second "Princess Pat"—who was patron saint of the Canadian troops during the war and although daughter of the Duke of Connaught and therefore a member of the royal family, finally married a sailor without rank or title—and with the full consent of her father and mother.

Princess Mary cares little for those things for which some English princesses have been famous—sports and out-of-doors life of the strenuous sort. She loves the out-of-doors and knows horses very well, but she never cared for tennis and her horsemanship, while good, has not been daring or especially expert.

She is instantly fascinated when she sees an infant and usually shows this in such manner as to leave no doubt whatever as to the genuineness of her emotions. She has been the judge at many a baby show, and her decisions always have been based upon sound understanding and beyond the reach of criticism.

When she is to be the chief judge at a baby show it is usual for her to see to it that each babe exhibited gets some sort of a prize, for she infinitely hates to see any disappointed mothers after a show is over.

Her accomplishments, include housewifely duties which one scarcely would expect of a royal British princess. She can cook, she even can bake bread. She can sew, she can embroider (and during the war did knit constantly;) she can keep accounts.

More and more frequently, in these days, she is called the "children's princess." There is not a movement having anything to do with babies or young children in which she does not take a vital interest.

Not only does she worship children, but quite obviously they instinctively delight in her and trust her. It is charming to observe the way they flock to her even when they do not know at all that she is Princess Mary.

The Times Literary Page Books and Their Makers

By Thomas F. and Lillian C. Ford

A DANIEL COME TO JUDGMENT.

Fourteen Public Men of Today Held Up to Scorn, to Ridicule, to Pity or as an Awful Warning; by an Anonymous Writer.

THE MIRRORS OF WASHINGTON. ANONYMOUS. With fourteen cartoons by Cesare and fourteen portraits. G. P. Putnam Sons, New York.

A book patterned after the more subtle and able "The Mirrors of Downing Street." It does or attempts to do for Washington what its prototype did for Downing street.

There are fourteen character sketches, if so they may be called, of men prominent in public life today. Some of the sketches are clever, with now and then a brilliant passage, while some are merely attempts at cleverness. The overstrained effect is perhaps the greatest weakness of the book. But it is for the most part well calculated to make entertaining reading, despite the manifest unfairness of many of its judgments and the malice that too often crops out. At least, there is little political bias, Johnson and Lodge, Wilson and Harding, and most of the others being alike handled without gloves.

Perhaps the most amazing characteristic of the book is the "know it all" air of the author or authors. Take this as an example:

"The explanation of President Wilson will be found in a certain inferiority. When all his personal history becomes known, when his papers and letters have all been published and read, when the memoirs of others have told all there is to be told, there will stand a clear something inadequate, a lack of robustness, mental or nervous, an excessive sensitiveness, over-self-consciousness, shrinking from life, a neurotic something that in the end brought on defeat and final overthrow . . .

"He forgot in his greatness and aloofness the national passion for equality; which a more brilliant politician, Mr. Roosevelt, appeased by acting as the people's court jester, and which a shrewder politician, Mr. Harding, guards against by reminding the country that he is 'just folks;' and in the end the masses turned upon him, like a Roman mob on a defeated gladiator."

It is comforting to know that at least one mind is great enough to fathom the mystery of Mr. Wilson without waiting until all the cards are on the table. That the author of this article takes it for granted that Mr. Wilson failed, although he held the Allied nations together during the war and throughout the Peace Conference, obtaining through sheer force of will and superior mentality a peace that approximated fairness and a union of the nations to prevent war that all the leading countries except our own have accepted. Whether or not Mr. Wilson failed is a question that only time can decide; no merely clever writer, however cock-sure he may be, is competent to decide this question at the present writing.

The treatment of Mr. Wilson is typical of the supercilious, all-knowing attitude that is maintained quite consistently throughout. President Harding is condemned without a trial as "small town stuff," though practically no account is taken of his record since March 4. With a prescience, the possession of which he at least never doubts, the author thus lays the President out:

"Warren Harding is 'just folks.' A witty woman said of him, alluding to the small-town novel which was popular at the time of his inauguration. 'Main street' has arrived at the White House!

"Mr. Harding's is a mind that bows to authority. What his party says is enough for Mr. Harding. His party is for protection and Mr. Harding is for protection; the arguments for protection may be readily assimilated from the editorial columns of one good big city newspaper and from a few campaign addresses. His party is for the remission of tolls on American shipping in the Panama Canal, and Mr. Harding is for the remission of tolls."

Secretary Hughes is a man with a formula, cold and dry; Secretary Hoover lacks political intelligence, and, worse still, has no dinner-table small talk; Mr. Lodge is a man eaten up with envy, inconsistent, 'with a genius for misunderstanding public sentiment;" Johnson a man that wears the Hearst livery, which the author thinks must be irksome to one who "hates all service and overshadowing. . . . He has no roots except in the mob."

A book that will vastly displease hero worshipers, so it is to those so constituted that it is fervently recommended.

The impartial reader who takes up the book with few preconceived notions as to any of the men, but who is truly seeking light on their character and achievements, will find but little to instruct. There are flashes that will amuse, but being superficial hits, lacking profundity, they will make no deep or lasting impression.

Clever caricature there is, and now and then something more. But on the whole the caricatures by Sesare reveal precisely the kind of treatment accorded to each of the men held up to ridicule, to scorn, to pity or as an awful warning as the case may be.

The liveliest and cleverest page in the book is the first one. It begins thus:

"Every time we elect a new President we learn what a various creature is the typical American.

"When Mr. Roosevelt was in the White House the typical American was gay, robustious, full of the joy of living, an expansive spirit from the frontier, a picturesque twentieth-century middle-class cavalier. He hit the line hard and did not flinch. And his laugh shook the skies.

"Came Wilson. And the typical American was troubled about his soul. Rooted firmly in the church-going past, he carried the banner of the Lord, Democracy, idealistic, bent on perfecting that old incorrigible man, he cuts off the right hand that offends him and votes for prohibition and woman suffrage, a Round Head in a Ford.

"Eight years and we have the perfectly typical American, Warren Gamaliel Harding of the modern type, the Square Head, typical of that America whose artistic taste is the movies, who reads and finds mental satisfaction in the vague inanities of the small-town newspaper, who has faith in America, who is for liberty, virtue, happiness, prosperity, law and order and all the standard generalities and holds them a perfect creed."

THE HEALTH OF THE CHILD.

So much interest has developed in Margaret McMillan's "The Nursery School," which E. P. Dutton & Co. published in an imported edition last year, that they have brought out an American edition. This was published last week with a foreword by Prof. Patty Smith Hill of Teachers' College, Columbia University. She calls it "an epoch-making book, which all who have to do with the welfare of children cannot afford to overlook." After saying that the world seems to be awakening at last to the fact that human destiny is largely shaped by the surroundings of childhood, she continues: "Miss McMillan presents a most convincing study in the power of early environment, which provides for health of body and the refinements of beauty, saturated with all those human values, which make for morality and for mental and emotional health . . . Miss McMillan saw that it was impossible to keep large numbers of children in the country, so she created a garden spot in the slums of the city. Her transformation of a London 'dump heap' into a paradise of childhood is a stroke of real genius. . . . When will America awaken to the fact that her babies are left to chance, and that, as Prof. John Watkins, of Johns Hopkins University, says, if we wait until the child is three years old it may be too late to form those habits of physical, mental and moral health, which are the foundation of character and citizenship?"

McFEE DEDICATES BOOK TO MORLEY.

William McFee's new book "Harbours of Memory," which Doubleday, Page & Co. promise in the fall, is dedicated to Christopher Morley "because," says Mr. McFee, "to him I owe my real initiation into the ranks of what one witty American journalist has called the I.W.W.—the Industrial Writers of the World." Mr. McFee likes to write dedications. It is a captivating habit he thinks and one which might easily lead to writing books merely as appendages to them. A man should not write too many books he says, "one for each of his friends, one for his mother, one for his wife, and, if he be one of those extravagantly emotional beings who provide so much amusement for their friends nowadays, one for his mistress as well. I would even permit him one more so that he could dedicate it to his publishers, and it would be a worthy deed."

BIOGRAPHY OF LONDON.

Jack London's biography, written by his wife, Charmian London, and to be called "The Book of Jack London," will be one of the Century Company's September 16 publications.

It is to be published in England the latter part of August, and much interest is reported there, even in advance of publication. "John o' London," writing from London to the New York Times Book Review, says that he has "for a long time been receiving inquiries from unknown correspondents about the date of the publication of the biography of Jack London." He also says that "no large biography is likely to have a more popular welcome." "I predict," he continues, "that the libraries will have to take the work very freely to satisfy their clients, and that at the Free Libraries the book will be in the same unusual demand."

NEW SOUTH SEA BOOK.

Recently San Francisco dispatches to a New York newspaper announced the return from an extended South Sea exploration trip of the auxiliary yacht Kawa, whose discoveries included the finding of a new group of Polynesian islands. Now comes the announcement by Putnams that they will publish in September a book by Walter E. Traprock leader of the expedition. The illustrations will include many photographs which are said to be most unusual, some of them establishing scientific discoveries of importance.

THE DEATH OF LOVAT FRASER.

The untimely death of Claud Lovat Fraser is announced from England. The young artist—he was only 31—did the costumes and settings for John Gay's "The Beggar's Opera," now in its second year in London and until recently, on tour in this country. Mr. Fraser also did the colored cover for the edition of "The Beggar's Opera" published in this country by B. W. Huebsch. John Drinkwater said of him: "His name will be highly honored among the little band who helped to bring back some life and truth to the English theater."

TWO NEW BOOKS.

Small, Maynard & Co. announce for August publication "The Stories Editors Buy and Why," by Jean Wick, and "Mavis of Green Hill," a novel by Faith Baldwin.

"The Sheik," by E. M. Hull (by the same company) is in its fifteenth printing at the moment. The vogue of this first novel has created more than a little curiosity about the author who has been unknown to fame, at least on this side of the Atlantic. "E. M. Hull" is Mrs. Edith M. Hull and "The Sheik" is her first published work.

HISTORY OF FISHING.

All lovers of the fisherman's art will learn with pleasure that E. P. Dutton & Co., announce for early publication in America a book by William Radcliffe, English authority on the subject, on "Fishing from the Earliest Times." Henry Van Dyke, a famous fisherman himself, describes it as "a book on the antiquity, pertinacity and perpetual modernity of the angling spirit" and writes the author that he can "be sure that I shall be glad to do anything that I can to promote interest in your book in this country."

ALICE ADAMS

By Booth Tarkington

Vision —Not photography—Makes Realism!

SOME NOVELISTS magnify details; often, in that process, they delve among endless unpleasantries. This is probably what a popular critic had in mind when he wrote: "Where others photograph, or penetrate with satirical intent, Booth Tarkington sees around!" Booth Tarkington has VISION. Henry Seidel Canby (THE LITERARY REVIEW) appreciates this, saying. " 'Alice Adams' is the lost youth of that wonderful mother in 'The Way of All Flesh.' "

A PSYCHOPATHIC STUDY OF POE.

REVIEWED BY WALTER LINDLEY, M.D.

EDGAR A. POE, A STUDY. By John W. Robertson, M.D. Part I—A Psychopathic Study. Part II—A Bibliographic Study. Printed by Bruce Brough, San Francisco.

Byron, Sir Richard Burton, George Borrow and William Blake were all writers of genius, each of whom would furnish a profitable study for a psychologist, but Edgar Allan Poe, our great (shall I say our greatest) American poet, is the first of modern authors to be favored with such attention.

Dr. Robertson is peculiarly fitted for this task. As an alienist he ranks, in the eyes of the profession of California, with Dr. H. G. Brainerd, while, in addition, he is a noted and incorrigible bibliophile and has in his invaluable collection on Russian Hill, San Francisco, first editions of practically everything that Poe wrote.

Edgar Allan Poe was editor of and contributor to several magazines published from 1825 to 1845, and Dr. Robertson has delved into many dusty piles of what the average reader would consider junk, and thus secured files of value for writing this "Study;" among them are the Southern Literary Messenger, published in Richmond, Va., 1835; the Yanks, and Boston Literary Gazette, published in Boston, beginning 1829; the American Museum of Science, Literature, and the Arts, a monthly magazine published in Baltimore, beginning 1838; Graham's Ladies' and Gentlemen's Magazine, published in Philadelphia; the New Mirror, published in New York, was another to which Poe was a frequent contributor; the Pioneer, a Literary and Critical Magazine, published its first number in 1843.

The Broadway Journal and several other publications have been carefully studied by Dr. Robertson in order to secure all possible light on Poe's psychopathic condition. It was this abnormal mental condition that led Poe from time to time to resort to alcohol to the point of delirium tremens, and to opium, so that finally at the age of 39, he was rescued from the gutter to die in a Baltimore hospital, long before his time. That Poe suffered from inherited dipsomania, there is no doubt, but in spite of this psychopathic handicap what a marvelous output there was in the few short years of his adult life.

"The Raven" first appeared in the Mirror (N. Y.) in 1845. Dr. Robertson believes this single poem is probably better known to the world than any other in English literature. He may be right, but my judgment is that Gray's "Elegy" is the best known; particularly the stanza:

"The boast of heraldry, the pomp
of power,
And all that beauty, all that wealth, e'er gave,
Await, alike, the inevitable hour;
The paths of glory lead but to the grave."

In writing of the psychopathic side of the poet, Dr. Robertson says the term "drunk" is a condition of physical paralysis accompanied by mental confusion with that more serious condition of forgetfulness or mental alienation. . . Poe could take large quantities of stimulants without producing physical drunkeness . . . We must judge Poe by his works rather than by the hasty and ill-natured conclusions of certain of his contemporaries. He should have been classed with those equally unfortunate, because of heredity or habit. Lamb, Shelley, Swinburne, Coleridge and De Quincey as associates would have formed a literary Aidenn, which even Poe, as solitary as he was, would have welcomed. In addition to his use of alcohol, there is no doubt that Poe occasionally indulged in opium. It is equally certain it never became a habit. De Quincey, in his "Confessions," states that he ordinarily took 8000 minims of laudanum daily—equivalent to 320 grains of opium and eighteen ounces of alcohol. This shows the possibilities of the habitue.

The idea that is abroad that Poe, with all his genius, was a villain, an ingrate, guilty of unbridled passions and immoral practices, was due, according to Dr. Robertson, to the venom and vicious envy of Rufus Wilmot Griswold, who wrote the first extended notice of his death (New York Tribune, 1849,) wrote the first biography of Poe, and was the editor of the first edition of Poe's collected works. It was due to the biography sent out by Griswold that the Edinburgh Review said: "Edgar Allan Poe was incontestably one of the most worthless persons of whom we have any record in the world of letters . . . He seems to have succeeded in attracting and combining, in his own person, all the floating vices which genius had hitherto shown itself capable of grasping in its widest and most eccentric orbit." Griswold was in death to Poe as the old leech in "The Scarlet Letter" was in life to the conscience-stricken clergyman.

Dr. Robertson makes a very interesting quotation from one of Poe's reviews. "Is Bryant a better poet than Longfellow? Certainly not, for in Longfellow's pages the spirit of poetry—ideality—walks abroad, while Bryant's sole merit is tolerable versification and fine marches of description. Longfellow is undoubtedly the best poet in America."

Toward the close of this section of the work, Dr. Robertson says: "The insanity of genius has become a familiar theme because so many psychologists and pseudoscientists have endeavored to point out a close relationship." From my limited observation, my opinion is that Dr. Robertson, in order to impress the contrary idea, rather overstates his proposition when he says: "Insanity chooses, for its victims, not the highly intelligent, nor the genius, but rather the subnormal and the unwashed." If he had placed the phrase "more frequently," before "chooses," the statement might pass unquestioned. During the latter years of Poe's life, his habits and his thoughts became more and more unreasonable. He wrote "Eureka," a volume in which he talks volubly of Newton, La Place and Kepler, and evolves a new theory of the universe, "and we find him a paranoid vociferously voicing unintelligible hypotheses based on misconception and ignorance of natural laws." The author states that "there are too many Christian Scientists, Oliver Lodgists and others of the religionists for us to be able to draw a distinct line between those merely credulous and the mentally unsound." In concluding this section of the work the writer says: "Poe's alcoholic excesses were something for which he was not responsible. His drinking was the result of hereditary compulsion." Poe was a handsome man with wonderful eyes. He was worshiped in his home, particularly by his wife's mother, who writes: "I always sat up with him when he was writing, and gave him a cup of hot coffee every hour or two. At home he was simple, and affectionate as a child, and during all the years he lived with me I do not remember a single night that he failed to come to me and kiss his 'mother' before going to bed." The mutual devotion of Mrs Clemm and her son-in-law should do much toward counteracting the coarse mother-in-law stories that are so gleefully circulated. Dr. Robertson's dedication of his work is as follows: "To my wife, who for thirty years has enjoyed with me my book collecting and my book collection." It was Henry Ward Beecher who said his wife looked askance at some of his book expenditures so he had his purchases taken to his study at old Plymouth Church, and from there he would take them home, one book at a time and surreptitiously place them on his library shelves.

In the comprehensive bibliographic section of this monumental volume, Dr. Robertson shows his affection for the works of Poe and for good old books in general. That his valuation of Poe is widespread the sale of Poe first editions is ample proof. In 1919 a first edition of Poe's "Tamerlane and Other Poems," Boston, Calvin F. S. Thomas, Printer, 1827, sold for $11,600, while $1000 is an unusually low selling figure for even the least desired of Poe's first editions.

Poe personally knew and loved Chief Justice Marshall and wrote a short and most appreciative biographical sketch of the great jurist covering twenty-two columns.

Poe did not write with the idea of inculcating a lesson or expressing the thrills of passion, but his great aim was the development of

BOOKS, ART AND ARCHITECTURE.

Distinguished Woman Writer Says Los Angeles is Destined to Become One of the Great Art Centers of the World.

BY MARAH ELLIS RYAN,
Author of "The Flute of the Gods," "For the Soul of Rafael," etc.

If it is as a writer I have been asked to send either memories, facts or hopes to this interesting page, I frankly offer the statement that I am probably the only author in this new literary corner of the world who has not put out a book for three years—which leaves me little to say of books. I can't be interested in books I've already written—we write them to get them out of our heads, do we not? Only the books we mean to write are still fascinating. A friend counted mine lately, told me there were sixteen, eight of them western, Californian and Mexican, and, alas—not one of them built around a romantic cowboy! The cowboy and I know why. The real ones know they are just about as romantic as I think they are.

But with sixteen books on the market one has purchased the right to enjoy other methods of self-expression occasionally, and California's allure furnishes the occasion for me—not even the ever-present movie has hypnotized my pen into numbered scenes for the cameraman. But the plumber, and the man who moved me the time before the last, and the boy who delivers the groceries are all busy writing romance (two of them on their own life stories)—thus I am assured there will be no dearth of dramatic or literary material, even though a free lance here and there should, like myself, prefer a little pasear from the game.

It is many years since the medicine men of Manhattan signed my death warrant—all but dating it—and sent me West on a trail of joyous findings. We never know our luck—for those wise chaps were really the gods of the machine for me. I did not object to going "over the range" if my working days on earth were ended, but I did strenuously object to dying with snow under my window. The Eskimo idea of hell is a frozen place, and I agree with the Eskimo.

Thus I came to the ever-summerland to die, and knew from the first visit of the red buttes in the Navajo ranges that I was coming to my own country. It was so, though there have been many crossings of the Mother Mountains since then, and the trail was long and devious by which I at last came back to a place of content on a hilltop in California. The trail has been of Indian pueblos, Mexican adobes, desert tents and cliff dwelling camps, and my household gods are largely mementoes of those wanderings. The Indian flute on my wall echoes for me the chants of white-sashed, brown priests of old Walpi in the desert. Beside it is a belt with prayer symbols, woven for me by a Pagan friend. And another camp treasure is the horse-hair reata with which to circle my tent in the nighttime that the snakes keep to their own side of line; this, the work and gift of a New Mexican cook and camp man. Said cook could trace his ancestry through three centuries in America and back to the province in Spain from which his soldier ancestor had come in 1593. California seems to be a colony of yesterday, compared with the Rio Grande conquerors.

But they all belong to my adored Southwest, and I am so absolutely content at getting back and watching from my veranda the changing panorama circling from Mt. San Antonio, Catalina, that the tools of a writer fail to interest me, though I did arrive with two California books definitely planned.

I recall a delightful season of similar laziness years ago, when I bought a mountain place in Western Pennsylvania—jubilant that I could at last write in the great outdoors where I could work in the pine forest, rejoice in the pink bloom of the giant laurel, and hear the changing chorus of the birds from twitterings at early dawn to the weird cry of the whippoorwill in the dusk at the edge of the orchard. My hopes were more than fulfilled: I had all these things—also eagles and owls—a large-size rattlesnake den—occasional deer, and more than occasional wildcat screaming at belated travelers in the wilderness.

That background, and the mountaineers themselves, should have proven great material for summertime copy, but day after day I fared forth to the woods with a portfolio, and night after night came back with blank pages. Forest life was so interesting I wanted to enjoy, rather than waste time merely writing about it. I wanted to learn about herb cures from an old lady who was credited with being on shady terms with his Satanic majesty; I wanted to prospect for a lost lead mine of the old Indian days; I wanted to swap ghost stories with a gentle-voiced mountaineer who was under bonds never to strike anyone again because he had broken the neck of the last man he had slapped. So there were numberless things more interesting than writing.

But late the next winter, when I lived in a log cabin, to which my meals were carried through three feet of snow from the farmhouse a half-mile away—then I wrote my summer story of the mountain!

That remembrance has a tendency to reassure me now when I am asked about writing in California, and I have only blank pages in the portfolio.

But since the old days in Capistrano, where as a member of the Landmark Club, I lived in the mission, planted roses in the inner court, and wrote "For the Soul of Rafael," I have carried on all my trails a dream of an adobe in California under my own vine and fig tree, a Eucalyptus at the back and a Gold of Ophir rose somewhere in the offing. Life, however, is made up of compromises, and as adobe houses are not built on high hills, I have contented myself with a substitute—after an attempt and failure to live in a valley bungalow. To my surprise, I discovered I was not a bungalow person. In a cave or a tent one can have privacy, but not in a bungalow.

The golden rose is with me on the hilltop, also bamboo and matilija poppy, and other realizations of the dream, but I had to plant the Eucalyptus because the former owner of my hilltop begrudged it roof room. I am warned by kindly nurserymen that they are voracious feeders, and that feathery acacia or nice, fat palms would take less space.

Whereupon I say—go to! Palms and acacias never made me homesick when flashed on a screen at

A DANIEL COME TO JUDGMENT.

Fourteen Public Men of Today Held Up to Scorn, to Ridicule, to Pity or as an Awful Warning; by an Anonymous Writer.

THE MIRRORS OF WASHINGTON. ANONYMOUS. With fourteen cartoons by Cesare and fourteen portraits. G. P. Putnam Sons, New York.

A book patterned after the more subtle and able "The Mirrors of Downing Street." It does or attempts to do for Washington what its prototype did for Downing street.

There are fourteen character sketches, if so they may be called, of men prominent in public life today. Some of the sketches are clever, with now and then a brilliant passage, while some are merely attempts at cleverness. The overstrained effect is perhaps the greatest weakness of the book. But it is for the most part well calculated to make entertaining reading, despite the manifest unfairness of many of its judgments and the malice that too often crops out. At least, there is little political bias, Johnson and Lodge, Wilson and Harding, and most of the others being alike handled without gloves.

Perhaps the most amazing characteristic of the book is the "know it all" air of the author or authors. Take this as an example:

"The explanation of President Wilson will be found in a certain inferiority. When all his personal history becomes known, when his papers and letters have all been published and read, when the memoirs of others have told all there is to be told, there will stand a clear something inadequate, a lack of robustness, mental or nervous, an excessive sensitiveness, over-self-consciousness, shrinking from life, a neurotic something that in the end brought on defeat and final overthrow . . .

"He forgot in his greatness and aloofness the national passion for equality; which a more brilliant politician, Mr. Roosevelt, appeased by acting as the people's court jester, and which a shrewder politician, Mr. Harding, guards against by reminding the country that he is 'just folks;' and in the end the masses turned upon him, like a Roman mob on a defeated gladiator."

It is comforting to know that at least one mind is great enough to fathom the mystery of Mr. Wilson without waiting until all the cards are on the table. That the author of this article takes it for granted that Mr. Wilson failed, although he held the Allied nations together during the war and throughout the Peace Conference, obtaining through sheer force of will and superior mentality a peace that approximated fairness and a union of the nations to prevent war that all the leading countries except our own have accepted. Whether or not Mr. Wilson failed is a question that only time can decide; no merely clever writer, however cock-sure he may be, is competent to decide this question at the present writing.

The treatment of Mr. Wilson is typical of the supercilious, all-knowing attitude that is maintained quite consistently throughout. President Harding is condemned without a trial as "small town stuff," though practically no account is taken of his record since March 4. With a prescience, the possession of which he at least never doubts, the author thus lays the President out:

"Warren Harding is 'just folks.' A witty woman said of him, alluding to the small-town novel which was popular at the time of his inauguration. 'Main street' has arrived at the White House!

"Mr. Harding's is a mind that bows to authority. What his party says is enough for Mr. Harding. His party is for protection and Mr. Harding is for protection; the arguments for protection may be readily assimilated from the editorial columns of one good big city newspaper and from a few campaign addresses. His party is for the remission of tolls on American shipping in the Panama Canal, and Mr. Harding is for the remission of tolls."

Secretary Hughes is a man with a formula, cold and dry; Secretary Hoover lacks political intelligence, and, worse still, has no dinner-table small talk; Mr. Lodge is a man eaten up with envy, inconsistent, 'with a genius for misunderstanding public sentiment;" Johnson a man that wears the Hearst livery, which the author thinks must be irksome to one who "hates all service and overshadowing. . . . He has no roots except in the mob."

A book that will vastly displease hero worshipers, so it is to those so constituted that it is fervently recommended.

The impartial reader who takes up the book with few preconceived notions as to any of the men, but who is truly seeking light on their character and achievements, will find but little to instruct. There are flashes that will amuse, but being superficial hits, lacking profundity, they will make no deep or lasting impression.

Clever caricature there is, and now and then something more. But on the whole the caricatures by Cesare reveal precisely the kind of treatment accorded to each of the men held up to ridicule, to scorn, to pity or as an awful warning as the case may be.

The liveliest and cleverest page in the book is the first one. It begins thus:

"Every time we elect a new President we learn what a various creature is the typical American.

"When Mr. Roosevelt was in the White House the typical American was gay, robustious, full of the joy of living, an expansive spirit from the frontier, a picturesque twentieth-century middle-class cavalier. He hit the line hard and did not flinch. And his laugh shook the skies.

"Came Wilson. And the typical American was troubled about his soul. Rooted firmly in the church-going past, he carried the banner of the Lord, Democracy, idealistic, bent on perfecting that old incorrigible man, he cuts off the right hand that offends him and votes for prohibition and woman suffrage, a Round Head in a Ford.

"Eight years and we have the perfectly typical American, Warren Gamaliel Harding of the modern type, the Square Head, typical of that America whose artistic taste is the movies, who reads and finds mental satisfaction in the vague inanities of the small-town newspaper, who has faith in America, who is for liberty, virtue, happiness, prosperity, law and order and all the standard generalities and holds them a perfect creed."

THE HEALTH OF THE CHILD.

So much interest has developed in Margaret McMillan's "The Nursery School," which E. P. Dutton & Co. published in an imported edition last year, that they have brought out an American edition. This was published last week with a foreword by Prof. Patty Smith Hill of Teachers' College, Columbia University. She calls it "an epoch-making book, which all who have to do with the welfare of children cannot afford to overlook." After saying that the world seems to be awakening at last to the fact that human destiny is largely shaped by the surroundings of childhood, she continues: "Miss McMillan presents a most convincing study in the power of early environment, which provides for health of body and the refinements of beauty, saturated with all those human values, which make for morality and for mental and emotional health . . . Miss McMillan saw that it was impossible to keep large numbers of children in the country, so she created a garden spot in the slums of the city. Her transformation of a London 'dump heap' into a paradise of childhood is a stroke of real genius. . . . When will America awaken to the fact that her babies are left to chance, and that, as Prof. John Watkins, of Johns Hopkins University, says, if we wait until the child is three years old it may be too late to form those habits of physical, mental and moral health, which are the foundation of character and citizenship?"

McFEE DEDICATES BOOK TO MORLEY.

William McFee's new book "Harbours of Memory," which Doubleday, Page & Co. promise in the fall, is dedicated to Christopher Morley "because," says Mr. McFee, "to him I owe my real initiation into the ranks of what one witty American journalist has called the I.W.W. —the Industrial Writers of the World." Mr. McFee likes to write dedications. It is a captivating habit he thinks and one which might easily lead to writing books merely as appendages to them. A man should not write too many books he says, "one for each of his friends, one for his mother, one for his wife, and, if he be one of those extravagantly emotional beings who provide so much amusement for their friends nowadays, one for his mistress as well. I would even permit him one more so that he could dedicate it to his publishers, and it would be a worthy deed."

BIOGRAPHY OF LONDON.

Jack London's biography, written by his wife, Charmian London, and to be called "The Book of Jack London," will be one of the Century Company's September 16 publications.

It is to be published in England the latter part of August, and much interest is reported there, even in advance of publication. "John o' London," writing from London to the New York Times Book Review, says that he has "for a long time been receiving inquiries from unknown correspondents about the date of the publication of the biography of Jack London." He also says that "no large biography is likely to have a more popular welcome." "I predict," he continues, "that the libraries will have to take the work very freely to satisfy their clients, and that at the Free Libraries the book will be in the same unusual demand."

NEW SOUTH SEA BOOK.

Recently San Francisco dispatches to a New York newspaper announced the return from an extended South Sea exploration trip of the auxiliary yacht Kawa, whose discoveries included the finding of a new group of Polynesian islands. Now comes the announcement by Putnams that they will publish in September a book by Walter E. Traprock leader of the expedition. The illustrations will include many photographs which are said to be most unusual, some of them establishing scientific discoveries of importance.

THE DEATH OF LOVAT FRASER.

The untimely death of Claud Lovat Fraser is announced from England. The young artist—he was only 31—did the costumes and settings for John Gay's "The Beggar's Opera," now in its second year in London and until recently, on tour in this country. Mr. Fraser also did the colored cover for the edition of "The Beggar's Opera" published in this country by B. W. Huebsch. John Drinkwater said of him: "His name will be highly honored among the little band who helped to bring back some life and truth to the English theater."

TWO NEW BOOKS.

Small, Maynard & Co. announce for August publication "The Stories Editors Buy and Why," by Jean Wick, and "Mavis of Green Hill," a novel by Faith Baldwin.

"The Sheik," by E. M. Hull (by the same company) is in its fifteenth printing at the moment. The vogue of this first novel has created more than a little curiosity about the author who has been unknown to fame, at least on this side of the Atlantic. "E. M. Hull" is Mrs. Edith M. Hull and "The Sheik" is her first published work.

HISTORY OF FISHING.

All lovers of the fisherman's art will learn with pleasure that E. P. Dutton & Co., announce for early publication in America a book by William Radcliffe, English authority on the subject, on "Fishing from the Earliest Times." Henry Van Dyke, a famous fisherman himself, describes it as "a book on the antiquity, pertinacity and perpetual modernity of the angling spirit" and writes the author that he can "be sure that I shall be glad to do anything that I can to promote interest in your book in this country."

A PSYCHOPATHIC STUDY OF POE.

REVIEWED BY WALTER LINDLEY, M.D.

EDGAR A. POE. A STUDY. By John W. Robertson, M.D. Part I—A Psychopathic Study. Part II—A Bibliographic Study. Printed by Bruce Brough, San Francisco.

Byron, Sir Richard Burton, George Borrow and William Blake were all writers of genius, each of whom would furnish a profitable study for a psychologist, but Edgar Allan Poe, our great (shall I say our greatest) American poet, is the first of modern authors to be favored with such attention.

Dr. Robertson is peculiarly fitted for this task. As an alienist he ranks, in the eyes of the profession of California, with Dr. H. G. Brainerd, while, in addition, he is a noted and incorrigible bibliophile and has in his invaluable collection on Russian Hill, San Francisco, first editions of practically everything that Poe wrote.

Edgar Allan Poe was editor of and contributor to several magazines published from 1825 to 1845, and Dr. Robertson has delved into many dusty piles of what the average reader would consider junk, and thus secured files of value for writing this "Study;" among them are the Southern Literary Messenger, published in Richmond, Va., 1835; the Yanks, and Boston Literary Gazette, published in Boston, beginning 1829; the American Museum of Science, Literature and the Arts, a monthly magazine published in Baltimore, beginning 1838; Graham's Ladies' and Gentlemen's Magazine, published in Philadelphia; the New Mirror, published in New York, was another to which Poe was a frequent contributor; the Pioneer, a Literary and Critical Magazine, published its first number in 1843.

The Broadway Journal and several other publications have been carefully studied by Dr. Robertson in order to secure all possible light on Poe's psychopathic condition. It was this abnormal mental condition that led Poe from time to time to resort to alcohol to the point of delirium tremens, and to opium, so that finally at the age of 39, he was rescued from the gutter to die in a Baltimore hospital, long before his time. That Poe suffered from inherited dipsomania, there is no doubt, but in spite of this psychopathic handicap what a marvelous output there was in the few short years of his adult life.

"The Raven" first appeared in the Mirror (N. Y.) in 1845. Dr. Robertson believes this single poem is probably better known to the world than any other in English literature. He may be right, but my judgment is that Gray's "Elegy" is the best known; particularly the stanza:

"The boast of heraldry, the pomp
of power,
And all that beauty, all that
wealth, e'er gave,
Await, alike, the inevitable hour;
The paths of glory lead but to the grave."

In writing of the psychopathic side of the poet, Dr. Robertson says the term "drunk" is a condition of physical paralysis accompanied by mental confusion with that more serious condition of forgetfulness or mental alienation. . . . Poe could take large quantities of stimulants without producing physical drunkeness . . . We must judge Poe by his works rather than by the hasty and ill-natured conclusions of certain of his contemporaries. He should have been classed with those equally unfortunate, because of heredity or habit, Lamb, Shelley, Swinburne, Coleridge and De Quincey as associates would have formed a literary Aidenn, which even Poe, as solitary as he was, would have welcomed. In addition to his use of alcohol, there is no doubt that Poe occasionally indulged in opium. It is equally certain it never became a habit. De Quincey, in his "Confessions," states that he ordinarily took 8000 minims of laudanum daily—equivalent to 320 grains of opium and eighteen ounces of alcohol. This shows the possibilities of the habitue.

The idea that is abroad that Poe, with all his genius, was a villain, an ingrate, guilty of unbridled passions and immoral practices, was due, according to Dr. Robertson, to the venom and vicious envy of Rufus Wilmot Griswold, who wrote the first extended notice of his death (New York Tribune, 1849,) wrote the first biography of Poe, and was the editor of the first edition of Poe's collected works. It was due to the biography sent out by Griswold that the Edinburgh Review said: "Edgar Allan Poe was incontestably one of the most worthless persons of whom we have any record in the world of letters . . . He seems to have succeeded in attracting and combining, in his own person, all the floating vices which genius had hitherto shown itself capable of grasping in its widest and most eccentric orbit." Griswold was in death to Poe as the old leech in "The Scarlet Letter" was in life to the conscience-stricken clergyman.

Dr. Robertson makes a very interesting quotation from one of Poe's reviews. "Is Bryant a better poet than Longfellow? Certainly not, for in Longfellow's pages the spirit of poetry—ideality—walks abroad, while Bryant's sole merit is tolerable versification and fine marches of description. Longfellow is undoubtedly the best poet in America."

Toward the close of this section of the work, Dr. Robertson says: "The insanity of genius has become a familiar theme because so many psychologists and pseudoscientists have endeavored to point out a close relationship." From my limited observation, my opinion is that Dr. Robertson, in order to impress the contrary idea, rather overstates his proposition when he says: "Insanity chooses, for its victims, not the highly intelligent, nor the genius, but rather the subnormal and the unwashed." If he had placed the phrase "more frequently," before "chooses," the statement might pass unquestioned. During the latter years of Poe's life, his habits and his thoughts became more and more unreasonable. He wrote "Eureka," a volume in which he talks volubly of Newton, La Place and Kepler, and evolves a new theory of the universe, "and we find him a paranoid vociferously voicing unintelligible hypotheses based on misconception and ignorance of natural laws." The author states that "there are too many Christian Scientists, Oliver Lodgists and others of the religionists for us to be able to draw a distinct line between those merely credulous and the mentally unsound." In concluding this section of the work the writer says: "Poe's alcoholic excesses were something for which he was not responsible. His drinking was the result of hereditary compulsion." Poe was a handsome man with wonderful eyes. He was worshiped in his home, particularly by his wife's mother, who writes: "I always sat up with him when he was writing, and gave him a cup of hot coffee every hour or two. At home he was simple, and affectionate as a child, and during all the years he lived with me I do not remember a single night that he failed to come to me and kiss his 'mother' before going to bed." The mutual devotion of Mrs. Clemm and her son-in-law should do much toward counteracting the coarse mother-in-law stories that are so gleefully circulated. Dr. Robertson's dedication of his work is as follows: "To my wife, who for thirty years has enjoyed with me my book collecting and my book collection." It was Henry Ward Beecher who said his wife looked askance at some of his book expenditures so he had his purchases taken to his study at old Plymouth Church, and from there he would take them home, one book at a time and surreptitiously place them on his library shelves.

In the comprehensive bibliographic section of this monumental volume, Dr. Robertson shows his affection for the works of Poe and for good old books in general. That his valuation of Poe is widespread the sale of Poe first editions is ample proof. In 1919 a first edition of Poe's "Tamerlane and Other Poems," Boston, Calvin F. S. Thomas, Printer, 1827, sold for $11,600, while $1000 is an unusually low selling figure for even the least desired of Poe's first editions.

Poe personally knew and loved Chief Justice Marshall and wrote a short and most appreciative biographical sketch of the great jurist covering twenty-two columns.

Poe did not write with the idea of inculcating a lesson or expressing the thrills of passion, but his great aim was the development of

ALICE ADAMS
By Booth Tarkington

Vision —Not photography—Makes Realism!

SOME NOVELISTS magnify details; often, in that process, they delve among endless unpleasantries. This is probably what a popular critic had in mind when he wrote: "Where others photograph, or penetrate with satirical intent, Booth Tarkington sees around!" Booth Tarkington has VISION. Henry Seidel Canby (THE LITERARY REVIEW) appreciates this, saying, "'Alice Adams' is the lost youth of that wonderful mother in 'The Way of All Flesh.'"

No more worrying about cake icing—you just buy it ready made and spread it on the cake! Perhaps you saw the lovely exhibit of this wonder icing at the Industrial and Trade Exhibition—it is perfectly delicious—comes in fruit flavors and is rightly named the California Fruit Icing. Besides, it's economical, easy to use and saves lots of time! There's one thing I am sure of—you will never regret it if you try a jar—ask for it anywhere and if you can't get it phone 21068.

With all your cherished possessions which make up your "household gods" safely hidden in storage vaults and safety deposit boxes, you will be able to enjoy that business or pleasure trip to the utmost! Drop in at the Guaranty Trust and Savings Bank, Spring at Seventh, and ask about their plan or phone 10212 for particulars.

The "Butterfly" cape is decidedly the newest conceit for fall. They have just come in at Cowen and Son's, 724 S. Hill. You will want one the minute you see these smart mohair wraps which are shown in all the newest color combinations.

Smart autumn hats at very reasonable prices are being shown by Camilline, sixth floor, Brack Shops. Take her your old hats for remodeling—she will do wonders with them.

Black-and-white gowns are decidedly voguish for afternoon.

Too fat? Too thin? Not exactly well? You can be brought to normal weight and measurements and be vastly improved in health by the Reiss system—without drugs or starvation. It's intensely interesting, too. 502 Title Guarantee Building, 220 West Fifth. Phone 67815.

Beautifully natural curls are made by Emma Atkin on her Nestle Permanent Wave machine. She is an expert operator and will teach you how to care for the hair after waving at 823 W. Seventh.

Is Dollie sick and all unstrung? Have her made new again before the Christmas rush at the Doll Surgery, 833 S. Hill. 16487.

Those gray hairs at the temples—why not have them touched up to match the rest of your hair? Edith Naftel has a vegetable dye which is harmless, and works wonders. 202 Haas Bldg. Phone 66140.

A Shampoo—and a good shampoo, too, will be given for only 50 cents at Mrs. L. M. Smith's Beauty Parlor, 823 W. Seventh. Fellicide permanently destroys superfluous hair—even the most stubborn growth—on face, arms or legs. See Mrs. Smith or write to above address.

The new storage vaults and safety deposit boxes at the Citizens' Trust and Savings Bank, 706 S. Hill, will guard your treasures. Pico 4150.

Much crystal and jet jewelry is worn by those who know!

With ostrich trimming in such demand and feather hats all the rage one would not be surprised if all the huge ostriches at the Cawston Ostrich Farm literally "took to their heels" or at least called a strike! But right here allow me to assure you, my dears, the the ostrich doesn't mind being plucked—it doesn't hurt the tiniest bit! So on your next visit to the Farm in South Pasadena don't waste your pity but enjoy yourself and be sure to see the wonderful display of fans, hats and fancies which are so modish!

Blonde stockings are worn with black dresses and black shoes.

A beautiful permanent Marcel wave that leaves the hair soft and glossy is given by Edith Naftel, 202 Haas Building. Phone 66140.

Sulphur and citron are two very good colors just now.

There is such a range of color in Williams-Wear dresses of Japanese chambray and crepe! They're a boon to ranch folks for errands to town, for camp and beach picnics. Brack-Shops, ninth floor.

Many smart hats have fringe trimming across the back.

There's that trip to the Grand Canyon you expected to take this summer—too expensive for this year? Now, there are those diamonds which you have put away in that treasure box for sentiment's sake—would it not be wise to sell them while they are valued so highly—and use the money for this romantic trip? Mr. Ferguson will pay the market price for them at 306 Haas Bldg.

Chiffon alpaca "slip-ons" are worn with sport skirts.

When "the blessed hour of our dinners" arrives we can safely trust ourselves to The Elite—famous for viands tastefully prepared and service unexcelled! Unusual dishes are found here and desserts most marvelously concocted, served a la carte all through the day. And perfectly delicious candies are made at 641 S. Flower, which they will pack for you in boxes unique and beautiful!

Some beautiful evening wraps have collars made of ostrich feathers.

Oh, you really should have a Permanent wave to be up-to-the-moment and Frederickson's give such lovely one's—cannot be told from natural curls. Their hot oil scalp treatments for falling hair and dandruff are quite marvelous in results. 723 S. Grand ave., and 354 S. Hill. Phones 61798 and Main 6158.

Sensitive about your hearing? Lip reading conceals the defect perfectly. Visit Pacific Coast School free class Tuesday at 11 o'clock, 608 Citizens' Bank Bldg.

Many long-sleeved dresses are being shown for street wear.

There's something about "Bogue" hats which is fairly fascinating, it may be the exclusiveness of each model, perhaps it is the color scheme—it may be just the cunning tilt of them—but although you may not guess the secret—you will agree there's something! Run in and see the autumn creation at 744 S. Hill—there are hats for all occasions—jaunty sports models, chic hats for street and perfectly adorable dinner hats. If you have a hat you wish "done over," they will gladly make it into something clever.

When you know that Anna M. Bergeron has been removing superfluous hairs, moles and birthmarks twenty years in Los Angeles, you can feel sure she is most competent to do your work. 1221 Haas Building, corner Seventh and Broadway.

Some wonderful girdles—almost pagan in their gorgeous splendor—are worn with afternoon gowns.

Double Satin Damask luncheon sets with colored borders in conventional and fruit designs—such as have not been shown in this country since before the War—are displayed at Robinson's. This exquisite napery is creating quite a stir among those who appreciate the best in linens—indeed, its advent is like the meeting of old friends!

Spiral bracelets made of colored "shot beads" are smart.

Don't worry over those diamonds hidden away—if you never wear them you had better sell them and use the money for something "longed for." Hambright will tell you what they are worth—and will buy them if you wish to sell. Why not see him at 811 Story Bldg., Broadway at Sixth.

Many low-heeled strap pumps are worn for afternoon.

Master Boy will soon be starting off to school again, and the problem of togs for him is confronting mother, to say nothing of father! The astonishingly low prices in boys' suits offered at Mullen and Bluett's will prove especially interesting to father—all-wool school suits in many colors and mixtures are priced at $8.75 and $12.75 for boys up to 18 years. And of course, mother will be overjoyed to learn that the trousers to these suits are almost "play proof"—being full lined, with the knees, seat and pockets reinforced with chamois! They have some splendid shirts and blouses at $1.15, as well as other needed clothes at interesting prices.

Black lace sleeves are shown in many black silk gowns.

Famous Angeloccro yarns are carried by the Yarn Shops at 509 S. Western and at 288 E. Colorado, Pasadena. Instructions given.

Motorists especially appreciate the charming Assembly Tea Room at 7016 Hollywood Blvd. It's right on their way to the beach. Dinners served on Sunday and weekdays. Phone for reservations, 578443. The Assembly in Brack-Shops serves every day except Sunday. 13657.

Pearl necklaces and earrings are very smart and can be worn with any costume.

There's an appeal about Chinatown's most interesting shop—F. Suie One's—which is felt by all who make the little journey to 510 N. Los Angeles st. One finds the quaintest of oriental novelties in ivory, jade and cloisonne—here are everlasting camel's hair rugs in wonderful colorings, embroideries of intricate design which are used on many evening wraps just now and there are gorgeous mandarin robes and coats, and many useful baskets in beautiful designs. You will find much joy in just looking about—here and in the Pasadena shop at 50-52 S. Raymond ave.

Bright red, cerise and jade green feather hats are lovely.

Negligees, Pullman robes and dressing gowns in the most becoming styles are created in satins, silks and corduroys at the Vanity Fair, 831 W. Seventh. Some adorable new kiddies' dresses in black silk and Canton crepes are shown besides many other lovely models.

The dance frock need not be long, but it may have side panels longer than the skirt.

If you are thinking of giving a piano or a phonograph to anyone for Christmas, wouldn't it be a splendid idea to take advantage of that really wonderful August sale at the Smith Piano Company, Ninth and Grand? A small payment secures an instrument for you and everything can be arranged satisfactorily so you can have delivery made on or before Christmas. The very finest makes of upright and miniature grand pianos and phonographs are carried at this interesting store where they don't mind you "looking and listening" to your heart's content!

Many flower-bedecked beach hats are worn by bathers while sunning on the beach.

When seeking the ultra smart and decidedly "different" thing in hats miladi would do well to drop in at the Make Over Hat Shop, 688 S. Alvarado. They do clever remodeling, too.

Dinner at the Vanity Fair Tea Room is just one round of pleasure—you enjoy the delectable dishes and appreciate the splendid service at 937 S. Hill, phone 62954.

In the summer when one craves unusually tempting dishes, the Orange Tea Shop at 649 S. Hope offers any number of these in its three delightful dinners! There's the $1.25 dinner, with chicken or steak, one at $1, and another at 75 cents—the meats are so well prepared and the desserts cannot be described in words!

NEW BOOKS AND THOSE COMING.

the mails. The literature was quotations from the Hebrew Bible—the book the censor desired to have read in the schools.

And there you are! Start a censor on the downward path, with the State to back him, and there is no limit to the evil he may effect. If there is nothing in drama calling for a censor, it is his task to ferret out some semblance to evil or else eventually be himself automatically erased. And whoever heard of a State or city official who wanted to be erased?

So the long-suffering taxpayer is taxed double on account of this pernicious official creation, once for the censor he does not want and once to see the picture he does want.

My expression is indubitably that of a citizen in his own home town, and not the creed novelist, dramatist or maker of romances who take themselves so seriously they are the funniest things on the landscape. Some of them forget—and a few choice examples never knew—that literature and drama had reached a certain eminence before invention of the revolving film, and that the plumber and his ilk are getting into their stride to the end that his or her favorite "star" shall not be without shining dramatic setting, even though we of the guild should go out in darkness tomorrow.

In the meantime, despite shabby jazz as a symbol of her tawdry hour jitney crowds of raw material from the corn belt and the ghetto, which she strives with impartiality to mother, and crossroad censorship threatening her famous factories, Los Angeles has a destiny outlined by the stars if she is great enough of soul to grasp it. Aside from her tribute by sea and land or the financial eminence assured by the material products, she can—and will—be one of the great art centers of the world when her citizens unite to provide the schools and realize that art is the most substantial foundation on which any city or any nation can build a world reputation. Ancient Greece still lives through her art after all the dead centuries and forgotten dynasties.

Architecture is the keynote in the development of municipal harmony, and Los Angeles has had rather terrible things done to her by the designers of her public buildings of the past. They brought copies of things without character or fitness from the Atlantc Coast where skimpt, ugly meeting houses were being built at a time when beautiful San Juan Capistrano, with its concrete domes (seven of them, five feet thick, and eighty feet high) were shining between mountain and sea in one of California's loviest valleys.

One would think that the Anglo-Saxon invader, by simply observing the craftsmanship of the Spanish pioneers, would know he had much to learn of beauty, and nothing to teach here. His racial egotism blinded him in that earlier day, but it is not too late for his successors to learn the lesson, and they have a wonderful chance to make Los Angeles as beautiful as her name. As hostess of the world, she should be individual, and not a copyist of a thousand copies of European importations.

Beautiful as is the Spanish or Moorish architecture, it is no more beautiful—and not nearly so individual—as our own American palaces and temples of Yucatan. Egypt's excavations show nothing to equal the stairways of Central America—sixty feet wide and reaching to the third story. These ancient cities of a mysterious past are, in the beauty and utility of their buildings, a marvel to the scholars of the world. Uxmal and Labna—to mention only two palaces out of many—would give an American builder models and plans of beauty for endless combinations, unique, artistic—and not imported.

Have we no builders with courage to depart from their classroom inheritance? Maudsley gave a fortune and twenty years of draftsmanship to his twenty volumes on the ancient Mayan buildings, from ground plan to decoration he blazed the trail for American architects. The Southwest Museum has a copy of this remarkable work, and the original buildings are in a province of Mexico—our next-door neighbor.

Los Angeles has the space and the setting for a revival of Mayan architecture which would fitly house an art center of the world and, to put its value crudely in dollars and cents, it would have an advertising value no money could buy. Berkeley has her Greek theater, Santa Barbara has her Samarkand and Persian Garden, San Diego and Southwest Museum each has beautiful examples of Spanish architecture. The Mission Inn, Riverside, has its endless cloisters and atmosphere of old Spanish days, as has no other location in America. There is nothing left to do along these lines which, by comparison, would win even a page in a letter sent home by a tourist.

But—an open-air theater built on the lines of one of the mysterious ancient palaces in Central America! A public-library with the chaste dignity of Labna, or Tuloom by the Sea! And, not the least of the possibilities, an all-American home for our wounded soldier boys.

Even a Mayan garden could be easily duplicated in Los Angeles, while our libraries have a wealth of fascinating material on this subject, awaiting practical application.

And, after all, I end by writing of things in books.

NEW LIGHT ON POE'S WORKS.

the beautiful. In one of his essays he says:

Truth gives expression to the intellect,
Passion to the heart, while
Beauty is the language of the soul.

Tennyson said: "I know several striking American poets, but I think that Edgar Poe is (taking his poetry and prose together) the most original American genius." To Victor Hugo "Poe was the Prince of American Literature."

This valuable volume that we have in hand is the latest authoritative word on Poe, and no library will be complete without it, and no reader will really know Poe unless he studies it.

One of Dr. Robertson's concluding sentences is: "If ever there was an 'inspired' poet it was Poe."

No doubt the second edition will have a complete index, which will add much to the value of this typographically beautiful book.

By electricity the master clock at Greenwich Observatory fires time guns and drops time balls in many parts of England every day, and sends the hour of 10 a.m. to all postoffices and railway terminals.

NOVELTIES, IDEAS AND PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

By Olive Gray.
Per E. H.

Up-to-Datest.

A fitted bag of the overnight type that fairly exudes luxury. It is of pin seal, darkest brown in color, with a lining of moire that duplicates the shade of leather. Inside, bottles and cases finished in silver gilt present glistening faces to the row of brushes, combs and mirrors lined up opposite, guaranteeing every facility for the fastidious completion of miladi's toilette on train or steamer. Prime novelty of the case is the miniature fan in tortoise shell which, impelled to motion by a spring in the handle, whirls its triple sections to produce a breeze vigorous out of all proportion to its toy circumference. These fans, be it known, are a mode of the moment in Gay Paree and every French woman of fashion week-ending at Trouville or Ostend carries one in her bag.

A narrow belt of fawn-colored suede designed to finish one of the modish jumper dresses of wool or nitted silk. A mother-of-pearl buckle fastens it and its center is marked by a trio of matching pearl nail heads.

A luxurious coat wrap for the college girl. In color it is that deep, clarety volnay, calculated to strike a high note in the gray landscape of a winter day, while its fabric is thick-piled evora. It drapes a bit over one hip and is fastened by a single button. Collar and cuffs are of brown-dyed squirrel.

Now Is the Time to Buy:

Your year's supply of shoes and stockings while the beneficees of the August clearances yet endure, making the figurative "two for one" a literal truth. In particular, the woman who knows values in silk hosiery will turn her morning face, Monday, toward that bona fide sale of black hose of a brand reinforced doubly by stitches and name.

Christmas gifts. The provident shopper does not live who, in a tour through that wonderful art section of a great store—and which is, in itself a great store—will fail to realize the advantage to pocket and patience to be gained by slipping her Christmas list into her memorandum book ere she leaves home. Checked against said list, on her return, will doubtless be a boudoir light—one of the delightful ones screened by the dainty petticoats of a colonial dame or a lady of the directoire. Likely, too, there will be a luncheon set in madeira embroidery; book-ends and flower-bowls in the artistic Della Robbia ware, and a collection of small gifts, including clocks and door-stops of china and brass. Of a verity, buying in August makes giving in December a joy unalloyed by the traditional unforgettable fatigue of yuletide.

The trim tailleur for first-wear of autumn, before the display of these perky and practical suits at that exclusive emporium catering to the taste of the well-dressed woman, has been "inroaded" by the quester after the newest in street clothes.

Dress Lines—Regular and Otherwise.

The "surprise walnut" of the woman of fashion of autumn, 1921, if opened, would probably disclose a succinct dress memorandum, reading somewhat as follows:

As to color: black first; then brown, rust or navy. As to trimming: much on skirts and cuffs; none on bodices. Arm lines: in cloth, long and flowing; in lace, missing altogether. Hems: In dressy frocks, halfway twixt knee and ankle; in cloth, not so long. There might not be space on the memorandum scrap to add that, while in crepes and silks the lower line of the skirt may dip like craft saluting the flagship, in more tailorish clothes the hem is turned with a precision worthy of the veriest martinet in form.

It takes careful piloting between Scylla and Charybdis, these formative fashion days of late summer, to keep the reporter of styles in dress off the rocks of inaccuracy. No sooner does she affirm that the bateau neck, starkly devoid of trimming, has everything its own way than, behold! a coat dress, fastened to the ears, its upstanding velvet heights arabesqued in gold thread.

Let the trustful observer record the restoration of the normal waistline in dance frocks and there emerges, in languid loveliness of line, the Paris adaptation of orientalism, with a waist extending all the way down. In this particular case it was a colorful robe of papria chiffon, and it hung in full, uneven widths from neck to hem. Its glory was the girdle that formed, to all practical purposes, a second and upper skirt, depending, in narrow panels of the chiffon, from a braided and jeweled ceinture. The upper panels were weighted with deep gold fringe that swung, Turkishly, as the wearer walked.

A Word to the Wise—Man.

Let the well-dressed man with a weakness for reading cables on Lunnon fashions in haberdashery, take heart. No peace treaty has yet been signed stipulating outlines of masculine neck adornment among the nations. The potential King of the Britons and Emperor of India may affect the butterfly bow, along with phraseology in his titular native tongue of Welsh and, out of delicate compliment, his smart subjects among the men of the "tight little isle" may follow his sartorial lead without causing a perceptible ripple in the fashions of either speech or cravats on this side.

Here, the quiet elegance of the knitted tie of heavy silk still marks the man whose taste in clothes is comme il faut. Black and black-and-white effects are best, in this type of tie, as they have been, this long time. A scarf pin, if one wears it, is certain to be the single pearl of irreproachable tint, so mounted that no mounting at all is visible.

"The Spirit of the Pearl."

I quarrel with the somber epigrammatist who said pearls are for tears. Unless, indeed, they be tears of gratitude, shed in happy appreciation over the fact that nature has ordained the solidifying into concrete beauty of the sprites of water and air and has given these the shape and luster of the gem of purest ray serene, brought up to the surface of the world by the intrepidity of deep-sea divers, from the dark, unfathomed caves of ocean.

Gratitude in the present lovely instance of a jeweler's window display, vocalizes into a special paean to the rare soul who, in the genius with which he has directed the arrangement of pearls that might form a king's ransom or a queen's dowry, proclaims his kinship with that elect body of earth—the artists sensitized to put into eye-delighting form the visions of us who lack gift of expression.

"The Spirit of the Pearl," he has called his gemmed window and it must be seen, rather than imagined from colorless words of description, if one would absorb, in its essence, the beauty therein. Framed in the humble setting of an oyster shell, an exquisite flesh-and-blood manifestation of the spirit is seen, in divers poses, in the background—a nymph rising from the vasty deep.

For the rest, rows on rows of perfect pearls rest on velvet cushions of sea-blue, these cushions, in turn, laid on a foundation of pearl tinted cloth. Gazing at them, one forgets the artisanship of mounting, as one forgets their intrinsic worth. What one senses is a vision, nebulous, intangible, wraith-like—"the Spirit of the Pearl."

Fashion Whisperings Are That:

A knitted coat of light-weight wool has collar and cuffs of angora and a tailored set-in sleeve.

A dance frock of silver embroidered citron crepe has long panels of silver lace on the skirt.

Fur coats are built on straight lines, button up the front, and are quite flaring at the bottom.

A coat dress of heavy black crepe is trimmed with gray Krimmer and has facings of gray crepe.

Noted features of fall coats are the bloused bodice and full skirt girdled with a silk tasseled belt.

A collar and vestee of cream colored crepe de chine are smart with a coat dress of wool and colored braid.

Very new is the anklette strap which is entirely detached from the one-strap pump with which it is worn.

An afternoon frock of navy Canton crepe has sleeves of cherry red chiffon and roses of the crepe with cherry centers.

The heels of a pair of black dancing slippers are studded with brilliants, and there are tiny wreaths over the instep.

An afternoon frock of black velvet has its tucks faced with white taffeta and plaitings of white taffeta at the neck and sleeves.

A one-piece dress of French linen has a sleeveless three-quarter coat to match. The long slashed panels of the coat are held together by rows of little buckled linen straps.

NEW CITY CLUB MEMBERS.

Prominent club women who joined the Woman's City Club during the recent membership campaign are: Mrs. Mollie Bloom Flagg, who was president of the San Joaquin Valley district, the hostess district, for the State convention in Yosemite Valley last May; Mrs. A. J. Lawton, State president of the Women's Legislative Council; Mrs. E. Stewart, former president of the Women's Democratic League; Mrs. Frank A. Gibson, known for her work in Americanization; Mrs. Cecil Frankel, president of the California Federation of Music Clubs; Mrs. Albert Tufts, Mrs. S. J. Kerr, Mrs. Bruce H. Case, Mrs. L. A. Beebe, Mrs. Walter V. Brehm and Mrs. Walter J. Van Valkenberg.

WOMEN'S WORK AND WOMEN'S CLUBS.

BY MYRA NYE.

These are the "dolling-up" days for the coming club season. How many women there are who are eating and growing thin, according to Vance Thompson, or counting their calories, according to our own Dr. Lulu Hunt Peters, or practicing "The Great Reduction" according to Irwin Cobb with "One-Third Off" already, only they themselves can tell.

How many club presidents are having the permanent hair wave put into their locks to augment the impressiveness of their executive presiding only the various beauty parlor keepers, who are their sisters' keepers, can tell you. I suspect it is quite a per cent, for the example in hairdressing was so effectively set last spring by Mrs. Sidney Thomas Exley, then president of the Los Angeles district, and Mrs. Charles H. Toll, president of Los Angeles Ebell.

These two to my knowledge became suddenly emancipated from curling irons. The result upon the platform when sessions at convention crowded one another in step-on-the-heel fashion was transcendent. Both of these women are fine types of the regular club woman in appearance. Perhaps in my mind I have let them typify too much. Perhaps they are the exception of sartorial perfection from toque-top to toe-tip and not the rule. I wonder. My ideas on the appearance of Los Angeles club women have been considerably upset during the past week.

Dr. Alice S. Cutler, recently from Boston, said to me one day: "Los Angeles has the most beautiful young women of any city I have ever been in but the appearance of those past 40 is far behind the appearance of women of that age in other cities. I wish I could tell the club women here how they are bunkoed."

"Bunkoed?" I said, with a marked accent on the bun and the question mark. I just couldn't fit my mind to bunkoed club women of the Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs with all its capitals: L for lovely, A for angels, D for darling, F for fetching, W for wonderful and C for charming.

"Yes," she said, "the beauty parlors and the stores bunko them. Club women here go to see a corset demonstration, for instance. They are plump, not to say fat. They see a fat woman come out in a certain sort of a corset and see how her lines seem to be reduced as by miracle. At least half a dozen of them at once order that corset by that same number. But the model's fat may not be their kind of fat at all. And they look a fright in the same style of corset."

"Bountiful embonpoint is not docile," I conceded, "but how else are club women in Los Angeles bunkoed?"

"Their hair," she suggested. "The water is so hard here and certain kinds of hair just can't stand hard water and yet at the places where the shampoos are given, water from the faucet is used on every woman's hair. Every different kind of hair needs different treatment."

"Yes," I said, "we have God to thank that the hairs of our head are numbered, but I didn't know they were different, each number, you know."

"Oh, I didn't mean that; of course, I meant each different woman is different and ———."

"Oh," I said, "and what else?"

"As for cold creams, why any cold cream demonstrator can sell any kind of cold cream to any kind of a skin."

"To sell is to skin, but you don't sell to skin," I remarked.

"Some cold creams," she informed me, "technically contain benzoate of lard and that is not good for the kind of skin that is inclined to the hirsute. It only makes it more hairy."

Dr. Cutler was really full of practical suggestion on how to make a woman past 40 beautiful. She said she has a friend who goes to Paris to be made beautiful. The friend is more than 60 and when she comes back from Paris she looks less than 40. For one thing Parisian women want their backs better than their fronts. They argue rightly that if they get the lines of their gowns correct in back, they are sure to be chic and graceful in front. If their corsets fit in back they are sure to fit in front. Their hair must look well from the back even before it looks well from the front. And this is the secret of a French woman's pretty appearance when, perhaps, she is not pretty at all.

One other little secret Dr. Cutler divulged to me—a treatment for which in Paris you pay much and in New York City very much. This is it in brief: Don't massage the face too much. It causes it to wrinkle. Instead, pat it. And when you dress to look your best, first, after the bath, dapple witch hazel all over the face. It does not enlarge the pores, but rather closes them and does not wrinkle. Pat the face with little pads of absorbent cotton wet in ice water. Then witch hazel again. Then, while the witch hazel stands in drops on the face, rub on a lot of cold cream. Be generous with it. Leave it on while you are doing something else, say telephoning for the taxicab, or whitening your shoes, or rehearsing your presidential address. Then rub it off with a very soft cloth. Pat your face again with the cushions of your fingers if they are cold; if warm, use ice water again. Then sprinkle on the finest powder with a clean—Dr. Cutler emphasizes the clean—powder-puff or pad. Behold you will look like a rose newly dipped in dew. It sounds good. And that is only one of many hints that Dr. Cutler plans to give to the club women this coming season if they will but listen to her advice.

District Federation.

Prefacing a year that promises marked progress in club work throughout the county, the Los Angeles district board will meet in September with the work fully outlined by the president, Mrs. J. C. Urquhart. All appointments have now been made and the following names were ratified at the last regular board meeting: Mrs. Henry F. Boesche, corresponding secretary; Miss Mary Workman, citizenship; Dr. A. D. Chapin, child welfare; Mrs. Julius Hill, history and landmarks; Miss Helen S. Pratt, birds and wild life; Mrs. J. C. Trewhella, home relations; Mrs. Ethel Palmer, industry and employment; Mrs. Ingie Carpenter, literature; Mrs. Gloria Mayne, music; Mrs. Agnes Osborne Carter, altruistic; Mrs. Francis A. Blackburn, political science; Mrs. Elizabeth McManus, public health; Mrs. Harold Dewey, endowment; Mrs. J. S. McQueen, Indian relations, and Mrs. Louis Schirm, pageant film. Miss Sue Barnwell, who was Mrs. Urquhart's chairman of citizenship, has been appointed to fill that department of the work on the board of the California Federation of Women's Clubs. Miss Workman, who has been closely related to Miss Barnwell in this work, has been chosen to succeed her in the district, and Mrs. Boesche appointed to fill Miss Workman's place.

"The cliff dwellers had art and music antedating anything along these lines in Europe," said Mrs. Mayne in speaking of her plans as chairman of music. She is greatly interested in this primitive music and hopes to harmonize her work with that of Indian welfare.

Mrs. Carter, chairman of altriusm, is a fine pianist and expects to stress the practical and educational side of her departmental work, emphasizing the difference between real and unreal music, as she terms it.

Many clubs are asking for the film of the pageant, "California, Land of Dreams," given in Yosemite Valley at the time the State convention. Those that are now building or are paying off indebtedness on their clubhouses expect to raise funds in this new manner, members presenting themselves to their own clubs as participants in the pageant. Mrs. McManus expects to use films in promoting her department work, public health. She plans a program of prevention of diseases rather than treatment of ill health after sickness.

Two jolly affairs to which the district board is invited are the Lancaster Women's Club annual "peach luncheon," which will be given probably the last Friday of this month, and a picnic meeting at the home of Mrs. J. C. Trewhella, the early part of September.

"Los Angeles clubwomen will have about the biggest undertaking any clubwomen have had," said Mrs. Urquhart the other day, speaking of the State convention that will be held here next spring. The definite date has not been set, but it will probably be directly after the Los Angeles district convention in Santa Monica.

Los Angeles district will work along the line of citizenship, at work and at play, in a way that will make possible a culminating co-operation the result of which will be the background for this convention. The Hans Christian Anderson festival is held every year about the meeting time of the State federation and an effort will be made to have other programs for the benefit of the visitors. Mrs. O. Shepherd Barnum, former president of the Friday Morning Club and State chairman of education, is much interested in another pageant to be given by the clubwomen in the Hollywood Bowl.

Mrs. Urquhart's plans as outlined for this district have been adopted by the San Diego district board and with a few changes will probably be adopted by the State federation board.

"Kiddie Koop."

"Kiddie Koop" is to celebrate its second birthday September 10 with a party at the "Koop," 641 East Twenty-eighth street.

Since its beginning the work has trebled and the capacity of the cottage has doubled. "Kiddie Koop" was founded by Miss Eula Wilson of Chicago who was acquainted with similar work in that city and found great need for it in Los Angeles. The "Koop" cares for boys from 1 to 6 years of age, who are children of working parents, and for girls from 1 to 14 years of age. Its charges are made according to the circumstances of the parents.

Woman's Press Club.

Mrs. Georgina S. Townsend, president of the Southern California Woman's Press Club, announced last week the following appointments for chairmanships for the coming year: Mrs. J. W. Crill, membership; Belle Summer Angier Burn, printing; Mrs. Emilie M. Timerhoff, press; Mrs. Olive Fields Nathan, social; B. M. Bower, reciprocity; Mrs. Alice Harriman, community service; Miss Kathleen Shippen, music; Mrs. Rita Green Breese, hospitality; Mrs. Caroline Clough McQuinn, short-story section; Miss Neeta Marquis, achieved results program and shop talks; October, Mrs. McQuinn; November, Belle Angier Burn; December, Dr. Louis Harvey Clark; January, Mrs. Rose Z. Weller; February, Mrs. Abbie Smith; March, Mrs. Julia Boynton Green; April, Mrs. Edna Sterrett; May, Mrs. Elizabeth McCabe Gilmore.

Woman's Bible Class.

Mrs. Mary Allen, president of the Woman's Bible Class of the First Friends Church of Whittier, was toastmistress at a banquet given by the class Tuesday evening. There were eighty members and guests present. Mrs. Eliza Armstrong Cox, teacher, gave the address of welcome and the response was by A. N. Chamness, superintendent. Other addresses were by Dr. Charles E. Tebbets, Mrs. W. H. Smiley and Miss Anna L. Tomlinson, the latter a member of the faculty of Whittier College. She announced that the class has arranged to give a scholarship to some young woman the coming school year at Whittier College.

Christian Citizenship.

"Political Ideals" was the subject of an address delivered before the Whittier W.C.T.U. at the Friends Church, Friday afternoon, by Mrs. Elizabeth Ellston of Covina. Mrs. Ellston laid stress on personal responsibility in politics and all government affairs, and said the ideal could be made the real.

SELECTION OF AMERICAN MINISTER PLEASES CHINA.

Dr. Schurman Well Liked in Far East but Factions Are Said to be Setting Traps for Him.

BY PATRICK GALLAGHER.
[SPECIAL FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PEKING (China) July 15.—Americans in China are preparing to give a rousing reception to our new Minister at Peking, Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, internationally known as the president of Cornell University and an outspoken friend of all Asiatic peoples. Faith in the Harding administration's Far Eastern views and purposes seems to reign in Tokio as well as in Peking.

Dr. Schurman's appointment was a welcome surprise, especially among the Americans who are not harnessed, hand and foot, to foreign or factional interests. The North China Star—edited by Dr. Charles James Fox, brother of Albert W. Fox of the Washington Post—reflected prevailing American sentiment when it denounced an attempt made by professional marplots to put an anti-Chinese "tag" on the new American Minister. I am in a position to say that Chinese of all parties regard Dr. Schurman with friendship and respect. His friendly attitude toward Japan will be an asset to him of no small importance.

Europeans, as well as Americans and Chinese, are tired of the habit of utilizing the legation quarter as a spawning-ground for China's chief nuisance—the swarm of foreign advisers who do not and cannot advise.

STORM OF PROTEST.

Two incidents within recent weeks have caused a storm to break around the heads of these professional parasites.

The first was the cabled report that Dr. John C. Ferguson was being cosidered as Minister for the United States. The general feeling here is that to have put him in charge of American interests would have cost the United States prestige. Reports from Washington indicate that this feeling of resentment—voiced chiefly by Chinese—saved our State Department from making a blunder. Relief was intense here when Dr. Schurman was named and confirmed.

The second incident concerned the British. A report came that Sir John Jordan, for many years British Minister in Peking, was recommended by Dr. Koo as a "high-grade Chinese political adviser." Far Eastern Britons gasped and swore. The (British) Peking and Tientsin Times denounced the proposal as an insult to the British diplomatic service in China. British anger was well-timed and thoroughly justified.

The trip to London of Lennox Simpson—"B. L. Putnam Weale"—author, correspondent and Chinese adviser, has seriously affected British Far Eastern interests. If a Chinese anti-British boycott follows the renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, beyond any doubt the Britons in Asia will be entitled to blame Mr. Simpson.

BITING SARCASM.

Mr. Simpson and his mission have been subjects of biting sarcasm. The author of "Wang the Ninth" and "Indiscreet Letters from Peking" had a monopoly of British editorial ire when the cables brought word of the Jordan nomination.

For twenty years, Sir John Jordan and Mr. Simpson have been deadly enemies. The feud began in the Boxer trouble and it reached its climax while both were in Peking during the perplexing period of the Paris peace conference. Between these big events Mr. Simpson was Peking correspondent for the London Daily Telegraph.

His writings were protested repeatedly to the London Foreign Office. Finally, action was taken by the Foreign Office and Lord Burnham, chief owner of the London newspaper. Mr. Simpson was relieved of his journalistic post. His friend, President Hsu Shih-Chang of China, made him a "statistician to the audit department" at a liberal salary. Nobody thinks for a moment that either Mr. Putnam or Sir John will ever consent to bury the hatchet. Theirs is a war to the death.

MENTIONED IN NEWS.

The names of Robert E. Lansing and Charles R. Crane's protege, Thomas F. Hillard, are also mentioned in the news from London and Geneva. It is asserted with some appearance of credibility that Mr. Lansing's Shantung chapter in his personal narrative of "The Peace Negotiations" so favorably impressed the anti-Japanese Chinese that he has been retained as counsellor for the Kiaochow appeal to the League.

Of course, nobody would think of putting two and two together—except over the cocktails and in an atmosphere that lends itself to dark suspicions. Still, this gossip that will not down adds heat to the British choler over their own Jordan incident.

SETTING SNARES.

Dr. Schurman will need to watch his step in Peking. Deep traps are being dug for him. Nets are being woven in dark corners. Heaps of sand are being blown in from our adjacent desert plains.

There is a small but dangerous group here and a more noisy and more numerous faction in Shanghai that won't be satisfied until our people and government consent to make war upon Japan. It is an unpleasant fact that certain Americans in China are seriously involved in these proceedings.

The new Minister to Peking is well and favorably known throughout the Far East. He became famous as an opponent of the doctrine of benevolent assimilation in the Philippines. He was president of the first Philippine commission and he is well posted upon all angles of Far Eastern affairs. He is regarded as the traditional type of American-oriental statesman—the Townsend Harris and Anson Burlingame sort—ardently believing in carrying American ideals into the old East and steadfastly opposed to plans or purposes that, in effect, tend to subordinate Asiatic peoples to illegitimate western wills or thinly disguised schemes of conquest. His frank and fearless expressions during and after his recent trip to Japan have helped and not hurt him in China.

WORM TURNS.

The Chinese worm has turned—as most worms are supposed to turn, in time—and now the leading men in most of the conflicting Chinese factions make little or no secret of their desire to get along on good terms with their chief Asiatic neighbor, Japan. They tell me that they are tired of seeing their country used as a football by the western nations.

They want a square deal—a real chance to find political unity and stability—and they are beginning to take the true measure of the forces, foreign and native, that block their path on every side.

I returned to China more than a year ago with Minister and Mrs. Crane and the staff of special assistants brought to Peking by the Chicago millionaire philanthropist.

He was heralded here as the archpriest and paymaster of an American policy in China based upon direct and deliberate antagonism to Japan; and it has been intimated that he did little, if anything, to remove that impression and some things that strengthened it. Nevertheless, his Japanese colleague, Mr. Obata, ignored circumstances and incidents that would have justified formal protest, and I think that Mr. Crane left Peking in June, 1921, with a better opinion of Japan than the one he brought with him in June, 1920.

President Taft chose Mr. Crane to be Minister in 1909. Mr. Knox, then Secretary of State, resented his chief's seeming intrusion upon his own rights and opinion in the matter and Mr. Crane never got to Peking in 1909. With the late William Woodville Rockhill, appointed at the same time by Mr. Taft as Ambassador to Russia, Mr. Crane was kept waiting. At last Mr. Rockhill, a seasoned diplomat, grew restive.

"I think I'll go on to St. Petersburg," he said to Mr. Crane.

"Good idea," said Mr. Crane. "I'll start for China."

As he was leaving the Union Station at Washington he gave to Roy Vernon, the Washington correspondent for a Chicago newspaper, some notes for a story about his Chinese ideas and plans. This innocent telegram to Chicago, and a speech or two by the Minister-designate, were made reasons to justify his recall.

FRIEND OF WILSON.

During the war Mr. Crane accompanied the Root commission to Russia and later made an inspection of China as a friend of President Wilson. He returned from China just in time to attend the Peace Conference at Paris, where he was a sort of personal liaison officer between the President and the Chinese. He was numbered among those lined up by Col. House in support of the Hoover boom. He helped to purchase a Washington newspaper and one of his former assistants became the editor.

This was the situation when President Wilson, in February, 1920, faced the problem of naming a short-term Minister at Peking. Mr. Crane was chosen. He arrived in China in the last week of May, 1920, and in his first speech at Shanghai said, in effect, that the War Department, the Navy Department and the State Department had their eyes peeled and trained on Japan. It fanned the fires of anti-Japanese agitation and served only the purposes of people who were then busily engaged deluding the Chinese into the false belief that Gen. Pershing's army was being mobilized against Japan

About the early part of the present year, friction attained its peak. The Langdon affair at Vladivostok created a crisis. I was in Peking when that happened, and if one accepted Far Eastern American opinion as a guide, the odds seemed to be six to four in favor of war with Japan. I think that incident taught the saner elements on both sides a lesson. American officials and Army and Navy officers helped to abate the propaganda nuisance. It was not, however, until the Harding administration got around to far eastern matters that most of the war-makers abandoned hope.

Mr. Crane's home-going through soviet Russia naturally aroused much gossip and speculation. He had quite an interesting interview in Peking with Mr. Yourin, who, it was understood, invited him to see Russia. Undoubtedly, Mr. Crane, who is known in European diplomatic circles as "Russian Crane," was eager to take a look at his favorite old stamping ground.

When the retired American Minister—who had chartered a special car and loaded up with all sorts of useful gifts for the needy Russians—arrived at Chita, Mr. Yourin avoided him. It seems that Moscow disapproved the Crane tour through Muscovy. It was given out that the reason was our summary ejection of the soviet envoy, Martens.

Mr. Crane gave away his presents at Chita, also his stock of food supplies, etc., and began his journey home by way of Vladivostok and Japan. Before he was many miles on the road to the Siberian port, Moscow reversed its decision and the westward journey was resumed. Of course, fresh supplies had to be obtained and much inconvenience was entailed. The truth seemed to be that the Russians were not eager for an independent American investigation of their condition, yet they feared to offend one who knows Russia well under better and happier conditions.

NEEDS DIPLOMAT.

Mr. Schurman will find many friends in the legation life of this queer Tartar city. What Peking needs most is an American Minister with a friendly, open mind; a trained diplomat, man of affairs, and one who is not on doubtful terms with Japan or England. The British bulldog in the Far East is all right, when stroked the right way; and he is a wise old dog in diplomacy with a natural love of the game. The Japanese is on his own ground, with numerous natural advantages that prejudice cannot efface and prudence ought not to ignore. Above all, the Japanese government seeks nothing more surely than the friendship of America. President Harding and Secretary Hughes seem to be taking Japan at her word in sending Dr. Schurman to Peking.

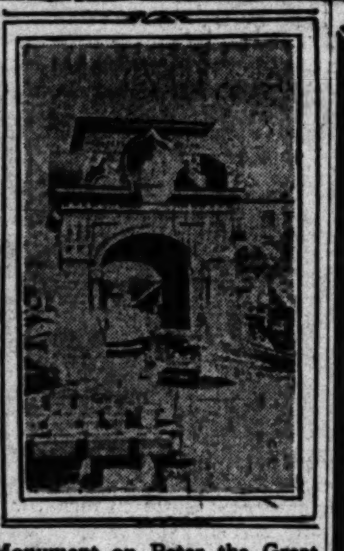
VLADIVOSTOK LOOMS AS SYMBOL OF DOMINATION.

Great Siberian Port, Now in Hands of Japanese, is Seen as Key to Control of Pacific.

BY FREDERICK McCORMICK.

It probably is impossible for pen to do justice to Vladivostok; it never has. And justice may be the last thing it should have done to it. Perhaps, too, it is unimportant. I have read about it; I have been here many times to observe it; but I can say with due acknowledgments to another, namely: I never saw the place described; I never hope to see it. And I can tell you anyhow, I'd rather see than be it. Yet its description is the keystone to the picture of East Siberia.



Monument on Peter the Great Street.

Vladivostok is the palm of the right hand of European civilization outstretched to America. It is thrust in the teeth of Asia, between Japan on the east, and China on the west, ready to go broken into the maw of Asiatic life; and it is a mystery what can save it.

Vladivostok was intended as Russia's San Francisco. They were the carbon points of our civilization lighting the way across the Pacific. Rolled on the tongue they matched in length and meter. Together they were nicknamed — "Frisco" and "Vlad." One did not excel the other for beauty of surroundings. Vlad rests near the end of a peninsula into which opens an arm of the ocean which Russia named the Golden Horn. Reaching back on either side to form the peninsula are Ussuri and Amur bays. In front spreads Peter the Great Gulf, with America Bay to the left and Possiet Bay to the right. Beind rise protecting heights. Signal Hill overlooks this panorama; it can be called the center in the continental shore of the Sea of Japan. Nansen who sailed across the Polar Sea to East Siberia, and who traveled there and three years ago tried to feed starving Russians from the Baltic, stood here on the eve of the World War and said: "Perhaps in no distant future this may become the focus of great and important events." What happened must have astonished the prophet.

BOSTON OF SIBERIA.

When the New Englander wants to go to the center of things—"to see the animals," he journeys to Boston. In East Siberia the native goes to Vladivostok, the only metropolis he can visit without making a 5000 or 6000-mile trip to Moscow or Petrograd, or crossing the Pacific. In extent it is compared with the District of Columbia. It is a city of strangers and of aliens. At the time of the foreign military occupation two years ago there were more foreign soldiers than Russians. There always are more Asiatics than civilians. The business always has been largely in foreign hands—German, Japanese, American and, of course, British and French.

Standing with Nansen on Signal Hill the whole scene unfolds beneath. Toward the sea along both arms of the peninsula are the long lines of forts where for years some of the guns were visible. The mouth of the Golden Horn is guarded by fortified headlands and a fortified island. The minimum depth of the harbor is thirty-five feet, and ships from the world's merchant fleets scatter themselves everywhere about it. Under the hills, in the upper end, at the left, is the port's naval squadron.

CLOSED FOR REPAIRS.

There are two parks running along the waterfront. One near the naval port contains a monument to Neveiskoi, the Russian discoverer of the Straits of Tartary and the navigable entrance to the Amur River. Near the naval port is also a small museum. Among other things it contains one of the boundary stones of the Empire of Genghis Khan, brought down from where it was erected by the Mongols at the watershed north of the Amur. I went to the museum, and was told it was closed for repairs and no one could be allowed to go in. Tips open many doors in Russian lands and it opens this one which has been "closed for repairs" every time I have been here.

The significance of the port of Vladivostok is like that of Vancouver, Seattle, or San Francisco. Vladivostok is the heir in turn of Okhotok and Petropavlovsk and Nivolaivsk from which it received the Admiralty in 1868. It is the heir of Port Arthur and Dalny. It is Russia's Pacific naval station. The year before the World War, improvements of the port were ordered involving $3,500,000, to be carried out beginning with an expenditure of $850,000 the latter half of 1913. The docks were to be equipped with electric cranes and other cargo-handling apparatus costing two-thirds of this amount.

HAD TWO DRY DOCKS.

When the war started, Vladivostok had two dry docks of 620 feet length each, and was preparing to construct a quay 3121 feet long, three jetties and a wharf, with timber, coal and fish depots to take care of these most important products of the East Siberian coast. There was a floating dock 400 feet long and three floating cranes of fifty, seventy-five, and one hundred tons, and a floating dock in three sections, each seventy feet long, with a total lifting power of about 2500 tons provided for. A central electric power station and four miles of electric tram lines were opened, and before the war closed the "Willard Works," an assembling plant for cars and locomotives, and a dock where vessels drawing forty-five feet could unload, had been built by America as a part of war aid to Russia.

Four schools were maintained in Vladivostok—two one-grade schools for boys and two one-grade schools for girls. Vladistokians speak of the "red" school and of the "green" school. They are two high schools which are kept going by the application of assessments on the families of the pupils. There is a Mennonite or Lutheran church and Vladivostok is the headquarters of a Russian Orthodox Church Mission whose missionaries work in about a dozen districts of the surrounding provinces among Korean Russians and natives.

HAS MANY GRADUATES.

There is an Oriental Institute here. For nearly twenty years I have been meeting its graduates in East Asia, young Russians who have learned Far Eastern languages and given invaluable aid to the diplomatic and consular service, to the Russian army, and to the departments of the old Russian government which built the railroads and made scientific investigations in East Siberia. There is a commercial school which also has managed to keep its doors open. Vladivostok has a cathedral an observatory, saw mills, flour mills, factories, machine shops, and railways, and to furnish it with its own communications it has a wireless plant and the Volunteer Fleet of cargo and passenger vessels which formerly connected it with the Baltic and Black seas. But all of these things are assets which at present represent the wreck of a city by the northern sea, rather than its life and support. Russian power and enterprise on the Pacific are derelict and Vladivostok is a prodigal feeding on husks.

When I came here four years ago I had an East Siberian merchant for companion. We were guests at the table of the captain of the Japanese steamer Hosan. The Russian said to the Japanese: "I know what you want; you want my country. You are sending an army to take Vladivostok."

Vladivostok and the Golden Horn.

The surprised captain straightened himself and raised his brows. "Oh, you can't fool me," said the Russian, "I've lived in Japan, I know you. Siberia is the richest country in the world and you are going to take it."

IS NOW JAPANESE.

Vladivostok was Russian then—it is Japanese now. Five thousand Japanese soldiers occupy it. It may be described in terms of the terminus of Slav railways and communications on the Pacific; the door of the world of all Russia after 1914; the exit of the Czecho-Slovaks fleeing Russia; and the only avenue of relief for Siberia. It has been the billet of Allied European troops in East Siberia for the first time since the Crimean War and the second time in history; headquarters of a Canadian military force, and of an army of American soldiers with a general in command holding up arms shipments on the trans-Siberian Railway and giving Japan ultimatums respecting conspiracies with Russian adventurers; American battleground in the war against Bolshevism; scene of the first technical state of war between Japan and America; subject of inquiry in the Senate on why the United States is in Siberia; and new seat of Japanese military power on the Asiatic continent.

Nearly thirty years ago Russia's coming Tsar was on a visit to Japan. At the little town of Otsu, on Lake Biwa, a Japanese assassin all but killed him. The last of the Romanoffs then turned here the first sod at Pacific tidewater of the Trans-Siberian Railway. And a few months ago the Emperor of Japan decorated on the spot where this occured, with the orders of his empire, the dignitaries and agents of the powers of Europe and America and in full occupation and domination tagged them with the emblems of Japanese supremacy in the seat of dominion and of all that Russian power and glory on the Pacific had meant for centuries. That is Vladivostok.

ONE DEAD YANKEE.

A Yankee younger brother "down east" not yet found himself; a struggling elder brother with a family and a future all ahead in Texas; an old father and mother, down Boston way; and the reliance of the old home in the uniform of an engineer officer of the United States Navy dead of a Japanese army bullet in a side street off the main thoroughfare Svietlanskaya; a diplomatic inquiry from the Government of the United States of America; a Japanese court-martial, suspension from command of Japanese officers held responsible with apology to the Government of the United States of America; and harikiri of a Japanese general of the army following—that is Vladivostok.

But the Trans-Siberian Railway terminus, the open door to Siberia, the Czech exodus, foreign military occupation, killing of Lieutenant Langdon, and decorating of the agents of the powers are but part of Vladivostok. Vlad not only is the dual city, European and Asiatic, of Russians, Japanese, Chinese and Koreans and others. It is the meeting-place of America and Asia and focus of the American-Asiatic issue. It started the movement for revision of the World War settlement in the Pacific made in Japan's interest. It became a solvent to the Anglo-Japanese and European-Japanese coalitions. It is heralded by their mutual friends as the ground where Japan and America are to understand each other; finally, and as the alloy and formula of the new American-Japanese policy in East Asia—a kind of Far Eastern The Hague.

Many cities have sprung into world fame from the World War, but they retired again into obscurity. The most notorious and least enviable of the world's cities cannot retire; it is on a hill, literally and figuratively and cannot be hid. It is the political and diplomatic center of the Pacific area. Stepping ashore there is an echo of rifle shots. Seoul, Peking, Nanking, Shanghai and Canton are revolutionary centers. Roll them together and they are Vladivostok. Vladivostok is their last legatee. Those places have had several revolutions, but Vladivostok has had half a dozen and it is still in eruption. It is the place to which Russian power working from the North Pacific region toward Port Arthur zigzagged to its fall.

But shabby, down and out as a Russian base on the Pacific, it is a magnificent ruin of Slav power here. And it has behind it, all and more than that which has made Seattle and is making Vancouver and other cities of the American coast opposite. San Francisco had the California gold mines back of it. Vladivostok has three Klondikes in its hinterland. Vancouver has the Canadian West wheat fields behind it, Vladivostok has the great agricultural regions of the whole Amur basin. Seattle and Vancouver have the minerals and fish resources of Alaska and British Columbia while Vladivostok has those of the corresponding Asiatic coast of the North.

Canada's trans-Pacific steamship Empress of Russia was named in connection with the approaching greatness of Vladivostok and in anticipation of round-the-world connections on a world scale between Russia and the Pacific Coast. That development has been delayed, but the fact that the fiercest light of international affairs and of the conflict between two civilizations in the Pacific beats upon Vladivostok is proof of its world importance.

Out of this situation has been born a new world capital. Many old capitals have been given again, second-handed to the world, but a new international center has arisen on the Sea of Japan. It is Vladivostok, the lodestone to fifteen of the world's nations and almost as many races.

REAL DEVOTION.

Sometimes people who have children of their own are inclined to be skeptical about the affection adopted ones have for their foster parents. But at a recent school field meet there was found one brave little fellow who certainly cared for his foster father.

He was a little runner and in practicing ran against the wire fence and cut both of his knees terribly. He was immediately taken from the contestants and put to rest at one side of the field and a substitute sent into his place. And all went well until some little fellow happened to ask him whether he should go after his foster father.

Then the youngster jumped up. "I've just got to run in the 100-yard dash," he began bravely, trying to ignore the pain, which was half killing him. "Dad came out here just to see me win that and I got to do it so he'll be proud of me at the office tomorrow."

And run it he did, although his little knees were bleeding and racked with pain. He also won it and dad was proud.—[Indianapolis News.

"OVER THE HILLS" TO SHOW AT MILLER'S.

Intensely human, with a big emotional sweep and heart interest in every scene, "Over the Hill," William Fox's motion-picture epic of mother love and filial ingratitude, will open its first local showing at popular prices at Miller's today.

Here is a photoplay that has needed no big mob scenes, no spectacular and costly settings, no exaggerated sex appeal, to make it so popular that it played for one solid year on Broadway, New York.

The theme of the story is mother love, and the story is based upon the work of Will Carleton, the poet. The action is drawn from an incident which occurred during the boyhood of Carleton, who lived on a farm and knew intimately the characters that have been made immortal upon the screen.

The central figure in the story, that of a little, self-sacrificing mother, has been made one of the most delightful character studies of the present day by Mary Carr, whose finished interpretation of the leading part is a constant joy.

The picture, in its many-sidedness, has an irresistible appeal for every member of the family. It has heart interest, swiftness of action, delightful humor, and a sweet and wholesome story so simply told and so human that it already has taken its place among the real classics of the film.

Noel Tearle, William Welch, Edna Murphy, Johnny Walker and the four Carr children—Stephen, Louella, May Beth and Rosemary—are leading players.

The picture was directed by Harry Millarde.

"BARNEY" TO HAVE ENTRY AT BEVERLY.

Buys French Racing Car Especially for Thanksgiving Day Race.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

AKRON (O.) Aug. 20.—Barney Oldfield tonight announced that he had purchased a Talbot Darracq racing car which will arrive in the United States from France early in October. Immediately following its arrival in this country Barney will ship it to Los Angeles and give it an initial tryout on the Beverly Hills Speedway. It will not be started in any race until the Thanksgiving Day classic at Los Angeles.

Either Chassagne or Rudolfo Mineoa will be at the wheel.

"I am selecting a foreigner to drive my car, not because I think that a European pilot is the equal of our own Miltons, Murphys or Sarles, but because I recognize the need for injecting a new element into racing if the interest of the public is to be sustained," declared Barney.

"I hope that two or three other sportsmen in California will follow this lead and import cars and drivers to whoop things up a bit."

SANTA FE TRAIL TO BE REPAIRED.

Good news for motorists is found in the announcement made by the Automobile Club touring bureau that "bog" and "chuckholes" on the Santa Fe Trail will be attended to so that the route will be in better condition in the future.

This action along the road which leads directly into Southern California was decided upon at a highway conference held in Santa Fe, N. M., recently.

Can Now Reach Ventura on Solid Concrete Roads via Castaic.

The Los Angeles-Castaic-Ventura motor highway is officially thrown open to travel today and according to reports from the Automobile Club of Southern California the trip over this road and return via Calabasas and the Conejo grade will be one of the most interesting and scenic in the south. Below, one of the huge concrete mixers, finishing up the last stretch of the Castaic link. But it's out of the way now and everything is in readiness for heavy traffic today.

FIVE MOTOR CAR PLANTS CUT PRICES.

Wills, Hudson, Essex, King and Pierce-Arrow All Announce Drops.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, Aug. 20.—Makers of five standard automobiles—Wills Ste. Claire, Hudson, Essex, Pierce-Arrow and King announced price reductions this week. In the case of Hudson and Essex lines it was the third cut in the prices of these cars, putting present quotations at a lower level than any before offered. Officials of the Hudson and Essex companies said heavy sales during the summer exhausted old inventories and reduced overhead costs and that materials are purchasable now at a lower figure.

Reductions in the prices of its touring car models, effective after September 1, and a reduction on the prices of its truck models, effective immediately, has been announced by the Pierce-Arrow Company.

The new price of the standard seven-passenger touring car is $6500 at the factory, the inclosed car prices being graded proportionately. Reductions of four models of the King Motor Car Company range from $600 to $800.

G.M.C. TRUCKS ARE REDUCED IN PRICE.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PONTIAC (Ill.) Aug. 20.—Price cuts on the entire line of motor trucks made by the General Motors are announced. They range from $400 to $800 with the largest proportionate decrease on the one-ton model which is cut 25 per cent. The plant has been comparatively inactive for some time but recent orders have caused renewed building of machines.

NO CHANCE TO REDUCE RATES.

Automobile Insurance Keeps Pace With Risk.

Personal Element is Hard Thing to Figure.

Can Cut Down Accidents and Rates at Same Time.

There will be no lower automobile insurance rates for motorists of Southern California in the near future despite recent action taken by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce in severing its connections with the National Board of Automobile Underwriters, according to a detailed announcement made yesterday by officials of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

REDUCE THE RISK.

It is up to the public to first reduce the risk induced by reckless driving, careless garage construction and activity of automobile thieves before insurance rates can be lowered in this section, it is pointed out.

Why does not a cautious driver get a lower insurance rate on his car than one who is known by the insurance company to be reckless?

Because the cost both to the insurance company to the individual solicitor in investigating, except in a general way, the reliability of every automobile driver who seeks to take out insurance, would bring the overhead expense of the company up to a point which would raise the insurance rates to the same figure at which they were before such an elaborate investigation was attempted.

LOOK THEM UP.

The action taken by the National Chamber of Commerce, according to eastern dispatches, was taken in an effort to secure a nation-wide inquiry by insurance companies into a man's character before writing his policy, and also because of the disagreement with the grouping of cars according to their mechanics' construction.

The Inter-Insurance Exchange of the Automobile Club of Southern California, which is the criterion for co-operative insurance throughout America, characterizes any stand taken for an investigation into an individual's personal habits in regard to his rate of insurance as impractical for the average insurance company at this time because of the enormous expense involved in making personal investigations. Any insurance solicitor, it is pointed out, would make very little money if he had to spend time investigating the personal character of each one of his "prospects."

ALWAYS CONSIDERED.

The "hazard" which exists in any community is taken into consideration by the insurance company. That is, the amount of recklessness, the number of accidents and various considerations which go to make up any element adverse to the insurance company. In Southern California however, motorists are fortunate in having at hand the Insurance Department of the Automobile Club, which actually does undertake to represent the individual policy-holder as well as its own welfare, thus having a dual personality, whereas ordinary stock insurance companies have only one personality, inasmuch as they represent only their company interests

NEAT EARNINGS IN FIRST SIX MONTHS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT (Mich.) Aug. 20.—General Motors Corporation shows net earnings of $18,259,460.90 for the first six months of 1921, of which $14,551,516.41 were the net earnings for the past three months of the half year.

The balance of net earnings after all deductions except for dividends was $9,605,675.60, which increased surplus of $21,273,218 on Dec. 31, 1920, to $130,878,892.60 on June 30. The balance of surplus after deduction of dividends on the preferred, debenture and common stocks amounting to $13,368,100.68, was $117,510,791.92.

The consolidated balance sheet shows totals of $581,149,212.82, compared with $404,806,868 on December 31. Current and working assets aggregate $234,179, and current liabilities $110,060,304.24, indicating net working capital of $144,634,706 at the end of 1920.

HEAVY PRODUCTION OF DURANT "SIX."

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—Production of an exclusive six-cylinder model in quantities sufficient to supply Durant dealers and distributors throughout the world beginning September 1 was announced this week by executives of the Durant Motors Company of Indiana, which purchased the Sheridan Motor Car Company plant from the General Motors several weeks ago, at a cost of approximately $2,000,000.

The new six-cylinder type will be manufactured in touring cars of five and seven-passenger capacity, runabouts, coupes, sedans and limousines. The Muncie plant has a productive capacity of 25,000 cars annually, but the new owners plan to augment this figure considerably within a short time.

PEAK SALES WILL COME NEXT YEAR.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

TOLEDO (O.) Aug. 20.—Activity in the automobile industry will reach the peak in 1922 declares John Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Company, in a resume of the condition of his company, issued this week.

He points out that splendid crop prospects and relief for the railroads promises more in the way of prosperity for next year than we have had in 1921.

"Many people who have been getting along with old cars will buy new ones while others who have never owned cars will be numbered among the purchasers when the returning period of prosperity puts them in position to buy," declared Mr. Willys.

NEW CASTAIC ROAD TO VENTURA OPENS TODAY.

Important Highway Link Through Rich Farming Country is at Last Ready for Motorists' Use.

Motorists today will begin to enjoy the fruits of that historic "get-together" meeting the Supervisors of Ventura and Los Angeles counties held in 1916 at the instance of the Auto Club when it was decided to pave the great valley route between Los Angeles and Ventura through the Castaic region.

Today this route is thrown open to the motoring public, with the completion of the last portion of Los Angeles county's share of the work from Castaic to the county line.

PAPA OF SCHEME.

Now this provides one of the most remarkable round-trip, all-paved tours in the State. Practically virgin touring territory is opened to the auto owner, points out the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California, which, in reality is the "papa" of the scheme for the complete paving of the road.

Ventura county some time ago finished the paving of its share of the route through Santa Paula, Fillmore and Piru to the Los Angeles county line midway between Castaic and the famous Camulos ranch, but the route was not practical as a pleasure tour until this county completed its share of the work between Castaic and the completed portion done by Ventura—a distance of six miles, which has been under construction for a little over a year.

This road follows the famous Santa Clara River for a considerable distance, and passes near the old Camulos ranch which was made famous by Helen Hunt Jackson in her book, "Ramona." It serpentines through some of the richest farming country in the State.

With the completion of this road, a round trip of surpassing importance is opened to the public with its apex at Ventura. Leaving Los Angeles the motorist may take either the Calabasas route, thorugh Newberry and Camarillo and over the Conejo grade, returning over the Castaic road, or vice versa.

From this city to Ventura by way of Santa Paula and Castaic the distance is eighty-one miles, while it is seventy-one miles over the Calabasas route, making a round trip of 152 miles, a pleasant journey for a day, with an opportunity for lunching in Ventura, or en route.

PINK SHEET NEWS SUMMARY.

AUTOMOBILES. Wide interest being shown in motor world over Ver Linden's fight with General Motors. Automobile executive files answer to corporations' suit and legal battle is expected early next month.

New motor highway to Ventura via Castaic officially thrown open to travel today. Completion of this road opens up picturesque territory and offers interesting round trip to northern city.

Automobile Club of Southern California says that automobile insurance rates cannot possibly come down in this section while the accident rate is so extremely high. Also club bureau is against proposed "human element" entering into insurance policies, claiming that cost of investigation would be far too high.

Tire manufacturers are at peak production and expect to maintain high average for several months at least. Demand for tubes and casings is keeping up better than most executives had anticipated.

WILLS SETS RECORD DRIVING OWN CAR.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—C. Harold Wills, creator of the Wills Sainte Claire motor car Wednesday broke all automobile records between Detroit and New York at the wheel of one of his own cars. He left police headquarters Detroit at 12:01 Wednesday morning and arrived at the New York branch of the Wills Sainte Claire in New York at 8:27 Detroit time, 9:27 New York time.

The car contained four men, 275 pounds of baggage and was driven the last six hours in a heavy fog and driving rain. The total elapsed time was 20h. 26m.

NOISY MOTORBIKES ARE UNDER THE BAN.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 20.—Motorcycle owners in California who persist in riding their machines with the muffler wide open do so at the risk of being arrested and heavily fined, according to Charles J. Chenu, superintendent of the State motor vehicle department.

As the result of many complaints that have been received from all parts of the State against motorcycle owners who violate the motor vehicle law, Chenu has instructed his inspectors to make arrests whenever they catch a machine with the muffler open.

LOOKING FOR MAN TO BUILD ROADS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 20.—The California State Civil Service Commission is looking for an associate highway engineer to assist in carrying on the big road-building program during the coming two years.

The examinations are to be held in Los Angeles, Sacramento and San Francisco, and the last day for filing application at those places is September 17.

LINCOLN TURNING OUT MANY CARS NOW.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT (Mich.) Aug. 20.—The Lincoln Motor Car Company is producing 200 cars monthly now. At present there are 2000 Lincoln cars in the hands of owners and this number will be augmented rapidly with the increase brought about through demand and the increase in working capital of $1,250,000 recently voted by the directors and a bond issue as part of the fixed assets of $2,500,000.

HE Hupmobile possesses those satisfying qualities which, in human being, would be everlasting good humor and willingness to serve.

Quickly establishing confidence in its reliability, the Hupmobile then proceeds to generate a still sounder sense of security by the steadfast quality of its service.

It gives so much at such small cost, that an owner rarely sells his Hupmobile unless it be to replace it with a new one.

It is a positive fact that we are selling Hupmobiles as fast as we receive them. We believe it to be the best buy on the market.

A Service Station that Is All that the Name Implies.

The El Camino station, conducted by the Pacific Rubber Company at Hollywood Boulevard and Gower street. Unusual conveniences of many kinds have been incorporated into its equipment and it is believed to be the most modern and artistically built plant of its kind in the country.

SOMETHING NEW IN LINE.

The building and operation of the decidedly artistic service station at Hollywood Boulevard and Gower streets, Hollywood, by the Pacific Rubber Company, coast distributors of Horse Shoe tires, is the first instance, as far as known, where a tire distributing concern has directly entered this wide field of endeavor.

Before this concern decided to extend its sphere of activity in this respect, the subject was made a matter of a great deal of investigation in different sections of the country and particularly on the Coast, according to Roy R. Meads, its president and general manager. "I gave this subject considerable thought on my Eastern trips," said Meads. "In the matter of frequent and easily accessible service stations, the East does not compare with California. But in so many instances, no matter where you may go, the service is confined to the immediate needs of the motorist—gas, oil, a few tires and tubes, water that you get yourself and free air.

"It seemed to us that progressive changes in the automotive and tire industry as a whole, called for a higher plane of service than is generally afforded the public; a modern plant embracing modern appliances and in a building architecturally pleasing to the eye; drinking fountains, properly furnished rest rooms, the right kind of night lighting, an attractive line of accessories, tire vulcanizing department, accommodation for washing and polishing and lubricating cars. To make a long story as short as possible, we have all these features in our new station, including another—the cleaning of chassis by steam and also the removing of paint from bodies by the same method.

"Courteous and prompt attention to patrons the instant a car drives up for gas or oil is another feature that we demand from our attendants. As soon as the motorist's fuel needs are known and the gas faucet is in the tank of the car, the oil gauge is inspected as well as the radiator, to see if oil or water is necessary."

NO CHANCE TO REDUCE RATES.

and not the personal interests of the policy holder.

It is up to the public to reduce the risk or hazard in Southern California, says the Automobile Club. With fewer accidents, fewer fires, fewer stolen cars, there will be a greater chance of lower insurance rates in the future in this section.

In the Pacific Coast territory there are several insurance subdivisions, so to speak, in which different rates are charged. In California two schedules are applicable—one applying in San Francisco and Los Angeles, and another schedule applying in the balance of the State. These schedules has been determined after due consideration has been given the construction of the car and the hazards in the actual experience of the insurance companies in these territories.

According to Ralph Reynolds, manager of the Automobile Club's Inter-Insurance Exchange, which writes the greatest volume of auto insurance in this territory, the ideal plan of operation is a co-operative one, in that the policy-holder has equal representation with the firm's interests.

A final solution to the problem propounded by the National Auto Chamber of Commerce in seeking to have rates reduced for motorists on a basis of "personal reliability" and by eliminating the classification of cars for insurance rates according to their mechanical construction will probably be found in Southern California, rather than elsewhere in America, because of the example set by the Auto Club's insurance department in making lower rates on a co-operative basis possible.

However, the "human element"—or how good a driver are you?—will not enter into the matter of insurance rates on the part of the companies for some time until motorists themselves "wise up" to the fact that they must be less reckless.

It is being considered constantly, according to Manager Reynolds, throughout America, but not as elaborately as the national chamber suggests.

The big factor to be eliminated now, if autoists want lower insurance, is CARELESSNESS!

GOVERNOR PREDICTS GROWTH OF INDUSTRY.

CHIEF EXECUTIVE OF STATE PRAISES LOCALLY-MADE AUTOMOBILE.

Predicting an early and huge increase in the industrial growth of Los Angeles, Gov. Stephens of California, who presided at the opening of the successful Industrial Trade Exposition just ended, lauded one particular Los Angeles product to the skies. Following his first ride in a Leach power plus six, manufactured in this city, the Governor displayed much interest in the machine and its manufacturers, and declared that the automobile industry is certain to play a large part in the future industrial growth of Los Angeles and California.

WHY DOES ONE TIRE OUTLAST THE REST?

NOT GENERALLY DUE TO THE INFERIORITY OF THE OTHER THREE.

Every motorist has no doubt answered to his own satisfaction, at least, the question of why one tire lasts longer than another of the same brand. But Leon S. Utter, local distributor for Midco and California cord tires, has what he believes is the only plausible answer. He says:

"By the present up-to-date methods employed in reliable factories, involving uniform processes and rigid inspections, it is practically impossible that out of two completed tires emerging from the final vulcanizing, one could be superior in quality to the other. So the reason for one tube or casing outlasting the other must be found in the conditions that arise after they come into the hands of the motorist.

"Attacking the question from the negative standpoint of why one tire fails to last as long as the other, we can probably answer it quicker. One tire may be underinflated, resulting in more wear to the edges of the tread. Or it may be overinflated, tending to strain the tissues of the tire walls, inviting an ultimate blowout. Again, a wheel may be out of alignment, in which case the tire would be worn by what would amount to continual skidding."

Impossible to Store Up Electricity.

"'Storage Battery' is in effect a misnomer for the modern electric battery," says A. J. Tobey, president of the Western Auto Electric Corporation, distributors of Willard batteries. "Electric energy is not in fact 'stored' there, but the component parts of a battery set up an electro-chemical action when the lighting or ignition switch is turned on making a complete circuit.

"The greater the surface of the battery plates, which are immersed in sulphuric acid, the greater may be the amount of electrical energy generated. The battery which combines this feature with compactness most nearly approaches the ideal. The Willard Threaded Insulated battery has avoided multiplicity of plates by using lead in porous form and insulating the sections with threaded rubber.

"Rubber cannot generally be used between the plates of automobile starting and lighting batteries, because the insulation medium must be porous. This is necessary to allow a free circulation of the fluid in the battery, and on the other hand, if the insulating medium should set up a circuit between the plates within the battery it would become short-circuited and refuse to function. Threaded rubber, the only known form of porous rubber suitable for battery insulation, is used exclusively in Willard batteries."

Gentlemen:

I have given my three Buicks the hardest sort of traveling. My work has taken me all over the State in all kinds of weather. Two of them I have driven from the factory here, each trip in thirteen days, from the factory, twelve days from Chicago.

The new Buick I drove thru a sea of Kansas mud and over rough roads by way of Gallup with no mishap and made the trip from Chicago to Los Angeles in twelve days.

Only one machine passed me on the entire trip and that was another Buick driven by a man.

I have driven my three Buicks over sixty thousand miles without ever having one of them go back on me. I wish everything in life were as satisfactory as the Buick.

Why Women Love the New Buick

"I have driven my three Buicks over 60,000 miles without ever having one of them go back on me. I wish everything in life were as satisfactory as the Buick."

The new Buick velvet disc clutch has been the means of making thousands of enthusiastic women motorists of those who had before shunned driving. It has done away with the bugaboo of stiff, grabbing clutches and clashing gears—made motoring a matter of real comfort and satisfaction.

You can only get the velvet disc clutch in the Buick; eleven models to choose from; prices ranging from $1130 for the new Buick 4 Roadster to $3010.25 for the seven-passenger Sedan.

Can't Kick About Traveling Expenses When You Do It This Way.

M. H. Lounsbury (left) of Hamilton, Ontario, Can., showing Byron C. Foy, manager of the Reo factory branch here, the route followed in cross-country tour from Hamilton, Can., to Los Angeles in his Reo six touring car. Mr. Lounsbury was accompanied by his wife, son and daughter. The party of four made the trip of 3430 miles at a total cost of $133.59. Can you beat it?

A SPLENDID MUD HORSE.

Reo Six Proves Itself an All-around Thoroughbred on Jaunt Down the Coast.

Motoring to Los Angeles from Hamilton, (Ont.), Canada, a distance of 3430 miles by motor car with the total expense for a party of four amounting to but $133.59 was the interesting experience of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Lounsbury, their son and daughter.

The journey westward was made in a Reo Six and was its trial trip, the car proving a splendid mud horse as well as a first class mountaineer, so Mr. Lounsbury told Manager Byron C. Foy of the Reo factory branch here.

"Our route followed the following list of towns and cities," said Lounsbury in telling Foy of the long trip. "Hamilton to London, Sarnia, Port Huron, Mount Clemons, Lansing and Elkhart, Indiana to the Lincoln Highway, which was followed across the States of Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska and Wyoming to Cheyenne, where a more southerly route was taken through Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo to Trinidad, where we picked up the Sante Fe Trail. Included in this itinerary was a two-day stop in Denver, visiting the National Park and Lookout Mountain, while from Colorado Springs Pike's Peak and the Garden of the Gods were visited.

"The trail between Las Vegas and Sante Fe and the mountains had practically been obliterated by a cloudburst on July 4th and no repairs made except such as motor tourists had been compelled to make in order to get through.

"The Raton Pass was crossed and good time made through Las Vegas to Sante Fe where we stopped off for three days of interesting sight-seeing at Frigoln Canyon, the old church, museum and other historic and scenic points. West of the Pass and through New Mexico and Arizona via the Gallup Cut-off the roads were very muddy, due to the unprecedented rains which had fallen but a few days before our arrival.

"Our best day's runs were as follows: One 24-hour stretch through Nebraska and Colorado into Denver totaled 432 miles; and the last leg of the journey from Seligman via Kingman, Needles and Barstow to Hermosa Beach of 505 miles in 37 hours. This last long run was made possible through the sky being cloudy and myself and my son taking turns at the wheel.

FORMER LOS ANGELES DEALER HAS TROUBLES WITH RULES IN CANADA.

Here is an instance where left is right and right is wrong.

Harold L. Knudsen, formerly manager of the Willys-Overland Pacific branch in Oakland and now manager for the same organization in Seattle, recently communicated with J. F. Thomson, local branch manager, in which he relates an interesting trip down from the northwest in his Overland four to San Francisco. He made the trip in fast time, but did not attempt breaking any records.

According to a tale that Knudsen related to Mr. Thomson, it is possible for Washington motor car owners to drive to Vancouver, B. C. That is, to take the boat over to the British Columbia city.

Here is where the hitch comes in. In this country the autoist keeps to the right or he finds himself in bad with the traffic officer. In Vancouver the system is changed. The traffic keeps to the left on the Vancouver thoroughfares and if you keep to the right you are dead wrong. It is very confusing to autoists who have been brought up on American traffic rules, and, according to Knudsen, they have got to keep their wits about them or visit the town bastile.

LINCOLNS USED BY HARDING'S PARTY.

President and Mrs. Harding, Vice-President and Mrs. Coolidge, Secretary of War Weeks and other distinguished guests, including the entire Presidential party, used Lincoln cars exclusively during the recent Pilgrim tercentenary festivities held at Plymouth, Mass.

According to "Doc" Green, branch manager of the Walter M. Murphy Motors Company, Lincoln distributors, eastern distributors provided a whole fleet of Lincoln cars for the use of the President and his party, as well as for President Henry M. Leland of the Lincoln Motor Company, who is a personal friend of President Harding, and who, with W. C. Leland, vice-president and general manager; W. H. Murphy and John Boyer, directors of the Lincoln company, made a special trip from Detroit to attend the pageant.

GOOD ROADS LOWER COST OF UPKEEP.

Condition of Highways Affects the Expense of Maintaining an Automobile.

"Providing the owner gives the attention to his car that it is justly entitled to, road conditions become the all-prominent factor in its percentage of deterioration and its cost of maintenance," declared Stanley W. Smith of Smith Brothers, Peerless distributors for Southern California. "Aside from the natural pride that we have in our highway system and the general tax burden, every motorist has a selfish interest in the way our highways are built.

"Highways that soon disintegrate because of poor construction, are a bane to every operator of a motor-driven vehicle. In exact proportion to their degree of disintegration, they exact a toll of wear and tear that annually must run into a tremendous sum. This can only mean a double drain upon the tax payer, which should be of considerable interest to him if he gives the subject any serious thought.

"Our State highway system has been widely advertised, and it comes as somewhat of a jolt to us, to be informed upon the most reliable authority that the State's construction methods are antiquated and are annually costing motor vehicle owners and tax payers a tremendous amount.

"The subject is one of more than passing interest, in my opinion. The Automobile Club of Southern California and the northern association, working together, have shown that they have the best interests of the public at heart, and should, I think, have the hearty support of every right-minded citizen in their campaign to correct what is asserted to be a badly mismanaged department of our State's functions."

NEW KISSEL MODELS INSTANTANEOUS HIT.

ATTRACTIVE CARS ARE PRAISED ON DISPLAY AT SAN FRANCISCO.

Word has just been received by Gilbert Woodill, Coast factory representative of the Kissel Motor Car Company, that the new models which were just placed on display in San Francisco have scored an instantaneous hit. These new models will also be seen in this city shortly.

The attractive design and custom-built features of these cars should be especially appealing to the feminine visitors, while the men, of course, will be more particularly interested in the mechanical achievements of the car.

Especial emphasis, therefore, is being laid by Woodill on the performance of the Kissel custom-built six over California roads. Woodill has personally spent weeks in the testing out of these cars on the highways of the State, and the charts that he has kept of the car's performance under California touring conditions will be of interest to every prospective motor car owner.

Furthermore, Woodill, has been carefully compiling actual records of California owners, and these are now available to prove the merits of the Kissel under actual touring conditions.

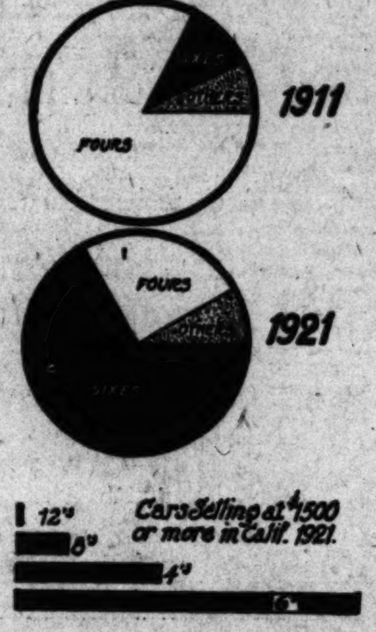
HUPMOBILE SALES ON THE UP-GRADE.

If the Hupmobile sales, wholesale and retail, for the first two weeks of this month offer any criterion, the month of August will easily surpass the sales record in any preceding year for the same month, according to P. H. Greer of the Greer-Robbins Company, Hupmobile distributors for California, Arizona and Nevada.

While the greatest demand is for touring cars and roadsters, the company's allotment of coupes and sedans is generally only about "one jump" ahead of the affixing of purchasers' signatures to order blanks. It has been necessary for the service department to work outside of regular hours in order that new cars may be promptly serviced.

Be Satisfied only with a "SIX"

Studebaker



EXPERIENCED motorists who have graduated in the school of motor car transportation are satisfied with nothing less than six-cylinder performance.

The popularity of six-cylinder motors has gained ground so fast that they now dominate the field of cars selling at $1500 or more.

Three years ago Studebaker invested $20,000,000 in its South Bend plant for the exclusive production of the Light Six model. They have produced a car that combines the satisfactory performance of the "Six" with the economy of any light automobile.

They purposed to build the "World's Greatest Light Six Car" and they have succeeded, here is what the Studebaker Light Six will do—

18 to 22 miles per gallon—

12,000 to 18,000 miles on tires—

10 years of satisfactory service.

We will gladly demonstrate Light Six performance and prove our claims of economy.

If you have not yet ridden in this "World's Greatest Light Six" we invite you to do so. Telephone us—when you want the car sent to your door.

New Contract Frees Dealer from Worries.

The first motor car company to adopt the terms of contract between manufacturer and dealer, as recommended by the Automobile Chamber of Commerce is the Oakland Motor Car Company of Pontiac.

Under the new contract each distributor enjoys a perpetual franchise for the handling of Oakland motor cars. No longer does he have to sit back and worry himself sick for fear that some other concern is back at the factory, trying to wean the account away from him. He now can step right out and build up a business that can be preserved and handed down to his children.

"Up until this year there have been but rare instances of perpetual contracts between dealers and factories in the motor car field, and this has fostered a feeling of distrust on both sides," says H. C. McVey of the Los Angeles Oakland Company.

"The dealer never knew when he was to wake up and find that a competitor was the dealer for the line of cars he had been handling. He as reluctant to go ahead and spend his own money to give the buyers added service. He did not dare gamble on building up too much good will for the cars he sold. He always had to hold back against that day when he would be out.

"A perpetual contract gives a dealer something to work on. It becomes an asset to him. It is something that has value in business and he stakes his all on the car he handles. This means mor and better service to owners with a conscience, to see that every buyer is satisfied."

MOTOR STAGES GET OVER MUCH GROUND.

FIVE HUNDRED THOUSAND MILES COVERED A MONTH BY ONE CONCERN.

Five hundred twenty-three thousand miles! That is a long way, but it is only a portion of the distance motor stages in the State of California travel in one month.

There are over 1000 motor stages in operation in the State today. Less than one-fifth of these cars, belonging to the Motor Transit Company, stack up a combined mileage equal to twenty trips around the world every thirty days.

More than 300,000 people were carried by the cars en route. This not only shows that motor transportation is on the increase, but that the general public is traveling more these days.

STEADY DEMAND FOR TRAILERS.

Carriers Increase Capacity of Trucks Much.

Motor Transportation Rivals Railroad Freight.

History of Trailer is Traced from Early Days.

According to the reports from the Trailers' Manufacturing Association activity is marked in the selling of trailers. The demand has been consistent and steady. They believe that as business gets down to a more economical basis, manufacturers and merchans will look more closely to the cost of transportation, and will adopt the trailer more generally as a means of reducing the cost of haulage and delivery. It is expected that the high railroad freight rates will result in a larger development of the ship by truck movement.

RAPID GROWTH.

The study of a growth from its primitive beginnings to a nearly finished perfection, whether it be a people or a product, is always of some interest. As in a locomotive and in the ships that sail the sea, the passing years have wrought incredible changes in that carrier known as a trailer.

Probably the first trailer was used before the advent of the white man in this land of ours—when an Indian brave calmly smoking watched his squaw dragging, on two boughs fastened together, a load too heavy to carry. Since a heavy load may be pulled with greater ease than carried, a crude trailer was fashioned in early days, by slinging two poles from the sides of a horse and carrying the load on the poles. It was but a step from this to having horses pulling wagons with a wagon trailer. Then with the invention of motor cars these in turn had wagon trailers. But here an unlooked for difficulty arose. The wagon trailer could not stand the speed and the increased vibration. The bearings became hot, the tires were knocked out of shape, and things generally began to give.

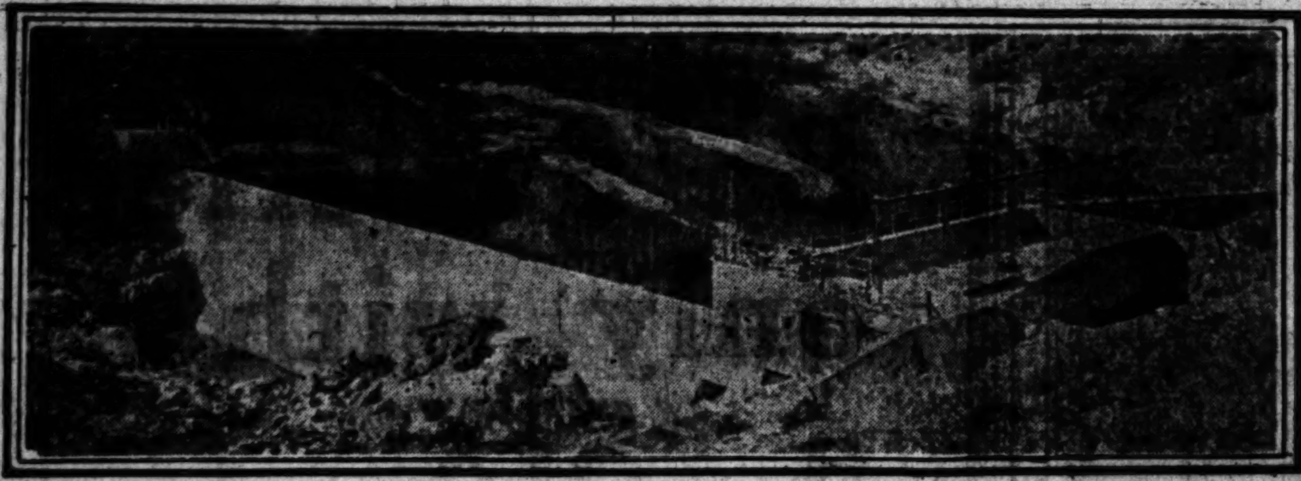
NEED IS PROVED.

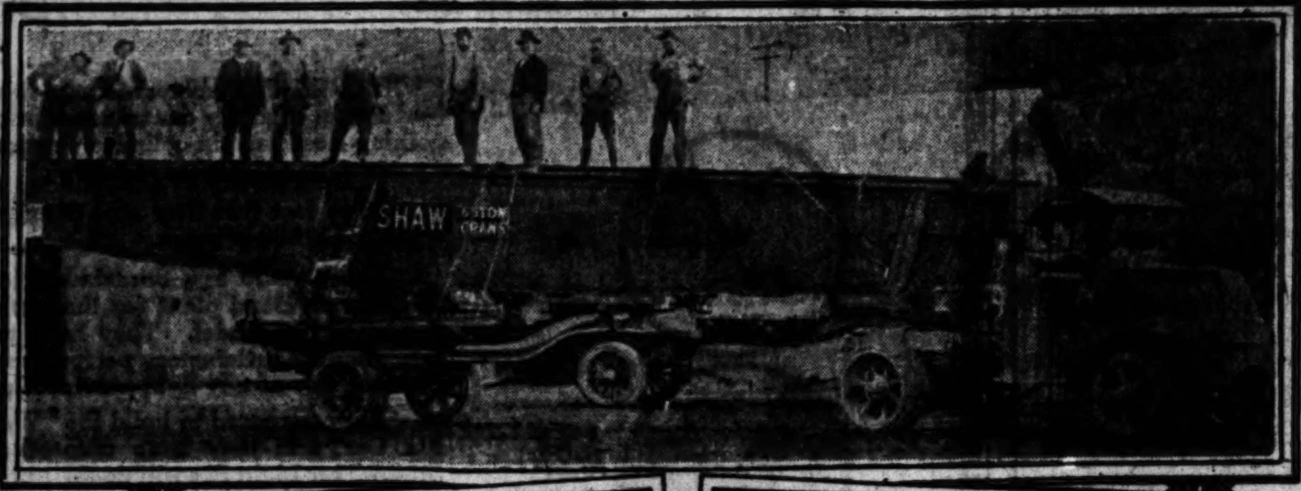
The efficacy and need of a trailer had been proved and as always in such a case a manufacturer took up the matter and built a trailer and it ceased to be just anything hauled behind a wagon or a car. Whether the trailer would have made such a place for itself if it were not for the truck is a matter for conjecture.

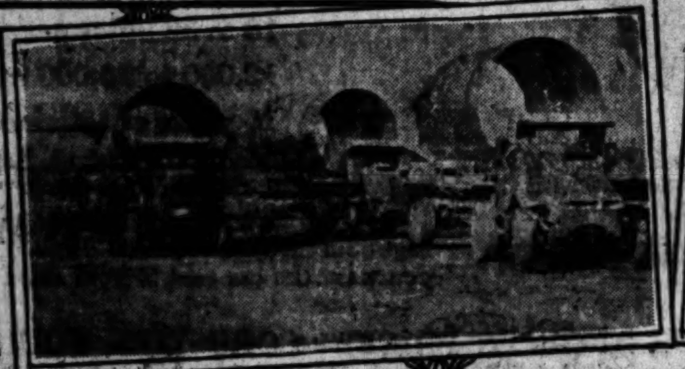
Machines, like people, if they be of lasting worth must have a reserve strength or excess power. Something that will be "there" in times of stress. So the truck is built with an excess power that may be used in case of an emergency. This excess power under normal conditions can be utilised in hauling the trailer. Some one has figured out that a truck carrying a normal load, and hauling a trailer with an equal load, a total of double the normal load, will show an increased consumption of gasoline and oil of about 20 per cent. It has been found, too, that the actual difference in the life of a truck hauling a trailer to a similar truck carrying only its normal load is so slight as to be discounted by the gain.

CAMPING TRAILERS.

That the trailer is not strictly a business proposition is evidenced by the arrival of the camping trailer for use by automobile tourists. This outfit includes a bed, mattresses, pillows, folding table, chairs, oil stove, cooking utensils and dishes, ice chests and electric light, a veritable camp on wheels. It weighs less than 800 pounds, has roller bearings and pneumatic tires, so it is easily drawn and does not affect the speed of the car. Many such trailers are being used by tourists.







Motor Trucks Playing a Mighty Role.

Perhaps the greatest peace-time motor transportation achievement on record was the transportation, mostly by Mack trucks, of 60,000 tons of materials and supplies used by the Southern California Edison Company in the construction of Kern River plant No. 3. The Macks had to haul tremendous loads over terrible roads and accomplished the seemingly impossible task without trouble of any sort. Above, one of the dams built from material hauled to the spot by trucks, and below, some of the huge pieces of equipment which were carried long distances by Mack trucks.

PRICE OF PISTON RINGS IS DROPPED.

The McQuay-Norris Manufacturing Company of St. Louis, has announced a reduction in the price of the genuine McQuay-Norris leak-proof piston rings. The new price is $1.25 for all sizes and oversizes up to five inches in diameter. This includes practically all makes of motor cars and trucks.

In revising their prices to car owners and the trade, the company calls attention to the fact that the prices of its rings were never raised during the war.

SIGNAL IS REAL HELP TO DRIVER.

"Look Out" Device Gives Warning Every Time Car Slows Up.

As a direct development of the drive now being made by the police on reckless automobile drivers, the Lookout Manufacturing Company with offices at 881 West Sixteenth street, the makers of a "Look Out" device for automobiles, have begun a campaign to have their product adopted by the city and county official cars. The device which is attached to the rear of automobiles is automatic and waves a warning to other automobile drivers that the car in front is slowing down.

The "Look Out" is an attachment connected with the brakes of the automobile. When the foot brake is applied by the driver the little red disc supported by steel arms springs up from behind the number plate of the automobile and operates in the same manner as a railroad crossing wig-wag. At night the disc shows a red light.

In speaking of the "Look Out," Captain of Traffic McDowell declared, "If this warning device was on every automobile I am sure that the city accidents would be cut down by one-half. A driver by simply placing a foot on the brakes starts the signal to working and at once warns the fellow behind that he is going to slow down. The signal is effective at night as well as in the day time. Something of the kind should be adopted by the State and then required by a State law."

HUGE PLANT IS GENUINE SHOW PLACE

Quantity Production Made Easy and Accurate in New Cadillac Factory.

One of the show places among the industrial plants in Detroit is the new Cadillac factory which covers forty-nine acres of ground. Before the completion of this plant, which is one of the largest and most modern in the country, the manufacture of the Cadillac was done in seventy-seven different buildings. The present plant consists of five units which provides more than 2,250,000 square feet of space covering about fifty-five acres of working floor space.

Cadillac operations are more accurate even than those of watchmaking. Johansson gauges, which make measurements as low as one hundred-thousandth of an inch, are used to prevent the slightest deviation from the high Cadillac standards. Special machinery, much of it entirely peculiar to the Cadillac factory, has been designed and constructed for many operations so thorough that they are not even thought of in other factories.

Every time and labor-saving device that has proved its worth for Cadillac has been included. When additional stories are added, a thing which is proposed for later on, practically no remodeling will have to be done to the interior of the present plant. The additional stories can be added without halting manufacturing operations.

The hum and hustle, the quantity production, and minute efficiency—all the finest elements in America's big business are found at their best in this giant industry, which has a capacity of 20,000 Cadillacs yearly, without the use of night shifts.

Quick Delivery Service

No service is more exacting on motor truck performance and stamina than the express business. Constant operation is demanded. Delays are intolerable. Long life is essential.

Ten years experience in motor truck operation has led the American Railway Company to standardize on White trucks. Twenty-three Whites have just been put into service in Los Angeles by the American Railway Express Co.

VER LINDEN TO BATTLE IT OUT.

ever, Ver Linden received a copy of the official annual report of General Motors form 1920, in which the net earnings are put down at $93,150,308.

VAST SUMS.

To reduce this figure to $81,083,093, the basis on which compensation was to be computed, the brief declares, General Motors had deducted from the $93,150,308, avowed as its actual net earnings, vast sums, which in previous years, had not been deducted, nor were these items named in the contract as items which should properly be deducted to arrive at the basis on which compensation was to be computed. For example, one item named is $10,000,000 for taxes and depreciation and others are $4,500,000 for employes' bonuses; $12,000,000 for reserves; $7,500,000 as a special reserve against "unforeseen contingencies"; and $5,500,000 debenture and preferred dividends.

The brief declares that Ver Linden, believing these deductions illegal and contrary to the terms of the contract, refused to accept the lowered basis of compensation and was informed that for the purposes of computing compensation in his case the deduction would not apply; still protracted correspondence that followed failed to bring plaintiff and defendant any nearer adjustment and settlement. Therefore the brief sets up, "the defendant exercising the power and authority possessed by him, drew and advanced to himself a substantially sufficient sum to pay him what the plaintiff owed him."

REFUSED TO DO.

The brief declares that Ver Linden offered to return such portions of the sum received from the corporation as had been received by the corporation from him for investment in stock if the General Motors would deliver to him the stock purchased by his money. This, the brief declares, the General Motors refused to do.

After drawing the check to settle his account just as he had drawn his salary month by month before, Ver Linden formally notified the head offices of the corporation in New York of what he had done whereupon demand was made for the return of the money and on his refusal, he was discharged.

TRUCKS PLAY A MAIN ROLE NOW.

Huge Achievement is Due to Motor Transportation.

No Difficulties Too Great for Mack Fleet.

Heaviest Loads Carried Over Very Worst Roads.

The world's greatest peace-time motor transportation achievement is a Southern California accomplishment. It was the transportation by motor truck of 60,000 tons of material and supplies used by the Southern California Edison Company in the construction of Kern River plant No. 3 located on the banks of the Kern River far up in the mountains above the town of Kernville.

Approximately 2,000,000 residents of California south of Tulare county have electric energy at their disposal as result of this prodigious enterprise which was made possible exclusively through the use of motor truck transportation. The town of Caliente in Kern county was the nearest railroad point. The chief headquarters for distribution were located fifty miles beyond. To reach this site it was necessary for the trucks to surmount three mountain ridges over a road of an average gradient of 6 per cent and countless pieces as steep as 17 per cent. At Caliente the elevation is 1300 feet and the first ridge over which the trucks passed is 4400 feet high. The second is in excess of 5000 feet and the third over 4000 feet in elevation.

Dropping from the summit of the first ridge the road crossed the famous Walker Basin then winds its way by switchbacks and curves through the town of Havila, the early capital of Kern county and the scene of many pioneer enterprises. The celebrated Bodfish grade has to be conquered before the town of Isabella is reached. From Kernville the road follows the canyon of the Kern River.

Under the direction of Mr. Peter Ducker, superintendent of transportation for the Southern California Edison Company and his assistant Edward M. Rondot, 120,000,000 pounds of material, ranging in weight of individual pieces from a few ounces to thirty-five tons, were taken by truck in a period of eighteen months. Kern River plant No. 3 is not the biggest hydro-electric enterprise in the country, but it stands as a monument to motor truck transportation, ranking second only to the use of trucks in the World War.

The preliminary details in connection with the transportation end of the projuect necessitated the building at Caliente of a garage, camp, warehouses, unloading platforms, cranes, derricks and the usual equipment.

Eighteen miles of private road were built by the company at its expense and road making in the mountains is expensive. The road followed a carefully selected route but 17 per cent grades could not be avoided. In addition to the expenditures on its own section of the road the company spent about $10,000 on the maintenance of a county road over which it operated.

Ninety-four motor trucks of various makes were used in the work. The Edison Company owned and operated thirty-seven pieces of Mack motor equipment, which stood the brunt of the burden and carried most of the tonnage. The other trucks usually were called in at rush periods. The thirty-seven pieces of Mack equipment included two 7½-ton models, five 5½-ton models, twelve 15-ton tractors and eighteen of the 1½-ton and 2-ton models. The smaller Macks were used almost entirely for the distribution of supplies among the camps and on the short hauls.

BIGGEST FEAT.

The biggest trucking performance consisted of moving 250 tons of supplies fifty miles daily for several weeks. There were 2800 men housed in twelve camps and every foot of lumber used in building these camps as well as for all other purposes had to make that fifty-mile trip by motor truck.

More than half of the total tonnage was devoted to sacked cement. Fourteen miles above the power house site, well up toward the headwaters of the Kern River a diversion type dam was installed. Thousands of tons of cement went into the making of this dam and to line the twelve miles of tunnels driven through solid rock that convey the water from the dam to the power house. Building the dam, power house and tunnels fifty miles from the base of supplies out of materials that had to be hauled on motor trucks was no small achievement in itself. Those 2800 men had to be kept supplied. Many of them did their own housekeeping and some of the cabins were fitted up with a piano or phonograph that had made the long ride on a truck.

The heaviest single load that it was necessary to transport weighed approximately thirty-five tons. It was part of an electrical generator and was carried on a specially built trailer. Get the Truth About the Chalmers

Ride with us in the Chalmers. Satisfy yourself that it is today's prime value. Do so this week.

Chalmers superiorities are demonstrable. Your word to us that you want the truth about the Chalmers, brings you that truth.

We ask you to check Chalmers performance this week, against any other performance you know.

You will sense the smooth, silent power; the easy throttling down; the instant pick-up of the wonderfully supple motor.

But go farther. Telephone any Chalmers owner. Ask to know how little it costs to run the Chalmers, how little for repairs and replacements.

That is the whole truth. That is the proof of the value which we claim.

Get the truth—from Chalmers owners, and from the car itself, and we will be satisfied. Telephone us, or mail the coupon.

OLDTIMERS NOW LINKED.

One of First Automobiles Now Distributed by Pioneer Along Auto Row.

The appointment by the Haynes Automobile Company of Lynn C. Buxton as their Southern California distributor links together the oldest automobile manufacturer with one of the oldest distributors in the local territory. Most "old-timers" in the business know that Elwood Haynes's first gasoline automobile was built in Kokomo, Ind., in 1893, and that this first self-propelled vehicle is now on exhibition at the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C., where it is shown to many thousands of visitors and tourists each year.

The 1922 model Haynes now on exhibition at Mr. Buxton's showrooms reflects fully the long period of years over which the Haynes has been produced. Much of the pioneering of the present-day motor car was done under Elwood Haynes's direction in the Haynes factory, and this development of motor-car ideas is very much reflected in the new models.

For 1922, the Haynes factory will provide the motoring public with a variety of models that will meet almost every requirement. In the model 55, there will be a five-passenger, roadster and a five-passenger sedan, and, in the model 75, a four-passenger sport model, seven-passenger touring, two-passenger speedster and a full and complete line of inclosed models.

The Haynes is the first factory with large production to put out a standard job with the individual steps and drop fenders, a departure from the standard manufacture that adds largely to the car's appearance, and is finding a ready response from the buyer. The new model 55 is equipped with the well-known Haynes light six-cylinder motor, is fully upholstered in genuine leather, comes equipped with cord tires, Gabriel snubbers all around, motometer and a power tire pump. It is only on account of the enormous production capacity of the Haynes factory that this car can be produced at the price at which it is offered. The lines are graceful, everything is well proportioned, the finish is high grade in every particular, and a great amount of enthusiasm is already expressed in the Buxton sales record.

A Pioneer Motor Car Now Being Distributed Here by a Pioneer Dealer.

Lynn C. Buxton, the new Haynes distributor for Southern California, standing beside the 1922 Haynes model 55. Mr. Buxton has been connected with the automobile business ever since there was such a thing in Los Angeles, and the Haynes has been prominent in the automobile world ever since there were automobiles.

NEW SCHEDULE OF PRICES IS MADE.

SUBSTANTIAL REDUCTIONS FOR WILLS SAINTE CLAIRE ARE ANNOUNCED.

When C. Harold Wills started production in his Marysville plant six months ago he promised that as soon as production was speeded up there would be a substantial price reduction on the entire Wills Sainte Claire line. This new schedule of prices has just been put into effect. In making the radical reduction in prices on the Wills Sainte Claire, C. Harold Wills made the following statement.

"For six months we have been producing Wills Sainte Claire cars in Marysville. We have placed them in the hands of owners in virtually every State in the Union. These owners have driven their cars hundreds of thousands of satisfactory miles. We are very proud of the records we have made and the demand that has come from all sections of the country has enabled us to push production to the peak and this, in turn, has resulted in the price reduction."

The immense plant at Marysville is now in full operation, and is one of the world's most scientifically equipped factories. Manufacturing methods have been perfected and the plant is proving one of the most interesting sights in the industrial center of the East.

ANOTHER CARLOAD OF CORDS IS HERE.

SUPPLY OF HENDERSON TIRES ARRIVES FOR THE LOCAL DISTRIBUTORS.

The California Sales Company, recently made distributor of Henderson giant oversize cord tires, has received another carload of these tires that are widely known in the East, and there is every indication that the second will go as rapidly as the first. These tires which are guaranteed for 8000 miles are being sold here at Goodrich fabric prices.

"There is nothing unusual about this offering," declared an official of the company." The manufacturers, who have been in the tire business in the East for fourten years, were not burdened with long time contracts for crude rubber and fabric. They have been able to avail themselves at the present low prices on these materials and the public is getting the benefit of this condition.

"We are daily selling scores of these oversize cords, and it is our experience that owners of big cars are using them in a surprisingly large number."

TRUCKS PLAY A LEADING ROLE NOW.

MOTOR TRANSPORTATION IS GROWING IN IMPORTANCE AT RAPID RATE.

"A study of the economic history of the United States quickly discloses the giant role played by the railroads—initiated by private capital—aided by land grants alternately hampered and succored by the Federal government, but always going forward, opening up new trading areas, developing and going into new territories," says Gilbert Woodill, Pacific Coast representative of the [illegible] Motor Car Company.

"Then came the industrial era of intensive manufacture and its problems of extensive distribution—again the railroads.

"Today we see our industrial history repeating itself, doubling back over the old problems but with a new distribution solution—the motor truck."

"Industrial America has spent the past decade or more in studies of its products—seeking refinements in manufacturing—studying and sometimes controlling sources of supply—and later a more or less close survey of markets.

"But the new day is here—when manufacturers on an equal plane of endeavor in buying and fabricating, are seeking the marginal factor in distribution. And in physical distribution, the motor truck is playing the role destined for it from the first. For in the motor truck lie the same potentialities for the individual business firm that formerly lay in the rails at an earlier stage."

MAY BUILD RACERS WITH TRICK AXLES.

Harry A. Miller has announced his intention of building two new racing cars to be equipped with Perfecto two-speed axles. Miller, who is recognized as one of the best-known automotive engineers in the country, has already taken up the matter of the use of the Perfecto axle on his new racing cars with Glover Ruckstell, head of the corporation which builds and markets the Perfecto products. It is the contention of both Miller and Ruckstell that the two-speed axle will add to the efficiency of the new small displacement speed creations.

SPECIAL BUILT.

The motor used in the Gardner automobile is manufactured especially for the Gardner Motor Company by the Lycoming Foundry and Machine Company of Williamsport, Pa. It is of the four-cylinder L-head type and develops thirty-five-horsepower at 1800 revolutions per minute.

ONE-LUNGER STILL IS CHUGGING ALONG.

Just because a motor car happens to be fourteen years old does not stop J. R. Chalker of 445 Ross avenue, Long Beach, making a 200-mile trip. Chalker has just completed a run to Temecula and return in his one-cylinder Cadillac which he purchased in 1907.

In a letter to Don Lee, the local Cadillac distributor, Chalker says the car is in fine running order and doesn't look so bad. He also says the car still has lots of run in it and is far too good an automobile for the junk man.

FOUR SALESMEN JOIN THE CHALMERS FORCE.

The following automobile salesmen with a wide acquaintance on automobile row and in the city have been added to the Chalmers' sales force, it is announced by Sales Manager R. G. Gould: Hugh O'Neill, Lou Maddox and Dick Fahnestock.

TAKES AN EXPERT TO RELINE BRAKES.

THAT'S WHY SERVICE STATIONS TAKE CARE OF THIS PARTICULAR POINT.

"The average motorist is of the opinion that the relining of a brake is a simple matter. It is, to the expert who makes a practice of this kind of repair work. It should be remembered that every brake is different and requires special tuning to bring it to perfection, just as every motor has to be carefully watched," says Walter Smith of the E. M. Smith Company, manufacturers of Emsco brake lining.

"This was the reason we established brake service stations all up and down the Pacific Coast for our product. The men in these service stations are all experts. We have seen to that, and can, therefore, give the best service and advice possible about brakes.

"Two of the many important items to be considered in adjusting brakes and which should not be trusted to the average garage man are the pitching and assemblage of primary leverage. It should be remembered that the leverage thrust operates the brake band. This leverage has to be changed ever so often, according to how fast the brakes wear. This will give you the maximum wear and will insure correct and safe braking.

"What the battery and tire service stations have done for batteries and tires, so have Emsco brake-lining service stations filled a long-needed requirement to every motorist, that of giving better and safer brakes."

SALES ARE AT A HIGH POINT NOW

Hupp Factory Running Full Tilt to Supply the Local Demand.

The production figures of the Hupp Motor Car Corporation for July and the significant fact that dealers handling the line are selling Hupmobiles as fast as they receive them, attests the popularity of this universally known car, distributed in California, Arizona and Nevada by the Greer-Robbins Company.

During July a total of 1917 cars, all in domestic trade, were shipped. The best previous month's record was July of last year when 2400 cars were turned out. Of this number, however, 700 were exported. This month better than 1600 Hupps will be shipped, according to factory advices, while next month it is expected that at least 2000 Hupmobiles will be the production figures.

"There figures are the best proof of the fast growing popularity of this car," said R. H. Greer. "With a reported lack of buying power in many sections, Hupp production figures as far as domestic use goes, are ahead of last season. And mind you, dealers are not 'stocking.' There is no opportunity. Since the price reduction there has been a buyer waiting for practically every car that we get from the factory."

THE MOTOR WORLD IS GETTING SOFT.

MODERN MOTORIST IS PEEVED UNLESS HE HAS SMOOTH ROADS EVERYWHERE.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

REDLANDS, Aug. 20.—"The motoring world is getting soft, they all want perfectly smooth roads and closed cars," said a well-known automobile dealer here. A few years ago only a few of the millionaires bought the closed cars, and the average person was honest when he said he didn't want them. But days have changed and now the average man is hankering for a closed car."

The dealer says that it does not necessarily mean a sedan or coupe, but that many now are getting the special tops by which the back seat can be entirely closed in with side panels. He admits that about nine months out of the year there is much more comfort in riding in such a car.

The same dealer says that the cars with the most refinements on them are the easiest to sell.

EDDIE PULLEN IN TWO-SPEED GAME.

Eddie Pullen, former star of the speed trail and erstwhile teammate of his present employer, Glover Ruckstell, is now breaking records as a salesman. Pullen recently became identified with the local office of the Ruckstell Sales and Manufacturing Company, builders of the Perfecto two-speed axle for Ford cars and trucks, and the popular speed champion is doing so well that he says he will never again sit in the seat of a racing car.

Now—Brake Lining Service Stations.

When it comes to relining brakes it takes an expert to do the job properly and motorists are rapidly finding it out. Emsco service stations have now been established where expert mechanics who know the brake-lining game from start to finish are on deck to give genuine satisfaction in fast time.

It Never Happened Before!

In times of adjustment, when people consider carefully what they get for every dollar they spend, a product of merit, properly priced, like Henderson Giant Oversize Cord and Fabric Tires, made by the Henderson Tire and Rubber Co., of Columbus, Ohio, (fourteen years in the business), is entilted to the public's just consideration.

Instead of being saddled with heavy selling expense and fixed charges, as well as long-time contracts for high-priced material, as is the case with many manufacturers, this concern has been able to avail itself of present low prices for crude rubber and fabric. Crude rubber is now selling at 14 cents instead of 42 cents, while fabric has dropped off 75 per cent. These tremendous reductions mean a great saving to the consumer if the manufacturer knows how to build an honest product.

The Henderson Tire is establishing itself with thousands of motorists in California and Arizona, where it is giving dependable service. You cannot afford to buy tires without first inspecting this line at prices quoted below.

We positively know the quality of the Henderson Tire to be equal to any standard tire on the market and we unhesitatingly underwrite the factory guarantee, and as exclusive distributors we make all adjustments right here.

NOVELTIES, IDEAS AND PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

By Olive Gray.
Per E. B.

Up-to-Datest.

A fitted bag of the overnight type that fairly exudes luxury. It is of pin seal, darkest brown in color, with a lining of moire that duplicates the shade of leather. Inside, bottles and cases finished in silver gilt present glistening faces to the row of brushes, combs and mirrors lined up opposite, guaranteeing every facility for the fastidious completion of miladi's toilette on train or steamer. Prime novelty of the case is the miniature fan in tortoise shell which, impelled to motion by a spring in the handle, whirls its triple sections to produce a breeze vigorous out of all proportion to its toy circumference. These fans, be it known, are a mode of the moment in Gay Paree and every French woman of fashion week-ending at Trouville or Ostend carries one in her bag.

A narrow belt of fawn-colored suede designed to finish one of the modish jumper dresses of wool or nitted silk. A mother-of-pearl buckle fastens it and its center is marked by a trio of matching pearl nail heads.

A luxurious coat wrap for the college girl. In color it is that deep, clarety volnay, calculated to strike a high note in the gray landscape of a winter day, while its fabric is thick piled evora. It drapes a bit over one hip and is fastened by a single button. Collar and cuffs are of browndyed squirrel.

Now Is the Time to Buy:

Your year's supply of shoes and stockings while the benefices of the August clearances yet endure, making the figurative "two for one" a literal truth. In particular, the woman who knows values in silk hosiery will turn her morning face, Monday, toward that bona fide sale of black hose of a brand reinforced doubly by stitches and name.

Christmas gifts. The provident shopper does not live who, in a tour through that wonderful art section of a great store—and which is, in itself a great store—will fail to realize the advantage to pocket and patience to be gained by slipping her Christmas list into her memorandum book ere she leaves home. Checked against said list, on her return, will doubtless be a boudoir light—one of the delightful ones screened by the dainty petticoats of a colonial dame or a lady of the directoire. Likely, too, there will be a luncheon set in madeira embroidery; book-ends and flower-bowls in the artistic Della Robbia ware, and a collection of small gifts, including clocks and door-stops of china and brass. Of a verity, buying in August makes giving in December a joy unalloyed by the traditional unforgettable fatigue of yuletide.

The trim tailleur for first-wear of autumn, before the display of these perky and practical suits at that exclusive emporium catering to the taste of the well-dressed woman, has been "inroaded" by the guester after the newest in street clothes.

Dress Lines—Regular and Otherwise.

The "surprise walnut" of the woman of fashion of autumn, 1921, if opened, would probably disclose a succinct dress memorandum, reading somewhat as follows:

As to color: black first; then brown, rust or navy. As to trimming: much on skirts and cuffs; none on bodices. Arm lines: in cloth, long and flowing; in lace, missing altogether. Hems: In dressy frocks, halfway twixt knee and ankle; in cloth, not so long. There might not be space on the memorandum scrap to add that, while in crepes and silks the lower line of the skirt may dip like craft saluting the flagship, in more tailorish clothes the hem is turned with a precision worthy of the veriest martinet in form.

It takes careful piloting between Scylla and Charybdis, these formative fashion days of late summer, to keep the reporter of styles in dress off the rocks of inaccuracy. No sooner does she affirm that the bateau neck, starkly devoid of trimming, has everything its own way than, behold! a coat dress, fastened to the ears, its upstanding velvet heights arabesqued in gold thread.

Let the trustful observer record the restoration of the normal waistline in dance frocks and there emerges, in languid loveliness of line, the Paris adaptation of orientalism, with a waist extending all the way down. In this particular case it was a colorful robe of papria chiffon, and it hung in full, uneven widths from neck to hem. Its glory was the girdle that formed, to all practical purposes, a second and upper skirt, depending, in narrow panels of the chiffon, from a braided and jeweled ceinture. The upper panels were weighted with deep gold fringe that swung, Turkishly, as the wearer walked.

A Word to the Wise—Man.

Let the well-dressed man with a weakness for reading cables on Lunnon fashions in haberdashery, take heart. No peace treaty has yet been signed stipulating outlines of masculine neck adornment among the nations. The potential King of the Britons and Emperor of India may affect the butterfly bow, along with phraseology in his titular native tongue of Welsh and, out of delicate compliment, his smart subjects among the men of the "tight little isle" may follow his sartorial lead without causing a perceptible ripple in the fashions of either speech or cravats on this side.

Here, the quiet elegance of the knitted tie of heavy silk still marks the man whose taste in clothes is comme il faut. Black and black-and-white effects are best, in this type of tie, as they have been, this long time. A scarf pin, if one wears it, is certain to be the single pearl of irreproachable tint, so mounted that no mounting at all is visible.

"The Spirit of the Pearl."

I quarrel with the somber epigrammatist who said pearls are for tears. Unless, indeed, they be tears of gratitude, shed in happy appreciation over the fact that nature has ordained the solidifying into concrete beauty of the sprites of water and air and has given these the shape and luster of the gem of purest ray serene, brought up to the surface of the world by the intrepidity of deep-sea divers, from the dark, unfathomed caves of ocean.

Gratitude in the present lovely instance of a jeweler's window display, vocalizes into a special paean to the rare soul who, in the genius with which he has directed the arrangement of pearls that might form a king's ransom or a queen's dowry, proclaims his kinship with that elect body of earth—the artists sensitized to put into eye-delighting form the visions of us who lack gift of expression.

"The Spirit of the Pearl," he has called his gemmed window and it must be seen, rather than imagined from colorless words of description, if one would absorb, in its essence, the beauty therein. Framed in the humble setting of an oyster shell, an exquisite flesh-and-blood manifestation of the spirit is seen, in divers poses, in the background—a nymph rising from the vasty deep.

For the rest, rows on rows of perfect pearls rest on velvet cushions of sea-blue, these cushions, in turn, laid on a foundation of pearl tinted cloth. Gazing at them, one forgets the artisanship of mounting, as one forgets their intrinsic worth. What one senses is a vision, nebulous, intangible, wraith-like—"the Spirit of the Pearl."

Fashion Whisperings Are That:

A kniteed coad of light-weight wool has collar and cuffs of angora and a tailored set-in sleeve.

A dance frock of silver embroidered citron crepe has long panels of silver lace on the skirt.

Fur coats are built on straight lines, button up the front, and are quite flaring at the bottom.

A coat dress of heavy black crepe is trimmed with gray Krimmer and has facings of gray crepe.

Noted features of fall coats are the bloused bodice and full skirt girdled with a silk tasseled belt.

A collar and vestee of cream colored crepe de chine are smart with a coat dress of wool and colored braid.

Very new is the anklette strap which is entirely detached from the one-strap pump with which it is worn.

An afternoon frock of navy Canton crepe has sleeves of cherry red chiffon and roses of the crepe with cherry centers.

The heels of a pair of black dancing slippers are studded with brilliants, and there are tiny wreaths over the instep.

An afternoon frock of black velvet has its tucks faced with white taffeta and plaitings of white taffeta at the neck and sleeves.

A one-piece dress of French linen has a sleeveless three-quarter coat to match. The long slashed panels of the coat are held together by rows of little buckled linen straps.

NEW CITY CLUB MEMBERS.

Prominent club women who joined the Woman's City Club during the recent membership campaign are: Mrs. Mollie Bloom Flagg, who was president of the San Joaquin Valley district, the hostess district, for the State convention in Yosemite Valley last May; Mrs. A. J. Lawton, State president of the Women's Legislative Council; Mrs. E. Stewart, former president of the Women's Democratic League; Mrs. Frank A. Gibson, known for her work in Americanization; Mrs Cecil Frankel, president of the California Federation of Music Clubs; Mrs. Albert Tufts, Mrs. S. J. Kerr, Mrs. Bruce H. Case, Mrs. L. A. Beebe, Mrs. Walter V. Brehm and Mrs. Walter J. Van Valkenberg.

WOMEN'S WORK AND WOMEN'S CLUBS.

BY MYRA NYE.

These are the "dolling-up" days for the coming club season. How many women there are who are eating and growing thin, according to Vance Thompson, or counting their calories, according to our own Dr. Lulu Hunt Peters, or practicing "The Great Reduction" according to Irwin Cobb with "One-Third Off" already, only they themselves can tell.

How many club presidents are having the permanent hair wave put into their locks to augment the impressiveness of their executive presiding only the various beauty parlor keepers, who are their sisters' keepers, can tell you. I suspect it is quite a per cent, for the example in hairdressing was so effectively set last spring by Mrs. Sidney Thomas Exley, then president of the Los Angeles district, and Mrs. Charles H. Toll, president of Los Angeles Ebell.

These two to my knowledge became suddenly emancipated from curling irons. The result upon the platform when sessions at convention crowded one another in step-on-the-heel fashion was transcendent. Both of these women are fine types of the regular club woman in appearance. Perhaps in my mind I have let them typify too much. Perhaps they are the exception of sartorial perfection from toque-top to toe-tip and not the rule. I wonder. My ideas on the appearance of Los Angeles club women have been considerably upset during the past week.

Dr. Alice S. Cutler, recently from Boston, said to m eone day: "Los Angeles has the most beautiful young women of any city I have ever been in but the appearance of those past 40 is far behind the appearance of women of that age in other cities. I wish I could tell the club women here how they are bunkoed."

"Bunkoed?" I said, with a marked accent on the bun and the question mark. I just couldn't fit my mind to bunkoed club women of the Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs with all its capitals: L for lovely, A for angels, D for darling, F for fetching, W for wonderful and C for charming.

"Yes," she said, "the beauty parlors and the stores bunko them. Club women here go to see a corset demonstration, for instance. They are plump, not to say fat. They see a fat woman come out in a certain sort of a corset and see how her lines seem to be reduced as by miracle. At least half a dozen of them at once order that corset by that same number. But the model's fat may not be their kind of fat at all. And they look a fright in the same style of corset."

"Bountiful embonpoint is not docile," I conceded, "but how else are club women in Los Angeles bunkoed?"

"Their hair," she suggested. "The water is so hard here and certain kinds of hair just can't stand hard water and yet at the places where the shampoos are given, water from the faucet is used on every woman's hair. Every different kind of hair needs different treatment."

"Yes," I said, "we have God to thank that the hairs of our head are numbered, but I didn't know they were different, each number, you know."

"Oh, I didn't mean that; of course, I meant each different woman is different and ———."

"Oh," I said, "and what else?"

"As for cold creams, why any cold cream demonstrator can sell any kind of cold cream to any kind of a skin."

"To sell is to skin, but you don't sell to skin," I remarked.

"Some cold creams," she informed me, "technically contain benzoate of lard and that is not good for the kind of skin that is inclined to the hirsute. It only makes it more hairy."

Dr. Cutler was really full of practical suggestion on how to make a woman past 40 beautiful. She said she has a friend who goes to Paris to be made beautiful. The friend is more than 60 and when she comes back from Paris she looks less than 40. For one thing Parisian women want their backs better than their fronts. They argue rightly that if they get the lnes of their gowns correct in back, they are sure to be chic and graceful in front. If their corsets fit in back they are sure to fit in front. Their hair must look well from the back even before it looks well from the front. And this is the secret of a French woman's pretty appearance when, perhaps, she is not pretty at all.

One other little secret Dr. Cutler divulged to me—a treatment for which in Paris you pay much and in New York City very much. This is it in brief: Don't massage the face too much. It causes it to wrinkle. Instead, pat it. And when you dress to look your best, first, after the bath, dapple witch hazel all over the face. It does not enlarge the pores, but rather closes them and does not wrinkle. Pat the face with little pads of absorbent cotton wet in ice water. Then witch hazel again. Then, while the witch hazel stands in drops on the face, rub on a lot of cold cream. Be generous with it. Leave it on while you are doing something else, say telephoning for the taxicab, or whitening your shoes, or rehearsing your presidential address. Then rub it off with a very soft cloth. Pat your face again with the cushions of your fingers if they are cold; if warm, use ice water again. Then sprinkle on the finest powder with a clean—Dr. Cutler emphasizes the clean—powder-puff or pad. Behold you will look like a rose newly dipped in dew. It sounds good. And that is only one of many hints that Dr. Cutler plans to give to the club women this coming season if they will but listen to her advice.

District Federation.

Prefacing a year that promises marked progress in club work throughout the county, the Los Angeles district board will meet in September with the work fully outlined b; the president, Mrs. J. C. Urquhart. All appointments have now been made and the following names were ratified at the last regular board meeting: Mrs. Henry F. Boesche, corresponding secretary; Miss Mary Workman, citizenship; Dr. A. D. Chapin, child welfare; Mrs. Julius Hill, history and landmarks; Miss Helen S. Pratt, birds and wild life; Mrs. J. C. Trewhella, home relations; Mrs. Ethel Palmer, industry and employment; Mrs. Ingie Carpenter, literature; Mrs. Gloria Mayne, music; Mrs. Agnes Osborne Carter, altruistic; Mrs. Francis A. Blackburn, political science; Mrs. Elizabeth McManus, public health; Mrs. Harold Dewey, endowment; Mrs. J. S. McQueen, Indian relations, and Mrs. Louis Schirm, pageant film. Miss Sue Barnwell, who was Mrs. Urquhart's chairman of citizenship, has been appointed to fill that department of the work on the board of the California Federation of Women's Clubs. Miss Workman, who has been closely related to Miss Barnwell in this work, has been chosen to succeed her in the district, and Mrs. Boesche appointed to fill Miss Workman's place.

"The cliff dwellers had art and music antedating anything along these lines in Europe," said Mrs. Mayne in speaking of her plans as chairman of music. She is greatly interested in this primitive music and hopes to harmonize her work with that of Indian welfare.

Mrs. Carter, chairman of altriusm, is a fine pianist and expects to stress the practical and educational side of her departmental work, emphasizing the difference between real and unreal music, as she terms it.

Many clubs are asking for the film of the pageant, "California, Land of Dreams," given in Yosemite Valley at the time the State convention. Those that are now building or are paying off indebtedness on their clubhouses expect to raise funds in this new manner, members presenting themselves to their own clubs as participants in the pageant. Mrs. McManus expects to use films in promoting her department work, public health. She plans a program of prevention of diseases rather than treatment of ill health after sickness.

Two jolly affairs to which the district board is invited are the Lancaster Women's Club annual "peach luncheon," which will be given probably the last Friday of this month, and a picnic meeting at the home of Mrs. J. C. Trewhella, the early part of September.

"Los Angeles clubwomen will have about the biggest undertaking any clubwomen have had," said Mrs. Urquhart the other day, speaking of the State convention that will be held here next spring. The definite date has not been set, but it will probably be directly after the Los Angeles district convention in Santa Monica.

Los Angeles district will work along the line of citizenship, at work and at play, in a way that will make possible a culminating cooperation the result of which will be the background for this convention. The Hans Christian Anderson festival is held every year about the meeting time of the State federation and an effort will be made to have other programs for the benefit of the visitors. Mrs. O. Shepherd Barnum, former president of the Friday Morning Club and State chairman of education, is much interested in another pageant to be given by the clubwomen in the Hollywood Bowl.

Mrs. Urquhart's plans as outlined for this district have been adopted by the San Diego district board and with a few changes will probably be adopted by the State federation board.

"Kiddie Koop."

"Kiddie Koop" is to celebrate its second birthday September 10 with a party at the "Koop," 641 East Twenty-eighth street.

Since its beginning the work has trebled and the capacity of the cottage has doubled. "Kiddie Koop" was founded by Miss Eula Wilson of Chicago who was acquainted with similar work in that city and found great need for it in Los Angeles. The "Koop" cares for boys from 1 to 6 years of age, who are children of working parents, and for girls from 1 to 14 years of age. Its charges are made according to the circumstances of the parents.

Woman's Press Club.

Mrs. Georgina S. Townsend, president of the Southern California Woman's Press Club, announced last week the following appointments for chairmanships for the coming year: Mrs. J. W. Crill, membership; Belle Summer Angier Burn, printing; Mrs. Emilie M. Timerhoff, press; Mrs. Olive Fields Nathan, social; B. M. Bower, reciprocity; Mrs. Alice Harriman, community service; Miss Kathleen Shippen, music; Mrs. Rita Green Breeze, hospitality; Mrs. Caroline Clough McQuinn, short-story section; Miss Neeta Marquis, achieved results program and shop talks; October, Mrs. McQuinn; November, Belle Angier Burn; December, Dr. Louis Harvey Clark; January, Mrs. Rose Z. Weller; February, Mrs. Abbie Smith; March, Mrs. Julia Boynton Green; April, Mrs. Edna Sterrett; May, Mrs. Elizabeth McCabe Gilmore.

Woman's Bible Class.

Mrs. Mary Allen, president of the Woman's Bible Class of the First Friends Church of Whittier, was toastmistress at a banquet given by the class Tuesday evening. There were eighty members and guests present. Mrs. Eliza Armstrong Cox, teacher, gave the address of welcome and the response was by A. N. Chamness, superintendent. Other addresses were by Dr. Charles E. Tebbets, Mrs. W. H. Smiley and Miss Anna L. Tomlinson, the latter a member of the faculty of Whittier College. She announced that the class has arranged to give a scholarship to some young woman the coming school year at Whittier College.

Christian Citizenship.

"Political Ideals" was the subject of an address delivered before the Whittier W.C.T.U. at the Friends Church, Friday afternoon, by Mrs. Elizabeth Elliston of Covina. SELECTION OF AMERICAN MINISTER PLEASES CHINA.

Dr. Schurman Well Liked in Far East but Factions Are Said to be Setting Traps for Him.

BY PATRICK GALLAGHER.
[SPECIAL FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PEKING (China) July 15.—Americans in China are preparing to give a rousing reception to our new Minister at Peking, Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, internationally known as the president of Cornell University and an outspoken friend of all Asiatic peoples. Faith in the Harding administration's Far Eastern views and purposes seems to reign in Tokio as well as in Peking.

Dr. Schurman's appointment was a welcome surprise, especially among the Americans who are not harnessed, hand and foot, to foreign or factional interests. The North China Star—edited by Dr. Charles James Fox, brother of Albert W. Fox of the Washington Post—reflected prevailing American sentiment when it denounced an attempt made by professional marplots to put an anti-Chinese "tag" on the new American Minister. I am in a position to say that Chinese of all parties regard Dr. Schurman with friendship and respect. His friendly attitude toward Japan will be an asset to him of no small importance.

Jacob Gould Schurman.

Europeans, as well as Americans and Chinese, are tired of the habit of utilizing the legation quarter as a spawning-ground for China's chief nuisance—the swarm of foreign advisers who do not and cannot advise.

STORM OF PROTEST.

Two incidents within recent weeks have caused a storm to break around the heads of these professional parasites.

The first was the cabled report that Dr. John C. Ferguson was being cosidered as Minister for the United States. The general feeling here is that to have put him in charge of American interests would have cost the United States prestige. Reports from Washington indicate that this feeling of resentment—voiced chiefly by Chinese—saved our State Department from making a blunder. Relief was intense here when Dr. Schurman was named and confirmed.

The second incident concerned the British. A report came that Sir John Jordan, for many years British Minister in Peking, was recommended by Dr. Koo as a "high-grade Chinese political adviser." Far Eastern Britons gasped and swore. The (British) Peking and Tientsin Times denounced the proposal as an insult to the British diplomatic service in China. British anger was well-timed and thoroughly justified.

The trip to London of Lennox Simpson—"B. L. Putnam Weale"—author, correspondent and Chinese adviser, has seriously affected British Far Eastern interests. If a Chinese anti-British boycott follows the renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, beyond any doubt the Britons in Asia will be entitled to blame Mr. Simpson.

BITING SARCASM.

Mr. Simpson and his mission have been subjects of biting sarcasm. The author of "Wang the Ninth" and "Indiscreet Letters from Peking" had a monopoly of British editorial ire when the cables brought word of the Jordan nomination.

For twenty years, Sir John Jordan and Mr. Simpson have been deadly enemies. The feud began in the Boxer trouble and it reached its climax while both were in Peking during the perplexing period of the Paris peace conference. Between these big events. Mr. Simpson was Peking correspondent for the London Daily Telegraph.

His writings were protested repeatedly to the London Foreign Office. Finally, action was taken by the Foreign Office and Lord Burnham, chief owner of the London newspaper. Mr. Simpson was relieved of his journalistic post. His friend, President Hsu Shih-Chang of China, made him a "statistician to the audit department" at a liberal salary. Nobody thinks for a moment that either Mr. Putnam or Sir John will ever consent to bury the hatchet. Theirs is a war to the death.

MENTIONED IN NEWS.

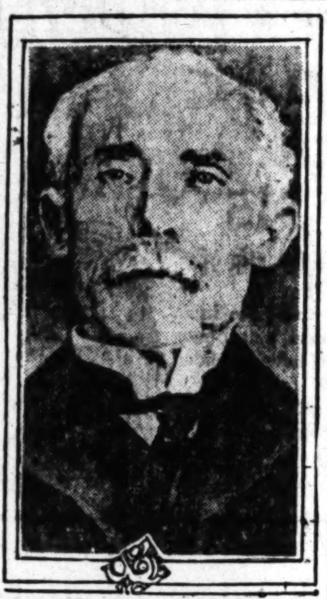
The names of Robert E. Lansing and Charles R. Crane's protege, Thomas F. Hillard, are also mentioned in the news from London and Geneva. It is asserted with some appearance of credibility that Mr. Lansing's Shantung chapter in his personal narrative of "The Peace Negotiations" so favorably impressed the anti-Japanese Chinese that he has been retained as counsellor for the Kiaochow appeal to the League.

Of course, nobody would think of putting two and two together—except over the cocktails and in an atmosphere that lends itself to dark suspicions. Still, this gossip that will not down adds heat to the British choler over their own Jordan incident.

SETTING SNARES.

Dr. Schurman will need to watch his step in Peking. Deep traps are being dug for him. Nets are being woven in dark corners. Heaps of sand are being blown in from our adjacent desert plains.

There is a small but dangerous group here and a more noisy and more numerous faction in Shanghai that won't be satisfied until our people and government consent to make war upon Japan. It is an unpleasant fact that certain Americans in China are seriously involved in these proceedings.



Sir John Jordan.

The new Minister to Peking is well and favorably known throughout the Far East. He became famous as an opponent of the doctrine of benevolent assimilation in the Philippines. He was president of the first Philippine commission and he is well posted upon all angles of Far Eastern affairs. He is regarded as the traditional type of American-oriental statesman—the Townsend Harris and Anson Burlingame sort—ardently believing in carrying American ideals into the old East and steadfastly opposed to plans or purposes that, in effect, tend to subordinate Asiatic peoples to illegitimate western wills or thinly disguised schemes of conquest. His frank and fearless expressions during and after his recent trip to Japan have helped and not hurt him in China.

WORM TURNS.

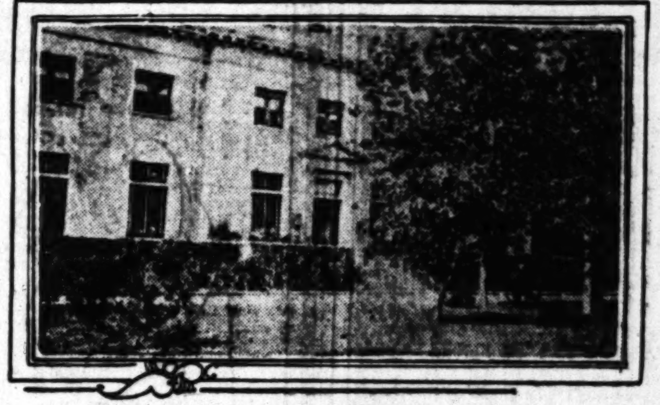
The Chinese worm has turned—as most worms are supposed to turn, in time—and now the leading men in most of the conflicting Chinese factions make little or no secret of their desire to get along on good terms with their chief Asiatic neighbor, Japan. They tell me that they are tired of seeing their country used as a football by the western nations.

They want a square deal—a real chance to find political unity and stability—and they are beginning to take the true measure of the forces, foreign and native, that block their path on every side.

I returned to China more than a year ago with Minister and Mrs. Crane and the staff of special assistants brought to Peking by the Chicago millionaire philanthropist.

He was heralded here as the archpriest and paymaster of an American policy in China based upon direct and deliberate antagonism to Japan; and it has been intimated that he did little, if anything, to remove that impression and some things that strengthened it. Nevertheless, his Japanese colleague, Mr. Obata, ignored circumstances and incidents that would have justified formal protest, and I think that Mr. Crane left Peking in June, 1921, with a better opinion of Japan than the one he brought with him in June, 1920.

Minister's Home in Peking Compound.



Where the Schurmans Will Live in China.

President Taft chose Mr. Crane to be Minister in 1909. Mr. Knox, then Secretary of State, resented his chief's seeming intrusion upon his own rights and opinion in the matter and Mr. Crane never got to Peking in 1909. With the late William Woodville Rockhill, appointed at the same time by Mr. Taft as Ambassador to Russia, Mr. Crane was kept waiting. At last Mr. Rockhill, a seasoned diplomat, grew restive.

"I think I'll go on to St. Petersburg," he said to Mr. Crane.

"Good idea," said Mr. Crane. "I'll start for China."

As he was leaving the Union Station at Washington he gave to Roy Vernon, the Washington correspondent for a Chicago newspaper, some notes for a story about his Chinese ideas and plans. This innocent telegram to Chicago, and a speech or two by the Minister-designate, were made reasons to justify his recall.

FRIEND OF WILSON.

During the war Mr. Crane accompanied the Root commission to Russia and later made an inspection of China as a friend of President Wilson. He returned from China just in time to attend the Peace Conference at Paris, where he was a sort of personal liaison officer between the President and the Chinese. He was numbered among those lined up by Col. House in support of the Hoover boom. He helped to purchase a Washington newspaper and one of his former assistants became the editor.

This was the situation when President Wilson, in February, 1920, faced the problem of naming a short-term Minister at Peking. Mr. Crane was chosen. He arrived in China in the last week of May, 1920, and in his first speech at Shanghai said, in effect, that the War Department, the Navy Department and the State Department had their eyes peeled and trained on Japan. It fanned the fires of anti-Japanese agitation and served only the purposes of people who were then busily engaged deluding the Chinese into the false belief that Gen. Pershing's army was being mobilized against Japan

About the early part of the present year, friction attained its peak. The Langdon affair at Vladivostok created a crisis. I was in Peking when that happened, and if one accepted Far Eastern American opinion as a guide, the odds seemed to be six to four in favor of war with Japan. I think that incident taught the saner elements on both sides a lesson. American officials and Army and Navy officers helped to abate the propaganda nuisance. It was not, however, until the Harding administration got around to far eastern matters that most of the warmakers abandoned hope.

Mr. Crane's home-going through soviet Russia naturally aroused much gossip and speculation. He had quite an interesting interview in Peking with Mr. Yourin, who, it was understood, invited him to see Russia. Undoubtedly, Mr. Crane, who is known in European diplomatic circles as "Russian Crane," was eager to take a look at his favorite old stamping ground.

When the retired American Minister—who had chartered a special car and loaded up with all sorts of useful gifts for the needy Russians—arrived at Chita, Mr. Yourin avoided him. It seems that Moscow disapproved the Crane tour through Muscovy. It was given out that the reason was our summary ejection of the soviet envoy, Martens.

Mr. Crane gave away his presents at Chita, also his stock of food supplies, etc., and began his journey home by way of Vladivostok and Japan. Before he was many miles on the road to the Siberian port, Moscow reversed its decision and the westward journey was resumed. Of course, fresh supplies had to be obtained and much inconvenience was entailed. The truth seemed to be that the Russians were not eager for an independent American investigation of their condition, yet they feared to offend one who knows Russia well under better and happier conditions.

NEEDS DIPLOMAT.

Mr. Schurman will find many friends in the legation life of this queer Tartar city. What Peking needs most is an American Minister with a friendly, open mind; a trained diplomat, man of affairs, and one who is not on doubtful terms with Japan or England. The British bulldog in the Far East is all right, when stroked the right way; and he is a wise old dog in diplomacy with a natural love of the game. The Japanese is on his own ground, with numerous natural advantages that prejudice cannot efface and prudence ought not to ignore. Above all, the Japanese government seeks nothing more surely than the friendship of America. President Harding and Secretary Hughes seem to be taking Japan at her word in sending Dr. Schurman to Peking.

VLADIVOSTOK LOOMS AS SYMBOL OF DOMINATION.

Great Siberian Port, Now in Hands of Japanese, is Seen as Key to Control of Pacific.

BY FREDERICK McCORMICK.

It probably is impossible for pen to do justice to Vladivostok; it never has. And justice may be the last thing it should have done to it. Perhaps, too, it is unimportant. I have read about it; I have been here many times to observe it; but I can say with due acknowledgments to another, namely: I never saw the place described; I never hope to see it. And I can tell you anyhow, I'd rather see than be it. Yet its description is the keystone to the picture of East Siberia.

Vladivostok is the palm of the right hand of European civilization outstretched to America. It is thrust in the teeth of Asia, between Japan on the east, and China on the west, ready to go broken into the maw of Asiatic life; and it is a mystery what can save it.

Vladivostok was intended as Russia's San Francisco. They were the carbon points of our civilization lighting the way across the Pacific. Rolled on the tongue they matched in length and meter. Together they were nicknamed — "Frisco" and "Vlad." One did not excel the other for beauty of surroundings. Vlad rests near the end of a peninsula into which opens an arm of the ocean which Russia named the Golden Horn. Reaching back on either side to form the peninsula are Ussari and Amur bays. In front spreads Peter the Great Gulf, with America Bay to the left and Possiet Bay to the right. Beind rise protecting heights. Signal Hill overlooks this panorama; it can be called the center in the continental shore of the Sea of Japan. Nansen who sailed across the Polar Sea to East Siberia, and who traveled there and three years ago tried to feed starving Russians from the Baltic, stood here on the eve of the World War and said: "Perhaps in no distant future this may become the focus of great and important events." What happened must have astonished the prophet.

BOSTON OF SIBERIA.

When the New Englander wants to go to the center of things—"to see the animals," he journeys to Boston. In East Siberia the native goes to Vladivostok, the only metropolis he can visit without making a 5000 or 6000-mile trip to Moscow or Petrograd, or crossing the Pacific. In extent it is compared with the District of Columbia. It is a city of strangers and of aliens. At the time of the foreign military occupation two years ago there were more foreign soldiers than Russians. There always are more Asiatics than civilians. The business always has been largely in foreign hands—German, Japanese, American and, of course, British and French.

Standing with Nansen on Signal Hill the whole scene unfolds beneath. Toward the sea along both arms of the peninsula are the long lines of forts where for years some of the guns were visible. The mouth of the Golden Horn is guarded by fortified headlands and a fortified island. The minimum depth of the harbor is thirty-five feet, and ships from the world's merchant fleets scatter themselves everywhere about it. Under the hills, in the upper end, at the left, is the port's naval squadron.

CLOSED FOR REPAIRS.

There are two parks running along the waterfront. One near the naval port contains a monument to Neveiskoi, the Russian discoverer of the Straits of Tartary and the navigable entrance to the Amur River. Near the naval port is also a small museum. Among other things it contains one of the boundary stones of the Empire of Genghis Khan, brought down from where it was erected by the Mongols at the watershed north of the Amur. I went to the museum, and was told it was closed for repairs and no one could be allowed to go in. Tips open many doors in Russian lands and it opens this one which has been "closed for repairs" every time I have been here.

The significance of the port of Vladivostok is like that of Vancouver, Seattle, or San Francisco. Vladivostok is the heir in turn of Okhotok and Petropavlovsk and Nivolaivsk from which it received the Admiralty in 1868. It is the heir of Port Arthur and Dalny. It is Russia's Pacific naval station. The year before the World War, improvements of the port were ordered involving $3,500,000, to be carried out beginning with an expenditure of $850,000 the latter half of 1913. The docks were to be equipped with electric cranes and other cargo-handling apparatus costing two-thirds of this amount.

HAD TWO DRY DOCKS.

When the war started, Vladivostok had two dry docks of 620 feet length each, and was preparing to construct a quay 2121 feet long, three jetties and a wharf, with timber, coal and fish depots to take care of these most important products of the East Siberian coast. There was a floating dock 400 feet long and three floating cranes of fifty, seventy-five, and one hundred tons, and a floating dock in three sections, each seventy feet long, with a total lifting power of about 2500 tons provided for. A central electric power station and four miles of electric tram lines were opened, and before the war closed the "Willard Works," an assembling plant for cars and locomotives, and a dock where vessels drawing forty-five feet could unload, has been built by America as a part of war aid to Russia.

Four schools were maintained in Vladivostok—two one-grade schools for boys and two one-grade schools for girls. Vladistokians speak of the "red" school and of the "green" school. They are two high schools which are kept going by the application of assessments on the families of the pupils. There is a Mennonite or Lutheran church and Vladivostok is the headquarters of a Russian Orthodox Church Mission whose missionaries work in about a dozen districts of the surrounding provinces among Korean Russians and natives.

HAS MANY GRADUATES.

There is an Oriental Institute here. For nearly twenty years I have been meeting its graduates in East Asia, young Russians who have learned Far Eastern languages and given invaluable aid to the diplomatic and consular service, to the Russian army, and to the departments of the old Russian government which built the railroads and made scientific investigations in East Siberia. There is a commercial school which also has managed to keep its doors open. Vladivostok has a cathedral an observatory, saw mills, flour mills, factories, machine shops, and railways, and to furnish it with its own communications it has a wireless plant and the Volunteer Fleet of cargo and passenger vessels which formerly connected it with the Baltic and Black seas. But all of these things are assets which at present represent the wreck of a city by the northern sea, rather than its life and support. Russian power and enterprise on the Pacific are derelict and Vladivostok is a prodigal feeding on husks.

When I came here four years ago I had an East Siberian merchant for companion. We were guests at the table of the captain of the Japanese steamer Hosan. The Russian said to the Japanese: "I know what you want; you want my country. You are sending an army to take Vladivostok."

The surprised captain straightened himself and raised his brows. "Oh, you can't fool me," said the Russian, "I've lived in Japan, I know you. Siberia is the richest country in the world and you are going to take it."

IS NOW JAPANESE.

Vladivostok was Russian then—it is Japanese now. Five thousand Japanese soldiers occupy it. It may be described in terms of the terminus of Slav railways and communications on the Pacific; the door of the world of all Russia after 1914; the exit of the Czecho-Slovaks fleeing Russia; and the only avenue of relief for Siberia. It has been the billet of Allied European troops in East Siberia for the first time since the Crimean War and the second time in history; headquarters of a Canadian military force, and of an army of American soldiers with a general in command holding up arms shipments on the trans-Siberian Railway and giving Japan ultimatums respecting conspiracies with Russian adventurers; American battleground in the war against Bolshevism; scene of the first technical state of war between Japan and America; subject of inquiry in the Senate on why the United States is in Siberia; and new seat of Japanese military power on the Asiatic continent.

Nearly thirty years ago Russia's coming Tsar was on a visit to Japan. At the little town of Otsu, on Lake Biwa, a Japanese assassin all but killed him. The last of the Romanoffs then turned here the first sod at Pacific tidewater of the Trans-Siberian Railway. And a few months ago the Emperor of Japan decorated on the spot where this occured, with the orders of his empire, the dignitaries and agents of the powers of Europe and America and in full occupation and domination tagged them with the emblems of Japanese supremacy in the seat of dominion and of all that Russian power and glory on the Pacific had meant for centuries. That is Vladivostok.

ONE DEAD YANKEE.

A Yankee younger brother "down east" not yet found himself; a struggling elder brother with a family and a future all ahead in Texas; an old father and mother, down Boston way; and the reliance of the old home in the uniform of an engineer officer of the United States Navy dead of a Japanese army bullet in a side street off the main thoroughfare Svietlanskaya; a diplomatic inquiry from the Government of the United States of America; a Japanese court-martial, suspension from command of Japanese officers held responsible with apology to the Government of the United States of America; and harikiri of a Japanese general of the army following—that is Vladivostok.

But the Trans-Siberian Railway terminus, the open door to Siberia, the Czech exodus, foreign military occupation, killing of Lieutenant Langdon, and decorating of the agents of the powers are but part of Vladivostok. Vlad not only is the dual city, European and Asiatic, of Russians, Japanese, Chinese and Koreans and others. It is the meeting-place of America and Asia and focus of the American-Asiatic issue. It started the movement for revision of the World War settlement in the Pacific made in Japan's interest. It became a solvent to the Anglo-Japanese and European-Japanese coalitions. It is heralded by their mutual friends as the ground where Japan and America are to understand each other; finally, and as the alloy and formula of the new American-Japanese policy in East Asia—a kind of Far Eastern The Hague.

Many cities have sprung into world fame from the World War, but they retired again into obscurity. The most notorious and least enviable of the world's cities cannot retire; it is on a hill, literally and figuratively and cannot be hid. It is the political and diplomatic center of the Pacific area. Stepping ashore there is an echo of rifle shots. Seoul, Peking, Nanking, Shanghai and Canton are revolutionary centers. Roll them together and they are Vladivostok. Vladivostok is their last legatee. Those places have had several revolutions, but Vladivostok has had half a dozen and it is still in eruption. It is the place to which Russian power working from the North Pacific region toward Port Arthur zigzagged to its fall.

But shabby, down and out as a Russian base on the Pacific, it is a magnificent ruin of Slav power here. And it has behind it, all and more than that which has made Seattle and is making Vancouver and other cities of the American coast opposite. San Francisco had the California gold mines back of it. Vladivostok has three Klondikes in its hinterland. Vancouver has the Canadian West wheat fields behind it, Vladivostok has the great agricultural regions of the whole Amur basin. Seattle and Vancouver have the minerals and fish resources of Alaska and British Columbia while Vladivostok has those of the corresponding Asiatic coast of the North.

Canada's trans-Pacific steamship Empress of Russia was named in connection with the approaching greatness of Vladivostok and in anticipation of round-the-world connections on a world scale between Russia and the Pacific Coast. That development has been delayed, but the fact that the fiercest light of international affairs and of the conflict between two civilizations in the Pacific beats upon Vladivostok is proof of its world importance.

Out of this situation has been born a new world capital. Many old capitals have been given again, secondhanded to the world, but a new international center has arisen on the Sea of Japan. It is Vladivostok, the lodestone to fifteen of the world's nations and almost as many races.

REAL DEVOTION.

Sometimes people who have children of their own are inclined to be skeptical about the affection adopted ones have for their foster parents. But at a recent school field meet there was found one brave little fellow who certainly cared for his foster father.

He was a little runner and in practicing ran against the wire fence and cut both of his knees terribly. He was immediately taken from the contestants and put to rest at one side of the field and a substitute sent into his place. And all went well until some little fellow happened to ask him whether he should go after his foster father.

Then the youngster jumped up. "I've just got to run in the 100-yard dash," he began bravely, trying to ignore the pain, which was half killing him. "Dad came out here just to see me win that and I got to do it so he'll be proud of me at the office tomorrow."

And run it he did, although his little knees were bleeding and racked with pain. He also won it and dad was proud.—[Indianapolis News.

"OVER THE HILLS" TO SHOW AT MILLER'S.

Intensely human, with a big emotional sweep and heart interest in every scene, "Over the Hill," William Fox's motion-picture epic of mother love and filial ingratitude, will open its first local showing at popular prices at Miller's today.

Here is a photoplay that has needed no big mob scenes, no spectacular and costly settings, no exaggerated sex appeal, to make it so popular that it played for one solid year on Broadway, New York.

The theme of the story is mother love, and the story is based upon the work of Will Carleton, the poet. The action is drawn from an incident which occurred during the boyhood of Carleton, who lived on a farm and knew intimately the characters that have been made immortal upon the screen.

The central figure in the story, that of a little, self-sacrificing mother, has been made one of the most delightful character studies of the present day by Mary Carr, whose finished interpretation of the leading part is a constant joy.

The picture, in its many-sidedness, has an irresistible appeal for every member of the family. It has heart interest, swiftness of action, delightful humor, and a sweet and wholesome story so simply told and so human that it already has taken its place among the real classics of the film.

Noel Tearle, William Welch, Edna Murphy, Johnny Walker and the four Carr children—Stephen, Louella, May Beth and Rosemary—are leading players.

The picture was directed by Harry Millarde.

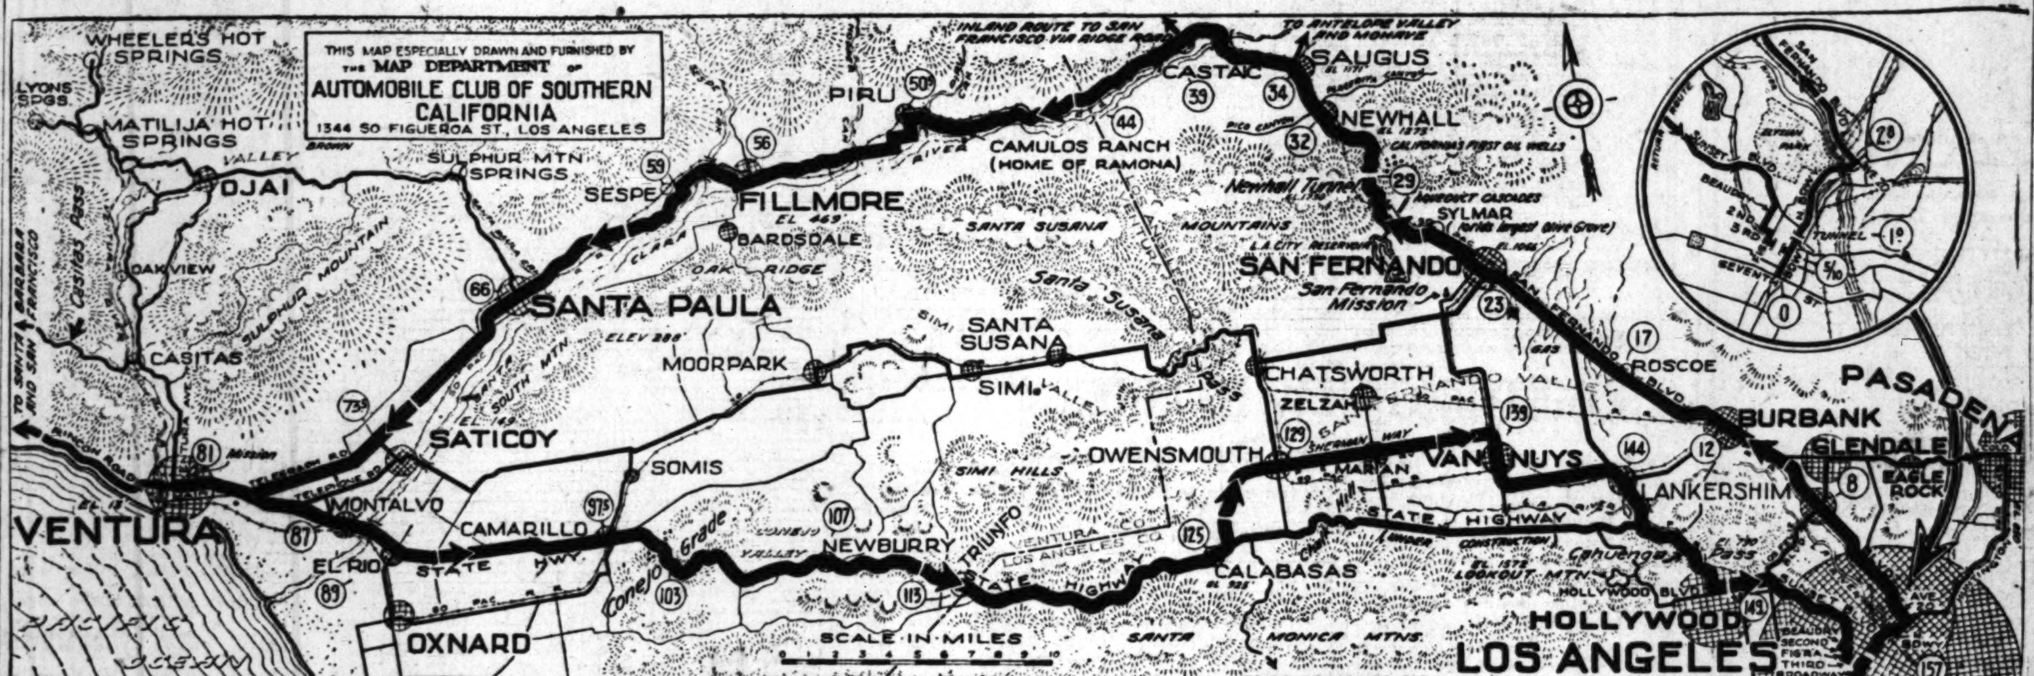
Picturesque Motor Highway Through Virgin Touring Territory Opened.



Can Now Reach Ventura on Solid Concrete Roads via Castaic.

The Los Angeles-Castaic-Ventura motor highway is officially thrown open to travel today and according to reports from the Automobile Club of Southern California the trip over this road and return via Calabasas and the Conejo grade will be one of the most interesting and scenic in the south. Below, one of the huge concrete mixers, finishing up the last stretch of the Castaic link. But it's out of the way now and everything is in readiness for heavy traffic today.

"BARNEY" TO HAVE ENTRY AT BEVERLY.

Buys French Racing Car Especially for Thanksgiving Day Race.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

AKRON (O.) Aug. 20.—Barney Oldfield tonight announced that he had purchased a Talbot Darracq racing car which will arrive in the United States from France early in October. Immediately following its arrival in this country Barney will ship it to Los Angeles and give it an initial tryout on the Beverly Hills Speedway. It will not be started in any race until the Thanksgiving Day classic at Los Angeles.

Either Chassagne or Rudolfo Mineoa will be at the wheel.

"I am selecting a foreigner to drive my car, not because I think that a European pilot is the equal of our own Miltons, Murphys or Sarles, but because I recognize the need for injecting a new element into racing if the interest of the public is to be sustained," declared Barney.

"I hope that two or three other sportsmen in California will follow this lead and import cars and drivers to whoop things up a bit."

SANTA FE TRAIL TO BE REPAIRED.

Good news for motorists is found in the announcement made by the Automobile Club touring bureau that "bog" and "chuckholes" on the Santa Fe Trail will be attended to so that the route will be in better condition in the future.

This action along the road which leads directly into Southern California was decided upon at a highway conference held in Santa Fe, N. M., recently.

NEAT EARNINGS IN FIRST SIX MONTHS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT (Mich.) Aug. 20.—General Motors Corporation shows net earnings of $18,259,460.90 for the first six months of 1921, of which $14,551,516.41 were the net earnings for the past three months of the half year.

The balance of net earnings after all deductions except for dividends was $9,605,675.60, which increased surplus of $21,273,218 on Dec. 31, 1920, to $130,878,892.60 on June 30. The balance of surplus after deduction of dividends on the preferred, debenture and common stocks amounting to $13,368,100.68, was $117,510,791.92.

The consolidated balance sheet shows totals of $581,149,212.82, compared with $404,806,868 on December 31. Current and working assets aggregate $234,179, and current liabilities $110,060,804.24, indicating net working capital of $144,634,706 at the end of 1920.

HEAVY PRODUCTION OF DURANT "SIX."

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—Production of an exclusive six-cylinder model in quantities sufficient to supply Durant dealers and distributors throughout the world beginning September 1 was announced this week by executives of the Durant Motors Company of Indiana, which purchased the Sheridan Motor Car Company plant from the General Motors several weeks ago, at a cost of approximately $3,000,000.

The new six-cylinder type will be manufactured in touring cars of five and seven-passenger capacity, runabouts, coupes, sedans and limousines. The Muncie plant has a productive capacity of 25,000 cars annually, but the new owners plan to augment this figure considerably within a short time.

PEAK SALES WILL COME NEXT YEAR.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

TOLEDO (O.) Aug. 20.—Activity in the automobile industry will reach the peak in 1922 declares John Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Company, in a resume of the condition of his company, issued this week.

He points out that splendid crop prospects and relief for the railroads promises more in the way of prosperity for next year than we have had in 1921.

"Many people who have been getting along with old cars will buy new ones while others who have never owned cars will be numbered among the purchasers when the returning period of prosperity puts them in position to buy," declared Mr. Willys.

NEW CASTAIC ROAD TO VENTURA OPENS TODAY.

Important Highway Link Through Rich Farming Country is at Last Ready for Motorists' Use.

Motorists today will begin to enjoy the fruits of that historic "get-together" meeting the Supervisors of Ventura and Los Angeles counties held in 1916 at the instance of the Auto Club when it was decided to pave the great valley route between Los Angeles and Ventura through the Castaic region.

Today this route is thrown open to the motoring public, with the completion of the last portion of Los Angeles county's share of the work from Castaic to the county line.

PAPA OF SCHEME.

Now this provides one of the most remarkable round-trip, all-paved tours in the State. Practically virgin touring territory is opened to the auto owner, points out the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California, which, in reality is the "papa" of the scheme for the complete paving of the road.

Ventura county some time ago finished the paving of its share of the route through Santa Paula, Fillmore and Piru to the Los Angeles county line midway between Castaic and the famous Camulos ranch, but the route was not practical as a pleasure tour until this county completed its share of the work between Castaic and the completed portion done by Ventura—a distance of six miles, which has been under construction for a little over a year.

This road follows the famous Santa Clara River for a considerable distance, and passes near the old Camulos ranch which was made famous by Helen Hunt Jackson in her book, "Ramona." It serpentines through some of the richest farming country in the State.

With the completion of this road, a round trip of surpassing importance is opened to the public with its apex at Ventura. Leaving Los Angeles the motorist may take either the Calabasas route, thorugh Newberry and Camarillo and over the Conejo grade, returning over the Castaic road, or vice versa.

From this city to Ventura by way of Santa Paula and Castaic the distance is eighty-one miles, while it is seventy-one miles over the Calabasas route, making a round trip of 152 miles, a pleasant journey for a day, with an opportunity for lunching in Ventura, or en route.

WILLS SETS RECORD DRIVING OWN CAR.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—C. Harold Wills, creator of the Wills Sainte Claire motor car Wednesday broke all automobile records between Detroit and New York at the wheel of one of his own cars. He left police headquarters Detroit at 12:01 Wednesday morning and arrived at the New York branch of the Wills Sainte Claire in New York at 8:27 Detroit time, 9:27 New York time.

The car contained four men, 275 pounds of baggage and was driven the last six hours in a heavy fog and driving rain. The total elapsed time was 20h. 26m.

NOISY MOTORBIKES ARE UNDER THE BAN.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 20.—Motorcycle owners in California who persist in riding their machines with the muffler wide open do so at the risk of being arrested and heavily fined, according to Charles J. Chenu, superintendent of the State motor vehicle department.

As the result of many complaints that have been received from all parts of the State against motorcycle owners who violate the motor vehicle law, Chenu has instructed his inspectors to make arrests whenever they catch a machine with the muffler open.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 20.—The California State Civil Service Commission is looking for an associate highway engineer to assist in carrying on the big road-building program during the coming two years.

The examinations are to be held in Los Angeles, Sacramento and San Francisco, and the last day for filing application at those places is September 17.

LINCOLN TURNING OUT MANY CARS NOW.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT (Mich.) Aug. 20.—The Lincoln Motor Car Company is producing 200 cars monthly now. At present there are 2000 Lincoln cars in the hands of owners and this number will be augmented rapidly with the increase brought about through demand and the increase in working capital of $1,250,000 recently voted by the directors and a bond issue as part of the fixed assets of $2,500,000.

FIVE MOTOR CAR PLANTS CUT PRICES.

Wills, Hudson, Essex, King and Pierce-Arrow All Announce Drops.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, Aug. 20.—Makers of five standard automobiles—Wills Ste. Claire, Hudson, Essex, Pierce-Arrow and King announced price reductions this week. In the case of Hudson and Essex lines it was the third cut in the prices of these cars, putting present quotations at a lower level than any before offered. Officials of the Hudson and Essex companies said heavy sales during the summer exhausted old inventories and reduced overhead costs and that materials are purchasable now at a lower figure.

Reductions in the prices of its touring car models, effective after September 1, and a reduction on the prices of its truck models, effective immediately, has been announced by the Pierce-Arrow Company.

The new price of the standard seven-passenger touring car is $6500 at the factory, the inclosed car prices being graded proportionately. Reductions of four models of the King Motor Car Company range from $600 to $800.

G.M.C. TRUCKS ARE REDUCED IN PRICE.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PONTIAC (Ill.) Aug. 20.—Price cuts on the entire line of motor trucks made by the General Motors are announced. They range from $400 to $800 with the largest proportionate decrease on the one-ton model which is cut 25 per cent. The plant has been comparatively inactive for some time but recent orders have caused renewed building of machines.

NO CHANCE TO REDUCE RATES.

Automobile Insurance Keeps Pace With Risk.

Personal Element is Hard Thing to Figure.

Can Cut Down Accidents and Rates at Same Time.

There will be no lower automobile insurance rates for motorists of Southern California in the near future despite recent action taken by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce in severing its connections with the National Board of Automobile Underwriters, according to a detailed announcement made yesterday by officials of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

REDUCE THE RISK.

It is up to the public to first reduce the risk induced by reckless driving, careless garage construction and activity of automobile thieves before insurance rates can be lowered in this section, it is pointed out.

Why does not a cautious driver get a lower insurance rate on his car than one who is known by the insurance company to be reckless?

Because the cost both to the insurance company to the individual solicitor in investigating, except in a general way, the reliability of every automobile driver who seeks to take out insurance, would bring the overhead expense of the company up to a point which would raise the insurance rates to the same figure at which they were before such an elaborate investigation was attempted.

LOOK THEM UP.

The action taken by the National Chamber of Commerce, according to eastern dispatches, was taken in an effort to secure a nation-wide inquiry by insurance companies into a man's character before writing his policy, and also because of the disagreement with the grouping of cars according to their mechanical construction.

The Inter-Insurance Exchange of the Automobile Club of Southern California, which is the criterion for co-operative insurance throughout America, characterizes any stand taken for an investigation into an individual's personal habits in regard to his rate of insurance as impractical for the average insurance company at this time because of the enormous expense involved in making personal investigations. Any insurance solicitor, it is pointed out, would make very little money if he had to spend time investigating the personal character of each one of his "prospects."

ALWAYS CONSIDERED.

The "hazard" which exists in any community is taken into consideration by the insurance company. That is, the amount of recklessness, the number of accidents and various considerations which go to make up any element adverse to the insurance company. In Southern California however, motorists are fortunate in having at hand the Insurance Department of the Automobile Club, which actually does undertake to represent the individual policy-holder as well as its own welfare, thus having a dual personality, whereas ordinary stock insurance companies have only one personality, inasmuch as they represent only their company interests

A Service Station that Is All that the Name Implies.

The El Camino station, conducted by the Pacific Rubber Company at Hollywood Boulevard and Gower street. Unusual conveniences of many kinds have been incorporated into its equipment and it is believed to be the most modern and artistically built plant of its kind in the country.

SOMETHING NEW IN LINE.

The building and operation of the decidedly artistic service station at Hollywood Boulevard and Gower streets, Hollywood, by the Pacific Rubber Company, coast distributors of Horse Shoe tires, is the first instance, as far as known, where a tire distributing concern has directly entered this wide field of endeavor.

Before this concern decided to extend its sphere of activity in this respect, the subject was made a matter of a great deal of investigation in different sections of the country and particularly on the Coast, according to Roy R. Meads, its president and general manager. "I gave this subject considerable thought on my Eastern trips," said Meads. "In the matter of frequent and easily accessible service stations, the East does not compare with California. But in so many instances, no matter where you may go, the service is confined to the immediate needs of the motorist—gas, oil, a few tires and tubes, water that you get yourself and free air.

"It seemed to us that progressive changes in the automotive and tire industry as a whole, called for a higher plane of service than is generally afforded the public; a modern plant embracing modern appliances and in a building architecturally pleasing to the eye; drinking fountains, properly furnished rest rooms, the right kind of night lighting, an attractive line of accessories, tire vulcanizing department, accommodation for washing and polishing and lubricating cars. To make a long story as short as possible, we have all these features in our new station, including another—the cleaning of chassis by steam and also the removing of paint from bodies by the same method.

"Courteous and prompt attention to patrons the instant a car drives up for gas or oil is another feature that we demand from our attendants. As soon as the motorist's fuel needs are known and the gas faucet is in the tank of the car, the oil gauge is inspected as well as the radiator, to see if oil or water is necessary."

NO CHANCE TO REDUCE RATES.

and not the personal interests of the policy holder.

It is up to the public to reduce the risk or hazard in Southern California, says the Automobile Club. With fewer accidents, fewer fires, fewer stolen cars, there will be a greater chance of lower insurance rates in the future in this section.

In the Pacific Coast territory there are several insurance subdivisions, so to speak, in which different rates are charged. In California two schedules are applicable—one applying in San Francisco and Los Angeles, and another schedule applying in the balance of the State. These schedules have been determined after due consideration has been given the construction of the car and the hazards in the actual experience of the insurance companies in these territories.

According to Ralph Reynolds, manager of the Automobile Club's Inter-Insurance Exchange, which writes the greatest volume of auto-insurance in this territory, the ideal plan of operation is a co-operative one, in that the policy-holder has equal representation with the firm's interests.

A final solution to the problem propounded by the National Auto Chamber of Commerce in seeking to have rates reduced for motorists on a basis of "personal reliability" and by eliminating the classification of cars for insurance rates according to their mechanical construction will probably be found in Southern California, rather than elsewhere in America, because of the example set by the Auto Club's insurance department in making lower rates on a co-operative basis possible.

However, the "human element"—or how good a driver are you?—will not enter into the matter of insurance rates on the part of the companies for some time until motorists themselves "wise up" to the fact that they must be less reckless.

It is being considered constantly, according to Manager Reynolds, throughout America, but not as elaborately as the national chamber suggests.

The big factor to be eliminated now, if autoists want lower insurance, is CARELESSNESS!

GOVERNOR PREDICTS GROWTH OF INDUSTRY.

CHIEF EXECUTIVE OF STATE PRAISES LOCALLY-MADE AUTOMOBILE.

Predicting an early and huge increase in the industrial growth of Los Angeles, Gov. Stephens of California, who presided at the opening of the successful Industrial Trade Exposition just ended, lauded one particular Los Angeles product to the skies. Following his first ride in a Leach power plus six, manufactured in this city, the Governor displayed much interest in the machine and its manufacturers, and declared that the automobile industry is certain to play a large part in the future industrial growth of Los Angeles and California.

WHY DOES ONE TIRE OUTLAST THE REST?

NOT GENERALLY DUE TO THE INFERIORITY OF THE OTHER THREE.

Every motorist has no doubt answered to his own satisfaction, at least, the question of why one tire lasts longer than another of the same brand. But Leon S. Utter, local distributor for Midco and California cord tires, has what he believes is the only plausible answer. He says:

"By the present up-to-date methods employed in reliable factories, involving uniform processes and rigid inspections, it is practically impossible that out of two completed tires emerging from the final vulcanizing, one could be superior in quality to the other. So the reason for one tube or casing outlasting the other must be found in the conditions that arise after they come into the hands of the motorist.

"Attacking the question from the negative standpoint of why one tire fails to last as long as the other, we can probably answer it quicker. One tire may be underinflated, resulting in more wear to the edges of the tread. Or it may be overinflated, tending to strain the tissues of the tire walls, inviting an ultimate blowout. Again, a wheel may be out of alignment, in which case the tire would be worn by what would amount to continual skidding."

Impossible to Store Up Electricity.

"'Storage Battery' is in effect a misnomer for the modern electric battery," says A. J. Tobey, president of the Western Auto Electric Corporation, distributors of Willard batteries. "Electric energy is not in fact 'stored' there, but the component parts of a battery set up an electro-chemical action when the lighting or ignition switch is turned on making a complete circuit.

"The greater the surface of the battery plates, which are immersed in sulphuric acid, the greater may be the amount of electrical energy generated. The battery which combines this feature with compactness most nearly approaches the ideal. The Willard Threaded Insulated battery has avoided multiplicity of plates by using lead in porous form and insulating the sections with threaded rubber.

"Rubber cannot generally be used between the plates of automobile starting and lighting batteries, because the insulation medium must be porous. This is necessary to allow a free circulation of the fluid in the battery, and on the other hand, if the insulating medium should set up a circuit between the plates within the battery it would become short-circuited and refuse to function. Threaded rubber, the only known form of porous rubber suitable for battery insulation, is used exclusively in Willard batteries."

A Sputter and Cough and You Wanted a Lea

You're at 7th and Broadway, going south. Policeman off duty. From your right comes a long string of traffic. You have just about three feet the best of the car leading the string. One leap forward and you're in the clear!

You step on the throttle and—!

Blaw! Instead of a leap you get nothing but a sputter and cough, followed by a miserable little jerk forward. And there you are, forced to stop and let the crosstown traffic stream past you with tantalizing slowness.

It will be fortunate if you reflect while you're waiting that your car has been driven perhaps 25,000 miles and that the trouble is most likely due to scored or worn cylinders.

Why Women Love the New Buick

"I have driven my three Buicks over 60,000 miles without ever having one of them go back on me. I wish everything in life were as satisfactory as the Buick."

The new Buick velvet disc clutch has been the means of making thousands of enthusiastic women motorists of those who had before shunned driving. It has done away with the bugaboo of stiff, grabbing clutches and clashing gears—made motoring a matter of real comfort and satisfaction.

You can only get the velvet disc clutch in the Buick; eleven models to choose from; prices ranging from $1130 for the new Buick 4 Roadster to $3010.25 for the seven-passenger Sedan.

Mr. H. W. Tuttle,
Howard Automobile Company,
Los Angeles, California.
Dear Sir:

I have been driving my Buick Coupe for three months and find it very satisfactory.

The new velvet disc clutch responds quickly to the slightest pressure of the foot, making it easy to control the car, especially in passing thru the congested parts of the city when frequent gear shifting is necessary.

Another valuable feature of the Coupe is that it runs very quietly with almost no vibration, regardless of the rate of speed—15, 20 or 35 miles—reduces fatigue even on long trips to a minimum.

Yours very truly,

A SPLENDID MUD HORSE.

Reo Six Proves Itself an All-around Thoroughbred on Jaunt Down the Coast.

Motoring to Los Angeles from Hamilton, (Ont.), Canada, a distance of 3430 miles by motor car with the total expense for a party of four amounting to but $133.59 was the interesting experience of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Lounsbury, their son and daughter.

The journey westward was made in a Reo Six and was its trial trip, the car proving a splendid mud horse as well as a first class mountaineer, so Mr. Lounsbury told Manager Byron C. Foy of the Reo factory branch here.

"Our route followed the following list of towns and cities," said Lounsbury in telling Foy of the long trip. "Hamilton to London, Sarnia, Port Huron, Mount Clemons, Lansing and Elkhart, Indiana to the Lincoln Highway, which was followed across the States of Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska and Wyoming to Cheyenne, where a more southerly route was taken through Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo to Trinidad, where we picked up the Sante Fe Trail. Included in this itinerary was a two-day stop in Denver, visiting the National Park and Lookout Mountain, while from Colorado Springs Pike's Peak and the Garden of the Gods were visited.

"The trail between Las Vegas and Sante Fe and the mountains had practically been obliterated by a cloudburst on July 4th and no repairs made except such as motor tourists had been compelled to make in order to get through.

"The Raton Pass was crossed and good time made through Las Vegas to Sante Fe where we stopped off for three days of interesting sight-seeing at Frigoln Canyon, the old church, museum and other historic and scenic points. West of the Pass and through New Mexico and Arizona via the Gallup Cut-off the roads were very muddy, due to the unprecedented rains which had fallen but a few days before our arrival.

"Our best day's runs were as follows: One 24-hour stretch through Nebraska and Colorado into Denver totaled 432 miles; and the last leg of the journey from Seligman via Kingman, Needles and Barstow to Hermosa Beach of 505 miles in 37 hours. This last long run was made possible through the sky being cloudy and myself and my son taking turns at the wheel.

FORMER LOS ANGELES DEALER HAS TROUBLES WITH RULES IN CANADA.

Here is an instance where left is right and right is wrong.

Harold L. Knudsen, formerly manager of the Willys-Overland Pacific branch in Oakland and now manager for the same organization in Seattle, recently communicated with J. F. Thomson, local branch manager, in which he relates an interesting trip down from the northwest in his Overland four to San Francisco. He made the trip in fast time, but did not attempt breaking any records.

According to a tale that Knudsen related to Mr. Thomson, it is possible for Washington motor car owners to drive to Vancouver, B. C. That is, to take the boat over to the British Columbia city.

Here is where the hitch comes in. In this country the autoist keeps to the right or he finds himself in bad with the traffic officer. In Vancouver the system is changed. The traffic keeps to the left on the Vancouver thoroughfares and if you keep to the right you are dead wrong. It is very confusing to autoists who have been brought up on American traffic rules, and, according to Knudsen, they have got to keep their wits about them or visit the town bastile.

LINCOLNS USED BY HARDING'S PARTY.

President and Mrs. Harding, Vice-President and Mrs. Coolidge, Secretary of War Weeks and other distinguished guests, including the entire Presidential party, used Lincoln cars exclusively during the recent Pilgrim tercentenary festivities held at Plymouth, Mass.

According to "Doc" Green, branch manager of the Walter M. Murphy Motors Company, Lincoln distributors, eastern distributors provided a whole fleet of Lincoln cars for the use of the President and his party, as well as for President Henry M. Leland of the Lincoln Motor Company, who is a personal friend of President Harding, and who, with W. C. Leland, vice-president and general manager; W. H. Murphy and John Boyer, directors of the Lincoln company, made a special trip from Detroit to attend the pageant.

GOOD ROADS LOWER COST OF UPKEEP.

Condition of Highways Affects the Expense of Maintaining an Automobile.

"Providing the owner gives the attention to his car that it is justly entitled to, road conditions become the all-prominent factor in its percentage of deterioration and its cost of maintenance," declared Stanley W. Smith of Smith Brothers, Peerless distributors for Southern California. "Aside from the natural pride that we have in our highway system and the general tax burden, every motorist has a selfish interest in the way our highways are built.

"Highways that soon disintegrate because of poor construction, are a bane to every operator of a motor-driven vehicle. In exact proportion to their degree of disintegration, they exact a toll of wear and tear that annually must run into a tremendous sum. This can only mean a double drain upon the tax payer, which should be of considerable interest to him if he gives the subject any serious thought.

"Our State highway system has been widely advertised, and it comes as somewhat of a jolt to us, to be informed upon the most reliable authority that the State's construction methods are antiquated and are annually costing motor vehicle owners and tax payers a tremendous amount.

"The subject is one of more than passing interest, in my opinion. The Automobile Club of Southern California and the northern association, working together, have shown that they have the best interests of the public at heart, and should, I think, have the hearty support of every right-minded citizen in their campaign to correct what is asserted to be a badly mismanaged department of our State's functions."

NEW KISSEL MODELS INSTANTANEOUS HIT.

ATTRACTIVE CARS ARE PRAISED ON DISPLAY AT SAN FRANCISCO.

Word has just been received by Gilbert Woodill, Coast factory representative of the Kissel Motor Car Company, that the new models which were just placed on display in San Francisco have scored an instantaneous hit. These new models will also be seen in this city shortly.

The attractive design and custom-built features of these cars should be especially appealing to the feminine visitors, while the men, of course, will be more particularly interested in the mechanical achievements of the car.

Especial emphasis, therefore, is being laid by Woodill on the performance of the Kissel custom-built six over California roads. Woodill has personally spent weeks in the testing out of these cars on the highways of the State, and the charts that he has kept of the car's performance under California touring conditions will be of interest to every prospective motor car owner.

Furthermore, Woodill, has been carefully compiling actual records of California owners, and these are now available to prove the merits of the Kissel under actual touring conditions.

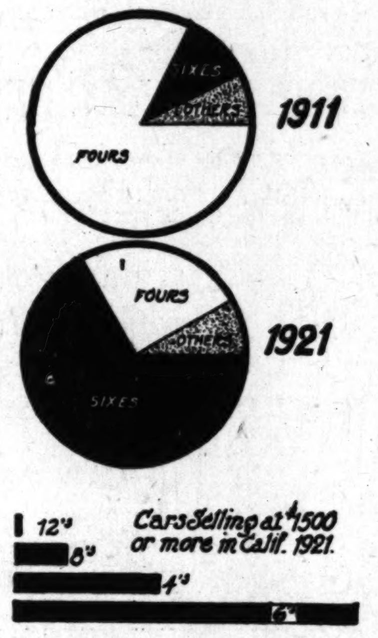
HUPMOBILE SALES ON THE UP-GRADE.

If the Hupmobile sales, wholesale and retail, for the first two weeks of this month offer any criterion, the month of August will easily surpass the sales record in any preceding year for the same month, according to P. H. Greer of the Greer-Robbins Company, Hupmobile distributors for California, Arizona and Nevada.

While the greatest demand is for touring cars and roadsters, the company's allotment of coupes and sedans is generally only about "one jump" ahead of the affixing of purchasers' signatures to order blanks. It has been necessary for the service department to work outside of regular hours in order that new cars may be promptly serviced.

Be Satisfied only with a "SIX"

Studebaker



EXPERIENCED motorists who have graduated in the school of motor car transportation are satisfied with nothing less than six-cylinder performance.

The popularity of six-cylinder motors has gained ground so fast that they now dominate the field of cars selling at $1500 or more.

Three years ago Studebaker invested $20,000,000 in its South Bend plant for the exclusive production of the Light Six model. They have produced a car that combines the satisfactory performance of the "Six" with the economy of any light automobile.

They purposed to build the "World's Greatest Light Six Car" and they have succeeded, here is what the Studebaker Light Six will do—

18 to 22 miles per gallon—
12,000 to 18,000 miles on tires—
10 years of satisfactory service.

We will gladly demonstrate Light Six performance and prove our claims of economy.

If you have not yet ridden in this "World's Greatest Light Six" we invite you to do so. Telephone us—when you want the car sent to your door.

New Contract Frees Dealer from Worries.

The first motor car company to adopt the terms of contract between manufacturer and dealer, as recommended by the Automobile Chamber of Commerce is the Oakland Motor Car Company of Pontiac.

Under the new contract each distributor enjoys a perpetual franchise for the handling of Oakland motor cars. No longer does he have to sit back and worry himself sick for fear that some other concern is back at the factory, trying to wean the account away from him. He now can step right out and build up a business that can be preserved and handed down to his children.

"Up until this year there have been but rare instances of perpetual contracts between dealers and factories in the motor car field, and this has fostered a feeling of distrust on both sides," says H. C. McVey of the Los Angeles Oakland Company.

"The dealer never knew when he was to wake up and find that a competitor was the dealer for the line of cars he had been handling. He as reluctant to go ahead and spend his own money to give the buyers added service. He did not dare gamble on building up too much good will for the cars he sold. He always had to hold back against that day when he would be out.

"A perpetual contract gives a dealer something to work on. It becomes an asset to him. It is something that has value in business and he stakes his all on the car he handles. This means mor and better service to owners with a conscience, to see that every buyer is satisfied."

MOTOR STAGES GET OVER MUCH GROUND.

FIVE HUNDRED THOUSAND MILES COVERED A MONTH BY ONE CONCERN.

Five hundred twenty-three thousand miles! That is a long way, but it is only a portion of the distance motor stages in the State of California travel in one month.

There are over 1000 motor stages in operation in the State today. Less than one-fifth of these cars, belonging to the Motor Transit Company, stack up a combined mileage equal to twenty trips around the world every thirty days.

More than 300,000 people were carried by the cars en route. This not only shows that motor transportation is on the increase, but that the general public is traveling more these days.

STEADY DEMAND FOR TRAILERS.

Carriers Increase Capacity of Trucks Much.

Motor Transportation Rivals Railroad Freight.

History of Trailer is Traced from Early Days.

According to the reports from the Trailers' Manufacturing Association activity is marked in the selling of trailers. The demand has been consistent and steady. They believe that as business gets down to a more economical basis, manufacturers and merchans will look more closely to the cost of transportation, and will adopt the trailer more generally as a means of reducing the cost of haulage and delivery. It is expected that the high railroad freight rates will result in a larger development of the ship by truck movement.

RAPID GROWTH.

The study of a growth from its primitive beginnings to a nearly finished perfection, whether it be a people or a product, is always of some interest. As in a locomotive and in the ships that sail the sea, the passing years have wrought incredible changes in that carrier known as a trailer.

Probably the first trailer was used before the advent of the white man in this land of ours—when an Indian brave calmly smoking watched his squaw dragging, on two boughs fastened together, a load too heavy to carry. Since a heavy load may be pulled with greater ease than carried, a crude trailer was fashioned in early days, by slinging two poles from the sides of a horse and carrying the load on the poles. It was but a step from this to having horses pulling wagons with a wagon trailer. Then with the invention of motor cars these in turn had wagon trailers. But here an unlooked for difficulty arose. The wagon trailer could not stand the speed and the increased vibration. The bearings became hot, the tires were knocked out of shape, and things generally began to give.

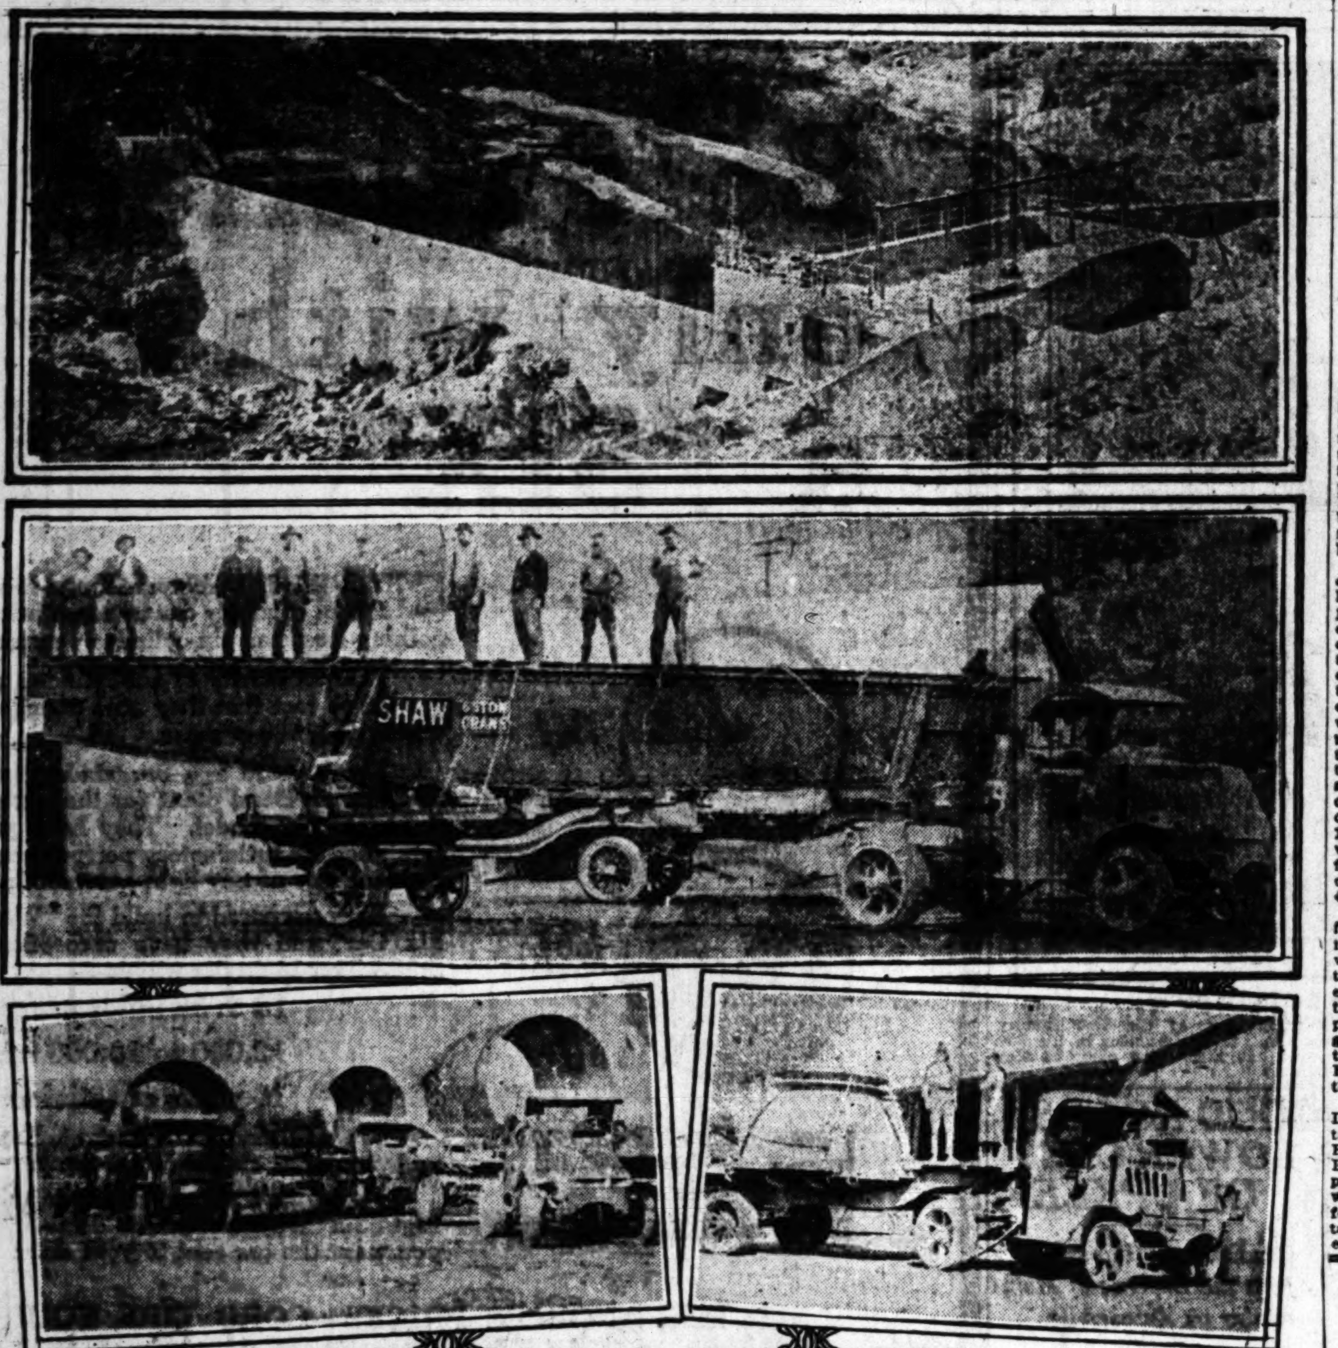
NEED IS PROVED.

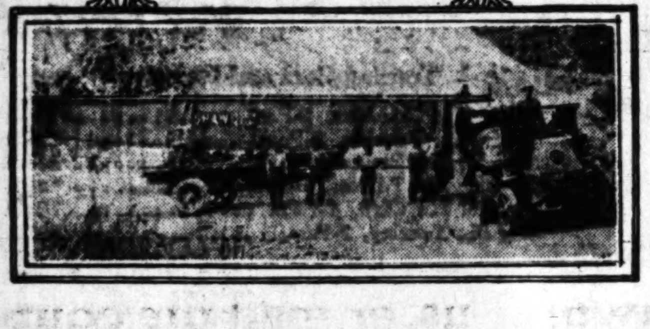
The efficacy and need of a trailer had been proved and as always in such a case a manufacturer took up the matter and built a trailer and it ceased to be just anything hauled behind a wagon or a car. Whether the trailer would have made such a place for itself if it were not for the truck is a matter for conjecture.

Machines, like people, if they be of lasting worth must have a reserve strength or excess power. Something that will be "there" in times of stress. So the truck is built with an excess power that may be used in case of an emergency. This excess power under normal conditions can be utilized in hauling the trailer. Some one has figured out that a truck carrying a normal load, and hauling a trailer with an equal load, a total of double the normal load, will show an increased consumption of gasoline and oil of about 20 per cent. It has been found, too, that the actual difference in the life of a truck hauling a trailer to a similar truck carrying only its normal load is so slight as to be discounted by the gain.

CAMPING TRAILERS.

That the trailer is not strictly a business proposition is evidenced by the arrival of the camping trailer for use by automobile tourists. This outfit includes a bed, mattresses, pillows, folding table, chairs, oil stove, cooking utensils and dishes, ice chests and electric light, a veritable camp on wheels. It weighs less than 800 pounds, has roller bearings and pneumatic tires, so it is easily drawn and does not affect the speed of the car. Many such trailers are being used by tourists.





Motor Trucks Playing a Mighty Role.

Perhaps the greatest peace-time motor transportation achievement on record was the transportation, mostly by Mack trucks, of 60,000 tons of materials and supplies used by the Southern California Edison Company in the construction of Kern River plant No. 3. The Macks had to haul tremendous loads over terrible roads and accomplished the seemingly impossible task without trouble of any sort. Above, one of the dams built from material hauled to the spot by trucks, and below, some of the huge pieces of equipment which were carried long distances by Mack trucks.

PRICE OF PISTON RINGS IS DROPPED.

The McQuay-Norris Manufacturing Company of St. Louis, has announced a reduction in the price of the genuine McQuay-Norris leak-proof piston rings. The new price is $1.25 for all sizes and oversizes up to five inches in diameter. This includes practically all makes of motor cars and trucks.

In revising their prices to car owners and the trade, the company calls attention to the fact that the prices of its rings were never raised during the war.

TRUCKS PLAY A MAIN ROLE NOW.

Huge Achievement is Due to Motor Transportation.

No Difficulties Too Great for Mack Fleet.

Heaviest Loads Carried Over Very Worst Roads.

The world's greatest peace-time motor transportation achievement is a Southern California accomplishment. It was the transportation by motor truck of 60,000 tons of material and supplies used by the Southern California Edison Company in the construction of Kern River plant No. 3 located on the banks of the Kern River far up in the mountains above the town of Kernville.

Approximately 2,000,000 residents of California south of Tulare county have electric energy at their disposal as result of this prodigious enterprise which was made possible exclusively through the use of motor truck transportation. The town of Caliente in Kern county was the nearest railroad point. The chief headquarters for distribution were located fifty miles beyond. To reach this site it was necessary for the trucks to surmount three mountain ridges over a road of an average gradient of 6 per cent and countless pieces as steep as 17 per cent. At Calente the elevation is 1200 feet and the first ridge over which the trucks passed is 4400 feet high. The second is in excess of 5000 feet and the third over 4000 feet in elevation.

Dropping from the summit of the first ridge the road crossed the famous Walker Basin then winds its way by switchbacks and curves through the town of Havila, the early capital of Kern county and the scene of many pioneer enterprises. The celebrated Bodfish grade has to be conquered before the town of Isabella is reached. From Kernville the road follows the canyon of the Kern River.

Under the direction of Mr. Peter Ducker, superintendent of transportation for the Southern California Edison Company and his assistant Edward M. Rondot, 120,000,000 pounds of material, ranging in weight of individual pieces from a few ounces to thirty-five tons, were taken by truck in a period of eighteen months. Kern River plant No. 3 is not the biggest hydro-electric enterprise in the country, but it stands as a monument to motor truck transportation, ranking second only to the use of trucks in the World War.

The preliminary details in connection with the transportation end of the projuect necessitated the building at Caliente of a garage, camp, warehouses, unloading platforms, cranes, derricks and the usual equipment.

Eighteen miles of private road were built by the company at its expense and road making in the mountains is expensive. The road followed a carefully selected route but 17 per cent grades could not be avoided. In addition to the expenditures on its own section of the road the company spent about $10,000 on the maintenance of a county road over which it operated.

Ninety-four motor trucks of various makes were used in the work. The Edison Company owned and operated thirty-seven pieces of Mack motor equipment, which stood the brunt of the burden and carried most of the tonnage. The other trucks usually were called in at rush periods. The thirty-seven pieces of Mack equipment included two 7½-ton models, five 5½-ton models, twelve 15-ton tractors and eighteen of the 1½-ton and 2-ton models. The smaller Macks were used almost entirely for the distribution of supplies among the camps and on the short hauls.

BIGGEST FEAT.

The biggest trucking performance consisted of moving 360 tons of supplies fifty miles daily for several weeks. There were 2800 men housed in twelve camps and every foot of lumber used in building these camps as well as for all other purposes had to make that fifty-mile trip by motor truck.

More than half of the total tonnage was devoted to sacked cement. Fourteen miles above the power house site, well up toward the headwaters of the Kern River a diversion type dam was installed. Thousands of tons of cement went into the making of this dam and to line the twelve miles of tunnels driven through solid rock that convey the water from the dam to the power house. Building the dam, power house and tunnels fifty miles from the base of supplies out of materials that had to be hauled on motor trucks was no small achievement in itself. Those 2800 men had to be kept supplied. Many of them did their own housekeeping and some of the cabins were fitted up with a piano or phonograph that had made the long ride on a truck.

The heaviest single load that it was necessary to transport weighed approximately thirty-five tons. It was part of an electrical generator and was carried on a specially built trailer. SIGNAL IS REAL HELP TO DRIVER.

"Look Out" Device Gives Warning Every Time Car Slows Up.

As a direct development of the drive now being made by the police on reckless automobile drivers, the Lookout Manufacturing Company with offices at 831 West Sixteenth street, the makers of a "Look Out" device for automobiles, have begun a campaign to have their product adopted by the city and county official cars. The device which is attached to the rear of automobiles is automatic and waves a warning to other automobile drivers that the car in front is slowing down.

The "Look Out" is an attachment connected with the brakes of the automobile. When the foot brake is applied by the driver the little red disc supported by steel arms springs up from behind the number plate of the automobile and operates in the same manner as a railroad crossing wig-wag. At night the disc shows a red light.

In speaking of the "Look Out," Captain of Traffic McDowell declared, "If this warning device was on every automobile I am sure that the city accidents would be cut down by one-half. A driver by simply placing a foot on the brakes starts the signal to working and at once warns the fellow behind that he is going to slow down. The signal is effective at night as well as in the day time. Something of the kind should be adopted by the State and then required by a State law."

HUGE PLANT IS GENUINE SHOW PLACE

Quantity Production Made Easy and Accurate in New Cadillac Factory.

One of the show places among the industrial plants in Detroit is the new Cadillac factory which covers forty-nine acres of ground. Before the completion of this plant, which is one of the largest and most modern in the country, the manufacture of the Cadillac was done in seventy-seven different buildings. The present plant consists of five units which provides more than 2,250,000 square feet of space covering about fifty-five acres of working floor space.

Cadillac operations are more accurate even than those of watch-making. Johansson gauges, which make measurements as low as one hundred-thousandth of an inch, are used to prevent the slightest deviation from the high Cadillac standards. Special machinery, much of it entirely peculiar to the Cadillac factory, has been designed and constructed for many operations so thorough that they are not even thought of in other factories.

Every time and labor-saving device that has proved its worth for Cadillac has been included. When additional stories are added, a thing which is proposed for later on, practically no remodeling will have to be done to the interior of the present plant. The additional stories can be added without halting manufacturing operations.

The hum and hustle, the quantity production, and minute efficiency—all the finest elements in America's big business are found at their best in this giant industry, which has a capacity of 30,000 Cadillacs yearly, without the use of night shifts.

VER LINDEN TO BATTLE IT OUT.

ever, Ver Linden received a copy of the official annual report of General Motors form 1920, in which the net earnings are put down at $93,150,308.

VAST SUMS.

To reduce this figure to $31,983,093, the basis on which compensation was to be computed, the brief declares, General Motors had deducted from the $93,150,308, avowed as its actual net earnings, vast sums, which in previous years, had not been deducted, nor were these items named in the contract as items which should properly be deducted to arrive at the basis on which compensation was to be computed. For example, one item named is $10,000,000 for taxes and depreciation and others are $4,500,000 for employes' bonuses; $18,000,000 for reserves; $7,500,000 as a special reserve against "unforeseen contingencies"; and $5,500,000 debenture and preferred dividends.

The brief declares that Ver Linden, believing these deductions illegal and contrary to the terms of the contract, refused to accept the lowered basis of compensation and was informed that for the purposes of computing compensation in his case the deduction would not apply; still protracted correspondence that followed failed to bring plaintiff and defendant any nearer adjustment and settlement. Therefore the brief sets up, "the defendant exercising the power and authority possessed by him, drew and advanced to himself a substantially sufficient sum to pay him what the plaintiff owed him."

REFUSED TO DO.

The brief declares that Ver Linden offered to return such portions of the sum received from the corporation as had been received by the corporation from him for investment in stock if the General Motors would deliver to him the stock purchased by his money. This, the brief declares, the General Motors refused to do.

After drawing the check to settle his account just as he had drawn his salary month by month before, Ver Linden formally notified the head offices of the corporation in New York of what he had done whereupon demand was made for the return of the money and on his refusal, he was discharged.

Get the Truth About the Chalmers

Ride with us in the Chalmers. Satisfy yourself that it is today's prime value. Do so this week.

Chalmers superiorities are demonstrable. Your word to us that you want the truth about the Chalmers, brings you that truth.

We ask you to check Chalmers performance this week, against any other performance you know.

You will sense the smooth, silent power; the easy throttling down; the instant pick-up of the wonderfully supple motor.

But go farther. Telephone any Chalmers owner. Ask to know how little it costs to run the Chalmers, how little for repairs and replacements.

That is the whole truth. That is the proof of the value which we claim.

Get the truth—from Chalmers owners, and from the car itself, and we will be satisfied. Telephone us, or mail the coupon.

OLDTIMERS NOW LINKED.

One of First Automobiles Now Distributed by Pioneer Along Auto Row.

The appointment by the Haynes Automobile Company of Lynn C. Buxton as their Southern California distributor links together the oldest automobile manufacturer with one of the oldest distributors in the local territory. Most "old-timers" in the business know that Elwood Haynes's first gasoline automobile was built in Kokomo, Ind., in 1893, and that this first self-propelled vehicle is now on exhibition at the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C., where it is shown to many thousands of visitors and tourists each year.

The 1922 model Haynes now on exhibition at Mr. Buxton's showrooms reflects fully the long period of years over which the Haynes has been produced. Much of the pioneering of the present-day motor car was done under Elwood Haynes's direction in the Haynes factory, and this development of motor-car ideas is very much reflected in the new models.

For 1922, the Haynes factory will provide the motoring public with a variety of models that will meet almost every requirement. In the model 55, there will be a five-passenger, roadster and a five-passenger sedan, and, in the model 75, a four-passenger sport model, seven-passenger touring, two-passenger speedster and a full and complete line of inclosed models.

The Haynes is the first factory with large production to put out a standard job with the individual steps and drop fenders, a departure from the standard manufacture that adds largely to the car's appearance, and is finding a ready response from the buyer. The new model 55 is equipped with the well-known Haynes light six-cylinder motor, is fully upholstered in genuine leather, comes equipped with cord tires, Gabriel snubbers all around, motometer and a power tire pump. It is only on account of the enormous production capacity of the Haynes factory that this car can be produced at the price at which it is offered. The lines are graceful, everything is well proportioned, the finish is high grade in every particular, and a great amount of enthusiasm is already expressed in the Buxton sales record.

A Pioneer Motor Car Now Being Distributed Here by a Pioneer Dealer.

Lynn C. Buxton, the new Haynes distributor for Southern California, standing beside the 1922 Haynes model 55. Mr. Buxton has been connected with the automobile business ever since there was such a thing in Los Angeles, and the Haynes has been prominent in the automobile world ever since there were automobiles.

NEW SCHEDULE OF PRICES IS MADE.

SUBSTANTIAL REDUCTIONS FOR WILLS SAINTE CLAIRE ARE ANNOUNCED.

When C. Harold Wills started production in his Marysville plant six months ago he promised that as soon as production was speeded up there would be a substantial price reduction on the entire Wills Sainte Claire line. This new schedule of prices has just been put into effect. In making the radical reduction in prices on the Wills Sainte Claire, C. Harold Wills made the following statement.

"For six months we have been producing Wills Sainte Claire cars in Marysville. We have placed them in the hands of owners in virtually every State in the Union. These owners have driven their cars hundreds of thousands of satisfactory miles. We are very proud of the records we have made and the demand that has come from all sections of the country has enabled us to push production to the peak and this, in turn, has resulted in the price reduction."

The immense plant at Marysville is now in full operation, and is one of the world's most scientificially equipped factories. Manufacturing methods have been perfected and the plant is proving one of the most interesting sights in the industrial center of the East.

ANOTHER CARLOAD OF CORDS IS HERE.

SUPPLY OF HENDERSON TIRES ARRIVES FOR THE LOCAL DISTRIBUTORS.

The California Sales Company, recently made distributor of Henderson giant oversize cord tires, has received another carload of these tires that are widely known in the East, and there is every indication that the second will go as rapidly as the first. These tires which are guaranteed for 8000 miles are being sold here at Goodrich fabric prices.

"There is nothing unusual about this offering," declared an official of the company." The manufacturers, who have been in the tire business in the East for fourten years, were not burdened with long time contracts for crude rubber and fabric. They have been able to avail themselves at the present low prices on these materials and the public is getting the benefit of this condition.

"We are daily selling scores of these oversize cords, and it is our experience that owners of big cars are using them in a surprisingly large number."

TRUCKS PLAY A LEADING ROLE NOW.

MOTOR TRANSPORTATION IS GROWING IN IMPORTANCE AT RAPID RATE.

"A study of the economic history of the United States quickly discloses the giant role played by the railroads—initiated by private capital—aided by land grants alternately hampered and succored by the Federal government, but always going forward, opening up new trading zones, developing and going into new territories," says Gilbert Woodill, Pacific Coast representative of the Kissel Motor Car Company.

"Then came the industrial era of intensive manufacture and its problems of extensive distribution—again the railroads.

"Today we see our industrial history repeating itself, doubling back over the old problems but with a new distribution solution—the motor truck."

"Industrial America has spent the past decade or more in studies of its products—seeking refinements in manufacturing—studying and sometimes controlling sources of supply—and later a more or less close survey of markets.

"But the new day is here—when manufacturers on an equal plane of endeavor in buying and fabricating, are seeking the marginal factor in distribution. And in physical distribution, the motor truck is playing the role destined for it from the first For in the motor truck lie the same potentialities for the individual business firm that formerly lay in the rails at an earlier stage."

MAY BUILD RACERS WITH TRICK AXLES.

Harry A. Miller has announced his intention of building two new racing cars to be equipped with Perfecto two-speed axles. Miller, who is recognized as one of the best-known automotive engineers in the country, has already taken up the matter of the use of the Perfecto axle on his new racing cars with Glover Ruckstell, head of the corporation which builds and markets the Perfecto products. It is the contention of both Miller and Ruckstell that the two-speed axle will add to the efficiency of the new small displacement speed creations.

SPECIAL BUILT.

The motor used in the Gardner automobile is manufactured especially for the Gardner Motor Company by the Lycoming Foundry and Machine Company of Williamsport, Pa. It is of the four-cylinder L-head type and develops thirty-five-horsepower at 1800 revolutions per minute.

ONE-LUNGER STILL IS CHUGGING ALONG.

Just because a motor car happens to be fourteen years old does not stop J. R. Chalker of 445 Rose avenue, Long Beach, making a 200-mile trip. Chalker has just completed a run to Temecula and return in his one-cylinder Cadillac which he purchased in 1907.

In a letter to Don Lee, the local Cadillac distributor, Chalker says the car is in fine running order and doesn't look so bad. He also says the car still has lots of run in it and is far too good an automobile for the junk man.

FOUR SALESMEN JOIN THE CHALMERS FORCE.

The following automobile salesmen with a wide acquaintance on automobile row and in the city have been added to the Chalmers' sales force, it is announced by Sales Manager R. O. Gould: Hugh O'Neill, Lou Maddox and Dick Fahnestock.

TAKES AN EXPERT TO RELINE BRAKES.

THAT'S WHY SERVICE STATIONS TAKE CARE OF THIS PARTICULAR POINT.

"The average motorist is of the opinion that the relining of a brake is a simple matter. It is, to the expert who makes a practice of this kind of repair work. It should be remembered that every brake is different and requires special tuning to bring it to perfection, just as every motor has to be carefully watched," says Walter Smith of the E. M. Smith Company, manufacturers of Emsco brake lining.

"This was the reason we established brake service stations all up and down the Pacific Coast for our product. The men in these service stations are all experts. We have seen to that, and can, therefore, give the best service and advice possible about brakes.

"Two of the many important items to be considered in adjusting brakes and which should not be trusted to the average garage man are the pitching and assemblage of primary leverage. It should be remembered that the leverage thrust operates the brake band. This leverage has to be changed ever so often, according to how fast the brakes wear. This will give you the maximum wear and will insure correct and safe braking.

"What the battery and tire service stations have done for batteries and tires, so have Emsco brake-lining service stations filled a long-needed requirement to every motorist, that of giving better and safer brakes."

SALES ARE AT A HIGH POINT NOW

Hupp Factory Running Full Tilt to Supply the Local Demand.

The production figures of the Hupp Motor Car Corporation for July and the significant fact that dealers handling the line are selling Hupmobiles as fast as they receive them, attests the popularity of this universally known car, distributed in California, Arizona and Nevada by the Greer-Robbins Company.

During July a total of 1917 cars, all in domestic trade, were shipped. The best previous month's record was July of last year when 2400 cars were turned out. Of this number, however, 700 were exported. This month better than 1600 Hupps will be shipped, according to factory advices, while next month it is expected that at least 2000 Hupmobiles will be the production figures.

"There figures are the best proof of the fast growing popularity of this car," said P. H. Greer. "With a reported lack of buying power in many sections, Hupp production figures as far as domestic use goes, are ahead of last season. And mind you, dealers are not 'stocking.' There is no opportunity. Since the price reduction there has been a buyer waiting for practically every car that we get from the factory."

THE MOTOR WORLD IS GETTING SOFT.

MODERN MOTORIST IS PEEVED UNLESS HE HAS SMOOTH ROADS EVERYWHERE.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

REDLANDS, Aug. 20.—"The motoring world is getting soft, they all want perfectly smooth roads and closed cars," said a well-known automobile dealer here. A few years ago only a few of the millionaires bought the closed cars, and the average person was honest when he said he didn't want them. But days have changed and now the average man is hankering for a closed car."

The dealer says that it does not necessarily mean a sedan or coupe, but that many now are getting the special tops by which the back seat can be entirely closed in with side panels. He admits that about nine months out of the year there is much more comfort in riding in such a car.

The same dealer says that the cars with the most refinements on them are the easiest to sell.

Now—Brake Lining Service Stations.

When it comes to relining brakes it takes an expert to do the job properly and motorists are rapidly finding it out. Emsco service stations have now been established where expert mechanics who know the brake-lining game from start to finish are on deck to give genuine satisfaction in fast time.

EDDIE PULLEN IN TWO-SPEED GAME.

Eddie Pullen, former star of the speed trail and erstwhile team-mate of his present employer, Glover Ruckstell, is now breaking records as a salesman. Pullen recently became identified with the local office of the Ruckstell Sales and Manufacturing Company, builders of the Perfecto two-speed axle for Ford cars and trucks, and the popular speed champion is doing so well that he says he will never again sit in the seat of a racing car.

It Never Happened Before!

In times of adjustment, when people consider carefully what they get for every dollar they spend, a product of merit, properly priced, like Henderson Giant Oversize Cord and Fabric Tires, made by the Henderson Tire and Rubber Co., of Columbus, Ohio, (fourteen years in the business), is entilted to the public's just consideration.

Instead of being saddled with heavy selling expense and fixed charges, as well as long-time contracts for high-priced material, as is the case with many manufacturers, this concern has been able to avail itself of present low prices for crude rubber and fabric. Crude rubber is now selling at 14 cents instead of 42 cents, while fabric has dropped off 75 per cent. These tremendous reductions mean a great saving to the consumer if the manufacturer knows how to build an honest product.

The Henderson Tire is establishing itself with thousands of motorists in California and Arizona, where it is giving dependable service. You cannot afford to buy tires without first inspecting this line at prices quoted below.

We positively know the quality of the Henderson Tire to be equal to any standard tire on the market and we unhesitatingly underwrite the factory guarantee, and as exclusive distributors we make all adjustments right here.

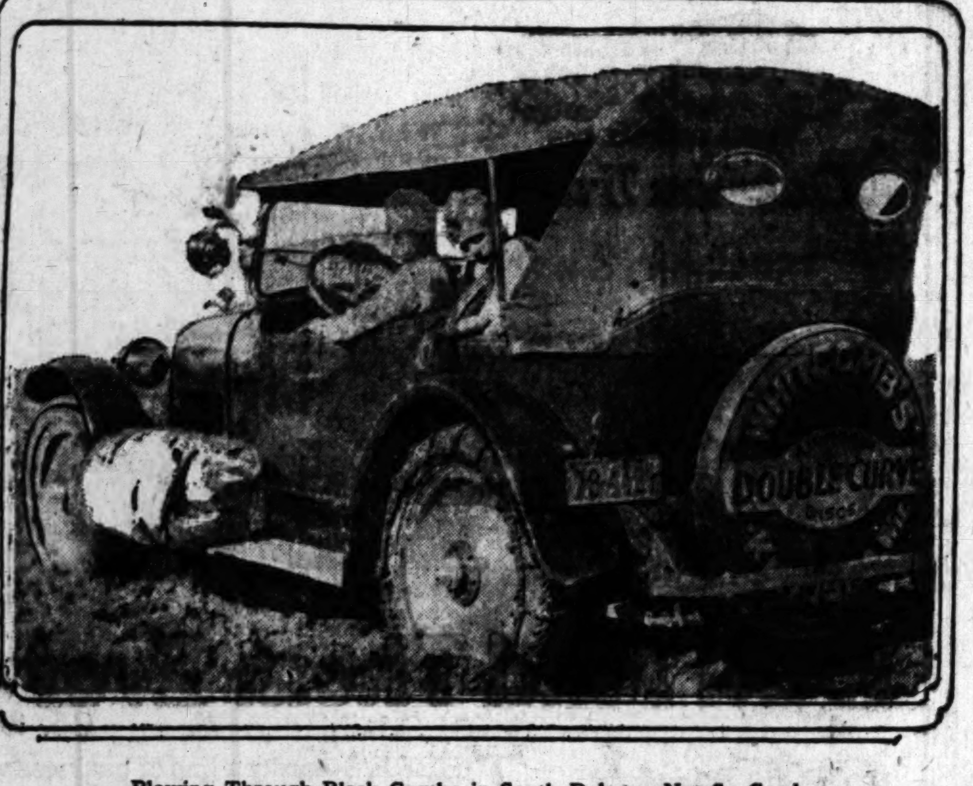
OLDSMOBILE



Plowing Through Black Gumbo in South Dakota—Not So Good.

Gail Vanden Braak and Mr. Litterer started out from the Nash factory last month in a Nash four-passenger sport model, bound for Los Angeles. They ran into everything from cloudbursts to terrific heat, but came through via Yellowstone in less than a month. The Nash was equipped with Whitcomb aluminum disc wheels, which are to be distributed on the Pacific Coast by Vanden Braak and Litterer, and, according to reports, the wheels gave wonderful satisfaction on the hard cross-country run.

ALUMINUM WHEEL TESTED.

A motor trip from Kenosha, Wis. to Los Angeles over the Yellowstone Trail was completed a few days ago when Gail Vanden Braak and R. R. Litterer rolled into Southern California with an accumulation of dust and mud on their Nash six sport model, but otherwise none the worse for the jaunt. The two men headed north from Kenosha, where Vanden Braak had been employed in the Nash factory for two years, and traveled through St. Paul, Minneapolis, Aberdeen, Miles City, Billings, Butte, Missoula, Coeur D'Alene, Spokane, Seattle and then down to the coast to Los Angeles.

JUST A MONTH.

They arrived here just a month after the start of the trip, but much of the time was spent in inspecting points of interest along the route. At Livingston, Mont., the Nash was pointed south and entered the Yellowstone Park through the Gardiner entrance, spending a week in the park and then leaving via the west Yellowstone exit. The total mileage was 4220, and much of it was over roads that would never get under the tape as boulevards.

Vanden Braak and Litterer had secured the Pacific Coast distribution of the Whitcomb aluminum disc wheel before leaving the East, and one reason for the long trip was to test this newest entrant into the automobile wheel world. The Nash was equipped with a set of the wheels and the drivers kept accurate tab on the performance all the way across.

"To secure any sort of comfort in a trip of this kind," said Mr. Vanden Braak, "careful selection of a car and equipment is absolutely necessary. The transcontinental highways are a long ways from being boulevards and the going is terribly rough a large part of the way. In South Dakota we found the Yellowstone Trail under construction for many miles, and to make matters worse, we ran into a cloudburst that sent us ploughing through black gumbo mud for two solid days. Often we were down to the axles in this mud."

Vanden Braak and Litterer have opened up headquarters at 1145 West Washington street, and will make Los Angeles the main distributing point for this new wheel for the Pacific Coast.

ufacturing genius have supplied for the convenience and comfort of the motorist. During the past few weeks we have been busy taking inventory in our store and out of curiosity I kept some check on the number of different articles, accessories and parts we carry. The different number which we handled was well over thousands.

"Of course, no motorist needs a thousand added accessories to make his car complete, yet there is a very distinct demand for every one of these articles, or else we would not be carrying them on our shelves. For their particular car and their particular needs, some motorists have found a real need for every one of hundreds of articles."

NATIONAL A VETERAN ON SPEEDWAYS.

Liberty Company Tells of Novel Design for This Type of Car.

Discussion of 1921 speedway campaigns always leads to comments on past records. And it is then that Fred Rutledge of the Rutledge Motor Company, local National Sextet distributors, calls to mind what he terms the "good old racing days." Rehearsing the speedway career of the National, he says:

"It was in November of 1905 that a National car made its maiden start in the realm of speed, one of the early fours being pitted against time in a twenty-four-hour race, held on the one-mile track of the Indiana State Fair Grounds. The world's stock repeated attacks of all challengers for the next four years.

"But the most notable of National victories was scored seven years later, in May, 1912, when Joe Dawson won the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Speedway. To do it he had to defeat Ralph De Palma and his Mercedes. And although the average of 78.72 miles per hour for the distance looks comparatively small, now, it was not equaled in the 1913 race, won by Jules Goux in his Peugeot. The National was the only American car to win a race of 250 miles or more in 1912.

"In the three years preceding National racing entries captured a total of 186 firsts, 114 seconds, and 79 thirds."

OWNERS' SERVICE DEPARTMENT.

Question: I understand that the taking up of a connecting rod bearing by removing a shim is not a good thing, but I have done this and find no trouble. Why do they say it is not advisable?

Answer: When a shim is removed the bearing is merely made tight without reference to its fit around the shaft. You cannot tell when fitting in this way whether the bearing is tight on one side or all around, hence you do not really fit the bearing, but merely make it tight. It also is difficult to determine just how tight the bearing fits with respect to the others. Making one bearing very tight and the others free may result in a knock and positively in damage to the crankshaft.

Q.: Have you ever heard of trouble in a vacuum tank caused by the float not operating because of a puncture? This happened to me on the road, but, of course, I did not discover it until I was towed to a garage. What might cause it?

A.: It is usually caused by vibration of the float and is not a common trouble. The engine stops altogether when this happens, because the vacuum tank cannot feed the carburetor. You could have driven home by filling the vacuum tank at intervals or by removing the tank cover and repairing the float.

Q.: What disposition should be made of the tires and tubes when the car is placed in dead storage?

A.: The tires should be removed and the tubes taken out. The latter should be inflated just enough to make them take their normal shape. Both tires and tubes should be cleaned, covered with cloth and placed in a dark room somewhere in the house.

Q.: I use a great deal of oil in both of my cars, and I have found that by changing it often I get a smoother engine and less repairs. What I would like to know is whether the oil I take out is worth filtering and using over again in the engine.

A.: You can use the old oil over again, but would advise that you mix it with fresh oil. Or you can use the old oil for lubricating other parts of the car. You will find that after allowing the drained oil to settle there will be quite a bit of sediment at the bottom which can be drawn off, making the filtering process easier.

RICHFIELD GASOLINE IS FIRST AT COTATI.

THREE WINNERS ROMP OVER TAPE USING THIS POWERFUL MIXTURE.

The prediction of C. M. Fuller, manager of the Richfield Oil Company, that the winner of last Sunday's race at Cotati, would be one of his "Knights of the Roaring Road," was more than fulfilled when Eddie Hearne came in first, closely followed by Roscoe Sarles and Tommy Milton, who took second and third places, respectively.

All three of the racers are strong rooters for Richfield gasoline and Richlube motor oils, and refuse to use any other brand in the gruelling test of an auto race.

When Hearne, using Richfield gasoline, won the coveted advantage of first position in the elimination trials, preparatory to the race run last Sunday, making the remarkable time of 110 miles an hour, Fuller declared his confidence that a Richfield user would also be the victor in the big race.

The New Price Sets It Apart From Competition

The Cleveland holds a distinctive place among light cars by the constant, better service it renders to its owners.

On city boulevards or country roads, the Cleveland performs as few cars perform. Its highly refined overhead-valve motor, found under the hood of no other car, is alive with power that smiles at long hills and welcomes a request for speed. Power, too, that throttles down to a creeping pace in crowded traffic and answers to the first touch of the throttle to "get away."

We would be glad to have you compare it with any car for ease of handling, comfort in riding on smooth roads and rough roads, and genuine excellence in its construction throughout.

Sturdily built, beautifully finished and splendidly upholstered bodies are mounted on the staunch Cleveland chassis.

The Most Beautiful Car in America.

More Than Par Value

At the new price of $1635 the five-passenger "Glenbrook" gives you gratifying evidence of how far your dollar can go today.

Here is a brand new product—not an old model carried over as a 1921 motor car. And it is a sound, practical investment because with the Paige first cost is last cost.

The "Glenbrook" is endowed with the thrift idea. It has respect for your pocket book when it comes to gasoline, tire mileage and repair bills. And as for performance—

Imagine a motor that accelerates from five to twenty-five miles an hour in nine seconds flat! Then you will have a new vision of what to expect when you sit behind the wheel of the "Glenbrook" and accept any challenge of the road.

CALIFORNIA IS PLACE FOR HIM.

Decides Southland Superior to Missouri.

F. A. Helsley Glad to Return After Trip East.

Has Unique Experiences on Overland Tour.

Southern California's charms are irresistable, according to F. A. Helsley, formerly of Pomona, who has just returned from Missouri.

Last winter Helsley and his family motored to Missouri with the intention of engaging in business there, but the marked contrast in business condition of the Middle West and Southern California and the disagreeable weather when compared with Southern California sunshine induced them to return to a country where they could live enjoyably and at times make a living with less trouble.

CUTTING ACROSS.

On the trip to Missouri from Pomona, Helsley drove along the southern border for a good part of the way, but after reaching Roswell, N. M., on the Southern National Highway, he began to cut across country to Wichita, Kan. This forced him to travel over hundreds of miles of poor roads, which were not signed, but gave him a more direct route.

He was able to make the 2100 miles to Windsor, Mo. in fourteen days, which required steady driving during daylight hours. The party carried a camp outfit and took things leisurely at that.

Upon deciding that Southern California was far superior to any other spot on earth, they once more packed the camp outfit on the Studebaker light six and started home. In the meantime Howard Helsley, a son, had joined the party and he did the major part of the driving on the return trip. Helsley senior is 64 years young, but that did not deter him from attempting the trip East after two weeks of experience behind the wheel of a motor car.

HEAVY STORMS.

The Santa Fe Trail was followed on the trip west, but in New Mexico the heaviest storms for years past, forced them to travel through axle-deep mud for four days. At one time the water was three inches above the base of the radiator and completely submerged the starting motor. This did not stop the car from pulling through under its own power, but did use up a great deal more fuel for while the eastern journey had been made with an average of 17.2 miles to the gallon the heavy mud coming west pulled the average down to 15.9 miles per gallon. Oil consumption was quite low as the motor required but one gallon per 1000 miles.

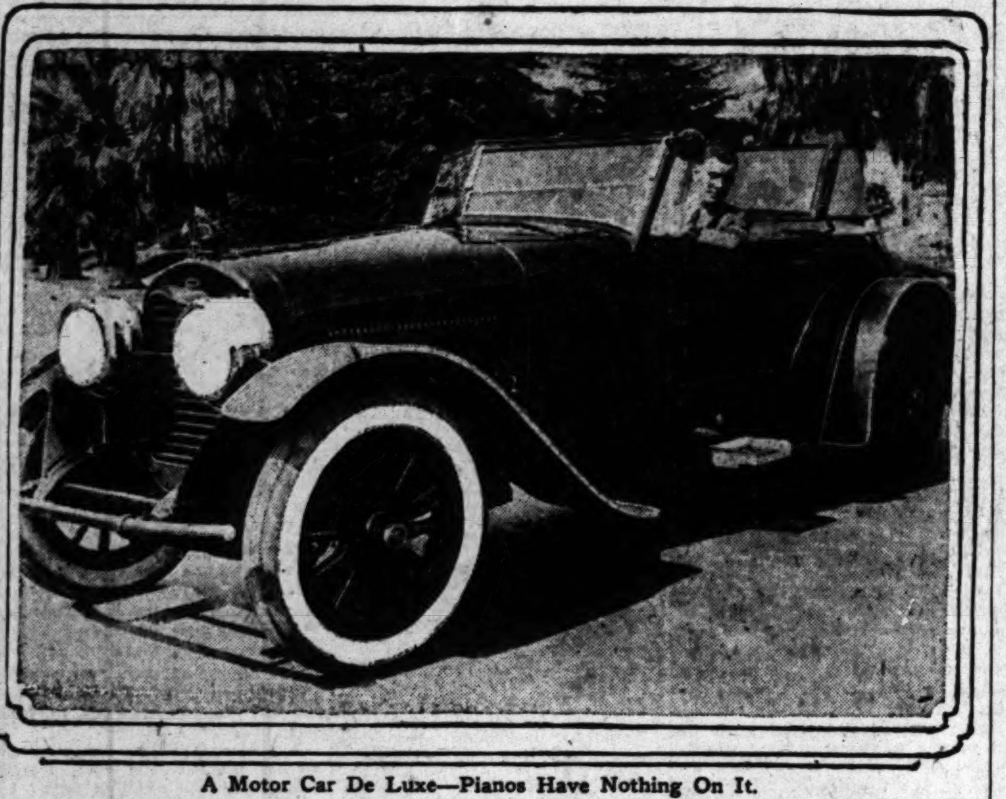
With the exception of a few punctures and one stone bruise that required the replacement of one of the Goodyear tires no serious trouble with tires was experienced. On the return to Los Angeles the tires were all in good shape after 10,000 miles of hard travel.

Helsley, Jr., called on Paul G. Hoffman Company soon after he arrived, hoping to be able to get the Studebaker account in some Southern California territory, as he was so greatly enthused over Studebaker performance that he felt that after his experience it ought to be easy to convince other motorists of the desirability of Studebaker six performance.

RECEIVE A SHIPMENT OF SHOCK ABSORBERS.

Walter T. Clarke, branch manager of the Hassler Pacific Company of this city, announces the arrival of another carload of the popular Hassler shock absorbers for the Dodge Brothers motor car. He also says that with the addition being built to the Robert H. Hassler factory at Indianapolis, Ind., they will be able to take care of the several hundred back orders in the near future.

The Hassler shock absorber for the Dodge Brothers motor car has proven far more popular than the wildest dreams of any of the distributors or the factory. However, the factory has now almost doubled in size, and is running night and day.



A Motor Car De Luxe—Pianos Have Nothing On It.

The Murphy Foursome, a product of the Walter M. Murphy Company, coach builders of Pasadena. Walter L. Elbe, well known to Southern California motordom and who has just been named manager of sales for the Pasadena concern, is at the wheel of the high-powered Lincoln creation.

MOTORISTS WANT WORK DONE RIGHT.

THAT'S WHY TIRE REPAIRING IS GETTING TO BE QUITE A FINE ART.

To take a chance on haphazard tire-repair work is no longer in vogue. The motorist is insisting that this work be done only by competent men possessing certificates of training. This has meant an elimination of the unfit and an improvement throughout the country in the average standard of repair and vulcanizing work.

Tire repairing is now an essential part of the automotive industry. It is continuing to increase in importance with the greater use of the passenger car and truck. On an average, there is $35 worth of tire-repair work per car per year. On this basis, and figuring 9,000,000 cars in the United States, the repair and vulcanizing industry amounts to almost a third of a billion dollars annually.

Prominent among the schools that are leaders in this movement for technically trained repairmen is the Miller tire-repair school. Here the men are taught not only to be able to tell the trouble on inspection, but to be able to put the tire in first-class condition. They are advised to be perfectly frank with the customer and not to repair the tire that cannot give full service to justify the cost of the work.

ROAD REPAIRS HAVE NO TERRORS TODAY.

EASY ENOUGH TO PATCH A TIRE IF YOU HAVE THE RIGHT STUFF HANDY.

Making a tire repair on the road has become a very simple operation in recent years. Such repairs have to be made only at rare intervals nowadays, because tires are so much better that they seldom break down, and roads are so much better that the danger of punctures and blowouts is greatly diminished.

The development of materials which make the repairing operation a very simple matter has eliminated most of the discomfort of making an emergency repair on the road, and the number of these materials has been reduced to such an extent that about all a motorist need carry in his tool box for tire troubles is a cold patch kit for inner-tube repairs, some blow-out patches for repairs to casings, some tire tape and a heal-a-cut outfit for filling up bad cuts in the surface of the casing.

With a cold-patch kit, says a bulletin of the United States Tire Company, an inner tube can be permanently repaired in a few minutes without the application of heat.

SOUTH LEADS IN DESIGNS.

Southern California has come to be recognized throughout the United States as a place of considerable importance in the automotive industry. In this section, during the past few years, there have been more improvements in motor car design than elsewhere in the country. Southern California inventors and designers have startled the world with their "California tops" and Southern California-built custom jobs have proven the sensation at every automobile show at which they have been exhibited since the beginning.

Seldom, however, has any firm leaped into such favorable prominence in so short a period as the Walter M. Murphy Company. Starting out last fall, and with the Los Angeles automobile show in December their first chance to exhibit their products before the public, the Murphy custom built jobs became an immediate sensation. "Far ahead of the best the New York and Chicago shows have ever had to offer," was the universal comment on their local exhibit, and the Murphy booth was crowded from the time the show doors opened until they closed late at night.

In line with the Murphy policy of maintaining a staff of experts on coach work, Mr. Murphy has just put over a ten strike in securing Mr. Walter L. Elbe as manager of sales for his coach plant. Mr. Elbe is too well known locally as a leader in the creation of custom built bodies for motor cars to require any extensive comment.

CYLINDER GRINDING OFTEN CURES MOTOR.

COMMON WORRIES FREQUENTLY REMEDIED BY THIS ROUTE.

That nine-tenths of the motor troubles commonly experienced by the average automobile owner are due to worn or scored cylinders is the contention of the cylinder grinders of Los Angeles and it seems to be borne out by the testimony of hundreds of motor car owners who have recently had their cylinders reground, as advised, and who report that their cars seem imbued with new life, pep and efficiency.

The cylinder grinders explain that a reground cylinder is not "just as good as new" but "better than a new cylinder" for the reason that the iron is thoroughly seasoned by use and, regrinding having restored the accuracy and trueness of the bore and the smoothness of the surface, it will not again readily become scored or out of round through usage.

In their campaign to educate Los Angeles motor car owners that regrinding means adding thousands of miles to the life of the car, the cylinder grinders have stressed the futility of trying to get satisfaction out of a worn or scored cylinder by refitting pistons or piston rings. Nothing but an expert re-grinding, it is argued, can cure the trouble and restore that "joy forever" to the motorist.

GOOD ROADS GREAT BOOST TO MILEAGE.

FOUND THAT GAS GOES MUCH FURTHER ON CONCRETE HIGHWAYS.

"The most important single factor toward the greater expansion of the motor truck industry is the building of new trunk-line roads, as well as the resurfacing and maintaining of the existing portions of the systems which are already laid out," according to L. P. Poyer of the Transport Truck distributors.

"We have just learned of a test that was made recently to determine the saving of gasoline from running a motor truck over a good road. It was mighty interesting news and will probably be to most owners of motor trucks.

"Five new Army standard 'A' trucks were used for the trial. They were sent over seven different types of road surfaces on practically level ground.

"The test results showed an average of 6.78 miles per gallon over a dirt road in good condition; 7.19 over fair gravel; 9.39 over good gravel, about the same over bituminous macadam and good brick roads; 11.44 over extra smooth brick, and 11.78 over good concrete.

Here is a gain of over six miles per gallon between the best and the worst types of roads with unloaded trucks. The trucks showed that the poor road took seven times as much gasoline per mile as the good one."

PIERCE-ARROW CUTS CAR-TRUCK PRICES.

A substantial reduction in the prices of its touring car models effective after September 1, and a reduction on the prices of its truck models, effective immediately has been announced by George W. Mixter, president of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Company.

The new price of the standard seven-passenger touring car is $6500 at the factory, the inclosed car prices being graded proportionately.

The new prices of its truck models are: $4850 for the five-ton size; $4350 for the 3½-ton and $3200 for the 2-ton.

COMMUTATOR TROUBLE.

Grease should not be used for the lubrication of the commutator. Cylinder oil is the proper lubricant and it should [illegible] sparingly used. This applies to all commutators or ignition distributers. When grease is [illegible] the commutator it is quite likely to prevent [illegible] distributed arm from making contact and [illegible] annoying type of ignition trouble ensues.

MARMON SERVICE IS BETTER THAN EVER.

AND IT LOOKS LIKE SALES OF THE CAR WOULD BE MUCH THE SAME.

Al G. Faulkner, distributor for the Marmon 34's, recently reduced from $5500 to $4485, reports a tremendously stimulated inquiry indicating that this fall's sales of Marmons will establish a new record.

Some new territory is being opened by Faulkner through dealers and additions have been made to the Marmon service which are expected still further to popularize this aristocratic car and its distributors. Special service representatives now call on Marmon owners to advise them about how to secure the greatest degree of efficiency and satisfaction out of their cars. This is styled the service of helpfulness.

The closed models of 1922 Marmon 34's are expected within a few days and will be immediately placed on exhibition at the Al G. Faulkner Company's establishment at 1635 South Figueroa street. All the 1922 models in open cars are now on display.

KEEP AN EAR OPEN FOR NOISY GEARS.

THEY ARE UNPLEASANT AND OFTEN MEAN AN INCREASING EXPENSE.

"Gear noises are objectionable for two reasons—they are not very pleasant and they indicate abnormal operation of the gears, which may quickly lead to expensive trouble," says C. C. Colyear of the Colyear Motor Sales Company, distributors of genuine standard units and parts.

"Transmission or axle gears, though mounted in a housing, even when in good condition will emit a slight hum, for it is almost impossible to operate two enmeshed gears without there being some slight noise. The noises that gears make when they are not operating properly are at once detected by the driver of the car because there is a severe sress in the sound, a loud howl or some noise that is quite different from that given off by two properly fitted gears.

"When timing gears become noisy one cannot come upon the cause of the trouble without examining the gears. They are noisy, the driver says, and the only way really to find out why is to take off the timing case cover, look at the gears, feel for back lash and end play, and then either put in a whole set or a non-metal gear."

CHASSIS DISPLAY IMPRESSES BUYERS.

FRANKLIN EXHIBIT DEMONSTRATES PRINCIPLE OF THE AIR-COOLED MOTOR.

For several months Ralph Hamlin has kept a Franklin chassis on display in his showrooms, and the attention it has received from passing motorists has been very flattering. It has served as a silent exponent of the principle of air-cooling, and many a caller has gone away with a corrected impression of the method and efficiency of this type of motor cooling.

Chassis displays have long been considered an educational feature for the motoring public, and the Franklin exhibit has aroused more than ordinary interest because of the unique design and principles involved. Its simplicity is marked, and J. T. Stuart, Hamlin's sales manager, states that a majority of callers are greatly surprised at the serviceable arrangement.

Speaking of the various features, Stuart said: "Of course, air-cooling and the wood frame receive the most attention, but one of the little things that attracts attention is the transmission brake, seemingly very small for its work, but so efficient that the pressure of only one finger is sufficient to stop the car on a very noticeable grade."

"MOORE" TRANSMISSION

Gives to All
FORD CARS AND TRUCKS
4 Forward and 2 Reverse Speeds

The "MOORE" Underdrive transmission will double the power of your Ford passenger car or ton truck and give it

AN INTERMEDIATE SPEED
AN Emergency Low
An Emergency Reverse

The "MOORE" Overdrive Transmission will increase the road speed of the Ford Ton Truck 40% and the Passenger Car 20% without increasing the speed of the motor. It saves the motor.

With a "MOORE" Transmission on your Ford you can make speed; changes easily at the will of the driver at any time (the gears are always in mesh and will not strip.)

Before you equip your Ford with a four-speed device, investigate the "MOORE" Transmission. Its record is 4 years of successful service. It is not an experiment. Ask the man who owns one.

The "MOORE" Transmission gives satisfaction. The "MOORE" is the transmission YOU WILL ULTIMATELY BUY.

Rear Axle Showing Worm Drive

We are prepared to furnish special truck worms and gears of 5 1-6 to 1 ratio which will increase the ordinary driving speed of the Ford One-Ton Truck from five to seven miles per hour, without increasing the speed of the motor. These gears will be supplied by us at standard Ford prices.

THERE'S hardly a line of business activity where the Ford One-Ton Truck is not a real necessity—where you will not find one or more of them in daily operation.

And, in all the years that the Ford One-Ton Truck has been in service, the motor and rear axle—the vital fundamentals in a truck—have kept pace with Ford reputation for dependability, efficiency and economy.

We therefore have the right to conclude that the Ford One-Ton Truck is not only meeting all of the requirements of business, but that it is doing so in the most economical and satisfactory way.

Come in and let's have a little talk on trucks.

Satisfactory terms can be arranged.

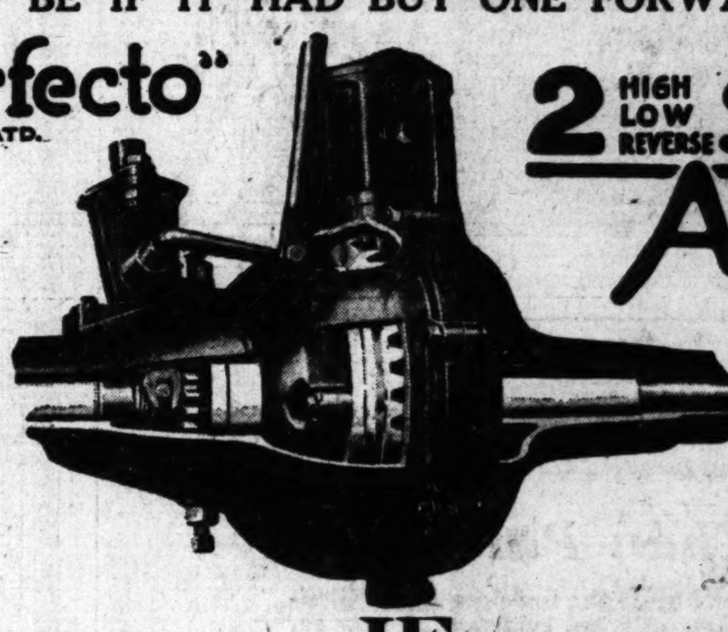
HAS IT EVER OCCURRED TO YOU HOW YOUR FORD WOULD BE IF IT HAD BUT ONE FORWARD SPEED?

"Perfecto"
PATD.

2 HIGH LOW REVERSE SPEED AXLE



IF

You had only LOW, you would not be able to go very fast and your engine would not last very long. Your gasoline and oil consumption would be prohibitive.

IF

You had only HIGH, you would experience great difficulty in starting and your FORD would be practically worthless to you in hilly country.

IF

TWO SPEEDS ARE ABSOLUTELY ESSENTIAL

—imagine your FORD with four speeds—a HIGH for level roads, a LOW-HIGH for quick getaway in traffic and acceleration on hills, a LOW for starting and for hills and a LOW-LOW for starting on steep hills, pulling through sand or mud and climbing any hill upon which the rear wheels of your FORD can find traction.

WHY DO THE BUILDERS OF HIGH-PRICED MOTOR CARS LAY PARTICULAR STRESS UPON THE FACT WHEN THEY HAVE FOUR FORWARD SPEEDS?

THERE'S A REASON

YOUR FORD HAS EVERYTHING ELSE THAT ANY HIGH-PRICED CAR CAN CLAIM EXCEPT SPEEDS

THE PERFECTO TWO-SPEED AXLE GIVES YOU FOUR SPEEDS FORWARD AND TWO IN REVERSE

The additional speeds and power increase given by the PERFECTO TWO-SPEED AXLE do not overload the drive-shaft, pinion or ring gear.

This additional power may be used without fear of stripping gears or breaking axle parts.

"I have driven this 'Jack Rabbit' now over 16,000 miles," Fortier stated, and it has traveled that far for me without a cent of outlay for repairs. The original tires are on the front at the present time, and from all appearances will go just as far as they have already traveled.

"It may be of interest to you to know that the other day one of my friends, realizing that I had been making considerable money during the past year, asked me what automobile I was going to buy now that I was in flourishing condition. But now I can say to you, after using this car for 16,000 miles, it looks to me like the best a man can buy, no matter what his income may be. So you can figure upon me for an Apperson some time in the early future."

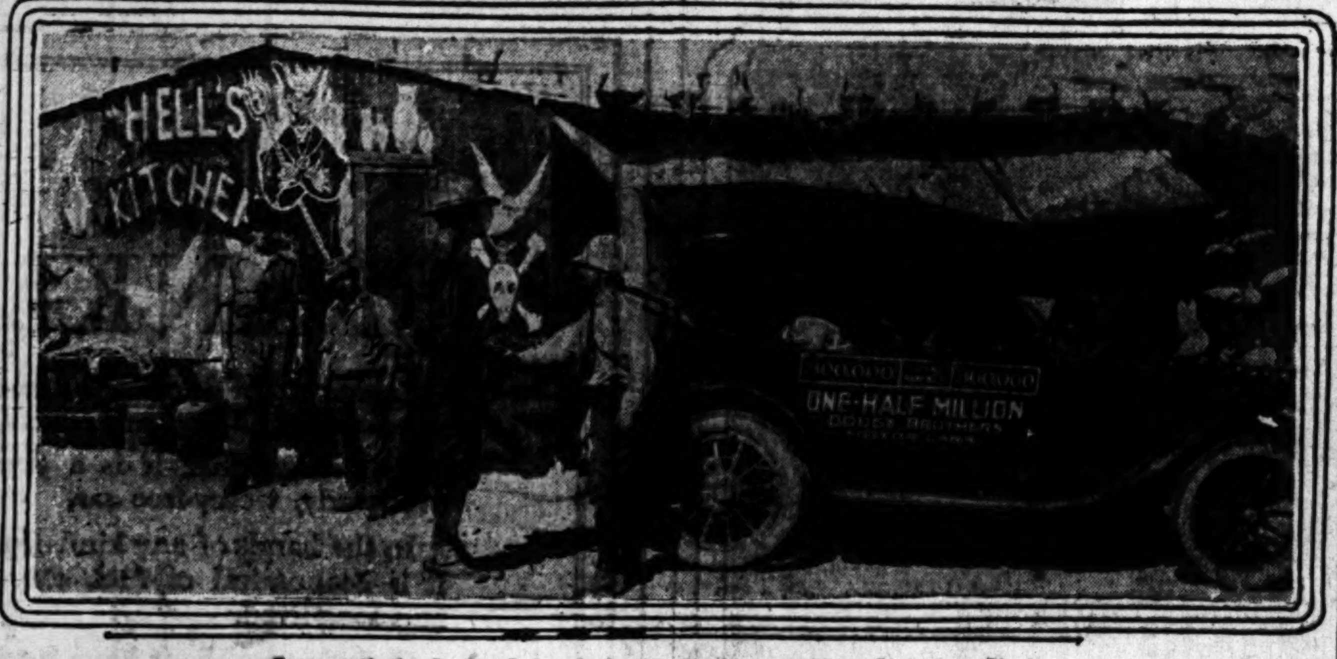
DISTRIBUTORS NEED CAREFUL ATTENTION.

SPARK LEAK IN HIGH-TENSION WIRES IS SURE TO CAUSE TROUBLE.

"Keep careful watch on your distributor," advises J. W. Gaffney of the Gaffney Motor Sales Company, Southern California distributors of the DuPont Four. He added, "In case of a leak in the high-tension wires a spark will jump and you can see it. But the spark may be jumping inside and you may not know anything about it. So remove the cover occasionally and wipe out the dust. By this means trouble is avoided long before it can occur.

"Starting and electric lighting systems require efficient batteries. For this reason the battery should receive careful attention. It should be inspected frequently and the plates of the cells kept covered with electrolyte. A little distilled water added at frequent intervals may obviate the necessity of a new battery.

"If your car is equipped with the battery ignition system always remember that distributor points need cleaning frequently. Carefully follow the maker's instruction and you will enjoy a smooth-running engine."



Comparatively Cool! Only 120 in the Shade—and There Isn't Any Shade.

If you should ever get a little bit too warm and begin complaining, just take a slant at this Dodge Bros. scout car, "old 300,000," down in the backyard of "Hell's Kitchen," one of the torrid spots in the Salton Sea. The Dodge made the trip recently and had an interesting climb to the top of Mullet Island with the thermometers and motometers spouting red ink all over the place like geysers.

VISITS HELL'S KITCHEN.

Advance information is always more or less welcome, but when the famous Dodge Brothers scout car "Old 300,000" returned from its recent trip and reported that the temperature was only 120 degrees in "Hell's Kitchen," it seemed a trifle too good to be true. But it is a fact for that was what the Dodge Brothers party reported to Fred S. Albertson of the Albertson Motor Company, Dodge Brothers dealers for Los Angeles and vicinity, after an extended tour of the Imperial Valley, and especially of Mullet Island in the Salton Sea, where "Hell's Kitchen" is situated.

Sitting blithely on top of an extinct, but still lukewarm volcano, and with the blistering sun providing realistic atmosphere, "Hell's Kitchen" is, strange to say, quite a delightful place to visit, for it is the home of Capt. Charles E. Davis, mullet fisherman and salt miner, who welcomed the Dodge Brothers party with open arms. Mullet Island, which is really no longer an island for the receding waters of the Salton Sea have uncovered a small strip of land which connects it with the mainland, is over 200 feet below the level of the sea. It is of volcanic origin, the marks of some great volcanic upheaval still being noticeable on the piles of jagged rocks, which are plentifully sprinkled over the whole island.

"Old 300,000", under its own power, climbed over these boulders and rocks to the top of this island, a spot where no wheeled vehicle of any description had ever been before. At the top is a boulder upon which has been marked, "This spot is 189 feet below the level of the sea." Despite the huge blocks of stone, "Old 300,000" made the climb with apparently no effort, or as one of the party told Mr. Albertson, "We just put her in low and she ground her way to the top."

Capt. Charles E. Davis, virtual ruler of Mullet Island, and inhabitant of "Hell's Kitchen," as he has humorously, but aptly termed his home, is a very interesting character. Tall, rangy and brown, almost to mahogany, he represents the spirit of the Imperial Valley. He catches for the market great quantities of mullet, which abound in the Salton Sea, and does a little salt mining on the side. Capt. Davis was frank in his praise of "Old 300,000" for negotiating, with so little difficulty, the rocky slopes of his island domain.

TROUBLE? NEVER HEARD THE WORD.

OLDSMOBILE DRIVER ASSERTS HE IS PERFECTLY SATISFIED.

Forty thousand miles with perfect satisfaction. This is a pretty good record for any type of a car, yet Thomas H. Watts, Sr., according to advices received at the J. W. Leavitt headquarters, Oldsmobile distributor here, has driven his pacemaker model Oldsmobile this long distance without meeting any of the troubles that assail many private motorcar owners.

In explaining the success he has experienced with his car, Watts states that it is due to two things. The first of these is the fact that he has a good car. The second is that he has taken good care of it.

According to the story, Watts purchased his car in May, 1917. Since then he has driven it from Maine to Texas, Florida to the Dakotas, and from Tijuana to Vancouver, and, in fact, there are very few places in the country he hasn't visited. In all this time the Oldsmobile has been in the repair shop but once, and then for a few minor adjustments. The owner states that the feeling of assurance of freedom from mechanical annoyances has added considerably to the pleasure of his long treks.

WHEEL INSPECTION.

One of the most frequent causes of excessive tire wear is faulty alignment of the front wheels, which causes them to scrape the tire along the road surface at each revolution. Whenever excessive tire wear develops the wheels should be inspected for misalignment, and if the car owner is not familiar with the method used in aligning he should have the service station do the job. The charge for aligning the wheels varies, but $2 is about the average, and this usually includes a complete inspection and adjustment of the steering mechanism from the post forward. Front wheels are always cambered and gathered; that is, they "toe in" in front, making the distance from wheel to wheel in front less than that in the rear. At the same time the distance between the points of contact with the road is less than the distance between opposite points. These distances vary with different makes of cars, but usually the gather equals 3 per cent of the tire diameter. Thus, with a thirty-four inch tire the wheel will be gathered about an inch. However, the car owner who proposes aligning his wheels should get the exact figure from the manufacturer or from the service station.

ENDURANCE IS TEST OF POPULARITY

Car That Can "Stand the Gaff" is Certain to be Strong Favorite.

Any motor car's endurance record is always a live subject for conversation. Endurance is one of the big factors explaining a car's popularity with the buying public and, in the words of the sport world, the car that "can stand the gaff" is certain to become a strong favorite.

According to George Pearson, manager of sales for the Union Motors Company, Maxwell distributors here, the numerous achievements of the good Maxwell are piling up in pleasing fashion. Here is another endurance record set by the Maxwell in West Virginia, where the mountains serve as a real test for a car's qualities.

With the low and intermediate gears removed, according to Pearson, and carrying three passengers, a Maxwell stock car traveled 565 miles over mountains and through muddy valleys without trouble of any kind. The famous Turtle Creek hill, just out of Pittsburg, the Summit Mountain at Uniontown and the Laurel Mountains at Elkins were included in the trip. L. T. Cordray, Maxwell distributer at Fairmont, personally supervised the trip, driving the car himself most of the time.

"Rainy weather has made the roads very bad," writes Cordray, "but the good Maxwell went through without trouble of any kind, covering the entire 565 miles on thirty-one and one-half gallons of gasoline, an average of eighteen miles to the gallon."

COLUMBIA OFFERS BRAND-NEW CARS.

NOT OLD MOTORS AT REDUCED PRICE, BUT ORIGINAL MODELS.

The Columbia Motors Company is out with the announcement of its 1922 line with prices effective August 15, according to the J. V. Baldwin Motor Company.

In making this announcement, it is stated by Mr. J. V. Baldwin that the Columbia factory is offering a new line of cars made up of new parts, and is not presenting old cars at reduced prices. Manufacturers of the Columbia Six believe that the public is wearied of price-cutting on old cars therefore offer entirely new models at entirely new prices.

The sensation of the new models is the special touring car, which is thoroughly up to the minute in every respect. This beautiful car has long body lines, deep-drawn crown fenders, and much attention is given to the details of finish. This car is the lowest priced car in America to use the famous 7-R Continental motor, and to include as standard equipment cord tires, motometer, cowl ventilator, and Flometer.

According to Mr. Baldwin, using the Flometer as a gauge, the Columbia factory has set a new standard for perfection in testing cars after assembly. Every Columbia Six is road-tested, and a careful check made of mileage being obtained, from Flometer readings.

E. E. Caister,

Well-known in California automotive circles and whose affiliation with the Standard eight distributors has just been announced.

CAISTER NOW WITH STANDARD "EIGHT."

WELL - KNOWN MOTOR - CAR EXECUTIVE ACCEPTS NEW BERTH.

One of the most important events on the local "Row" and of great interest to the thousands of friends made by E. E. Caister during more than a decade as a sales executive dealing in higher priced cars, was the announcement made during the week by Glenn R. Keith of the Standard eight that Mr. Caister would, in future, be associated with him in the Standard Steel Automotive Corporation as director of sales.

Mr. Caister is one of the best known automobile executives in Southern California, and is recognized throughout the Coast States as an expert in building sales and service organizations and directing out-of-town merchandising through dealer connections. Five years each with two of the largest distributing firms in the West, in at least one of which his individual efforts were largely instrumental in its upbuilding, has given him an unusually large circle of friends who "bank" on his judgment in motor cars and know his word is as good as his bond.

With the advent of Mr. Caister the Standard Steel Automotive Corporation promises to become a large factor in local automotive circles. Mr. Keith, through his close connection with the Standard Steel Car Company, the $80,000,000 firm which builds the Standard eight, expects very shortly to assume new duties here for the eastern factory and a large portion of the work connected with the reorganization of the Standard eight distributing and service organization will fall to Mr. Caister.

USE THE MOTOR WHEN COASTING.

Detrimental to Throw Out Clutch on Hills.

Compression Holds Car Under Proper Control.

French Serve Jail Term for Such a Practice.

It is stated that a large percentage of motorists make a practice of throwing out the clutch when coasting down hill. The reason they give is that "it saves the motor, clutch and transmission." In this they are in error, according to "Doc" Green, manager of the southern district of the Walter M. Murphy Motors Company, Lincoln distributor, for such practice is not only dangerous but is detrimental to those very parts which the motorist would save.

"In some States," says Green, "a driver caught going down hill with his clutch released is severely dealt with. Over in France, during the war, it is stated, a driver caught doing this was given a term in the guardhouse. There is little excuse, so far as I am able to see, for such practice.

"Naturally, when approaching a decline, the vehicle is slowed up so that the motor is turning over very slowly. On releasing the clutch the car is no longer held back by the compression of the motor and gains speed at every revolution of the wheels. Very often, if the hill is long, the speed attained alarms the driver, who then applies his brakes. A brake which under ordinary conditions would be sufficient to stand the car on end, or throw the driver through the windshield, will fail to hold very often when jammed on at high speed on a down grade. It often happens that if the road is rough the wheels will lock and skid around, perhaps throwing the car over a bank.

"There is no better brake for mountain or any other grades than the compression of the cylinders."

STEPHENS BRANCH HAS NEW QUARTERS.

Spurred on by a demand for still greater service and determined to keep pace with its rapidly expanding business, the Stephens Tire Stores Company will move from its location on Grand avenue to new and more commodious quarters at 414 West Pico about September 1, according to an announcement made yesterday by Gordon Williams, California manager of the local factory branch.

Facilities for taking care of customers will be far superior in the new location, it is claimed. Where now tire changes for buyers of Stephens products have to be made in the street, they can then be made in a specially equipped service room, where tire gauges and tools and free air will be easily accessible to the motorist.

Urgent Need for Better Roads to Harbor Says Lord

One of the most urgent needs for the immediate development of the business activities of Los Angeles is a new touring boulevard from the city to the harbor, with extensive reconstruction or repairs on the present highway, according to Harry Lord of the Lord Motor Car Company, distributors of the Velie Six.

Lord believes there should be two separate and distinct boulevards to the harbor, one to be used exclusively for touring and light delivery traffic, the other to be specially constructed, with possibly the new method of steel reinforcement, and this boulevard to be used only for heavy trucking.

"The closer in point of time Los Angeles can be to its harbor, the better for the business activities of the city, and anyone who will drive to San Pedro or to Wilmington on any weekday cannot fail to observe how the present inadequate boulevard is slowing up traffic between the city and the sea, and causing serious delay of every vehicle, whether truck or touring car, that passes over it," said Lord yesterday.

"The man driving a car along the road now must frequently travel two or more miles before he can find a 'hole' in the traffic large enough to enable him to pass the big trains of trucks and their trailers that are always traveling back and forth to and from the ships docked at the harbor.

"Touring traffic slows up the trucking traffic, and the trucking traffic constitutes an added danger to and seriously hampers all touring traffic. Moreover, the heavy trucking that must be done should all pass over a boulevard especially constructed, with the greatest possible strength to withstand such traffic. The harbor is a place of bustling activity, and the traffic arteries leading to it should be freed from the present sluggish condition."

LIGHTNESS OF CAR IS UNAPPRECIATED.

The motoring public often has a misconception of the importance of light weight in the construction of a motor car and fails to appreciate the ultimate value of this feature by relation to economical operation. This is the theory advanced by J. C. McGill of the McGill Motor Company, local distributors for the Gardner automobile. He says:

"Where the latest and most improved methods of automobile chassis and body construction are employed, the result has been not only operation with less gasoline consumption, but increased tire mileage as well. Everyone realizes that a light-weight car requires less power to propel it a mile than a car made of heavier materials. But the corresponding difference in wear on tires is often lost sight of.

"Also, contrary to the evident opinion of some motorists, light weight construction does not necessarily mean a sacrifice of sturdiness. In the Gardner car, for instance, this danger has been averted, in the body construction particularly, by the reinforced frame underneath."

Announced as New Haynes Distributor

THROUGH an official announcement of The Haynes Automobile Company, Kokomo, Indiana, Lynn C. Buxton becomes distributor for Haynes character cars in Los Angeles and the adjacent territory. Lynn C. Buxton will maintain his salesrooms at 1160 S. Figueroa St.

The acquisition of the selling rights for the popular and desirable Haynes character cars is considered a significant business triumph for Lynn C. Buxton, as well as a tribute to the inventors, designers and builders of America's first mechanically successful automobile.

Haynes patrons in Los Angeles and throughout the surrounding territory who have already placed their approval on these high-grade cars of character, will more keenly appreciate and value the commodious new headquarters of the Haynes.

Lynn C. Buxton, through the company officials, extends to all owners, users and lovers of fine motor cars, a cordial and hospitable invitation to visit his salesrooms and to familiarize themselves with the perfected mechanism of the famous Haynes light sixes.

In their 1922 presentation, these character cars stand forth as an engineering achievement that has been made possible only by an unparalleled record of twenty-eight years of successful automobile manufacturing.

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 20.—Down where the languid senoritas roll their Castilian eyes and where hot tamale music accompanied by the drumming of popping corks may be heard in the Espanola cabarets—that is where the auto men of Southern California will foregather August 27 and 28.

BLOOMED FORTH.

For Tijuana, much discussed "exotic Mexican village" has once more flowered forth as a blooming Monte Carlo and the San Diego Automobile Trade Association has decided to stage its annual high jinks there. Opportunities for "sending a postcard home from a foreign land" will be offered, as well as other unusual attractions and the auto men assert that this year's celebration will be some party!

Invitations were mailed this week by the high jinks committee of the association to every member of the trade associations of Los Angeles, Santa Ana, Imperial Valley, Pasadena and Glendale. Inclosed in these invitations were free tickets good for the smoker on the night of August 27 and also for the barbecue at Tijuana on Sunday, August 28.

ADDED ATTRACTIONS.

The fact that next Saturday and Sunday will be such big days in the transborder town has caused the officials of Tijuana to plan many added attractions to augment the festivities being arranged by the auto men. It is anticipated there will be bull fights, boxing matches and other gala doings.

U. S. Grant, president of the trade association; B. B. Bates, secretary; Hal H. Hobson, local manager of the Auto Club of Southern California branch, and Howard Smith of the Owl Taxi Company are active in plans for the fiesta.

Headquarters for the delegates have been arranged for in the U. S. Grant Hotel and there will be information given both at the Owl Taxi headquarters in the hotel and at the Auto Club branch.

NOT REQUIRED.

In issuing invitations for their high jinks, the committee is making it plain that no passports are required to cross the border, that the new concrete highway to Tijuana is now completed and that all the amusements temporarily under a ban have been restored to operation and will be whirring full speed for this six-cylinder fiesta.

IT'S A DIFFERENT STORY NOW, MATES.

MOTOR CAR PROSPECTS WANT TO SEE EXACTLY WHAT THEY ARE BUYING.

Buying an automobile is no longer in the class with ordering a loaf of bread from the grocer, according to Walter M. Brown of Stutz fame. It has developed into a science in which the purchasers show great aptitude.

"Time was," says Brown, "when all we had to do to sell cars was to sit back and choose our customers, and I'm speaking for the whole motor car fraternity, when I say it. But 1921 and a half sees the buyer a very much pampered individual who is wined and dined in order to get his fountain pen to flow a little blue streak on the order blank.

"This condition is a nightmare to many motor car men. It sounds the death knell of the mushroom car, but it is a stimulus to the dealer who handles the car of standard make.

"The public buys on comparison now and a car has to have the stuff in it to pass muster with the buyer. car, the length of time the car has been on the market, the attitude of the dealer towards service and the resale value of his selection. When a car checks up in all these requirements he buys."

DEALER STANDS BY KIPLING'S THEORY.

DECLARES "FEMALE OF THE SPECIES" IS A WHIZ AS SALES MANAGER.

Kipling is right, "the female of the species" can more than hold her own. This is the day of woman's championship. Harold L. Arnold is proud of one "faire ladye" in his Hudson and Essex dealer organization.

"Talk about a keen one," said Mr. Arnold. "Mrs. H. F. Haldeman of Pomona is that. As a sales manager in the motor-car business conducted by her husband hats are off to this young business woman. For Mrs. Haldeman has demonstrated that she can hold the job with credit to herself and her 'live-wire' hubby.

"Mr. Haldeman was star salesman in my retail sales force in Los Angeles. Setting his mark as a leader in Hudson and Essex sales gave me the inkling that he would be a leader in dealer territory. Pomona was his chance. Now I am glad to see him a successful dealer.

"Every young man in every organization has a similar chance. Make good and the manager of the business will have an eye open for that man higher up. That is the principle of my organization. Hitch your energy to a star is my advice to young men. Aim high and keep everlastingly at it."

PLAN TO BUILD ON ORDER ONLY PLAN.

FACTORY WILL TURN OUT CARS STRICTLY ACCORDING TO THE DEMAND.

A new policy has been adopted by the Oakland Motor Car Company in its factory production schedule. Instead of the usual monthly schedule figured out ahead on a yearly basis, the new executives of the factory have decided to build on order only. This is a radical departure from the usual custom among quantity producers and is more in line with the system employed among makers of high-grade cars.

"An analysis of the new Oakland manufacturing policy discloses the fact that unless the people express a willingness to buy Oaklands, the dealer cannot order them and in turn cannot get deliveries," says H. C. McVey of the Los Angeles Oakland Company.

"It is now necessary for us to anticipate our requirements a full thirty days in advance. We then order from the factory and the cars are built for us and shipped the following month. This is indeed a very favorable policy in the light of the dealer and the owner as it always assures both the latest improvements that are made from time to time."

WIRE RESERVATIONS TO GRAND CENTRAL.

HUGE GARAGE HAS SERVICE RIGHT DOWN TO THE FINEST POINT.

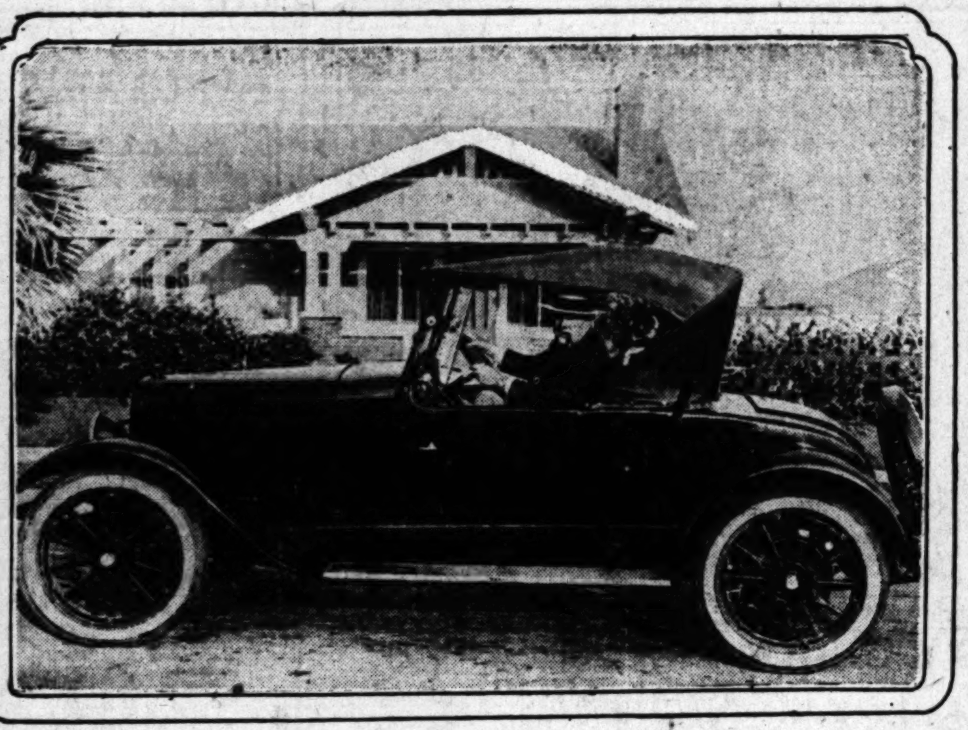
So far and wide has the reputation of the Grand Central Garage spread since the first units were completed six months ago that today it is a common thing for a tourist just arrived in the city to immediately inquire his way to Fifth and Grand.

Frequently advance reservations are made by wire or letter for stalls at the Grand Central Garage just exactly as accommodations are engaged by the owners of the cars at the leading hostelries of the city.

The facts that the auto parked indoors at the Grand Central is always protected, cannot be moved by anyone save the owner or authorized representative, is kept clean and ready for service at a moment's notice and is always safe from being scratched, bumped into or marred by other machines because it is housed in its own concrete-guarded stall, have become widely known and the number of cars housed regularly at the Grand Central increases steadily month by month.

SPINNING WHEELS.

When the rear wheels are in a muddy spot, do not try to drive the car out by spinning them. The slower the wheels turn the better the chance of gripping the surface. If the car can be rocked by alternately engaging and disengaging the clutch it will be found that the pendulum action of the car will carry it out of almost any bad spot.



When They Come Back for Them Five Times There Must Be a Reason.

Walter Slater, Los Angeles contractor, who has just taken delivery of his fifth consecutively owned Chalmers from the Greer-Robbins Company. Mr. Slater has driven several different Chalmers types, but this time he decided on a roadster. Consistent Chalmers performance has made Slater, like many others, a consistent booster, according to the local salesmanager.

TAKES FIFTH CHALMERS.

With the delivery of a Chalmers roadster by the Greer-Robbins Company to Walter Slater, a Los Angeles contractor, he became the owner of his fifth car of the same make since 1916, according to R. O. Gould, retail Chalmers sales manager of this well known automobile distributing concert.

"Mr. Slater is a consistent Chalmers booster, and his boosting started shortly after he purchased his first Chalmers in 1916, known as the 6-40 5-passenger touring job," said Gould. "Although he appreciates that enclosed cars have many virtues, he prefers the open type. In 1917 and 1918 he successively bought 5-passenger open cars. In 1920 he took unto himself a wire wheel sport touring and this year that was traded in for the new roadster.

"Because of his business, Mr. Slater finds it necessary to do a great deal of driving and much of this is through the traffic-congested streets of the city. It has been his experience that the wonderful hot-spot Chalmers engine idles as smoothly through traffic as it speeds smoothly over the highways. His maintenance costs have been practically nil, considering the service the car gives him, while operating costs are on the same economical lesvel."

HIGHWAY CROWDED DURING HOT SPELL.

In California, with especial reference to the summer touring season, it has been stated figuratively that the majority of the population veritably live upon wheels. Caravans of motorists crowd the highways, whether en route on a long tour or out for a week-end pleasure trip.

California is justly proud of her beauty spots, and, according to Fred Clark, sales manager of the Haynes here, every motor-car owner should take a pride in keeping these places free from such disfigurements as discarded paper lunch plates, bits of torn newspapers and other debris incidental to itinerant camping.

"California's beautiful highways are a source of pride to the State," says Clark, "and it should be the ambition of the motorist who frequets them to keep them free of debris. Quite recently on a trip through the northern section of the State, I noticed considerable waste paper and bits of rubbish left along the highways by travelers.

"It is no particular burden for the motorist to dispose of these things either by picking them up or burning them. If a heap of rubbish is burned proper precautions will dismiss the possibility of a grass fire. It is rather disgusting to stop in one of the beauty spots of the State and find it disfigured by cast-off material."

MAKE RECORD TRUCK SALE.

As a result of what is claimed to have been the largest sale of motor trucks on the Pacific Coast, the American Railway Express has just put into operation forty-six White trucks in Los Angeles, Seattle and San Francisco territories. Of this number, twenty-three have been delivered here and are already in use.

Referring to the deal, officials of the American Railway Express have announced that White trucks have been adopted as standard equipment in this territory and that as fast as replacements of old equipment are necessary, Whites will take their place. It is claimed that this choice of White trucks has been at least in part influenced by the motor truck experience of A. Christeson, vice-president of the American Railway Express Company, which dates back to 1912 when he bought for the Wells-Fargo Express Company, two 1911 model Whites, both of which are still on the job performing to the complete satisfaction of their owners.

Of the twenty-three Whites delivered here, twenty-one are of the two-ton size and the remaining two are three and a half-ton trucks. All are equipped with the latest type express bodies.

Commenting on the new twenty-three-truck White fleet of the American Railway Express here, O. R. Fuller of the White Auto Company, local distributors, said:

"In no other field of haulage has there been greater insistence upon downright operating merit than in that of professional transportation. Here more than anywhere else one can see the advantages of standardization of truck units when operating fleets."

YOUTH FOUNTAIN FOR CAR.

How can you add life to your motor?

This question is an important one to the countless automobile owners in California, where touring conditions are such that the motorist can travel, practically, throughout the year.

It has long been realized that in the building of motors for automobiles some system should be devised which could insure a finished cylinder bore being perfectly round from end to end, and which would have a surface harder than that obtained by open machining or grinding, the processes used heretofore. But it remained for Oldsmobile engineers, according to L. V. Starr, local manager of J. W. Leavitt & Company, Oldsmobile distributor, to develop the desired methods for rolling the cylinder bores.

The method is the use of a central spindle surrounded by rolls, which somewhat resemble roller bearings. Each roll is carefully measured with micrometers, so that the whole forms a true circle. This is made to the true size of the desired cylinder bore, and a previous machine operation on the cylinder wall allows from ½ to 3-4 of a thousandth metal on the diameter to be compressed by rolling.

The result is that the roll, which works in oil against the cylinder wall, compresses the metal by crowding it back under expansion and gives it a hardness and polished smoothness which cannot be obtained by any other method. Much longer life to the cylinder walls and a true bore are positively insured.

COMMODORE-ING NO CINCH.

If you think being a full-fledged commodore is any lady's job, just ask Walter M. Brown, he of Stutz fame. Walter says that being the father of motor-acr racing on the Pacific Coast is nothing compared to being a commodore.

Brown has always been fond of water—for boating purposes—and he is skipper, master, owner, pilot and sponsor for the well known Lady Luck, which, after all is a good name, because Brown always has lots of luck.

So well has he skippered and piloted and mastered that the boys down at the Los Angeles Yacht Club wished on him the proud distinction of commodore, and with all the gold braid and kow-towing that goes with this royal office Brown and his pals set out for Santa Barbara to the one grand regatta in the annals of Pacific Coast boating.

A whole week he commodored for the bunch and each day he lost a pound or two. Work was all that he did and on his return all that he could boast of that he didn't have when he left was a good coat of tan.

"When I took up motor-car racing back in 1911," says Brown, "I thought George Washington had nothing on me. Valley Forge was nothing compared to Santa Monica and a lot of other fast-going spots. As a father of racing I had to set an example for my children. They were leading a fast life and I had to make good. When I had accomplished my goal I sat back and rested on the Stutz laurels, satisfied to go through life with only a picture in the Hall of Fame. And there I would have stopped had I not been teased in the commodoreship of the best yacht club on the Pacific, and let me tell the boys that selling motor cars is gravy compared to that big league stuff out on the old salty billow."

The FRANKLIN

ON any kind of a road the Franklin is a safe, easy-handling, smooth-rolling car.

In any weather it is a dependable, ever-ready, worry-free car.

In the hands of any kind of an owner it is economical of fuel, easy on tires, and long-lived.

Outside conditions have no influence on the steady, satisfying performance it gives the year round. It represents practical, common sense economy without restriction of use.

20 miles to the gallon of gasoline
12,500 miles to the set of tires

HUDSON AND ESSEX PRICES AGAIN REDUCED

Hudson Super-Six $2315—Essex $1690

(Southern California prices with Cord Tires and Plate Glass Top.)
Effective August 17th.

"These are the lowest prices at which these models have ever been sold."

You will understand something of the value this gives to the Hudson Super-Six when you remember that at $3170 here it was the world's largest selling fine car. Today's price saves you $855.

Essex Further Leads All in its Class.

Everyone has always classed Essex with costly cars in performance, endurance and appearance. It combines with those qualities the economy of light cars in fuel, oil and tires. Thousands of owners report as high as twenty-five thousand miles of service with scarcely any maintenance cost.

More than 50,000 Essex Cars are in service. For the performance and endurance given, Essex had no rival at its last year's price of $2293. What can approach it today with this saving of $603?

At lower prices than they have ever sold for, you can get either a Super-Six or an Essex this year and have the best months in which to enjoy it.

WILLS ROADSTER SIMPLY EATEN UP.

The new Wills Sainte Claire roadster made its first appearance in Los Angeles last week. The first shipment of three cars was not in the Western Motors Company Building twenty-four hours. Their arrival had been anxiously awaited by a number of buyers and the first three who saw them closed immediately and took delivery at once. The new roadsters are very distinctive in design and the appointments throughout are of the highest quality. The rear seat, which will take care of two passengers in an emergency, folds into the deck.

LOOSE SPOKES.

Wooden wheels with loose spokes emit a squeaking sound which is intensely annoying. The noise will be more distinct when the car is being driven around a corner. Sometimes this looseness may be obviated by replacing one or more spokes, or it may be cured by forcing small wooden wedges between the spokes and the hub. A wheelwright can do the job in a few minutes.

CLEANING CARBON.

Many manufacturers who equip their engines with aluminum pistons advise against the removal of carbon deposits by the oxygen method, because the extreme heat generated is likely to injure the pistons.

CACTUS KATE COMING BACK.

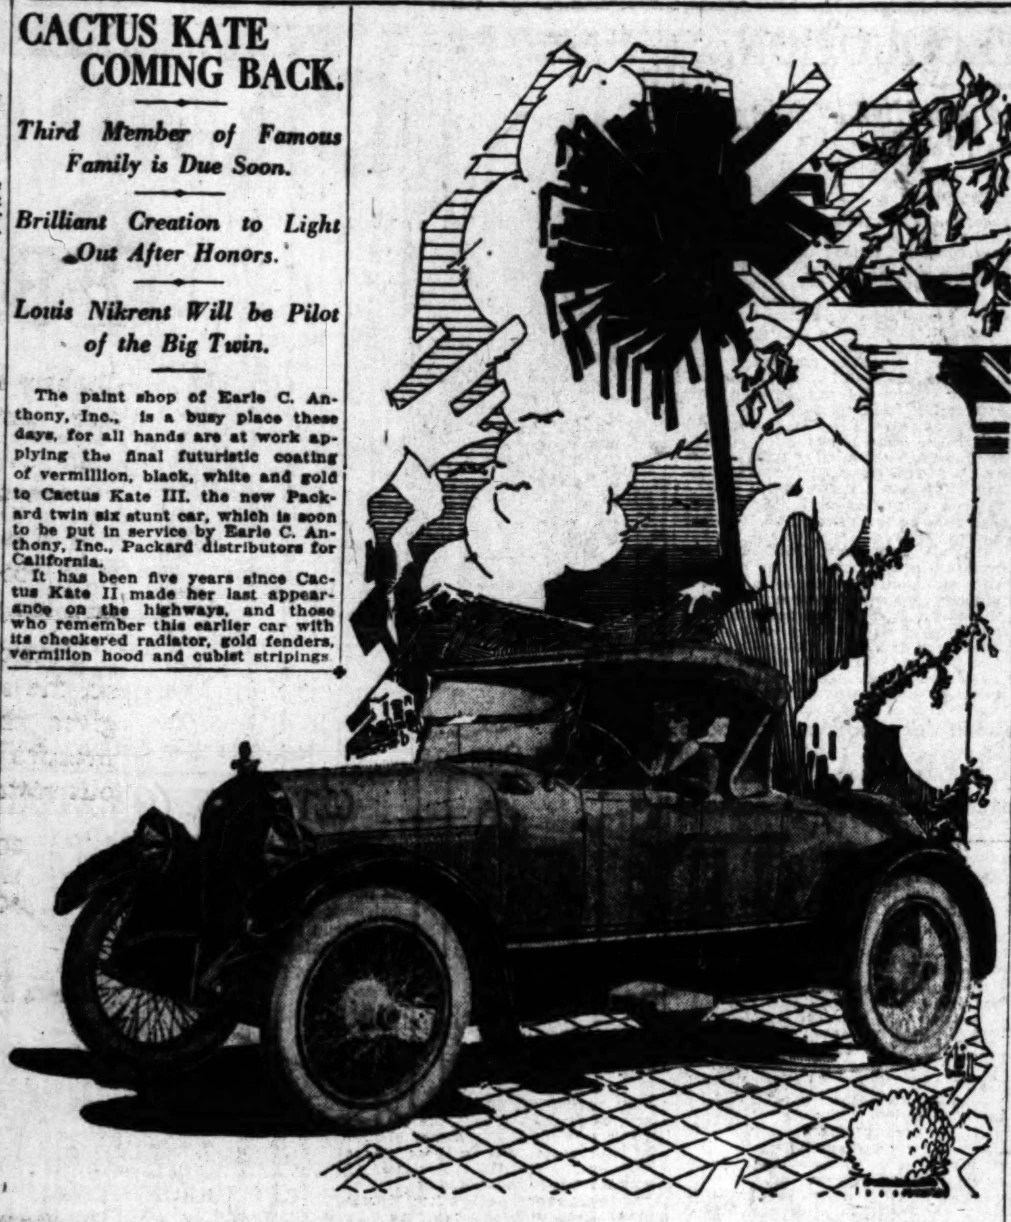
Third Member of Famous Family is Due Soon.

Brilliant Creation to Light Out After Honors.

Louis Nikrent Will be Pilot of the Big Twin.

The paint shop of Earle C. Anthony, Inc., is a busy place these days, for all hands are at work applying the final futuristic coating of vermillion, black, white and gold to Cactus Kate III, the new Packard twin six stunt car, which is soon to be put in service by Earle C. Anthony, Inc., Packard distributors for California.

It has been five years since Cactus Kate II made her last appearance on the highways, and those who remember this earlier car with its checkered radiator, gold fenders, vermilion hood and cubist stripings will, at first glance, seem to recognize an old and long-lost friend, but the general smartness of Cactus Kate III, and the graceful, tapering lines that characterize the newer feminine generation, will soon convince the old timer that it is actually the youngest member of the Cactus family, stepping out of the sub-deb class and coming into her own.



A New Type Roadster—A Knockout Since It First Appeared.

This is the new Elgin six roadster which has just been received by the local distributors and is declared to be one of the most popular lines ever turned out on this lightweight chassis. Power, comfort and convenience are all distinct factors in this car's get-up.

When the garage doors closed for the last time behind Cactus Kate II, it was thought that the final word had been said—her exploits, added to those of her older sister, had left no new worlds to conquer. But our little old world has turned some 1800 times on its axis, and each revolution has spelled advancement in transportation as well as in automobile engineering, so that finally the Anthony organization, tired of resting on past laurels and Cactus Kate III was groomed for the Herculean task of outshining her predecessors.

The Packard twin is so universally noted for its beauty of line and its luxurious riding qualities that many have lost sight of the fact that it has been designed and built to withstand the most strenuous and exacting service. So the new Cactus Kate will be given a season of the roughest service over the most difficult roads, to demonstrate to both present and future Packard owners, that strength and beauty not only can, but do, exist in the same body.

Cactus Kate will be piloted by Louis Nikrent, the famous racing driver, now at the head of the service department of Earle C. Anthony, Inc. Nikrent knows every inch of the deserts and mountains of California, and though usually most courteous and unassuming in the presence of beautiful femininity, he has promised to obey instructions to treat her rough, so our new Kate is due for some hard going during the coming months.

FACTORY VISIT BRINGS RESULTS.

SHERIDAN DEALER GOES EAST AND RETURNS WITH THE GOODS.

Mr. George Goodrum, local Sheridan distributor, is all smiles now because the first section of his full monthly allotment of cars for local distribution arrived early last week.

Mr. Goodrum recently returned from an extended visit to the Sheridan factory at Muncie, Ind., where he had gone to devise some plan whereby more cars could be obtained for his territory. The recent shipment is the result of his efforts.

The rapidly increasing popularity of Sheridan cars in Los Angeles and vicinity made it necessary to take some steps toward supplying the demand and it was this condition which prompted the local distributor to spend several weeks with factory officials pleading his case.

It is generally admitted that the Sheridan sedan and coupe are the last word in inclosed car building and for this reason a great demand has been made on the local distributor for them in the last few weeks.

With the unloading of this first big shipment Mr. Goodrum says that he is able to make immediate delivery on all models of the Sheridan for the first time for more than one month.

BREYER BACK FROM EASTERN TRAVELS.

VISITS WILLS-SAINTE CLAIRE PLANT AND TESTS CAR ON LONG RUN.

R. S. Breyer, general manager of the Western Motors Company, is back in California, after a visit to the plant of the Wills-Sainte Claire in Marysville, Mich., followed by a 1000-mile tour in one of the new Wills-Sainte Claire roadsters. He was accompanied by F. I. Tone, also of the Western Motors Company.

The California man started from Marysville and followed a route across Western Ontario to Niagara Falls and Buffalo. From there he drove to New York through Western Pennsylvania, south on the National Highway to Cumberland through Uniontown to Pittsburg. From there his route led to Cleveland. As a variety, the car was put on the lake steamer and a boat trip was enjoyed from Cleveland to Detroit.

"The roads in Western Ontario," said Breyer, "are typical country Canadian roads, macadamized in some places, but merely a graded dirt road in others. We found that an American dollar is worth $1.13 in Canadian, and apparently this has resulted in considerable feeling on the part of the Canadians toward the American visitors.

"We really enjoyed our visit to Niagara Falls, and Californians especially will find this side trip of considerable interest. The road south of Buffalo and through Western Pennsylvania is in very bad shape, due to a considerable amount of highway construction. The Lincoln Highway throughout Western Pennsylvania would be a delight to any Californian in its roller-coaster effect, going up one grade and down another through a series of beautifully wooded hills."

COMPARES AUTOS TO CLOTHES OF OWNER.

SOME HAVE SUNDAY-GO-TO-MEETIN'S IN VESTURE AND AUTOMOBILES.

In a lot of ways automobiles are like clothes, especially in the manner in which they are used, says J. Benjamin Fahy, authorized Ford dealer of Los Angeles. This is the way he elaborates on the idea:

"Some men buy expensive clothes to fit every occasion. Some have one suit for all occasions—it may be costly or it may be very moderately priced. And some have a best suit and a business suit. It's a great deal the same with regard to automobiles. A few have whole fleets, one machine for every whim—a town car, a country car, a closed car for the wife, a sport car for the daughter, a roadster for the son. Again some men made one car do for all occasions. And still others have one automobile for touring—to impress the neighbors with or to take the family for a spin in—and another automobile to 'hack about' in. In other words, a Sunday car and a business car."

All of which brings Mr. Fahy around to the point he has had in mind all along, namely and to wit: the new place of importance in the business man's garage occupied by the Ford.

LINCOLN ROAD RUNNER TO BEGIN STATE TOUR.

BILL BRAMLETTE'S CAR WILL VISIT PRINCIPAL POINTS IN NORTH AND SOUTH.

Announcement has been made by the Walter M. Murphy Motors Company that the famous "Road Runner," the Leland-built Lincoln, which finished first in the thrilling 1000-mile Nevada road race, is about to start on a tour of the entire State.

Bill Bramlette's notable car has been on exhibition in the showrooms of the Walter M. Murphy Motors Company in San Francisco for the past three weeks, and has been an object of considerable interest to visitors along the row. The tour which has been mapped out for the Road Runner will include all of the principal points in both Northern and Southern California.

That the Road Runner is in splendid shape after its gruelling run over the arid roads of the Sagebrush State was proved very recently when the car was taken out for a trial spin along the Lincoln Highway on the ocean front. At this time, when the car was brought to a halt, it became an object of considerable interest, and it is expected that during the tour of the State the public will be further concerned in a close-up of the notable winner.

LATE ADDITION TO THE ELGIN FAMILY.

NEW TWO-PASSENGER ROADSTER A KNOCKOUT, SAYS ADVANCE REPORT.

From latest reports both the Elgin factory and the distributors here are feeling delighted over the beautiful new addition to the Elgin family. It is the snappy 1922 model two-passenger roadster, now on exhibition at the Elgin Motor Sales Co.

It was while Ford Rieman, President, and R. G. Rowland, vice president and manager, of the Elgin Company, were back in Chicago attending the annual Elgin six distributors' convention that they secured their first glimpse of the new model. Rowland states: "Not only is the new roadster a marked advance in motor car construction, but it is a knock-out for strength and beauty. It is just the car that California has been asking for. It fills a long-felt need for a smart two-passenger roadster of moderate price."

With its powerful valve-in-head inclosed motor which develops to 50 h. p., the new Elgin roadster is the embodiment of snap and speed. The new motor is capped with an aluminum cover which keeps the entire valve mechanism free from abrasive dust and grit, thus insuring better lubrication.

Citizens Turn Out and Build New Highways.

More than 100 citizens of Oroville, Or., working all day recently completed the roadway from Mooretown to Feather Falls, putting another one of California's scenic routes within the reach of the motorist.

Automobiles may now be driven within two miles of the falls and the beautiful scenery en route is most alluring, according to J. R. Brown, who recently made a trip up through that section of the State in his Apperson eight.

Of special interest to motorists is the manner in which the roadway was constructed, declares Brown. An auto caravan composed of thirty-two automobiles and carrying 152 persons left Oroville early one morning, arriving at the scene of operations about 9 o'clock.

Within a few hours' time the enthusiastic workers had cut and built a fairly good highway as far as the Indian camp and other workmen were started on cutting a trail to the falls. A new automobile parking site was also constructed to provide accommodations for visiting motorists.

EDDIE PULLEN NOW LEARNING TO DRIVE.

Eddie Pullen is learning to drive. On the face of it that would appear to be a misstatement. But it is a fact, attested to by Eddie, himself, and corroborated by J. Benjamin Fahy, authorized Ford dealer of Los Angeles.

After purchasing a Ford coupe a few days ago, Mr. Pullen, to whom 100 miles per hour on the speedway behind the wheel of a racing car is mere child's play, had to confess that he didn't know how to drive at all. The gear-shifting manipulations required to navigate a Ford, although admitted to be simplicity itself, must also be admitted to differ considerably from those of other cars. And Mr. Pullen soon found it out.

Accordingly, Mr. Fahy undertook to teach the speed pilot how it was done and was given the thrill of his life while Mr. Pullen desperately steered the Ford through traffic. So prone was Mr. Pullen to bear heavy with his right foot that a foot accelerator was installed to give that pedal extremity of his some place to rest. And late reports have it that the former racing artist is more than enthusiastic over his new mount.

TRAP GUN AND ROD

BY TOM MARSHALL

[This is the ninety-seventh of a series of articles dealing with trapshooting, hunting and fishing by Capt. Tom Marshall, a noted authority on the great out-of-doors.]

The shooting sage of Omaha. Sportsmen, who formerly contested on live birds and many devotees of the "tar-hawk" game, know congenial Frank Parmalee of Omaha, who is one of the best all-round shots in America. He was a member of the All-American team of Wingshots, who invaded foreign countries in 1901, returning to America without a defeat. Frank in his palmy shooting days, specialized on individual races. He would shoot for any amount of money, any man who had the courage to challenge.

BALMY DAYS.

During the halcyon days of Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, they were booked in Omaha. Johnnie Baker, a performer, was known to millions of spectators, as an expert glass ball and target crusher. His skill in the arena was unquestioned, yet he lacked a knowledge of the little intricacies of individual trapshooting races, which were an open book to Parmalee. Buffalo Bill was sold on Johnnie's shooting ability and matched him against Frank; a hundred target race for $1000; event to be shot the following day. A large crowd of spectators was present, Parmalee winning the face, hands down.

Later, it was noised about that Frank, having questioned his own ability to win from Baker, had substituted one dozen wooden targets correctly turned from basswood which could not be broken with an ax, which were thrown for Johnnie, certainly encompassing his defeat. Buffalo Bill demanded the return of the money, based upon fraudulent practice. Parmalee refused, claiming that everything was on the square and it was only the wierd howl of a loser. A suit was started in the courts, which dragged through many years of litigation, eventually to fall of its own weight.

YOU ARE ON!

On another occasion, ubiquitous Jack Winston of Washington, Ind., then an unknown, landed in Omaha, hunting a race. Changing his paper money into silver dollars, he walked into Parmalee's private office, apparently stubbed his toe on the threshold. The silver dollar crashed to the floor and Jack announced, "He could beat any man in Omaha, 100 targets, unknown angles, for that amount of money." Parmalee has a slight impediment in his speech, but eventually grabbed his voice and without looking up at Winston, remarked, "Get your money together and count it. You are on." The race was shot the following day. Winston for the first time on record, broke 100 straight. Frank's solution was, "You can't beat but only tie a man who breaks all he shoots at." Hence his defeat. Frank especially shines as a pass shot on migratory birds.

I boarded a Union Pacific train, as his guest, headed for a goose-shoot on the Platte River. We disembarked at Cozard, in Dawson county, Nebraska. The village is a short distance back from the river and we were "wagoned in" by a native, for the consideration of a stiff libation and a dollar. Both air and river surface were black with Canadian Honkers and American White Front or Laughing geese. The latter deriving their sobriquet from their confused honking, interspersed with intonations of hilarious laughter.

A few sand hill crane and swan were also in evidence. As we approached the river, many geese took wing, bound for the wheat fields where they were feeding. We knew by the muddy waters, feathers and "chalking," the sand bars had been used for some time as a roosting ground. That they would return was unquestioned. Two willow blinds were built, about seventy-five yards apart, by throwing up a ring of sand and sticking a low fence of willows around the top, dusting the base with dry sand, thus making an elegant hide. Many sheet iron, profile, goose decoys were scattered about, and we waited their coming. A strong north wind was blowing and the birds came back low, showing little fear or precaution.

INTO DECOYS.

They headed into our decoys. Coming up against the wind, they had every appearance, in size, of furniture box cars. Our success was most satisfactory, and our bag, numbered all that the most exacting sportsman could wish or desire. Late in the afternoon, a large flock of Canadian Honkers came in to Frank, who folded up the leader, an old gander, who had seen many summers, and was now destined to experience a hard fall. When the goose struck the water a geyser was thrown skyward. Frank made a rush to gather, leaving his gun in the blind. That old feathered fox, was winged and a neck-and-neck marathon race was on. Frank floundered like a side wheel boat running over shoal water. His successive grabs were eluded. A strata of quick-sand was the deciding handicap. Frank took a vaulting header into the cold water. When he regained his feet the goose was half way across the river and going strong. Frank passed me on his return trip, the name he applied to that goose was not Branta Canadensis.

NEW SPORT MODEL IS LAST WORD.

Entered Racing Career as Far Back as 1905, Says Fred Rutledge.

A sportsman's car of the most advanced type is just announced by the Liberty Motor Car Company, together with the information that first shipments of the new car are now being made to distributors and dealers.

"The new car is a pronounced departure from the standard type of speedster, in that its appointments and fittings are phenomenal not only for their quality, but for their completeness," according to C. W. McKelvey, head of the McKelvey Motor Sales Company, Southern California distributor of the Liberty six. "There are nearly fifty features on the new car which are not found on the standard touring car or speedster," said McKelvey.

One of the most noticeable features of the new car is a newly designed windshield, the side arms and base of which are aluminum. It provides an ingenious method for ventilating the driver's compartment and embodies novel built-in "courtesy" lights in the lower corners. A one-piece glass is used, which is fitted with a cleaner.

The car comes in two special body colors with upholstering in the finest grade of two-tone Spanish leather in shades to match. Steel wheels also are standard equipment, finished in tones to harmonize with the body.

Some of the exceptional features include nickel-plated lamps and radiator, motometer, clock, trouble light, snubbers, bumpers, special fenders, aluminum steps, fully lined top, special steering wheel and numerous other examples of tasteful designing.

HEAVY TIRE PRODUCTION.

Steady Gain in Industry Noted with High Peak Figures Reached This Month.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

AKRON (O.) Aug. 20.—The rubber industry at the present time is operating at what will probably be the peak of the year and although nothing is definitely certain in industry today it is generally believed that the present rate of production will be maintained for at least several months more.

WILL DELAY IT.

Many things, primarily the shortage of tires in the country today, are expected to delay the seasonal slowing up and may even affect production during the whole winter dull season and surprise the entire industry.

Production of 75,000 tires a day, which is now the case and has been for several weeks, was certainly not expected this spring when conditions looked the bluest. It is possible that the manufacturers who know thoroughly the shortage of tires will manufacture for stock in spite of the fact that now they say they will not do so. If they should there is little likelihood that they will fail to find a market next spring.

The peak of production now recorded was attained gradually as is shown by monthly production figures compiled during the past week.

When the year opened the factories were producing a maximum of 21,000 tires a day on a three or four-day schedule. In February business increased to 26,000 a day on a still short weekly schedule. In March production went to 33,000 at four to five days a week. In April the expected slump did not develop and production went to 41,000 daily. In May production stood at 49,000 tires daily. In June hours were lengthened, additional men added in large numbers and production rose to 53,000. July saw a daily output of 67,000 on full time and August will probably be the peak at 75,000 tires a day.

In all this time Goodyear has lead all other factories in production and continues to do so at the present time, mainly because during the worst days of the company the advertising and selling campaigns continued and since the reorganization efforts to sell goods have been redoubled. Goodyear is now reaping the harvest of the advertising plans of the former president.

AMONG THE FANS.

Walter M. Ellis is again in the city and expects to remain several months. He is engaged in directing home talent plays for several Modern Woodmen camps in Los Angeles and surrounding cities.

The thirty-game subscription match recently held in St. Louis between L. M. Lewis and H. B. Reynolds resulted in a tie score—3 wins each and 24 draws.

F. A. Shoemaker, formerly of Nebraska but for several years a resident of Long Beach, passed away on July 28 following an operation at a Long Beach hospital. Mr. Shoemaker had been in ill health for a long time.

Reports from eastern columns show Newell W. Banks has been training faithfully for his coming match with Robert Stewart for the world's championship. Mr. A. J. Heffner has been coaching and going over play with him for several months. While it is hard to get a line on Stewart's present crossboard ability, he will at least know someone was on the opposite side of the board when the match is finished. If Banks fails to "bring home the bacon," it will not be from lack of confidence or preparation.

4-8	8-11	16-22	11-16	2-9
23-19	23-18	25-18	20-11	13-6
12-16a	6-10	10-15	7-23	Drawn
19-12	27-23	18-14	14-9
15-18	1-6b	15-18	5-14
22-15	31-27c	29-25	25-22

a—This line is seldom played by the present day experts; 15-18 is the popular line.

b—So far as I know this move is original with Mr. Davis, who termed it as "one of his cooks" for the tourney. 9-14 and 9-13 are given in the books. See variations 1 and 2 for play on them.

c—Mr. Davis claimed this the only move to draw and that game to finish was played according to his "dope." 30-25 at once will draw just as easy.

VARIATION 1.

9-14-2	6-9	15-18	15-31	28-16
18-9	27-24	32-27	22-8	20-11

31-27	22-13	24-19	25-22	13-9
				Drawn.

d—Mr. J. Lees, in the S.D.Q., gives this as the only move to draw and shows the following pretty win if 2-6 is played:

2-6e	18-23	9-14	3-12	10-17
23-19	26-19	25-21	17-14	19-3
14-18	6-9	14-18	18-25	12-19
19-16	21-17	12-8	32-27	24-8
				W. wins.

e—Mr. Lees also shows 11-16 to lose as under:

11-16	7-16	2-7	14-17	13-22
20-11	12-8	23-19	21-14	8-3
7-16	16-20	24-27	10-17	7-11

3-7	20-24	15-24	17-22	28-32
20-11	3-8	22-18	26-17	3-7

W. wins. J. Lees beat Thomas Muir.

VARIATION 2.

Here's Advice That May Help Fix Your Ills.

Seldom does a week pass that incoming mail to the Gaffney Motor Sales Company, distributors of the Owen Magnetic car, does not contain a flock of questions relative to various mechanical difficulties insolvable by the average person.

Following are three important questions which should prove of vital interest to those who are interested in learning how to properly care for their machines:

Question: The steering wheel of my car squeaks when turned to the right. How can the noise be eliminated?

Answer. Oil is about the only thing that will stop the squeak in the steering mechanism. The throttle and spark controls usually pass down through the steering post by means of tubes and these probably have become corroded. Not knowing the exact construction, it is difficult to locate the point where the squeak occurs, but if oil is applied to all moving surfaces the place will thus be located which is giving the trouble. Sometimes oil applied under the steering wheel hub will eliminate the squeak at that point. Possibly the working parts of the steering head are in need of grease or oil. Wherever one metal bears and works upon another a lubricant is necessary.

Q.: What is meant by a spark knock in the engine?

A.: A so-called spark knock is caused by preignition. In other words, the charge is ignited too early. When the spark is advanced too far the explosion takes place in the clyinder before the piston reaches top center. As a result the piston meets the force of the explosion, causing a knock. If momentum of the fly-wheel were not sufficient to carry the piston over center the engine would reverse. A charge of gas requires a certain time to become fully ignited, therefore, it is necessary to give a lead or advance to the spark in respect to piston position.

Q.: Does a high compression engine give more power than a low compression engine of the same piston displacement?

A.: As the explosion pressure is in direct proportion to the compression pressure, it follows that more power is obtained by higher compression.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS, WARTS AND MOLES.
Pulling a few stiff hairs from the face may start a serious growth. Let me demonstrate free of charge how pulling, cutting, using wax depilatories and the so-called hair removers promote growth of hair on the face. My electric machine is the only known method of killing superfluous hair, fuzz, warts and moles without destroying the surrounding tissue. This machine destroys 300 hairs an hour. I have had 24 years' experience and devote all my time to the work. A binding guarantee that any hairs or moles I treat will never return. Many L. A. satisfied customers will testify to my skill as an expert. Work done at your home by appointment.

HOURS 10 TO 5.
70 per cent are in the wrong occupation, misfits; most men utilize only a very small part of their ability, and few are more than 25 per cent efficient; 50 per cent are mismated in marriage and fully 90 per cent do not understand themselves. There is a certain PRINCIPLE OF POWER in human nature; WITHOUT IT, you CANNOT succeed; WITH IT, you CANNOT FAIL. This point has been a REVELATION to MANY who did not know the REAL CAUSE holding them back. How about YOU, reader? If you are not successful and advancing, I WILL TELL YOU WHERE YOUR TROUBLE LIES. Curious and frivolous people not desired. CONSULTATION FREE; bring this ad., it will not appear daily.

PERSONAL— MOTION PICTURES
Are you desirous of becoming a motion picture star? If so your first step should be to have a screen test made, unless you photograph well on motion picture film, your ambition will not be realized. Before spending your time in vain we advise you to have an actual motion picture test made. Our tests have been recommended by the following well known directors, Rex Ingraham, Stuart Paton. These tests will be criticised by an expert and will be frankly advised as to your capability. For particulars apply 231 SAN FERNANDO BLDG., 4th and Main.

PERSONAL—"A WEAK SPINE"
A deformed, rigid and weak spine is the cause of many internal afflictions; it is manifested by wry neck, unevenly drooped and stooping shoulder, protruding shoulder-blade, sway back, one high hip seemingly due to a short leg; even difficulties of the lower limbs, joints and the feet are due to such weakness, a drawing pain especially in the lower back is symptomatic. Little endeavor in helping NATURE'S EFFORTS to restore will strengthen and straighten your spine. I will help and advise you how to do it. GARLAND BLDG., Room 511, 740 South Bdwy. Phone 61605.

Six rooms, same design, but smaller and exclusive of garage .... [illegible]
COMPARE THESE PRICES:
3 rooms, stucco .... [illegible]
4 rooms, stucco .... [illegible]
5 rooms, stucco .... [illegible]
6 rooms, stucco .... [illegible]
These houses are not of the cheap, ordinary stucco type, our houses are all sheeted diagonal with 1-inch lumber over which is placed a layer of No. 10 felt paper, then covered with reinforcing wire, over which is applied two coats of cement plaster and one coat of California stucco, making as substantial a job as can be built in this type.
Should you want cheaper construction than this, of course we can quote much cheaper prices, although we would not advise it. We furnish on all our jobs a complete survey of the property, also complete plans and specifications.
We also quote prices on all kinds of engineering projects, surveying, drafting, topographical maps, subdivision work, platting, plans and specifications, material lists, superintendence, etc.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS, WARTS AND MOLES.

Pulling a few stiff hairs from the face may start a serious growth. Let me demonstrate free of charge how pulling, cutting, using wax depilatories and the so-called hair removers promote growth of hair on the face. My electric machine is the only known method of killing superfluous hair, fuzz, warts and moles without destroying the surrounding tissue. This machine destroys 300 hairs an hour. I have had 24 years' experience and devote all my time to the work. A binding guarantee that any hairs or moles I treat will never return. Many L. A. satisfied customers, will testify to my skill as an expert. Work done at your home by appointment. MRS. F. A. SCOTT, Suite 407 Bumiller Bldg. 430 S. Broadway. 19794.

70 per cent are in the wrong occupation, misfits; most men utilize only a very small part of their ability, and few are more than 25 per cent efficient; 50 per cent are mismated in marriage and fully 90 per cent do not understand themselves. There is a certain PRINCIPLE OF POWER in human nature; WITHOUT IT, you CANNOT succeed; WITH IT, you CANNOT FAIL. This point has been a REVELATION to MANY who did not know the REAL CAUSE holding them back. How about YOU, reader? If you are not successful and advancing, I WILL TELL YOU WHERE YOUR TROUBLE LIES. "We build anywhere."

See our new double residence design, nothing like it in California, has the appearance of a private residence.

California stucco exterior, Spanish, Italian or Mission design, standard plumbing, hardwood floors, genuine tile trim composition drainboards and bathrooms, gas heaters, all built-in features, double garage, with cement floor and drive, cement walks, steps, etc.

Eight rooms, stucco exterior .... [illegible]
Six rooms, stucco exterior .... [illegible]
Six rooms, same design, but smaller and exclusive of garage .... [illegible]

COMPARE THESE PRICES:
5 rooms, stucco .... [illegible]
4 rooms, stucco .... [illegible]
5 rooms, stucco .... [illegible]
6 rooms, stucco .... [illegible]

These houses are not of the cheap, ordinary stucco type, our houses are all sheeted diagonal with 1-inch lumber over which is placed a layer of No. 10 felt paper, then covered with reinforcing wire, over which is applied two coats of cement plaster and one coat of California stucco, making as substantial a job as can be built in this type.

Should you want cheaper construction than this, of course we can quote much cheaper prices, although we would not advise it. We furnish on all our jobs a complete survey of the property, also complete plans and specifications.

We also quote prices on all kinds of engineering projects, surveying, drafting, topographical maps, subdivision work, platting, plans and specifications, material lists, superintendence, etc.

HIGH SCHOOL IS ENLARGED.

Phoenix Has Industrial and Liberal Arts Buildings.

Supply of Teachers in State is Now Ample.

Prosperity of Town is Shown by Building Permits.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Aug. 20.—When the Phoenix High School reopens, September 12, to its $2,000,000 plant will have been added industrial and liberal arts buildings, erected at a cost of $400,000. The industrial building has been equipped with modern machinery, and in the second structure are twenty-six new classrooms. An enrollment of about 1500 is expected, compared with 1300 last year.

The supply of teachers in Arizona this year is said to be ample. In Phoenix and many other points teachers' wages have not been reduced, but there has been a decrease in most of the mining camps, both in the number of teachers employed and in their compensation.

CONNECT WATER SYSTEMS.

Iron piping will be used in connecting the municipal water system with the supply main of the new Verde River system.

City paving again is active. East Washington street has been ordered paved from Fifth street to Sixteenth, Culver from Central avenue to Twelfth street, Jefferson from Seventh avenue to Eighteenth, and Woodland avenue from Seventh to Fifteenth, Van Buren street eastward to connection with the Tempe road and Roosevelt westward from Central avenue to the fair grounds.

Manager H. D. McVay of the Mountain States Telephone Company states that the number of telephone instruments within this city has increased 540 per cent within nine years. This year there has been a net gain of 245 telephones.

HOTEL ORDINANCE DELAYED.

An ordinance proposed requiring hotel owners to post the maximum tariff in each room has been deferred until October on protest of J. C. Adams, owner of the Adams Hotel. He writes that the hotel has two rates, commercial and tourist, the latter higher than the former.

Prosperity is indicated by the fact that about $3,000,000 worth of new construction is under way or planned for immediate commencement in this city and its suburbs, this exclusive of $976,000 in school construction. During the first half of this year, in addition, permits were issued for 204 new residences in Phoenix, with a total valuation of $418,230. Phoenix is holding about fortieth place among the cities of the United States in the number of building permits issued. Labor is plentiful and has decreased in cost about 20 per cent, compared with last March, while lumber and brick have dropped about 40 per cent.

LEGUIA WILL STOP REVOLTS.

Peruvian President Believes in Americans.

Would Put Force in Charge of Customs Office.

Hopes to Carry Out Constructive Program.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

IQUIQUE (Chile) Aug. 20.—The Peruvian customs will be under an American administrator as soon as the United States government recommends a man for this place. This action will be followed by complete reorganization of the republic's entire administrative structure under the direction of Americans, according to an interview with President Leguia.

"We are only awaiting the United States government's recommendation before ordering a thorough reorganization of the customhouse under an American administrator," he said. "I am convinced that we can materially increase the republic's revenue if the customs are in the hands of Americans. My hope is to put an American in charge of every branch of our government's activities.

"The navy already is being organized under a United States naval mission, an American educator is reorganizing our school system and nation-wide irrigation and sanitary projects are in American hands."

SEEKS EFFICIENCY.

Asked if this was not one of the bases for political opposition to him, he replied: "Yes, my enemies are making an issue of this part of my program, saying I plan to deliver Peru to the Americans. This is not true; I only desire an efficient business administration and I am convinced that this is best possible under Americans."

Concerning the deportation of many Peruvian citizens, he said:

"I am compelled to use these methods because these men are continually blocking every move and making it impossible to concentrate my attention on the administration. I was honestly elected in a fair election and they attempted to prevent my assuming office. I was forced to resort to a revolution to get my rights since which they have not given me a moment's rest, even going so far as to set fire to the government palace on the eve of the centennial celebration in order to embarrass me in the eyes of visitors.

WILL STOP REVOLTS.

"I am the only President of Peru who ever had a program or policy of government and I am determined to put it into effect. My opponents have no program and no grounds for wishing my overthrow except to get control of the treasury. Since they refuse to suspend revolutionary plotting the welfare of the country demands their deportation. The trouble is they have plotted for revolutions all their lives and everyone else has been too lenient with them. I intend to break them of the habit.

"I offered them amnesty if they would give their word not to engage in any further revolutionary conspiracies during the remainder of my administration. They declined, therefore, they must remain outside of Peru."

Asked why it was necessary to ignore the courts if he had proof of revolutionary activities, he said:

BLAMES POLITICAL ENEMIES.

"It was not necessary to consult the courts because we have a law permitting government deportations without trial if anyone is caught in revolutionary activities."

President Leguia blamed his political enemies for the country's present desperate financial condition. He states that the present Congress will approve of the project of creating a national bank, which will solve the difficulties through being a bank of issue and in the meantime he hopes to float a loan in the United States, which will tide the country over until the bank is established. The last Congress refused to establish the bank on the grounds that it threatened an uncontrolled issue of paper currency.

President Leguia said that the New York bankers had offered to loan considerably less than the amount requested but he rejected them, stating the country must have the entire amount in one loan and if it could not be floated in the United States he would take it elsewhere.

HIT PLANNING BODY.

Realty Men Urge Council to Abolish Commission and Cut Expense.

That the City Planning Commission should be abolished and the city saved the "needless expense" of the work done by the board is recommended in a communication filed yesterday with the City Council by Kells & Grant, Wilshire district realty agents, following the exciting zoning meeting recently held at the Cahuenga-street schoolhouse. The communication states that the "people in the Wilshire district do not wish to have their property zoned," and the letter further says that it is too late to do the zoning now being done by the City Planning Commission, and that the work as proposed by the commission could not be accomplished harmoniously, and in a manner satisfactory to all property owners.

WASHINGTON NEWS IN BRIEF.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The House passed the tax revision bill today by a vote of 274 to 125, with nine Republicans voting against it. Fifty Republicans, however, had voted with the Democrats previously on a motion to recommit the measure with instructions to restore the old surtaxes on incomes over $66,000. This was defeated, 169 to 230.

Senate and House conferees on the antibeer bill agreed today, the Senate group yielding to the extreme drys in modifying the Stanley search and seizure amendment so that evidence that beer manufactured in the home is for sale will not be required for issuance of a search warrant. Senate leaders declare they will filibuster against this and the recess program is threatened.

President Harding, in a letter to Senator Jones, defends the Shipping Board against recent attacks, declaring that the great indebtedness is a heritage from the Wilson administration and that high salaries are necessary to help clear up the mess.

Dr. C. E. Sawyer, President's physician and aid in framing the veterans' rehabilitation program, declared today that the government's rehabilitation program must not be an idealistic theory, but a practical one which will furnish the soldier with "more earning power."

It is estimated that American famine relief in Russia will cost $10,000,000. Most of the food supplies will be purchased in the United States.

Grover Cleveland Bergdoll's flight from Germany to Switzerland to escape extradition after a peace treaty is negotiated will not deter the United States government in its effort to capture the arch-draft dodger.

Maj. Arthur D. Dean of Columbia University has been appointed assistant director of the Veterans' Bureau to be in charge of rehabilitation.

TAX BILL IS PASSED IN HOUSE.

Revision Favored by Vote of 274 to 125; Minority Report to Recommit Lost.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The House passed the tax-revision bill late today by a vote of 274 to 125, one voting present. Previous to the final vote, a minority motion to recommit the measure, made by Representative Garner, acting Democratic leader, was defeated by a vote of 169 to 230. The motion instructed the committee to eliminate from the bill the provisions reducing the surtaxes on incomes in excess of $68,000 to 32 per cent. Quite a number of Republicans voted for this motion, having taken the position that the graduated surtaxes now in force should be continued for at least another two years.

As passed, the bill represents, according to Chairman Fordney, revenue reductions based on the revenue under present law, aggregating over $800,000,000. The repeal of the excess-profits tax and reduction of surtaxes, however, does not become effective until next year. Provisions increasing the income-tax exemption to $2500 for married persons whose income does not exceed $5000, and increasing the exemption for dependents from $200 to $400 for each dependent, will be retroactive, however, and apply on incomes of the current year.

In the final clean-up on the bill numerous amendments were adopted, among them one eliminating all taxes on perfumes and cosmetics. Another important amendment wipes out all taxes on baseballs, basket balls, skates, snow shoes, skiis, footballs and all uniforms and equipment connected with such sports. The original provision of the bill reduced the taxes on these goods from 10 per cent to 5 per cent. Golf balls, tennis balls and equipment of golf and tennis retain a 5 per cent tax in the bill. The manufacturers' tax on motor boats not exceeding 32 feet in length, or five tons capacity, also was eliminated, and the manufacturers' tax on yachts was reduced from 10 to 5 per cent.

HAYWOOD GETS NO ESTATE FROM WIFE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20.—Mrs. Jane Minor Haywood, wife of William D. Haywood, former leader of the Industrial Workers of the World, who fled to Russia to escape a twenty years' prison sentence and a $15,000 fine for conspiracy to obstruct the government's war efforts, left no estate when she died at Winnemucca, Nev., two years ago, it became known here today. This would dispose of any chance that U. S. Dist.-Atty. Charles F. Clyne of Chicago might have had in attempting to collect the fine from her estate.

News dispatches last Monday from Chicago said that Mr. Clyne was contemplating action to recover the fine because Mrs. Haywood died without leaving a will and under such circumstances the Nevada laws award one-third of the estate to the husband. Haywood, however, deserted his wife and two children many years ago, it is reported, but so far as known there was no divorce.

W. H. Minor, father of Mrs. Haywood, was a pioneer stock man of Nevada, and when he died several years ago he left a property estate valued at about $20,000. It was divided among his widow and five children.

PIONEER Y.M.C.A. COAST WORKER DIES.

HENRY J. McCOY OF SAN FRANCISCO PASSES AWAY AFTER YEAR'S ILLNESS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20.—Henry J. McCoy, for thirty-nine years general secretary of the San Francisco Y.M.C.A., died last night at his home in that city after a long illness.

McCoy was 73 years old and was just entering his fiftieth year in the association work. When he went to the San Francisco work the nearest Y.M.C.A. was in Denver, so Mr. McCoy has been the pioneer of all the "Y" work on the Pacific Coast.

Two days after the earthquake McCoy left for the East and in thirty days had raised $700,000 for rehabilitation. He was the organizer of the California State Committee for Y.M.C.A. work. His widow and two children, James and Ruth, survive.

ULTIMATUM LAID DOWN TO UNIONS.

The American Plan Will be Put Into Effect in East St. Louis.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 20.—Members of the Building Trades Council of East St. Louis, Ill., at a meeting last light appointed a committee to confer with a committee appointed by the Central Trades and Labor Union at union headquarters Tuesday night.

It was learned following the meeting, at which the public was excluded, that the majority of the men present did not favor considering a reduction in wages until reductions have been made by persons in the building material business. Some of the men present at the meeting objected to considering reductions in wages until master builders in East St. Louis agreed to a reduction in their profits.

An ultimatum to the building trades unions, declaring that East St. Louis would become an open-shop town unless the unions agree to the wage scale decided upon by the association members has been issued by the Master Builders' Association in East St. Louis. The majority of building contractors are affiliated with the association.

The new hourly wage scale is as follows: Plasterers, bricklayers and stone masons, $1.25; carpenters, tinners, electricians, plumbers, lathers and steam-fitters, $1; painters, 90 cents. At present the first group receive $1.50, the second, $1.25 and the last, $1.

ONE KILLED, MANY HURT, IN ATTACK.

Mob in Tennessee Tries to Get Negro from Jail and is Met by Bullets.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

KNOXVILLE (Tenn.) Aug. 20.—One person was killed and more than fifty wounded when a mob stormed the jail here last night. The mob was bent on lynching Frank Martin, negro, alleged assailant of Miss Jessie Parke, a young white school-teacher. The would-be lynchers crossed a dead line into the fire of authorities guarding the jail.

The crowd included many women, some of them with babies in their arms. Two of those shot were women.

The attack upon the jail followed a day of watchfulness on the part of authorities, police reserves and two machine-gun companies. Fire from shotguns handled by deputy sheriffs and machine guns from the militia swept the street.

As members of the mob fell the fire was returned. Excitement was at fever heat today. Another attack upon the jail was expected momentarily as groups formed upon the streets and discussed the tragedy.

Bathing Suit Style Causes Split in Zion.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—The board of aldermen of Zion City is split over a new ruling by Overseer Voliva, which has to do with the style of men's bathing suits.

The new ruling sets forth that the trousers of men's bathing suits must be extended below the knees and a skirt flapping down the thigh must be worn. It's a great mode for sedentary citizens with knobby knees and lean shanks. For swimming, the Zion style is little better than a suit of armor.

"We might as well jump in the lake with out clothes on," says Alderman A. E. Huentryagr, who is leading the fight against the new rule.

The bathing-suit argument dominated the council meeting last night and new promulgations regarding women's styles were crowded out of the discussion. For the time, it was decided, the bathing-suit ordinance will stand, but in the meantime daring women of the village may expose their necks as far down as their collarbones.

EDUCATION TO SECURE PEACE.

Progress Not Brought About by Advanced Thinkers.

No Time for Class Agitation Among Teachers.

Should Raise Home Standards of Life, Says Speaker.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

HONOLULU, Aug. 20.—Women speakers took up much of the closing session of the Pan-Pacific educational conference here today.

"We must become educators for peace," Nina Buchanan of Seattle, Wash., president of the National League of Teachers' Associations, told the conference. "The world's progress will not be brought about by advanced thinkers, called by the much abused name 'radicals.' We must be so schooled in the ways of peace that the war god will be hurled from the throne where he has been so long hated although worshiped."

LOS ANGELES WOMAN HEARD.

Iva Christine Ivorsen, president of the Los Angeles Teachers' Association declared, "nobody need fear class consciousness among teachers" and added that "this is no time for class agitation among teachers."

The welfare of teachers, parents and students alike can be promoted through raising the standard of home life, Mrs. Albert Rowell of Berkeley, declared in presenting the object of the National Congress of Mothers.

Caroline Frear Burk of San Francisco, speaking of the work of the Association of University Women, said the movement was international and fifteen nations sent representatives to the meeting in London in 1920. Florence Stephenson, Asheville, N. C., representing the women's board of home missions of the Presbyterian church, outlined the educational aspirations of the home missionary movement.

PRAISES MISSIONARY.

The missionary is the greatest influence for peace, the Rev. T. H. Haden, dean of the theological department of Kobe University, told the conference and emphasized the usefulness of mission schools.

"You educators raise the ideals of all countries," Francisco Brito, Consul-General for Portugal, said in addressing the conference. Japan is not narrow, Mr. Brito declared, but given the opportunity the Japanese will obtain education and Christian atmosphere.

FUNERAL TOMORROW OF MRS. A. C. STILSON.

WIFE OF RETIRED CLERGYMAN WAS PROMINENT HERE IN PHILANTHROPIC WORK.

Funeral services for Mrs. Arthur C. Stilson, long active in philanthropic work in St. John's parish and wife of a retired Episcopal clergyman many years resident here, will be conducted tomorrow at 2 p.m. at St. John's Church, Adams and Figueroa streets. Rev. Bertrand Stevens, bishop-coadjutor of Southern California, and Rev. Harwood Huntington will officiate.

Mrs. Stilson, since she and Dr. Stilson came here twenty years ago, was treasurer of the woman's guild of St. John's parish. For many years she was secretary of the board of directors of the Neighborhood Settlement Association, and she also was on the board of directors of the woman's auxiliary of the diocese. Dr. Stilson formerly was honorary curate of St. John's.

Dr. and Mrs. Stilson came here from Iowa. Dr. Stilson was rector of St. Mary's Church at Ottumwa, later moving to Des Moines, where he was secretary of the Bankers' Life Association. Mrs. Stilson was Miss Addie L. Seaton. She was born in Centerville, Ind., seventy-three years ago.

Mrs. Stilson died Thursday morning at Fair View Lodge, Lytle Creek Canyon, the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Baker of 2432 South Figueroa street. Mrs. Baker is a daughter, and Edward S. Stilson of Los Angeles a son. The Stilson residence is at 2340 Thompson street.

NEW YORK BOY IN A BAD PREDICAMENT.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Bernard Gates, 7 years old, of 22 Ludlow street, had a penny yesterday afternoon, and when he let one of his friends look at it the other boy threw it into the hose connection of a fire hydrant in Ludlow street between Hester and Canal streets. He grabbed the penny, but by that time he had thrust his arm in as far as the elbow and could not withdraw it.

The boy began to cry, and a blacksmith came from a shop a few doors away and worked for an hour trying to loose the hydrant connections so the boy could be released. He failed and the firemen of Truck Company No. 5 and the rescue squad of the department were sent for. They worked for half an hour and reloosened the framework of the hydrant and had lifted it from the pavement. The boy's hand still clutched his penny when it was withdrawn.

An ambulance surgeon was called from Gouverneur Hospital, but found that Bernard had not been hurt excepting for a few slight cuts on the arm. Several hundred persons gathered to watch the firemen at work trying to release the boy.

A similar accident occurred three weeks ago to David McCoskey, 9 years old, near his home in 431 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, when he shoved his arm into a hydrant and was released only after an hour's work by firemen.

DEFENDS SHIPPING BOARD.

Intolerable Condition is Heritage from Democrats, is Declaration of President Harding.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—President Harding today went to the aid of the Shipping Board and undertook to answer the storm of criticism which broke yesterday in the Senate, largely on the Democratic side, against the management of the American merchant marine. He wrote a letter to Senator Jones of Washington, chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, in which he conceded the existence of "an intolerable state of affairs," and bluntly charged that it "is wholly an inheritance from the previous administration."

The letter was read into the record in connection with the debate on the pending bill appropriating $48,500,000 to begin cleaning up the deficiency in the shipping administration's financial situation.

ANSWERS McCORMICK.

At the same time Chairman Lasker of the shipping board wrote a letter to Senator McCormick of Illinois in which he responded to the Democratic senator's demand for a re-definition of the administration's merchant marine policy.

Mr. Lasker insisted that his original estimate for the shipping board needed $400,000,000 to clear up debts inherited from the previous administration was correct.

"These debts were made by the Wilson administration and must at some time be liquidated, now or later, and I do not want Congress to rest under the misapprehension that in seemingly cutting down the shipping board estimate of appropriation it has really saved or can save any money," said Mr. Lasker.

LASKER'S WORK PRAISED.

President Harding praised Mr. Lasker's work highly and defended his practice of employing capable and costly legal talent to defend the government in the pending claim, aggregating $200,000,000. He also insisted that "over-payment" had been avoided in the selection of experts to advise the shipping board. He declared that the shipping board would require the serv- experts to advise the shipping men that could be found to help untangle the condition of affairs "which have shocked the country and given the Congress such concern."

Following the reading of the President's letter the Senate adjourned until Monday without acting on the shipping bill.

MIDDLE WEST NEWS IN BRIEF.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 20.—The body of a man not yet identified was found by four boys buried in a clump of weeds near the Frisco tracks. His skull was fractured in several places.

Another body of an unidentified man about 50 years old whose skull had been crushed was found floating in the Mississippi river at the outlet of the Mill Creek sewer.

Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Erisman, who reside six miles east of Mexico, have been married sixty-two years, believed to be a record for this section. Erisman is 84 and his wife 81. They live on the same farm they began cultivating in 1875.

Six cases of infantile paralysis have been discovered in the Alton industrial district.

Unemployment in France is on Decrease.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PARIS, Aug. 20.—Unemployment in France continues to decrease and, as far as the provinces are concerned, the recent crisis appears to have been completely overcome.

The latest figures show that the total number of unemployed in France is 47,566 and out of that number 31,429 belong to Paris and the Department of the Seine, leaving only 16,137 unemployed for the rest of France.

Compared with the census figures, the number of unemployed in France amounts to only 0.1 per cent of the population.

RULE OF AMERICANS DEMANDED BY MOROS.

WOOD-FORBES MISSION TOLD THAT TREATMENT ACCORDED IS BAD.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

JOLO (P. I.) Aug. 19.—The Moros have been treated worse than dogs during the last eight years, Chief Tulawi, one of the leading Moros of Jolo, told the Wood-Forbes American mission. "We want Jolo for the people of Jolo," he said. "America is the only country we want service under. We are thrown into jail for not sending our children to school."

Hadji Batu, Nacionalista member of the Philippine Senate, and other legislators, advised the Moros to send their children to school in order that they might become educated and be able to compete with other peoples. Senator Batu said the people would abide by whatever recommendation the mission shall make, but will retain "a natural love of country."

Hundreds of Moros in native boats, gaily decorated with American flags and Moro colors, met the mission steamer and accompanied it up the bay to the dock. Each Moro boat carried a musician, who played continuously until the mission landed.

The only banner in the parade escorting the mission to the meeting was inscribed, "We wish to become American territory; no independence. We want an American Governor for this province."

In the absence of details of the killing of six Moros and the wounding of three others in Lanao province, Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood, heading the mission, declined to comment.

AMERICAN INFLUENCE IN SHANGHAI GROWS.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

SHANGHAI, Aug. 20.—An indication of how swiftly American influence is growing in Shanghai, which is China's greatest commercial center, is to be seen in a comparison of the amount of business done at the American postal agency in Shanghai with that of postoffices in the United States.

A report issued recently by the Postoffice Department which shows post receipts of fifty leading postoffices in the United States records that only sixteen of these made increases in the month of May, 1920, over the same month the preceding year and the largest increase was 15.32 per cent. The increase in postal receipts in Shanghai in April, 1921, over the same month the preceding year was 179 per cent and the May increase was 123 per cent.

FIRING COOK IS RISKY AFFAIR.

Chinese Restaurant Keeper May be Deported Because of Recent Action.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

HONOLULU, Aug. 20.—Seto Chan, a Chinese restaurant owner here, is charged with illegally entering United States territory, because he recently discharged his cook.

The two incidents seem to have no connection, but the cook, when discharged, threatened Chan with dire consequences. When the threats failed to have effect the cook rushed to Federal authorities and informed them that Chan was born in China and he had smuggled himself into Hawaii in violation of the law.

Chan's arrest followed. He denies the charge, declaring that he was born and educated in Hawaii. He speaks English and Hawaiian fluently, in addition to Chinese. He is at liberty on bond, pending a deportation hearing.

LOS ANGELES BUSINESS IS ON INCREASE.

Volume Shows Significant Gain Over Same Period of Year Ago.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Volume of business as measured by debits to individual accounts reported to the Federal Reserve Board for Los Angeles and other cities on the Pacific Coast for the week ended August 17, shows a distinct increase.

The records show that the debits for Los Angeles during the week ended Wednesday last amounted to $105,502,000 as compared with $91,511,000 for the week ended August 10, and $102,321,000 for the week ended August 18, last year. The increase over the corresponding week in 1920 in Los Angeles is significant for the debit as averaged for 152 reporting centers shows a decline of 18 per cent. Other coast cities did not report a gain over the corresponding week last year.

Long Beach reported an increase from $5,240,000 to $5,865,000 in debits for the two weeks this month and $5,365,000 for the week of Aug. 18, 1920. Pasadena debits increased slightly as the total for the week ended August 17 was $4,680,000, as against $4,551,000 for the week of August 10.

Bergdoll Chase by Government Not Abandoned.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Dispatches stating that Grover Cleveland Bergdoll has fled to Switzerland in an effort to avoid possible extradition from Germany to the United States did not dismay State Department officials. They said today that this country would eventually get him anyway. There are several loop holes open, it is understood.

Military crimes are not extraditable from Switzerland, it is said, but the fact that Bergdoll violated the Canadian laws in leaving that country on a forged passport may lead to his apprehension. In connection with this discussion of Bergdoll's various passports, State Department officials today denied that Bergdoll could have gone to Switzerland on an American passport of his own, as stated in the dispatches this morning. It was said that if he held a passport it must have been forged, as none had been issued to him by this government to travel anywhere.

It was learned that Great Britain has been renewing efforts to get Bergdoll out of Germany on the charge of having used a forged Canadian passport. However, it was ascertained, that under the British-German treaty, Canada could not surrender the draft deserter to this country even if he was taken to Canada for trial. Thirty days after his acquittal or after any prison sentence he might serve, he would have to be returned to Germany. It is believed, however, the British government will be asked to try to secure his return from Switzerland.

FIND MISSING GIRLS.

Long Beach Police Locate Pair Thought to Have Been Drowned.

Search for the bodies of Myrtle McClary, 12 years old, and Helen Wilson, aged 13 years, of Maywood, who their parents and county officials feared had been drowned in the swimming pool in Maywood, ended last night when Long Beach police found the pair wandering about the streets of the beach city.

The girls told Long Beach police they had run away from their homes in Maywood Friday and had slept on the sand beneath the municipal auditorium Friday night. Each had bobbed the other's hair, they told police.

"Maywood was too dull, we wanted to see the country," one of the girls is said to have declared when police asked them their reason for running away from home. They were returned to their parents late last night.

CAPTAIN DISMISSED; DROP MUTINY CHARGE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

VANCOUVER (B. C.) Aug. 20.—Charges of mutiny brought against thirty-two members of the crew of the Peruvian government steamer Iquitos, in port here, by the captain of the vessel, have been dismissed and the men have rejoined their ship. Funds have arrived and the crew are said to have been paid long overdue wages.

Acting under instructions from his government, the Peruvian Consul here has removed Capt. Obert from command of the Iquitos and placed the vessel under Chief Officer J. M. Downes.

LEGUIA WILL STOP REVOLTS.

Peruvian President Believes in Americans.

Would Put Force in Charge of Customs Office.

Hopes to Carry Out Constructive Program.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

IQUIQUE (Chile) Aug. 20.—The Peruvian customs will be under an American administrator as soon as the United States government recommends a man for this place. This action will be followed by complete reorganization of the republic's entire administrative structure under the direction of Americans, according to an interview with President Leguia.

"We are only awaiting the United States government's recommendation before ordering a thorough reorganization of the customhouse under an American administrator," he said. "I am convinced that we can materially increase the republic's revenue if the customs are in the hands of Americans. My hope is to put an American in charge of every branch of our government's activities.

"The navy already is being organized under a United States naval mission, an American educator is reorganizing our school system and nation-wide irrigation and sanitary projects are in American hands."

SEEKS EFFICIENCY.

Asked if this was not one of the bases for political opposition to him, he replied: "Yes, my enemies are making an issue of this part of my program, saying I plan to deliver Peru to the Americans. This is not true; I only desire an efficient business administration and I am convinced that this is best possible under Americans."

Concerning the deportation of many Peruvian citizens, he said:

"I am compelled to use these methods because these men are continually blocking every move and making it impossible to concentrate my attention on the administration. I was honestly elected in a fair election and they attempted to prevent my assuming office. I was forced to resort to a revolution to get my rights since which they have not given me a moment's rest, even going so far as to set fire to the government palace on the eve of the centennial celebration in order to embarrass me in the eyes of visitors.

WILL STOP REVOLTS.

"I am the only President of Peru who ever had a program or policy of government and I am determined to put it into effect. My opponents have no program and no grounds for wishing my overthrow except to get control of the treasury. Since they refuse to suspend revolutionary plotting the welfare of the country demands their deportation. The trouble is they have plotted for revolutions all their lives and everyone else has been too lenient with them. I intend to break them of the habit.

"I offered them amnesty if they would give their word not to engage in any further revolutionary conspiracies during the remainder of my administration. They declined, therefore, they must remain outside of Peru."

Asked why it was necessary to ignore the courts if he had proof of revolutionary activities, he said:

BLAMES POLITICAL ENEMIES.

"It was not necessary to consult the courts because we have a law permitting government deportations without trial if anyone is caught in revolutionary activities."

President Leguia blamed his political enemies for the country's present desperate financial condition. He states that the present Congress will approve of the project of creating a national bank, which will solve the difficulties through being a bank of issue and in the meantime he hopes to float a loan in the United States, which will tide the country over until the bank is established. The last Congress refused to establish the bank on the grounds that it threatened an uncontrolled issue of paper currency.

President Leguia said that the New York bankers had offered to loan considerably less than the amount requested but he rejected them, stating the country must have the entire amount in one loan and if it could not be floated in the United States he would take it elsewhere.

HIT PLANNING BODY.

Realty Men Urge Council to Abolish Commission and Cut Expense.

That the City Planning Commission should be abolished and the city saved the "needless expense" of the work done by the board is recommended in a communication filed yesterday with the City Council by Kells & Grant, Wilshire district realty agents, following the exciting zoning meeting recently held at the Cahuenga-street schoolhouse. The communication states that the "people in the Wilshire district do not wish to have their property zoned," and the letter further says that it is too late to do the zoning now being done by the City Planning Commission, and that the work as proposed by the commission could not be accomplished harmoniously, and in a manner satisfactory to all property owners.

WASHINGTON NEWS IN BRIEF.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The House passed the tax revision bill today by a vote of 274 to 125, with nine Republicans voting against it. Fifty Republicans, however, had voted with the Democrats previously on a motion to recommit the measure with instructions to restore the old surtaxes on incomes over $66,000. This was defeated, 169 to 230.

Senate and House conferees on the antibeer bill agreed today, the Senate group yielding to the extreme drys in modifying the Stanley search and seizure amendment so that evidence that beer manufactured in the home is for sale will not be required for issuance of a search warrant. Senate leaders declare they will filibuster against this and the recess program is threatened.

President Harding, in a letter to Senator Jones, defends the Shipping Board against recent attacks, declaring that the great indebtedness is a heritage from the Wilson administration and that high salaries are necessary to help clear up the mess.

Dr. C. E. Sawyer, President's physician and aid in framing the veterans' rehabilitation program, declared today that the government's rehabilitation program must not be an idealistic theory, but a practical one which will furnish the soldier with "more earning power."

It is estimated that American famine relief in Russia will cost $10,000,000. Most of the food supplies will be purchased in the United States.

Grover Cleveland Bergdoll's flight from Germany to Switzerland to escape extradition after a peace treaty is negotiated will not deter the United States government in its effort to capture the arch-draft dodger.

Maj. Arthur D. Dean of Columbia University has been appointed assistant director of the Veterans' Bureau to be in charge of rehabilitation.

TAX BILL IS PASSED IN HOUSE.

Revision Favored by Vote of 274 to 125; Minority Report to Recommit Lost.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The House passed the tax-revision bill late today by a vote of 274 to 125, one voting present. Previous to the final vote, a minority motion to recommit the measure, made by Representative Garner, acting Democratic leader, was defeated by a vote of 169 to 230. The motion instructed the committee to eliminate from the bill the provisions reducing the surtaxes on incomes in excess of $66,000 to 32 per cent. Quite a number of Republicans voted for this motion, having taken the position that the graduated surtaxes now in force should be continued for at least another two years.

As passed, the bill represents, according to Chairman Fordney, revenue reductions based on the revenue under present law, aggregating over $800,000,000. The repeal of the excess-profits tax and reduction of surtaxes, however, does not become effective until next year. Provisions increasing the income-tax exemption to $2500 for married persons whose income does not exceed $5000, and increasing the exemption for dependents from $200 to $400 for each dependent, will be retroactive, however, and apply on incomes of the current year.

In the final clean-up on the bill numerous amendments were adopted, among them one eliminating all taxes on perfumes and cosmetics. Another important amendment wipes out all taxes on baseballs, basket balls, skates, snow shoes, skiis, footballs and all uniforms and equipment connected with such sports. The original provision of the bill reduced the taxes on these goods from 10 per cent to 5 per cent. Golf balls, tennis balls and equipment of golf and tennis retain a 5 per cent tax in the bill. The manufacturers' tax on motor boats not exceeding 32 feet in length, or five tons capacity, also was eliminated, and the manufacturers' tax on yachts was reduced from 10 to 5 per cent.

HAYWOOD GETS NO ESTATE FROM WIFE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20.—Mrs. Jane Minor Haywood, wife of William D. Haywood, former leader of the Industrial Workers of the World, who fled to Russia to escape a twenty years' prison sentence and a $15,000 fine for conspiracy to obstruct the government's war efforts, left no estate when she died at Winnemucca, Nev., two years ago, it became known here today. This would dispose of any chance that U. S. Dist.-Atty. Charles F. Clyne of Chicago might have had in attempting to collect the fine from her estate.

News dispatches last Monday from Chicago said that Mr. Clyne was contemplating action to recover the fine because Mrs. Haywood died without leaving a will and under such circumstances the Nevada laws award one-third of the estate to the husband. Haywood, however, deserted his wife and two children many years ago, it is reported, but so far as known there was no divorce.

W. H. Minor, father of Mrs. Haywood, was a pioneer stock man of Nevada, and when he died several years ago he left a property estate valued at about $20,000. It was divided among his widow and five children.

PIONEER Y.M.C.A. COAST WORKER DIES.

HENRY J. McCOY OF SAN FRANCISCO PASSES AWAY AFTER YEAR'S ILLNESS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20.—Henry J. McCoy, for thirty-nine years general secretary of the San Francisco Y.M.C.A., died last night at his home in that city after a long illness.

McCoy was 73 years old and was just entering his fiftieth year in the association work. When he went to the San Francisco work the nearest Y.M.C.A. was in Denver, so Mr. McCoy has been the pioneer of all the "Y" work on the Pacific Coast.

Two days after the earthquake McCoy left for the East and in thirty days had raised $700,000 for rehabilitation. He was the organizer of the California State Committee for Y.M.C.A. work. His widow and two children, James and Ruth, survive.

ULTIMATUM LAID DOWN TO UNIONS.

The American Plan Will be Put Into Effect in East St. Louis.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 20.—Members of the Building Trades Council of East St. Louis, Ill., at a meeting last night appointed a committee to confer with a committee appointed by the Central Trades and Labor Union at union headquarters Tuesday night.

It was learned following the meeting, at which the public was excluded, that the majority of the men present did not favor considering a reduction in wages until reductions have been made by persons in the building-material business. Some of the men present at the meeting objected to considering reductions in wages until master builders in East St. Louis agreed to a reduction in their profits.

An ultimatum to the building trades unions, declaring that East St. Louis would become an open-shop town unless the unions agree to the wage scale decided upon by the association members has been issued by the Master Builders' Association in East St. Louis. The majority of building contractors are affiliated with the association.

The new hourly wage scale is as follows: Plasterers, bricklayers and stone masons, $1.25; carpenters, tinners, electricians, plumbers, lathers and steam-fitters, $1; painters, 90 cents. At present the first group receive $1.50, the second, $1.25 and the last, $1.

ONE KILLED, MANY HURT, IN ATTACK.

Mob in Tennessee Tries to Get Negro from Jail and is Met by Bullets.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

KNOXVILLE (Tenn.) Aug. 20.—One person was killed and more than fifty wounded when a mob stormed the jail here last night. The mob was bent on lynching Frank Martin, negro, alleged assailant of Miss Jessie Parke, a young white school-teacher. The would-be lynchers crossed a dead line into the fire of authorities guarding the jail.

The crowd included many women, some of them with babies in their arms. Two of those shot were women.

The attack upon the jail followed a day of watchfulness on the part of authorities, police reserves and two machine-gun companies. Fire from shotguns handled by deputy sheriffs and machine guns from the militia swept the street.

As members of the mob fell the fire was returned. Excitement was at fever heat today. Another attack upon the jail was expected momentarily as groups formed upon the streets and discussed the tragedy.

Bathing Suit Style Causes Split in Zion.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—The board of aldermen of Zion City is split over a new ruling by Overseer Voliva, which has to do with the style of men's bathing suits.

The new ruling sets forth that the trousers of men's bathing suits must be extended below the knees and a skirt flapping down the thigh must be worn. It's a great mode for sedentary citizens with knobby knees and lean shanks. For swimming, the Zion style is little better than a suit of armor.

"We might as well jump in the lake with out clothes on," says Alderman A. E. Huentryagr, who is leading the fight against the new rule.

The bathing-suit argument dominated the council meeting last night and new promulgations regarding women's styles were crowded out of the discussion. For the time, it was decided, the bathing-suit ordinance will stand, but in the meantime daring women of the village may expose their necks as far down as their collarbones.

EDUCATION TO SECURE PEACE.

Progress Not Brought About by Advanced Thinkers.

No Time for Class Agitation Among Teachers.

Should Raise Home Standards of Life, Says Speaker.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

HONOLULU, Aug. 20.—Women speakers took up much of the closing session of the Pan-Pacific educational conference here today.

"We must become educators for peace," Nina Buchanan of Seattle, Wash., president of the National League of Teachers' Associations, told the conference. "The world's progress will not be brought about by advanced thinkers, called by the much abused name 'radicals.' We must be so schooled in the ways of peace that the war god will be hurled from the throne where he has been so long hated although worshiped."

LOS ANGELES WOMAN HEARD.

Iva Christine Ivorsen, president of the Los Angeles Teachers' Association declared, "nobody need fear class consciousness among teachers" and added that "this is no time for class agitation among teachers."

The welfare of teachers, parents and students alike can be promoted through raising the standard of home life, Mrs. Albert Rowell of Berkeley, declared in presenting the object of the National Congress of Mothers.

Caroline Frear Burk of San Francisco, speaking of the work of the Association of University Women, said the movement was international and fifteen nations sent representatives to the meeting in London in 1920. Florence Stephenson, Asheville, N. C., representing the women's board of home missions of the Presbyterian church, outlined the educational aspirations of the home missionary movement.

PRAISES MISSIONARY.

The missionary is the greatest influence for peace, the Rev. T. H. Haden, dean of the theological department of Kobe University, told the conference and emphasized the usefulness of mission schools.

"You educators raise the ideals of all countries," Francisco Brito, Consul-General for Portugal, said in addressing the conference. Japan is not narrow, Mr. Brito declared, but given the opportunity the Japanese will obtain education and Christian atmosphere.

FUNERAL TOMORROW OF MRS. A. C. STILSON.

WIFE OF RETIRED CLERGYMAN WAS PROMINENT HERE IN PHILANTHROPIC WORK.

Funeral services for Mrs. Arthur C. Stilson, long active in philanthropic work in St. John's parish and wife of a retired Episcopal clergyman many years resident here, will be conducted tomorrow at 2 p.m. at St. John's Church, Adams and Figueroa streets. Rev. Bertrand Stevens, bishop-coadjutor of Southern California, and Rev. Harwood Huntington will officiate.

Mrs. Stilson, since she and Dr. Stilson came here twenty years ago, was treasurer of the woman's guild of St. John's parish. For many years she was secretary of the board of directors of the Neighborhood Settlement Association, and she also was on the board of directors of the woman's auxiliary of the diocese. Dr. Stilson formerly was honorary curate of St. John's.

Dr. and Mrs. Stilson came here from Iowa. Dr. Stilson was rector of St. Mary's Church at Ottumwa, later moving to Des Moines, where he was secretary of the Bankers' Life Association. Mrs. Stilson was Miss Addie L. Seaton. She was born in Centerville, Ind., seventy-three years ago.

Mrs. Stilson died Thursday morning at Fair View Lodge, Lytle Creek Canyon, the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Baker of 2432 South Figueroa street. Mrs. Baker is a daughter, and Edward S. Stilson of Los Angeles a son. The Stilson residence is at 2340 Thompson street.

NEW YORK BOY IN A BAD PREDICAMENT.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Bernard Gates, 7 years old, of 22 Ludlow street, had a penny yesterday afternoon, and when he let one of his friends look at it the other boy threw it into the hose connection of a fire hydrant in Ludlow street between Hester and Canal streets. He grabbed the penny, but by that time he had thrust his arm in as far as the elbow and could not withdraw it.

The boy began to cry, and a blacksmith came from a shop a few doors away and worked for an hour trying to loose the hydrant connections so the boy could be released. He failed and the firemen of Truck Company No. 5 and the rescue squad of the department were sent for. They worked for half an hour and reloosened the framework of the hydrant and had lifted it from the pavement. The boy's hand still clutched his penny when it was withdrawn.

An ambulance surgeon was called from Gouverneur Hospital, but found that Bernard had not been hurt excepting for a few slight cuts on the arm. Several hundred persons gathered to watch the firemen at work trying to release the boy.

A similar accident occurred three weeks ago to David McCosikey, 9 years old, near his home in 431 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, when he shoved his arm into a hydrant and was released only after an hour's work by firemen.

DEFENDS SHIPPING BOARD.

Intolerable Condition is Heritage from Democrats, is Declaration of President Harding.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—President Harding today went to the aid of the Shipping Board and undertook to answer the storm of criticism which broke yesterday in the Senate, largely on the Democratic side, against the management of the American merchant marine. He wrote a letter to Senator Jones of Washington, chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, in which he conceded the existence of "an intolerable state of affairs," and bluntly charged that it "is wholly an inheritance from the previous administration."

The letter was read into the record in connection with the debate on the pending bill appropriating $48,500,000 to begin cleaning up the deficiency in the shipping administration's financial situation.

ANSWERS McCORMICK.

At the same time Chairman Lasker of the shipping board wrote a letter to Senator McCormick of Illinois in which he responded to the Democratic senator's demand for a re-definition of the administration's merchant marine policy.

Mr. Lasker insisted that his original estimate for the shipping board needed $400,000,000 to clear up debts inherited from the previous administration was correct.

"These debts were made by the Wilson administration and must at some time be liquidated, now or later, and I do not want Congress to rest under the misapprehension that in seemingly cutting down the shipping board estimate of appropriation it has really saved or can save any money," said Mr. Lasker.

LASKER'S WORK PRAISED.

President Harding praised Mr. Lasker's work highly and defended his practice of employing capable and costly legal talent to defend the government in the pending claim, aggregating $200,000,000. He also insisted that "over-payment" had been avoided in the selection of experts to advise the shipping board. He declared that the shipping board would require the services of experts to advise the shipping men that could be found to help untangle the condition of affairs "which have shocked the country and given the Congress such concern."

Following the reading of the President's letter the Senate adjourned until Monday without acting on the shipping bill.

Unemployment in France is on Decrease.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PARIS, Aug. 20.—Unemployment in France continues to decrease and, as far as the provinces are concerned, the recent crisis appears to have been completely overcome.

The latest figures show that the total number of unemployed in France is 47,566 and out of that number 31,429 belong to Paris and the Department of the Seine, leaving only 16,137 unemployed for the rest of France.

Compared with the census figures, the number of unemployed in France amounts to only 0.1 per cent of the population.

RULE OF AMERICANS DEMANDED BY MOROS.

WOOD-FORBES MISSION TOLD THAT TREATMENT ACCORDED IS BAD.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

JOLO (P. I.) Aug. 19.—The Moros have been treated worse than dogs during the last eight years, Chief Tulawi, one of the leading Moros of Jolo, told the Wood-Forbes American mission. "We want Jolo for the people of Jolo," he said. "America is the only country we want service under. We are thrown into jail for not sending our children to school."

Hadji Batu, Nacionalista member of the Philippine Senate, and other legislators, advised the Moros to send their children to school in order that they might become educated and be able to compete with other peoples. Senator Batu said the people would abide by whatever recommendation the mission shall make, but will retain "a natural love of country."

Hundreds of Moros in native boats, gaily decorated with American flags and Moro colors, met the mission steamer and accompanied it up the bay to the dock. Each Moro boat carried a musician, who played continuously until the mission landed.

The only banner in the parade escorting the mission to the meeting was inscribed, "We wish to become American territory; no independence. We want an American Governor for this province."

In the absence of details of the killing of six Moros and the wounding of three others in Lanao province, Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood, heading the mission, declined to comment.

AMERICAN INFLUENCE IN SHANGHAI GROWS.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

SHANGHAI, Aug. 20.—An indication of how swiftly American influence is growing in Shanghai, which is China's greatest commercial center, is to be seen in a comparison of the amount of business done at the American postal agency in Shanghai with that of postoffices in the United States.

A report issued recently by the Postoffice Department which shows post receipts of fifty leading postoffices in the United States records that only sixteen of these made increases in the month of May, 1920, over the same month the preceding year and the largest increase was 15.32 per cent. The increase in postal receipts in Shanghai in April, 1921, over the same month the preceding year was 179 per cent and the May increase was 123 per cent.

FIRING COOK IS RISKY AFFAIR.

Chinese Restaurant Keeper May be Deported Because of Recent Action.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

HONOLULU, Aug. 20.—Seto Chan, a Chinese restaurant owner here, is charged with illegally entering United States territory, because he recently discharged his cook.

The two incidents seem to have no connection, but the cook, when discharged, threatened Chan with dire consequences. When the threats failed to have effect the cook rushed to Federal authorities and informed them that Chan was born in China and he had smuggled himself into Hawaii in violation of the law.

Chan's arrest followed. He denies the charge, declaring that he was born and educated in Hawaii. He speaks English and Hawaiian fluently, in addition to Chinese. He is at liberty on bond, pending a deportation hearing.

LOS ANGELES BUSINESS IS ON INCREASE.

Volume Shows Significant Gain Over Same Period of Year Ago.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Volume of business as measured by debits to individual accounts reported to the Federal Reserve Board for Los Angeles and other cities on the Pacific Coast for the week ended August 17, shows a distinct increase.

The records show that the debits for Los Angeles during the week ended Wednesday last amounted to $105,502,000 as compared with $91,511,000 for the week ended August 10, and $102,331,000 for the week ended August 18, last year. The increase over the corresponding week in 1920 in Los Angeles is significant for the debit as averaged for 152 reporting centers shows a decline of 18 per cent. Other coast cities did not report a gain over the corresponding week last year.

Long Beach reported an increase from $5,240,000 to $5,365,000 in debits for the two weeks this month and $5,365,000 for the week of Aug. 18, 1920. Pasadena debits increased slightly as the total for the week ended August 17 was $4,680,000, as against $4,551,000 for the week of August 10.

Bergdoll Chase by Government Not Abandoned.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Dispatches stating that Grover Cleveland Bergdoll has fled to Switzerland in an effort to avoid possible extradition from Germany to the United States did not dismay State Department officials. They said today that this country would eventually get him anyway. There are several loop holes open, it is understood.

Military crimes are not extraditable from Switzerland, it is said, but the fact that Bergdoll violated the Canadian laws in leaving that country on a forged passport may lead to his apprehension. In connection with this discussion of Bergdoll's various passports, State Department officials today denied that Bergdoll could have gone to Switzerland on an American passport of his own, as stated in the dispatches this morning. It was said that if he held a passport it must have been forged, as none had been issued to him by this government to travel anywhere.

It was learned that Great Britain has been renewing efforts to get Bergdoll out of Germany on the charge of having used a forged Canadian passport. However, it was ascertained, that under the British-German treaty, Canada could not surrender the draft deserter to this country even if he was taken to Canada for trial. Thirty days after his acquittal or after any prison sentence he might serve, he would have to be returned to Germany. It is believed, however, the British government will be asked to try to secure his return from Switzerland.

FIND MISSING GIRLS.

Long Beach Police Locate Pair Thought to Have Been Drowned.

Search for the bodies of Myrtle McClary, 12 years old, and Helen Wilson, aged 13 years, of Maywood, who their parents and county officials feared had been drowned in the swimming pool in Maywood, ended last night when Long Beach police found the pair wandering about the streets of the beach city.

The girls told Long Beach police they had run away from their homes in Maywood Friday and had slept on the sand beneath the municipal auditorium Friday night. Each had bobbed the other's hair, they told police.

"Maywood was too dull, we wanted to see the country," one of the girls is said to have declared when police asked them their reason for running away from home. They were returned to their parents late last night.

CAPTAIN DISMISSED; DROP MUTINY CHARGE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

VANCOUVER (B. C.) Aug. 20.—Charges of mutiny brought against thirty-two members of the crew of the Peruvian government steamer Iquitos, in port here, by the captain of the vessel, have been dismissed and the men have rejoined their ship. Funds have arrived and the crew are said to have been paid long overdue wages.

Acting under instructions from his government, the Peruvian Consul here has removed Capt. Obert from command of the Iquitos and placed the vessel under Chief Officer J. M. Downes.

FOR SALE—
BUNGALOW BARGAINS.
Double Bungalows.
Last Sunday we advertised a double bungalow. We sold it before noon Monday. We are now offering another right next door. It is brand new, 5 rooms with 2 bedrooms and disappearing bed on each side. Tile baths. Absolutely up-to-date. Large garage. Half block from car line. In one of the best and highest locations in city. Price $12,000 and on attractive terms. This offers an unusual combination of home, income and future increase in value.

FURNISHED BUNGALOW.
Completely furnished. All ready to move into. 6 rooms and 2 sleeping porches. Southwest on splendid street. The price is only $6500 and $2000 cash will handle.

REAL SNAP.
Only $6000 for a splendid 6-room bungalow, fine location, high ground, close to car lines. Hardwood floors, all built-in features, modern, attractive and wonderfully homey. Buy this either for home or speculation, as it is underpriced. Half cash will handle.

HOME AND SPECULATION.
Here is a 6-room bungalow for $5500 and only $1500 cash. Located less than a block from Washington st., close in. Live in this house a couple of years and your rent will not cost a cent and you will have a handsome profit besides. The speculative value of this property is very great. In the meantime you have a very comfortable home. Now rented for $65. In our opinion, this place is at least $1000 under present value.

IN CONCLUSION.
Let us call attention to the fact that we only advertise as bargains those properties we are fully convinced are such. That the buying public agrees with us is evidenced by the fact that out of 5 such properties we advertised last Sunday, 3 were sold before Wednesday night. One of these was sold to a man who admitted that he "had been looking for 19 months."

FOR SALE—(A ZERO WEATHER HOME)
WHAT WOULD YOU PAY for a WEATHER-PROOF home like THIS?—It's got TWO TILED BATHS, 3 or 4 bedrooms, a SUN ROOM, an EAST front, SIXTY-foot lot—
—an' EVERYTHING.
Yes, sir, I came from Minnesota, where I built CEMENT STUCCO houses to stand zero weather. I built this the same here. It's SOLID AS A ROCK. I added everyone of the delightful Los Angeles features—model kitchen with TILED sink, SUPERB water heater, UNIT GAS heating, finest OAK floors. Say, but I put all the good things I saw here in six months IN THIS ONE PACKAGE. It's MY SAMPLE—my first Los Angeles house—
BUT NOW the place is finished, I am ready to start three more, and I NEED CASH. Can you pay me $1000 or more down? Or what can you pay me in MONEY? No trades. I'll make terms, and the most astonishing PRICE this town ever saw. Other builders tell me I am foolish—that I will go broke—but leave that to me. I'll deliver you a guaranteed title and a ZERO WEATHER house if you'll get MR. BATTELLE to show you. See him, 334 S. Broadway, or phone him, 60749.

BEST LOT SPECULATION LEFT.
You know what happened on Western Ave.? We offered you bargains from 48th st. south to Slauson Ave., and every son-of-a-gun that followed our advice made money. One fellow bought one day and sold the next at $750 profit. Others held longer and did better or will do better. Now there are nothing but re-sales on Western Ave. at much higher prices. But I have 4 adjacent lots on Slauson Ave., the next big speculation, that I can sell, and on terms at that, for $42 a front ft. This frontage will sell for $80 to $100 in almost no time. Remember, Slauson is to be widened and carried through to Venice, whether you take advantage of this golden opportunity or not. Watch Slauson Ave. Our price for these 4 lots, $6000, 1-4 cash. Don't wait and then regret. Act with decision right now and win. E. P. MOORE, 1706 W. 48th St., Vermont 4479. Ask for Mr. Moore or Miss Driver.

FOR EXCHANGE—BRICK APARTMENT. 3-story, with elevator, completely furnished and showing an annual income of $18,000. This property is located on one of the main west side boulevards, in a substantial residence district and caters to permanent renters. The building is better than the average and is in fine condition, both exterior and interior, having hardwood floors in every apartment. On the valuation of $100,000, it is paying a net income of 14 per cent and the rents are very reasonable. The owner has agreed to accept one-half in exchange in good clear property, and we can arrange the balance by cash or mortgage. This is the best proposition on our list today. Ask for Mr. Green, Exclusive Agents.

501 Merchants' Nat. Bank Bldg.

FOR SALE—
Do you want a 45 per cent investment? Venice elegant apartment, 2-story stucco, 12 apartments and 4 transient rooms, lot 30x115 close to ocean. Fine condition, elegant equipment and furnishings. Only $23,000—$10,000 cash handles.

This property shows a net profit of $5000 per year, after expenses and interest on deferred payments are received. The owner needs the cash worse than the property, or $5000 additional would not buy it. This is more than a bargain. Do you want it? Investigate, it speaks for itself. Remember, you pay little more than price of a lease and furnishings, but get lot and good building thrown in.

OIL PROPERTY—Miscel.

LUSE WELL NO. 1. AND LUSE WELL NO. 3, NOW DRILLING. LUSE WELL NO. 2 WILL START DRILLING IN A SHORT WHILE.

20-YEAR PECOS COUNTY OIL AND GAS LEASES THAT SHARE IN THE PRODUCTION FROM THREE WELLS THAT I WILL DRILL ENTIRELY AT MY OWN EXPENSE.

Mr. Dave Humphreys, my drilling contractor in the Pecos County field, has just spent several days in Fort Worth in conference with me relative to the drilling of my three wells in Pecos County, and states that my Well No. 1 is progressing very nicely, and drilling in a shale formation.

I closed a contract with Mr. Humphreys, while here, to immediately start the drilling of my Well No. 3, in the extreme eastern part of Pecos County, which will be located on what is geologically known as the "Marathon fold," and which is said by some of our most prominent geologists to be one of the greatest structures in Texas. This well is now drilling, and my instructions to my drilling contractor is to push operations as fast as possible.

We have a few very choice leases left near this well. These are 20-year commercial leases, are only about 60 days old, and the titles to same are absolutely good, having been passed on by very competent attorneys.

We have sold all of our leases near our Well No. 1, and practically everything near Well No. 2.

Remember, that when you buy leases from me in this three-well drilling proposition, that every lease that you buy, carries an interest in 7-8s of the production from these three wells, and you also get absolute title to your lease, and same will be your individual property with no drilling obligations or other strings tied to it whatever (and you will get a separate contract with your lease for your part of the production from these three wells,) said contract signed and acknowledged, and can be placed on record in Pecos County. And when we secure production from these three wells you will get a check each month for your part of the production. You can also sell your lease, drill wells on it, let drilling contracts or handle same in any way that you choose.

People, who are acquainted with this field, advise me that they see no reason why I should not get good production, and that the locations of my three wells, and my leases are excellent.

This is the greatest opportunity ever offered the small investor to make some big money on a small investment. If you are a live agent or a salesman, I have a proposition for you, that is the best seller on the market, and will surpass any proposition that you have ever been offered, and wherein, you can make some big money for yourself, as well as making a lot of money for your customer; so get in touch with me at once, and let me give you full particulars of same.

Remember, our locations are excellent, our leases are the very best to be had, and run for a period of 20 years, with very low rentals. Can furnish you with very latest maps, showing locations of my leases and the locations of all wells in this field, also, literature explaining this proposition in full, and complete drilling reports on the Pecos County field.

This is not a speculation, but a real investment. If you wish to make some big money in the oil business, get in touch with me at once. My prices are very reasonable.

Don't put off until tomorrow, what you should do today. Procrastination and delay has kept many men from making a fortune. Obey that impulse, and act now.

FOR SALE—
HELP YOURSELF TO PRODUCE.
We are asking the public, already overburdened with plausible oil stock representation, to quietly reflect on the possibilities of co-operating with a group of men with their small investment or otherwise to enable the company, with the funds already on hand, to close contract for two wells on their proven territory embracing more than 500 acres, with a producing well in excess of 200 bbls. per day less than 500 yards from their property line in addition to other produces.

We respectfully call your attention to our large acreage and the small capitalization of the company; to the numerous derricks now in course of construction surrounding this acreage.

Look up our credentials; ascertain the standing of the geologist who highly endorses this property and give us the opportunity to lay some very interesting facts before you. We pledge you a square run for every dollar you invest.

LOS ANGELES-BROWNWOOD OIL CO.,
201 Currier Bldg., 212 W. 3rd. 14540.

SURE Winner Consolidated Syndicate presents exceptional chance to make independent fortune from small investment; two leases, aggregating 140 acres, in proven oil fields, and total authorized capitalization of only $150,000 makes possible amazingly large profits, surrounded by big gusher wells, and the big companies; we have room for 14 wells, two bets for one; we want to do things up in record time; derrick and bunkhouses have already been started for No. 1 well. We want business men of the high-powered type who can and are not afraid to invest from $500 to $2000 in this ground-floor proposition; only $50,000 worth of units at par, $10, at this time; this is to cover part cash for drilling expenses, casing, fuel, water, etc. Watch the next oil boom. We have the backing of brokers and business men. No money accepted until requested by trustee. We have the right to reject any reservations for units, make your reservations for units in this conservative syndicate to Address E. ROSS, Aberdeen Apts., 936 Potter Park, Los Angeles Cal.

FOR SALE—

LISTEN MEN!

WOULD YOU BUY A GROVE

If you knew without a doubt that it is one of the very choicest Valencia orange groves in all Orange county, and that you could get it practically on your own terms for considerably less than it is actually worth today?

Here's one of Orange county's really wonderful groves—beautiful, thrifty trees, literally loaded with fruit, on ideal soil and with one of the best pumping plants—a grove that you can buy now, at a price so that you may resell at a handsome profit within the next six to eight months if you desire to do so.

If you will pardon us; but we know we have the reputation of having made a great deal of money for our clients, in fact, it is frequently stated, and truthfully, too, that never has a client of this office ever lost a single dollar.

Have us show you this splendid property, we know we can make you some real money on it.

FOR SALE—15 shares stock in lumber steamer operated by one of the most responsible and well known companies on Pacific Coast. Stock has paid 25 per cent since steamer was launched 5 years ago and 24½ per cent during 1920. Could not be built today for less than 50 per cent more than original cost and depreciating reserve fund of 45 per cent of the capital stock makes the stock worth nearly 100 per cent more than original cost. Am forced to sell for $2000, as I need the money for building purposes. Good substantial investment for any one not satisfied with usual 7 or 8 per cent on their money. Will bear most rigid investigation. For further particulars call OWNER, Vermont 2107.

I HAVE a limited amount of prime bonds yielding 6½ per cent interest, exempt from all Federal taxes, except the inheritance tax, which I will exchange, as a whole, or in part for Liberty Bonds. Will accept Liberties at par. Address MacDONALD, 200 Stock Exchange Bldg.

MINES AND MINING.

OIL SHORTAGE IS INCREASING—

No better investment can be made now than test holes in new territory. The country needs all the oil you can find, and you have a safe and sure market.

Don't resort to old-fashioned methods of drilling, with large and expensive machinery. Never forget the cost of a hole increases in the approximate proportion to the "square of its diameter."

So drill small diameter holes with the latest and most efficient portable machine ever built for territories from 800 to 2500 feet deep. Write for particulars and circulars.

BEACH HOTELS.
We have two splendid beach hotels, the best money-makers in the Santa Monica Bay district. One of these, a house of 100 rooms, can be had for a price of $30,000 cash, with a new lease and only $6.50 per room. This place is making $15,000 per year. The second hotel, of less rooms, located right on the ocean front, one of the best furnished in Southern California, for $27,000, $17,000 cash. This house is making approximately $1000 per month and has been doing it for several years past. A new 5-year lease at a reasonable rental.

APARTMENT-HOUSE.
Furniture, ground and building of the finest medium-sized apartment-house in the city for $125,000. This place contains more than 80 rooms, has dressing-rooms, large baths, outside kitchens and has no superior in excellency of its furniture anywhere in Southern California. This will take about $100,000 cash, with a balance on long term. The place will pay 35 per cent a year on the total investment.

DOWNTOWN HOTEL.
One of the best-located commercial and tourist hotels in Southern California, located in the heart of Los Angeles. This house has approximately 150 rooms. A new ten-year lease can be executed. Its net earnings are in excess of $50,000 per year. A cash price of $75,000 required to secure the furniture and lease. This is one of the few real hotel investments available in any part of California today.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

AN ESTABLISHED Company with its Pacific Coast headquarters in San Francisco is now opening a similar office in Los Angeles under its own management. We have open in the Los Angeles territory six splendid opportunities for the exclusive sale of our product, among them being San Bernardino, Riverside and Orange Counties. Over several hundred thousand of our appliances are in use throughout the world. You may see, without any obligation whatsoever, each of the 20 standard appliances in operation. We will also furnish bank and commercial references at first interview. The capital you invest will be in your own business, and this affords a most unusual opportunity for the man who wishes to identify his own services with his finances. An investment of from one to five thousand dollars will be required, depending on which district you want. We have 28 similar stores in California at this time, all being exclusively devoted to the sale of our appliances, which are non-competitive. Give your telephone number when replying, and interview with complete demonstration will be arranged. Address X, box 246, TIMES OFFICE.

JACK-KNIFE VANISHES

Boys No Longer Hold it as Their Best Friend.

The old jack knife is dead, or at least is missing and unaccounted for, and its passing stirs the draft of memory in many a middle-aged heart.

"When I was a boy," said Mr. Graham, the third assistant vice-president, after five office lads in succession had denied the possession of a knife, "I would as soon have thought of going without my clothes as without my knife. There was hardly a thing we did or a game we played that didn't have some use for a 'jack,' all the way from whittling little boats out of the blocks of wood the builders sawed off from the beams, to a game of mumbledy-peg. You couldn't make a fishing rod, fashion a kite or manufactur any of the score of things so necessary for a boy's happiness without the aid of a knife. Many was the cut finger we got, of course, but what is a cut finger against the ownership of a gleaming blade which you could sharpen like a Saracen sword against a piece of sandstone? A knife in my day was the first present a boy received—long even before his first watch—and it was the last thing a red blooded lad would give away. What is the new generation coming to, anyhow."—[New York Sun.

U. S. Pharmacopoeia for China.

The United States Pharmacopoeia is being translated into the Chinese language under the auspices of the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science. Germany before the war is said to have tried every means to have the German Pharacopoeia translated into Chinese in order that German manufacturers might export to China drugs of German standards, and it is understood that Great Britain has made a similar effort since the war. Through the adoption of American standard formulas for drugs and medicines it is expected that American drug manufacturers will benefit.—[American Medicine.

WAR AGAINST AUTO DRIVERS.

Pasadena Police Determined to Enforce Laws.

Attorneys Study Proposed New Zoning Ordinance.

Crown City Takes Census of School Children.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PASADENA, Aug. 20.—Pursuant to the war being waged by the Pasadena police department against violators of traffic ordinances fifteen motorists and riders of motorcycles paid heavy fines in police court here today. Police Judge F. C. Dunham is co-operating with the police department in the drive and has doubled the amount of fines imposed for traffic violations.

The police inaugurated the campaign to reduce automobile traffic accidents, which have increased enormously here in the last year.

STUDYING ZONING LEGALITY.

Former City Attorney John Munger and Assistant City Attorney Roscoe Hess are engaged in a survey of the legal aspects of the zoning to be created by ordinance in Pasadena following the report and recommendations to be made soon by a special zone commission appointed by the city Board of Directors. The attorneys have found that the creation of industrial and residential zones, as will be proposed by the commission, does not violate the city charter.

SCHOOL CENSUS IN OCTOBER.

A school census will be taken in October, it was announced today at the Pasadena school offices. Orders for the taking of the census were received here from County Superintendent Mark Keppel. While the purpose of the census was not stated, it was presumed to be for the purpose of determining the latest figures on school population in relation to school revenues apportioned this district.

Wifeof Much-Wanted Man Asks for Divorce.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ONTARIO, Aug. 20.—Hazel M. Willingham has filed a suit for divorce against Eldredge A. Willingham on the ground of failure to provide for her and their two minor children. A. E. Mitchell is attorney for the plaintiff.

This suit comes as the climax of a series of exciting happenings in the Willingham domestic affairs. About a year ago Mrs. Willingham sued for separate maintenance and secured a judgment in her favor, but never realized on it. Her husband was arrested on a bad-check charge. He broke jail and disappeared. When next heard of it was through a woman he had married and deserted in Arizona, and who came to Ontario when she learned her supposed husband had a wife here.

Mr. Willingham has now apparently disappeared for good, having gotten his affairs into such a tangle he sees no way of disentangling them. Mrs. Willingham seeks to cut the thread connecting her with her stormy past.

MEXICALI FIRE.

Blaze Below Border Second of Mysterious Origin.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CALEXICO, Aug. 20.—Five houses and three other buildings were destroyed, and a horse was burned to death, in a fire of undetermined origin on Porfirio Diaz avenue, east of the public school in Mexicali, early this morning. The loss is estimated at about $18,000, with $14,000 insurance.

The tinder-like construction of the buildings caused the fire to gain considerable headway before the alarm was sounded, and when the departments from this city and Mexicali reached the scene the entire half block was doomed. A high wind added to the spread of the flames, and it was only because of the quick and efficient work of the fire-fighters that the fire was prevented from spreading to the other half of the block and into the next block to the west.

The fire is the second of mysterious origin that has visited Mexicali within a week, the first being a $12,000 residence owned by the Yun Kee Company, a Chinese mercantile concern, and which was insured for $9350.

Drug Addict Escapes From Santa Ana Hospital.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SANTA ANA, Aug. 20.—R. W. Lyhne of Los Angeles, drug addict and alleged forger, escaped from the Orange County Hospital early this morning, where he was being treated for the morphine habit.

He was arrested last Saturday after, it is said, he cashed a worthless check for $5 on a local restaurant. He was to have appeared at his preliminary examination in the Justice Court Monday morning. With him at the time of the escape was his companion, Will Clark, also an addict, who was serving a thirty-day sentence for vagrancy. Clark was recaptured soon after. Deputy sheriffs are now searching for Lyhne.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENTURA, Aug. 20. — Charles Stevenson, wanted here on a charge of embezzlement, was in the spotlight in the Superior Court yesterday when Keith B. Peck was granted a divorce from Lucille Peck, now an inmate of the California School for Girls.

Lucille Peck, who is not yet 20, is the mother of one child and soon to become the mother of another, has had a sordid and hectic life.

Her troubles began when she was sent to the school from Riverside on what Judge Rogers, before whom the case was tried in the Superior Court here yesterday, termed a very questionable cause.

At 18 she was paroled from the school and married to Peck. It was agreed at the time that they were to be divorced as soon as the baby was born. After the birth of the child, Mrs. Peck went to Los Angeles to get work. Later, she was found living in a Los Angeles hotel with Stevenson. It is Stevenson's child, the woman says, who is soon to be born.

She was sent back to the school. In spite of the sordid story, the girl seemed in so many ways to have been the creature of circumstances over which she had no control that Judge Rogers refused to take the older child from her, in granting the divorce. Relatives of the father wanted the custody of the child. Judge Rogers promised her that as long as she followed the straight and narrow way he would allow the child to remain in her custody.

GET MORE PAY.

Venice Votes to Increase Salaries of Employees.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENICE, Aug. 20.—Venice police officers and firemen are to have an increase in salary. This was decided upon today at a meeting of the Board of City Trustees sitting as a board of equalization. Whether the increase will be 10 per cent of their present pay or a flat addition of $10 a month is to be decided later.

But for the fact that the trend of wages is downward the Trustees would have made a larger increase, they intimated in discussing the wage question.

Some increase they concluded is imperative because the salaries now paid in these departments is $10 to $15 lower than in other Southern California cities.

Firemen receive $120 to $135; hosemen and captains, $135 to $150. Police officers are paid from $120 to $130. It is intimated that more firemen may be added so that the hours of the men, who are now on duty twenty-four hours, may be reduced.

BURBANK MAN IS AUTO VICTIM.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

GLENDALE, Aug. 20.—J. A. Doyle of Burbank, manufacturer of building blocks, was seriously injured this morning when he was struck by an automobile driven by Mrs. Hazel Snyder of Long Beach.

The accident occurred shortly after 9 o'clock in front of Horne's confectionery store, San Fernando Road, Burbank. Mr. Doyle stepped off the curb and walked back of one machine and was struck by the one coming from San Fernando, driven by Mrs. Snyder.

Mr. Doyle was thrown to the pavement, falling on his face. An ambulance was called from Glendale and he was taken to the Burbank Hospital, where he has remained unconscious all day.

The injured man has been living alone in Burbank, and no trace of any family has been found excepting one son, who has not yet been located.

RETURNED RANGER TELLS OF FIRE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENTURA, Aug. 21.—With his clothing almost burned from his body and a serious burn on one arm, Ranger V. C. De Lapp of Ojai returned last night after a two weeks' struggle, with little sleep, against the Pine Mountain fire that is still fine stand of white fir at the top of fine stand of wihte fir at the top of the mountain has been destroyed. Deer, in many instances, ran from cover into the camps of the fire fighters. The animals were often singed or burned. There are seventy men on the fire line now contending with the flames.

CUT TAX RATE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENICE, Aug. 20.—The Venice City Trustees, sitting as a board of equalization today, cut 5 cents from the tax rate, reducing the general rate to 95 cents.

This, it is claimed, is the lowest rate in any city within a radius of 100 miles from Venice. The band tax and that for bonds and shore protection will remain the same, bringing to total rate to $1.18 for the last annexed section and $1.22 for the old city. The total valuation for taxable purposes is $12,844,918.66, an increase over last year of about $700,000.

HELD ON SUSPICION.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENTURA, Aug. 21.—On suspicion of being one of the gang of burglars that has been operating in various parts of the county for the last three weeks, Felipe Solorco, is in jail here. A series of burglaries have terrorized parts of the county, notably around Saticoy, Santa Paula and Bardsdale.

Last night the home of George Mullis was entered here. The man was frightened away before he could take anything; and, in fact, left behind him three silver spoons, obviously loot from someother home, but was later apprehended.

ROB THE WINNER.

Card Players "Beat Up" On Man Who Won Their Money.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENICE, Aug. 20.—Harry Howe, a garage manager of 7511 Mentone, Palms, was robbed and brutally beaten at 5:30 o'clock this morning following a card game at the Turkish baths on Windward avenue, Venice.

Raleigh Martin of 23 Dorothy avenue is in jail, identified by Howe as one of the two men who attacked and robbed him. His story to the police was that he quit the game with $175 in his pocket, that he was about to enter his car parked at Speedway and Lorelei avenue, when he was knocked down by two men who had been playing with him, his head kicked repeatedly and his pocketbook and a .38-caliber revolver stolen from his pockets.

Officer Cody arrested Howe soon after at his home. He was booked by Sergt. Lingo for investigation and later Howe swore out a complaint against him. The second man has not yet been apprehended. D. C. W. Creik dressed Howe's wounds taking six stitches in his head.

DEDICATE PLOT TO AMERICAN LEGION.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, Aug. 20.—The American Legion petition for a plot of ground in Hillside Cemetery, presented to the City Trustees, met with instant approval from the city authorities and they will set aside the best plot available where all veterans of the World War can be buried.

Dr. Kenneth L. Dole presented the petition which was signed by practically all the business men of the city. He stated that the local post membership now is about 200, but that a plot of fifty graves would be large enough for the present at least. Many of the men will be buried in family plots.

Dr. Dole asked that the plot be set aside and that the Legion would look after marking it in some way. It is to be under perpetual care and planted to lawn.

IMMENSE GARAGE WILL BE BUILT.

Telephone Company's Request Mirrors City's Growth.

Connections Are Doubled in Short Period.

Organization Has Been Forced to Make Expansions.

The Southern California Telephone Company has applied to the State Railroad Commission for permission to pay the Mercantile Fireproof Building Company of this city $150,000 for the southwest corner of San Pedro and Eleventh streets, where it intends to erect forthwith a $150,000 brick garage.

This structure, which is to cover an area 250 by 60 feet, will contain only a basement and the first story under the plans for the immediate future, but will be so erected as to make it possible to add several other stories at a later date.

Such a building, which will be in addition to two other garages now used for the trucks and other motor vehicles necessary for the installation work of the organization, is required because of the unprecedentedly heavy demand for new telephone connections as a result of the rapid growth of the city.

In addition to a large space for vehicles, the building will be fully equipped with machine shops, paint shops and all other accessory departments to a well-equipped garage. Although the Railroad Commission has not yet had time to pass upon the request for permission to erect the building, it is taken for granted by the company that the project will be approved at the hearing next month, since it is so vitally connected with an adequate telephone service.

CONDITIONS PECULIAR.

N. R. Powley, commercial superintendent, commenting on the extensive building program upon which the company has recently entered and will enter, said:

"Since the signing of the armistice, due to the tremendous telephone demand, the Southern California Telephone Company has made additions to its buildings at seven of its central offices.

"To its Hollywood building at 1429 North Gower street, three additional stories were added. In the Wilshire office at 718 South Rampart street three additions were made to the central office. The Yale office at 513 East Vernon street has been enlarged to the extent of the addition of one story. The Kingsley office at 4167 West Third street, the south office, 701 East Jefferson street and the union office at 1825 West Seventh street have been remodeled and enlarged to the extent of the size of the lot on which the original building was placed. The company's Olive-street office at 716 South Olive street is now being remodeled on the second floor to provide for the installation throughout the entire floor of added central office equipment and another story is now being added to care for the demands made on this building.

WONDERFUL GROWTH.

"The growth has been so phenomenal throughout the entire city that thousands of dollars' worth of central office equipment has been placed in each office addition, and in several instances the growth has been so heavy and continuous that the central office equipment was fully required immediately upon installation.

"As an example of the remarkable business activity in Los Angeles and what the telephone demand means in terms of equipment, not only equipment for the taking care of new telephones but of equipment to take care of the increased traffic load arising from telephones in service:

Flat Building Furnished as if for Kings.

Wide interest has been shown in an elaborate four-flat building just completed for Michael Gore, well-known theater owner of this city, at 1834-40 North Wilton Place.

Containing only four five-room living places, this structure occupies a lot 100 by 150 and cost altogether over $175,000. It was designed and built by O. N. Land and is furnished most sumptuously, $40,000 having been spent in this portion of the investment alone. Part of the equipment in each flat is a baby grand piano.

In addition, maid and butler service and all of the ultra conveniences of the best type of flat are provided, showing that Mr. and Mrs. Gore, for the two have been keenly interested in this experiment in the beautiful, not only know how to give valuable suggestions for decorations in the chain of theaters in which Gore Brothers, Ramish and Sol Lesser are associated, but that they also have the imagination and the ability to create a delightful and gorgeous place in which those who properly value such things can live.

IMPERIAL VALLEY GYPSUM BASIS OF NEW PLANTS.

Declared by Experts to be Largest and Purest Deposit in World; Big Plans Unfolding.

Plans now maturing for the establishment here of a large gypsum plant give promise of speedily making Los Angeles the recognized headquarters for the distribution of another important raw material.

The California Gypsum Corporation has been formed with an authorized capital of $3,000,000, which it is expected will be underwritten largely by local financiers and financial institutions, without going to the general public. Practical gypsum and cement manufacturers and engineers are interested and will direct the operating and distributing work of the organization.

The foundation for the enterprise is in the ownership by this corporation of 1200 acres in Imperial county, twenty-two miles northeast of El Centro. In this tract are 600 acres containing some of those great chemical or non metallic mineral deposits which are just beginning to be understood in their relation to industrial development; and which, like the clays of Alberhill, the graphites of Elizabeth Lake, the magnesites of Porterville, the borates of Nevada and the sulphates of the same region are characterized by their volume as well as their purity.

These gypsum deposits in Imperial county, owned by the California Gypsum Corporation, are veritable mountains of wealth, are fully exposed so that they can be cheaply mined by the steam shovel process, are pure and almost entirely unmixed with foreign matter needing extraction or refining and are almost inexhaustible in volume. The exposed gypsum is estimated at 200,000,000 tons to the floor level, still unexplored, and its ultimate depth unknown.

EXTENSIVE PROGRAM.

Basing their conclusions on the cheapness of extraction by the steam shovel method, proximity to Los Angeles and the low freight rate to tidewater which already seems assured, the men behind the enterprise claim they can replace the present gypsum supplies from Nevada, Utah and New Mexico at the cost of production at those distant mines and still make a reasonable profit. Also they expect to go into the manufacture of wall board, fireproof partitions and building materials in Los Angeles, using their own raw materials and thereby cheapening costs so that these commodities can be sold at substantial reductions from ruling prices.

Gypsum and gypsite are popularly known as plaster of Paris, and while found in some form in many localities there are not many in which the supply is sufficiently large or pure for large commercial production; as may be gathered from the fact that before war embargoes were placed on imports, nearly 500,000 tons of crude gypsum was imported annually from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick to supply the eastern mills. At the same time about 2,000,000 tons of calcined and uncalcined gypsum was produced in the United States, from a total of sixty-eight mines and pits in various parts of the country.

Government reports, from which these figures were taken, are singularly lacking in information on California deposits and operations in this as in other minerals, due to the fact that all developments here are very recent, and industry is just waking up to the wealth lying dormant throughout the State, while millions of dollars are being sent out of the State annually for the very commodities that could be produced here more cheaply.

With government reports silent on California gypsum, experts connected with the new enterprise declare that the Imperial county deposits are the largest, purest and most accessible in the country, and that when they are properly mined they Rancho Laguna is Subdivided for Settlement.

Last week the final chapter was written in the passing of another of the famous landmarks of Southern California to provide room for the enormous growth of the city of Los Angeles. Autoists, who traveled Whittier Boulevard toward San Diego, will remember the magnificent herds of cattle, that until a few days ago, grazed on the rolling lands bordering the highway, and also the cross boulevard leading from Pasadena to Downey. Today a different scene meets the eye. Instead of grazing cattle and the stillness of the open ranch, there is the hum of activity coincident with the building of new homes.

This marks the passing of one of the famous ranches of the late Mrs. Arcadia De Baker, known as the Rancho Laguna, a halting place for years in the progress of the city's development, eastward.

The Rancho Laguna was one of the old Spanish land grants, and in the early days of California became part of the great De Baker estate. When this city was a pueblo and the social and business center was the famous old Plaza, this rancho, then several miles to the eastward, was the center of many of the historical festivities of that time.

Prominent in the political history of California, its owners entertained many of the dignitaries of the period. Following the death of Mrs. De Baker, much of the land of the old ranch was leased, and in the partitioning among the heirs litigation help up for many years any possible effort at subdivision.

Last week, following the removal of the 600 cows belonging to the guaranteed herd of a large dairy that had leased this land, the barns and ranch buildings were torn down to make way for one of the city's newest suburbs, Belvedere Gardens, opened by the Janss Investment Company.

About fifteen years ago this company opened up 300 acres between the bordering of this ranch and the city limits of that time, dividing it into nearly 6000 lots, today known as Belvedere Heights, and the home of between 15,000 and 20,000 people. This history of Belvedere Heights, officers of the company say, will be repeated in Belvedere Gardens.

WIDE RANGE OF SPANISH SHOWN.

Patio Keynote in Residence and Business Place.

Still Different Effect Found in Dormitory.

Special Color Arrangements Skillfully Used.

The versatility of Spanish architecture and its peculiar appropriateness to this section are shown in three structures, totall distinct in their ownership, location, purposes and plans, now in process of erection in different parts of the city.

On Figueroa street, south of Washington, Mrs. K. I. d'Aleria is erecting, on property recently purchased from the Llewellyn estate, a building which is to be the display place for the local Cunningham automobile agency. Here the Spanish idea, for it is a strictly Spanish design, is made use of most effectively by constructing a patio in such a way that the automobiles can be displayed in the open air.

In this building and its lot more than $100,000 is being invested. The negotiations leading up to the purchase of the land were conducted through Richard St. John, and the building itself is after the design prepared by the Foss Designing and Building Company.

ANOTHER USE.

Spanish renaissance architecture is utilized in the A. J. Koll residence now being constructed on Windsor Boulevard, the patio being again the keynote to the edifice. In this case, however, a distinctly home-like touch is given by the use of Granada tiling on the floor of the patio.

The living-room in this home will be in vermilion, with the whole lower floor finished in rare oriental hardwoods, imported especially for this project. The rugs will all be of special design, and furniture in keeping with the Spanish note will be manufactured expressly for the purpose of harmonizing with and enhancing the beauty of the place.

FOR A SCHOOL.

At the corner of Wilcox and Melrose avenues a dormitory is being built for the Urban Military Academy, the architecture and construction being handled by Meyer and Holler (Milwaukee Building Company). In this structure, which is of that restful Spanish type which reached its finest expression in the early California ranch homes, accommodations will be provided for over 100 boys, special features being the attention paid to ventilation, lighting and general youthful comfort in the arrangement of all the details of the edifice.

The exterior in this case will be plastered, with a clay-tile roof. The dining-room fixtures are exceptionally fine. The cost of the building will be approximately $150,000.

NEW CANDY STORES.

Eastern Confectioner to Establish an Extensive Chain System Here.

The first of a new chain of candy stores in Los Angeles and vicinity to be operated by J. A. Sheetz, Sr., formerly of Greensburg, Pa., will shortly be established at 748 South Broadway, in the ground floor storeroom in the Garland Building. A long-term sublease on this property, involving $50,000, has just been secured by Mr. Sheetz from Morris Mandel of the Emerson Shoe Stores, the latter being represented by R. T. Brown of the sales and leasing department of the W. Ross Campbell Company. A. R. Miller of the Murray-Gerber Company, acted for Mr. Sheetz.

Mr. Sheetz was formerly connected with the Martha Washington Candy Company in the East, manufacturing and marketing a well-known line of confections.

DISCRIMINATION AT PORT IS HIT.

Chamber of Commerce Makes a Vigorous Protest.

Denounces Handling Charges as Unfair Burden.

Harbor Officials Are Asked to Abolish Practice.

Telegrams have been flying back and forth between New York and Los Angeles recently over the collection of certain handling charges on merchandise passing through this port and hauled by motor truck to this end.

The Harbor Committee of the Chamber of Commerce says that a practice of collecting handling charges on all traffic had grown up among the steamship lines. Merchandise hauled by truck companies is loaded, or unloaded, by the truck operators, yet the steamship companies collect a handling charge averaging 60 cents a ton for this service, the same as though they loaded it into cars, according to the complaint.

With the recent growth of the motor truck business in hauling citrus fruits and other commodities to and from the harbor, this subject has been brought to the front. A few weeks ago the bean shippers called the attention of the Chamber of Commerce to the fact that no such charge was assessed at San Francisco on motor truck shipments, and they wanted to know why it was assessed here.

The letter from the bean dealers was referred to E. A. Mills, chairman of the committee on port charges of the Harbor and Foreign Trade Department of the chamber. Mr. Mills is also agent for the Luckenbach Steamship Company, and announced that his company would no longer assess such handling charges on motor truck business at this port. It appears that he had had the subject under discussion with his company for some time.

Other local agents for various coast-to-coast lines are understood to have recommended to their companies that they do likewise, but it appears that pressure was brought from some unknown source to prevent this. The North Atlantic westbound conference of steamship lines in New York took the question up, and the result has been the exchange of many telegrams.

Meanwhile the subject came before the Harbor and Foreign Trade Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, and on the recommendation of that committee the board of directors of the chamber passed the following resolutions:

"Whereas, a practice has been in vogue among steamship lines, doing business at Los Angeles Harbor, of collecting so-called handling charges on merchandise handled to and from docks by motor trucks, although the loading and unloading of such merchandise was done by the truck operators, and therefore the steamship companies performed no service for which such charge was made; and

"Whereas, no such handling charge is made at San Francisco by these same steamship companies, thereby discriminating against the shippers doing business through the port of Los Angeles, such discrimination amounting to an average of 60 cents a ton, and aggregating a very large sum annually; and

"Whereas, the Luckenbach Steamship Company, acting in the belief that such charge was not in accordance with the rules and regulations of the harbor department of the city of Los Angeles governing municipal wharves, and also that such charge was not just to shippers and receivers of freight at Los Angeles, recently ceased the practice of collecting such handling charges when no service was performed therefor; and

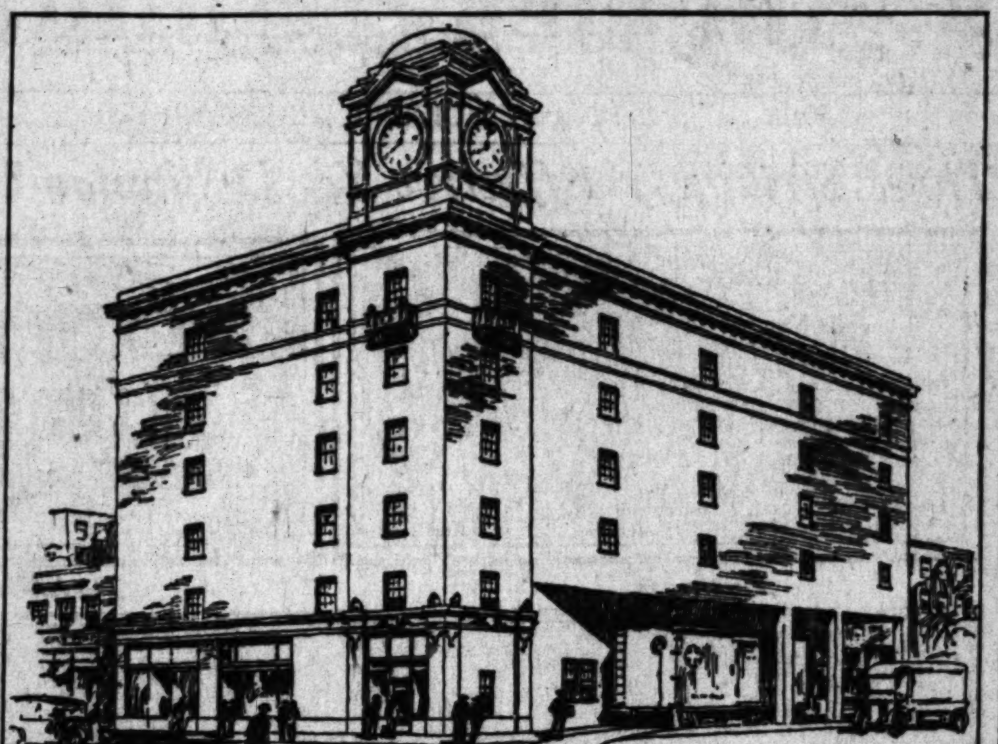
"Whereas, certain other lines, including the Isthmian and Williams lines, followed the example of the Luckenbach Steamship Company, but other lines refused to do so; and

"Whereas, we understand that the North Atlantic westbound conference, in a meeting held at 45 Broadway, New York City, adopted an order to compel the Luckenbach Steamship Company and other lines following its example again to collect this illegal and unjust charge—a charge that is discriminatory and unfair to the shippers and receivers of freight in Southern California;

"Therefore be it resolved by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce that we hereby request the Mayor and Board of Harbor Commissioners of the city of Los Angeles to enforce the rules against such unfair and discriminatory charge by denying the use of municipal harbor facilities to any steamship line attempting to collect this purported handling charge for which no service is performed; and

"Be it further resolved, that we request the Board of Harbor Commissioners not to make any future assignment of berth to any steamship company in coast-to-coast service unless such steamship company agrees to absorb all handling charges at this port."

Class "A" Warehouse Building.



On Site of Old Lemon Exchange.

FACT AND COMMENT.

turer has had to demand on actual capital invested in production. This surcharge on service is all the more remarkable when one remembers that practically all that the retailer is supposed to do or can do is to serve, and the only service that really counts is in bringing the work of the manufacturer to the consumer as quickly and as cheaply as possible. Why, then, should there be the elaborate effort to draw a distinction between the retailer who sells and serves and the one who just sells, for the sale is the service and thereon the profit should be based.

If service be interpreted in a wider sense as a cordial attitude within a business organization and a desire to establish ever closer relations with the public, then recent developments in the industrial world show that the manufacturer can spend large sums in telling the public that he, too, has morale, that he puts "work plus" into his goods and that he is the servant of all.

Hard-headed manufacturers and the public, however, prefer to lessen rather than increase the burdens upon production. They want service charges lowered and also distributed all along the line, instead of collected to a large degree on the last transaction.

All who have a part in making or marketing a commodity serve. But that is what they are supposed to and must do and are paid for doing.

WAREHOUSE TO HAVE ALL LATEST DEVICES.

An important addition to the industrial section of Hollywood will be the erection of the first unit of a large reinforced concrete storage warehouse on the corner of Santa Monica Boulevard and Cahuenga avenue on the site of the old lemon exchange, recently destroyed by fire. The first unit shown will contain six stories and basement, 60 by 100 feet. The next two units will be 85 by 135 feet each.

The first floor will contain all the offices, ladies' rest rooms, etc., and also a large special steel reinforced concrete fireproof and burglar-proof vault for the storage of silverware, paintings and other valuable property.

This warehouse will be a class A building, of reinforced concrete, and equipped with freight and passenger elevators in fireproof shafts, private locked fireproof rooms, with a specially constructed piano, rug and carpet room, and an electrically equipped packing room. The structure was designed by Edward T. Flaherty, consulting engineer, who will also supervise the construction.

SAN BERNARDINO MAKES BIG GAIN IN VALUES.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, Aug. 20.—Redlands again leads in the assessed valuation of property in the county, being the richest city in this respect in the largest county in the State. During the year the assessed valuation of property here has increased $170,000.

The total assessed valuation of property in Redlands last year was $6,261,750, and this year it is $6,428,780. San Bernardino had the greatest increase in assessed valuation in the county with $588,165. Ontario had $316,565, and Rialto, $20,025.

The total assessment figures are: Redlands, $6,431,990; San Bernardino, $6,428,780; Ontario, $3,607,300; Colton, $1,444,785; Upland, $1,937,405; Chino, $1,191,195; Needles, $683,575; Rialto, $662,525.

VACANT SEATS SHOWN BY THEATER DEVICE.

SEATTLE MAN'S INVENTION IN OPERATION AT GRAUMAN'S; HEADQUARTERS HERE.

Los Angeles, represented in this instance by Grauman's Million Dollar Theater, leads once more by being first to install the latest device for efficiency in seating, by the installation of an automatic electrical vacant seat indicator, whereby the head usher has constantly before him a living map of the house, registering instantly, by means of an electric flash, the vacation of any seat in the house. This is a new invention and it will in all likelihood be manufactured in Los Angeles.

The invention consists of a master keyboard installed in the lobby or other point in the theater, with a flash for every seat in the house. The seats are electrically connected with the board, and so wired that when they are occupied the flash remains dark; but as soon as vacated, contact is established by the automatic raising of the seat, and the vacancy is registered on the keyboard until the seat is again occupied and the contact thereby automatically broken.

By this means the head usher is constantly informed of every vacant seat and the moving in of the waiting throng is facilitated, to the relief of patrons. Flashes in the aisles also indicate rows containing vacancies to the aisle ushers, again facilitating the speed with which the audience may be seated.

Mr. Grauman is so enthusiastic over the device and the success it instantly demonstrated, that he has enlarged on the program and has ordered an additional duplicate master keyboard installed in his private office; enabling him to see at any moment the seating or vacancy of the house, and to institute corrective measures whenever vacancies are too numerous for his fancy or for the receipts through the box office. He expresses himself as satisfied that for a theater of Grauman's capacity, 2200, it will enable the seating staff to augment the daily receipts to the extent of $250.

The inventor is H. J. Hansen, an electrician of Seattle, and the Grauman installation has been made under the supervision of A. Silver, founder of a $250,000 corporation, known as the Hansen Vacant Seat Indicator Company, of which he is manager. The president of the company is Dean Johnson, formerly vice-president of the Seattle Scandinavian-American Bank. Norman M. Wardeall, formerly auditor of Kings county in which Seattle is located, is secretary-treasurer.

Los Angeles was decided on by the company as its logical headquarters. The headquarters and general offices of the company will be transferred from Seattle to Los Angeles as soon as financial negotiations now under way are completed.

VISALIA STILL GROWING.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VISALIA, Aug. 20.—The latest addition to Visalia's business district is a new Westinghouse battery and electric shop on North West street. This establishment is owned and operated by Chrisman, Thompson & Chrisman. The Cooper Furniture Company has just moved from the Cooper Building on East Main street to 121 South Garden street into a remodeled and newly decorated building. The Cooper Building on East Main street will now house two automobile agencies, the Franzke Auto Company, continuing to occupy one room and the Spear-Verkle Auto Company, moving into the space formerly occupied by Mr. Cooper's business.

SALES IN TERRA BELLA.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TERRA BELLA, Aug. 20.—The F. C. Ensign Company reports the following sales: M. L. Pingar of Los Angeles, lot 517, Sub. 11; C. J. Schlieter of Los Angeles, lot 348, Sub. 9; Frederick J. Kelley of Los Angeles, lot 525, Sub. 11; C. E. and Stella Hanna of Burbank, lot 618, Sub. 11; John A. Stone, Los Angeles, lot 707, Sub. 14; Marquis and Hazel South of Los Angeles, lot 87 and north one-half of lot 98, Sub. 5. All of the above were for the Terra Bella Development Company. John Z. and Hermanna Brown of Jean, Nev., lots 11 and 12 of Terra Bella townsite, for the Security Trust and Savings Bank of Los Angeles.

SECURES NEW LOCATION.

E. A. Whitney of the sales and leasing department of the W. Ross Campbell Company has just secured a new location for Otto the Tailor, now in the Lissner Building, in the Auditorium Hotel Building, the location being known as 501 West Fifth street, now occupied by the Noiseless Typewriter Company, which is moving into a storeroom further downtown.

Large Western Avenue Tract to be Opened.

One of the largest recent real estate transactions in Western avenue property was completed yesterday, when a syndicate of Los Angeles business men purchased the sixty-acre tract at the northwest corner of Western and Santa Barbara avenues. The sale was handled by the J. Harvey McCarthy Company, the price being $200,000.

It is the announced intention of the purchasing syndicate to immediately develop the tract into a residential subdivision. This property has long been in the hands of Juliet Agoure de Clois, Angele Agoure Vail, Bijou Agoure Brinkop, Lester P. Agoure and Vivian Agorue Escalier. The J. Harvey McCarthy Company will have the exclusive subdivision management and sale of the property.

Immediate steps will be taken to subdivide the entire tract. Western avenue, recently repaved from Slauson to Santa Barbara avenue, will also be repaved, say the subdividers, from Santa Barbara avenue to West Adams street. When this improvement is completed, the only portion of Western avenue to be improved will be a short stretch between Slauson and Manchester avenue. The necessary public utility extensions will be made to the former Agoure tract, which already has street car service directly to the city's business center.

DISCRIMINATION AT PORT IS HIT.

Chamber of Commerce Makes a Vigorous Protest.

Denounces Handling Charges as Unfair Burden.

Harbor Officials Are Asked to Abolish Practice.

Telegrams have been flying back and forth between New York and Los Angeles recently over the collection of certain handling charges on merchandise passing through this port and hauled by motor truck to this end.

The Harbor Committee of the Chamber of Commerce says that a practice of collecting handling charges on all traffic had grown up among the steamship lines. Merchandise hauled by truck companies is loaded, or unloaded, by the truck operators, yet the steamship companies collect a handling charge averaging 60 cents a ton for this service, the same as though they loaded it into cars, according to the complaint.

With the recent growth of the motor truck business in hauling citrus fruits and other commodities to and from the harbor, this subject has been brought to the front. A few weeks ago the bean shippers called the attention of the Chamber of Commerce to the fact that no such charge was assessed at San Francisco on motor truck shipments, and they wanted to know why it was assessed here.

The letter from the bean dealers was referred to E. A. Mills, chairman of the committee on port charges of the Harbor and Foreign Trade Department of the chamber. Mr. Mills is also agent for the Luckenbach Steamship Company, and announced that his company would no longer assess such handling charges on motor truck business at this port. It appears that he had had the subject under discussion with his company for some time.

Other local agents for various coast-to-coast lines are understood to have recommended to their companies that they do likewise, but it appears that pressure was brought from some unknown source to prevent this. The North Atlantic westbound conference of steamship lines in New York took the question up, and the result has been the exchange of many telegrams.

Meanwhile the subject came before the Harbor and Foreign Trade Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, and on the recommendation of that committee the board of directors of the chamber passed the following resolutions:

"Whereas, a practice has been in vogue among steamship lines, doing business at Los Angeles Harbor, of collecting so-called handling charges on merchandise handled to and from docks by motor trucks, although the loading and unloading of such merchandise was done by the truck operators, and therefore the steamship companies performed no service for which such charge was made; and

"Whereas, no such handling charge is made at San Francisco by these same steamship companies, thereby discriminating against the shippers doing business through the port of Los Angeles, such discrimination amounting to an average of 60 cents a ton, and aggregating a very large sum annually; and

"Whereas, the Luckenbach Steamship Company, acting in the belief that such charge was not in accordance with the rules and regulations of the harbor department of the city of Los Angeles governing municipal wharves, and also that such charge was not just to shippers and receivers of freight at Los Angeles, recently ceased the practice of collecting such handling charges when no service was performed therefor; and

"Whereas, certain other lines, including the Isthmian and Williams lines, followed the example of the Luckenbach Steamship Company, but other lines refused to do so; and

"Whereas, we understand that the North Atlantic westbound conference, in a meeting held at 45 Broadway, New York City, adopted an order to compel the Luckenbach Steamship Company and other lines following its example again to collect this illegal and unjust charge—a charge that is discriminatory and unfair to the shippers and receivers of freight in Southern California;

"Therefore be it resolved by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce that we hereby request the Mayor and Board of Harbor Commissioners of the city of Los Angeles to enforce the rules against such unfair and discriminatory charge by denying the use of municipal harbor facilities to any steamship line attempting to collect this purported handling charge for which no service is performed; and

"Be it further resolved, that we request the Board of Harbor Commissioners not to make any future assignment of berth to any steamship company in coast-to-coast service unless such steamship company agrees to absorb all handling charges at this port."

SAN BERNARDINO MAKES BIG GAIN IN VALUES.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, Aug. 20.—Redlands again leads in the assessed valuation of property in the county, being the richest city in this respect in the largest county in the State. During the year the assessed valuation of property here has increased $170,000.

The total assessed valuation of property in Redlands last year was $6,261,750, and this year it is $6,428,780. San Bernardino had the greatest increase in assessed valuation in the county with $588,165. Ontario had $316,565, and Rialto, $20,025.

The total assessment figures are: Redlands, $6,431,990; San Bernardino, $6,428,780; Ontario, $3,607,300; Colton, $1,444,785; Upland, $1,937,405; Chino, $1,191,195; Needles, $683,575; Rialto, $662,525.

VACANT SEATS SHOWN BY THEATER DEVICE.

SEATTLE MAN'S INVENTION IN OPERATION AT GRAUMAN'S; HEADQUARTERS HERE.

Los Angeles, represented in this instance by Grauman's Million Dollar Theater, leads once more by being first to install the latest device for efficiency in seating, by the installation of an automatic electrical vacant seat indicator, whereby the head usher has constantly before him a living map of the house, registering instantly, by means of an electric flash, the vacation of any seat in the house. This is a new invention and it will in all likelihood be manufactured in Los Angeles.

The invention consists of a master keyboard installed in the lobby or other point in the theater, with a flash for every seat in the house. The seats are electrically connected with the board, and so wired that when they are occupied the flash remains dark; but as soon as vacated, contact is established by the automatic raising of the seat, and the vacancy is registered on the keyboard until the seat is again occupied and the contact thereby automatically broken.

By this means the head usher is constantly informed of every vacant seat and the moving in of the waiting throng is facilitated, to the relief of patrons. Flashes in the aisles also indicate rows containing vacancies to the aisle ushers, again facilitating the speed with which the audience may be seated.

Mr. Grauman is so enthusiastic over the device and the success it instantly demonstrated, that he has enlarged on the program and has ordered an additional duplicate master keyboard installed in his private office; enabling him to see at any moment the seating or vacancy of the house, and to institute corrective measures whenever vacancies are too numerous for his fancy or for the receipts through the box office. He expresses himself as satisfied that for a theater of Grauman's capacity, 2200, it will enable the seating staff to augment the daily receipts to the extent of $250.

The inventor is H. J. Hansen, an electrician of Seattle, and the Grauman installation has been made under the supervision of A. Silver, founder of a $250,000 corporation, known as the Hansen Vacant Seat Indicator Company, of which he is manager. The president of the company is Dean Johnson, formerly vice-president of the Seattle Scandinavian-American Bank. Norman M. Wardeall, formerly auditor of Kings county in which Seattle is located, is secretary-treasurer.

Los Angeles was decided on by the company as its logical headquarters. The headquarters and general offices of the company will be transferred from Seattle to Los Angeles as soon as financial negotiations now under way are completed.

VISALIA STILL GROWING.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VISALIA, Aug. 20.—The latest addition to Visalia's business district is a new Westinghouse battery and electric shop on North West street. This establishment is owned and operated by Chrisman, Thompson & Chrisman. The Cooper Furniture Company has just moved from the Cooper Building on East Main street to 121 South Garden street into a remodeled and newly decorated building. The Cooper Building on East Main street will now house two automobile agencies, the Franzke Auto Company, continuing to occupy one room and the Spear-Verkle Auto Company, moving into the space formerly occupied by Mr. Cooper's business.

Stone, Los Angeles, lot 707, Sub. 14; Marquis and Hazel South of Los Angeles, lot 87 and north one-half of lot 98, Sub. 5. All of the above were for the Terra Bella Development Company. John Z. and Hermanna Brown of Jean, Nev., lots 11 and 12 of Terra Bella townsite, for the Security Trust and Savings Bank of Los Angeles.

SECURES NEW LOCATION.

E. A. Whitney of the sales and leasing department of the W. Ross Campbell Company has just secured a new location for Otto the Tailor, now in the Lissner Building, in the Auditorium Hotel Building, the location being known as 501 West Fifth street, now occupied by the Noiseless Typewriter Company, which is moving into a storeroom further downtown.

Large Western Avenue Tract to be Opened.

One of the largest recent real estate transactions in Western avenue property was completed yesterday, when a syndicate of Los Angeles business men purchased the sixty-acre tract at the northwest corner of Western and Santa Barbara avenues. The sale was handled by the J. Harvey McCarthy Company, the price being $200,000.

It is the announced intention of the purchasing syndicate to immediately develop the tract into a residential subdivision. This property has long been in the hands of Juliet Agoure de Clois, Angele Agoure Vail, Bijou Agoure Brinkop, Lester P. Agoure and Vivian Agorue Escalier. The J. Harvey McCarthy Company will have the exclusive subdivision management and sale of the property.

Immediate steps will be taken to subdivide the entire tract. Western avenue, recently repaved from Slauson to Santa Barbara avenue, will also be repaved, say the subdividers, from Santa Barbara avenue to West Adams street. When this improvement is completed, the only portion of Western avenue to be improved will be a short stretch between Slauson and Manchester avenue. The necessary public utility extensions will be made to the former Agoure tract, which already has street car service directly to the city's business center.

A Typical Walnut Park Home

Walnut Park

Where a Home IS a Home

In these days of flamboyant apartment houses and [illegible] flats, it's a wonderful relief to see a REAL [illegible]—an honest-to-goodness place where real, happy [illegible] really live. It takes you back to the good old days of the sweet long ago when everybody owned their homes.

That's why Walnut Park is so universally popular. It's [illegible] "Home of Real Homes"—a park in which beautiful [illegible] adobe" homes and cozy little Colonial bungalows are charmingly situated among friendly walnut trees, [illegible] flowers, green lawns. Walnut Park homes are [illegible] homes—homes that make life worth living.

They're moderately priced and are sold on less-than-[illegible] terms. You get all city conveniences, but you don't pay [illegible] taxes in Walnut Park.

WILL MAKE NEW DIESEL ENGINE.

Los Angeles Man to Send Out Product Shortly.

Is Designed to Lower Costs in Power Production.

Inventor Moves to This City from Arizona.

Diesel engines designed to use for fuel the waste or residual oils after the gasoline, distillate and lubricating oils have been refined from the crude oil, are to be made in Los Angeles and will bear the Los Angeles label, carrying the name of this city all over the world as the place of origin of this new factor in power creation.

This Diesel engine is the invention of E. T. Adams. Mr. Adams has interests at Phoenix, Ariz., where he until recently made his home, but has moved to Los Angeles to take active charge of sales development in connection with the distribution of the new engine. He was for twenty years chief engineer for the Allis-Chalmers Company at Chicago, and designed and installed the power plant of the United States Steel Corporation at Gary, in which the waste gas from the top of the blast furnaces is utilized for power production to operate the rest of the immense plant.

Instead of building a plant for the manufacture of these engines, Mr. Adams has entered into a contract with the Madsen Iron Works of Los Angeles for their manufacture, and the Madsen plant will be materially enlarged at once, to provide facilities for this new product. While manufactured in the Madsen plant, the sale and distribution will be handled under the name of E. T. Adams & Sons, who will make their offices for the time being jointly with the Madsen offices, at 2416 East Sixteenth street.

FUEL CONSERVATION.

Like the power plant of the steel corporation, the new Diesel engine was born of the demand for economy and the use of by-products, which have been wasted in the past.

Mr. Adams says of his product:

"The new Los Angeles enterprise is a Diesel engine designed to use the low-grade residual oil remaining after the higher and more valuable fractions are removed from the crude petroleum. While this is not a waste product it is low grade and will always be the cheapest oil fuel available. These oils contain approximately 50 per cent asphalt and cannot be satisfactorily burned in ordinary engines, but the Adams's engine, which is of the Diesel type, burns them completely.

"The time is near at hand when these low-grade oils will be the only oils available from which cheap power can be produced. The distillates and tops and light fuel oils, can now be converted into gasoline and any oil with a reasonable gasoline content is too valuable for ordinary power fuel purposes. The residuals, however, have no appreciable gasoline value. They cannot be burned in ordinary engines, and are used only for boiler fuel, to oil roads, and for fuel for Diesel engines.

REVOLUTIONARY.

"This change in oil fuels means a complete revolution in the type of oil engine commonly employed. It means that the Diesel type must take the place of the distillate and so-called heavy oil engines of the past. The new Adams Diesel engine is the advance guard of a type, which, from now on, will be standard in oil-engine practice, and Los Angeles is once more the first in the field.

"The Diesel engine is not a new invention. Ocean liners powered with Diesel engines of large size are frequent visitors to Los Angeles ports and the Shipping Board recently launched the William Penn, a huge oil-motor liner of great power. It was the Diesel engines which made the submarine possible, and the Phelps, Dodge Company has long used them in difficult mining situations to generate cheap power.

FOR FARM USE.

"But the extensive use of the Diesel for moderate power purposes is quite new and the Adams Diesel is of this type and is designed especially to meet the power requirements of the mine and the isolated farm.

BRANCH FACTORIES.

"As much territory as possible will be covered from the Los Angeles offices and supplies from the Los Angeles plant of the Madsen Iron Works, and the export trade will all be handled from the local office. Arrangements have been made for the manufacture of these engines in the East also, but these, too, will bear the Los Angeles label. Branch sales offices will be established in all the large American and foreign cities, but in every case they will be known as branches of the Los Angeles headquarters, and will emphasize the eminence of the new industrial center among the industrial leaders of the world."

Handsome Home is Sold.

Purchased by R. V. Jones.

V. L. McCarthy of the Frank Meline Company has sold the residence of Dr. J. E. Doran, 542 Irving Boulevard, to R. V. Jones, the consideration being $88,000.

IMMENSE GARAGE WILL BE BUILT.

nected to the Main Office on Hill street 14,000 telephones. Every foot of available space in the office at Hill street is now used by equipment. The traffic became so heavy from these 14,000 telephones that it was necessary to transfer 5,000 of them to the Olive street office so as to permit the efficient handling of the service for the remainder of 9,000 telephones, and the remarkable part about the increased traffic is that these 9,000 telephones, due to the high calling rate per telephone, took every section of switchboard which had been previously installed to handle 14,000 telephones.

Telephone traffic in Los Angeles today is the highest in the history of the company, and that is the result of not only a remarkable business activity but of a most phenomenal growth.

ALMOST DOUBLE.

"Since the Armistice the company has installed in Los Angeles upwards of 85,000 telephones, or a number equal to over one-half of the number of telephones that there is now in service, namely, 155,000. The first telephone exchange in Los Angeles was established here in 1879 in the old Baker Block at Main and Arcadia streets, serving less than 10 telephones. Now it has taken from 1879 to 1921, or 42 years, to procure the 155,000 telephones serving the City of Los Angeles today through its 29 central offices—and yet the growth in this city has been such that in the last two and one-half years the telephone demand has been such that the company, even though it has been handicapped by difficulty in procuring material on the one hand and the tremendous problem as to growth on the other, has been able to install 85,000 telephones or more than one-half of the number of telephones we have in service as a result of our 42 years of operation.

"It has been necessary to double our motor vehicles and in consequence thereof we are building a new garage at 11th and San Pedro streets. We have applied to the Commission for permission to do this and the hearing in this matter is set for Sept. 21.

"It has not only been necessary to double the motor vehicle equipment used by the construction force but it has been necessary to triple the construction force itself. The number of telephone installers has been practically doubled as has been the force of engineers whose duties are to lay out every detail of the construction program and correlate the receipt of material with the man power available to do the work.

"The company has over 4000 employees in its service, every one of them a loyal citizen and fully awake to his or her duty to assist in keeping pace with the tremendous telephone requirements of this super-city."

BUYS ORANGE GROVE.

South Dakota Family Moves Into Home on Property Near Anaheim.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ANAHEIM, Aug. 20.—The C. B. Berger Company have sold their Valencia orange grove, situated west of Anaheim on Magnolia Road, to Theodore Eimers, recently from Parxton, S. D.

The grove, which is just coming into full bearing, is considered one of the most highly developed five-year-old orchards in Orange county, and is improved with a modern home, lawns and flower gardens, electric pumping plant and a deciduous fruit orchard.

The Eimers family, which has been staying at Long Beach for the past month, has taken immediate possession of its new home.

MORE HOMES STARTED IN LOS FELIZ SQUARE.

Two more new homes to be immediately started in Los Feliz Square are announced in the report of the Janss Investment Company on sales of Los Feliz property for the past week.

W. Robinson, who purchased a corner for $3500, and W. H. Toman, who purchased a lot for $3250, will build at once.

Among the sales made during the past week were three lots to P. McGlasham for $12,000; a lot for $3500 to Dr. Maurer; lot for $2850 to E. D. White; lot for $3500, to E. C. Keesling; a lot for $3000, to W. B. Clarke, and a lot for $3000 to Rome Miller.

BUTTONLATH COMPANY TO INCREASE OUTPUT.

ONLY SLIGHT MODIFICATIONS TO BE MADE IN PETER'S GYPSUM WALLBOARD.

The slight modifications in the process of manufacturing Peter's gypsum wallboard are all that are necessary to conform to the recent decision in the litigation instituted by John Schumacher and J. E. Schumacher in the United States District Court against the Buttonlath Manufacturing Company, makers of Peter's gypsum wallboard, according to J. G. Johnston, general manager of the Buttonlath Company. With these two modifications, declares Mr. Johnston, Peter's gypsum wallboard will be manufactured on a larger scale and with the same quality as heretofore.

The company's chief product, Buttonlath, is in no way affected by the court's decision, points out Mr. Johnston. The suit was based on claims by the Schumacher interests that patents held by them were being infringed by the Buttonlath company, both in the manufacture of Buttonlath and Peter's gypsum wallboard. The language of the court's decision, affecting Buttonlath, is as follows:

"I think it entirely appropriate to say that the manufacture of Buttonlath is not affected by any of these patents."

"The fact that Buttonlath is not a wallboard, but is purely an improved fireproof lathing material explains why it is not involved in the decree of the court," said Mr. Johnston. "We manufacture Buttonlath by compressing a highly plastic material between two layers of fireproof paper. One of the layers is perforated at regular intervals and enough of the plastic material allowed to percolate to form pretuberances like buttons—hence the name Buttonlath. When this material is fastened to a wall and plaster applied, the plaster gets under these buttons and when hardened is held with a high degree of firmness. Wallboard, on the other hand, is designed for replacing both lathing material and plaster.

"Not only is Buttonlath unaffected by the court's decree, but the manufacture of Peter's gypsum wallboard is also not checked. The court found that only two minor parts of our process are covered by patents held by the plaintiffs. These parts are not fundamental and can easily be changed, so that Peter's gypsum wallboard will be available to the trade and the general public, exactly as heretofore. Its quality will be the same and we shall manufacture it on a greater scale than heretofore."

ORANGE COVE TRACT SOLD.

ORANGE COVE, Aug. 20.—E. W. Harris has sold his forty-acre tract in the Mt. Olive section to Tony Justeson of Hanford for $45,000. The property is considered one of the most desirable holdings in this district, being highly improved with vines, figs and olives, besides splendid buildings and a complete cement pipe irrigation system.

BIG WHITTIER DEAL.

Well-Known Ranch on Edge of City Sells for Good Price.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WHITTIER, Aug. 18.—Indicating the upward trend of business in income-producing properties in the East Whittier district, was the sale of the forty-two-acre Hillview ranch of Robert George to Jacob Bickel for $80,000. The deal has just been completed.

Both the former owner and the recent purchaser are pioneer residents of the East Whittier district. Fifteen acres of the ranch are in citrus fruit and the remainder in bearing walnut groves.

WEST SIXTH-STREET SALES.

The Wright-Callender-Andrews Company, through A. G. Davenport, manager business leasing department, reports leases made on West Sixth street as follows: Storeroom, 724 West Sixth street to G. Vernon Casey from A. W. Rhodes, to be used in the light lunch business. The second floor of the two-story building at the southeast corner of Sixth and Flower streets to Frank Straub, to be used as offices.

MAYWOOD, CAL.
August 19, 1921

Sirs:

Am glad to state that I purchased an acre—from one of your courteous salesmen about three years ago. The property has been improved and increased in value to almost three times what I paid for it, besides making my family of five a home which we all enjoyed—having all the comforts of city and country life combined.

During the year 1919-20 I stocked my place with 400 White Leghorn chickens and one Jersey cow, from which I netted $100 per month for every month in the year. I have only used my spare time outside of my regular line of business in which I was engaged every day.

This year we have full bearing peach and apple trees and all vegetables furnishing us a great part of our living. No conditions could persuade me to exchange my home and its comforts for an apartment or a house on a cramped city lot.

Yours very truly,

H. M. Barcus

AIRLESS TIRE PLANT STARTS.

Ground Broken Yesterday at Norwalk Site.

Made Gala Occasion Through Stunts and Music.

Honeycomb Core Principle of the New Product.

Norwalk, fourteen miles southeast of Los Angeles, on the line of the Southern Pacific, was the scene of a lively fiesta yesterday, the occasion being the ground-breaking for the erection of the factory of the National Airless Tire Company.

About 500 guests from Los Angeles and Norwalk participated in a barbecue luncheon at noon, and in a program of music stunts and speeches, felicitating the new tire company and the city of Norwalk on the prospect of success to follow the erection of the manufacturing plant, which definitely annexes Norwalk to the Los Angeles metropolitan district.

Addresses were made by O. A. Lane, R. Holtby Myers and Julius Schneider. Other speakers also enlivened the afternoon.

LARGE GROUNDS.

The plant for which ground was broken yesterday, and on which active construction will begin tomorrow, is to be located on a three-acre plot owned by the company. It is to be a three-story class "B" building, and is to have an ultimate capacity of 1000 tires a day. As soon as the first story is completed, machinery is to be installed and production is to begin at once on a capacity of 150 tires a day, pending completion of the building. A. C. Martin is the architect, and the building is being erected by C. P. Pemberton.

The capital of the National Airless Tire Company is authorized at $1,000,000, and is being underwritten locally, or within the metropolitan district. The officers are: O. A. Lane, former Mayor of Glendale, president; H. D. Smith, vice-president; C. F. Evans of Hollywood, treasurer, and C. H. Braden, inventor and patentee of the airless tire, secretary and production manager.

PRODUCT PLEASES.

This new Los Angeles airless tire embodies several new principles in which the amount of fabric is reduced to a minimum, and continuous resiliency is secured by a honeycomb core, which, being vulcanized with and to the tire and tread, and braced with fabric at the rim, is said to give longer life and less trouble than any known tire up to the present time. It has been used by the city garage superintendent for some time, and on the truck fleet of Barker Brothers. It is designed for light or heavy commercial vehicles, but it is claimed that the airless tire, with proper resiliency assured, is constantly growing in favor for pleasure cars as well as for commercial trucks.

Several makes of airless tires in Akron have grown to large sales, and it is the conviction of the parties behind this enterprise that the Los Angeles airless tire has points of excellence that will make it as popular as any of the others, and that nation-wide sales can be secured as soon as this department of the local mills can be developed to efficiency, after the local and near-by markets have been covered. General offices are in the Grosse Building, at Sixth and Spring streets, and will remain there after the works at Norwalk are in production.

ANOTHER ATTRACTIVE OLIVE-STREET STORE.

A class C brick structure, faced with architectural terra cotta, three stories high with a large mezzanine and a basement, is nearing completion on South Olive, between Sixth and Seventh streets, the contract work being by Lepper & Laisy and the architects being Walker & Eisen.

S. Kranzthor, owner of the structure, has already leased it to a mercantile establishment. The area covered by the building, which is an adaption of Italian renaissance, is 41x150 feet.

GYPSUM BASIS OF NEW PLANTS.

will have an important bearing on the plaster industry.

PROPOSED PLANTS.

The first work of the California Gypsum Corporation will be the building of eighteen miles of railroad at Coyote Wells, 122 miles east of San Diego. At the same time a plant is to be built at the mines for grinding and calcining, with a capacity of 100 tons a day for bulk shipment to San Diego and Los Angeles for export and Pacific Coast points.

As soon as the calcining plant at the mines is in operation, it is proposed to build in Los Angeles a plant with a 500-ton daily capacity for the manufacture of wall plaster board and partition blocks. These hollow, light and fireproof blocks have not yet been much used in local buildings because of the prohibitive freight cost from eastern factories. The new plant here will add this as an important feature of building construction and will be able to manufacture at a price enabling these blocks to compete in the eastern markets.

These two plants and the railroad, it is estimated, will cost $1,000,000. A townsite will be laid out near the mines, along modern lines for the proper care of the families of the hundred or more men who will be employed.

It is proposed to follow these plants with factories for wall board, tiles and blocks at San Francisco, Portland and Seattle, all to be supplied with gypsum from the Imperial Valley mines and pits. This will involve the addition of more units to the valley plant, and the increase of its 1000-ton daily output, all of which is embodied in the plans of the men behind the project. The branch units are to be financed through capital raised in the different communities in which plants are to be established.

Headquarters and main offices, together with the main manufacturing plant, will be maintained in Los Angeles, and it will be known as a distinctly Los Angeles institution. A suite of offices has already been taken in the Central Building.

LIST OF OFFICERS.

Charles F. Guthridge, one of the founders of the Home Telephone Company, is president. He is well known, also in his capacity of manager for the North American and United Dredging companies, and for his work on Los Angeles Harbor. F. S. Culver, the vice-president, has been for thirty years, engaged in gypsum mining and manufacturing at Port Clinton, O., and in England. He is the originator of the hard wall plaster now universally used in place of the lime mortar of earlier days. John C. Scheufler of Los Angeles, also an expert in gypsum manufacturing and mining, is secretary-treasurer.

Directors, in addition to these officers, are: Aman Moore, an experienced gypsum and cement operator; Dan R. Brown, of the Brown-Bevis Company of this city, also with wide experience in the gypsum and cement trades; Carl F. Schader of this city, active in real estate development; Edwin K. Alpaugh of San Gabriel; J. E. Herman of Sandusky, O.

The United States Agricultural Department favors the use of raw ground gypsum for sweetening soured soils and neutralizing black alkali, and is conducting an educational campaign for its introduction. This will be a new use for the raw product.

With the lower costs for gypsum that will follow the Imperial Valley development, the use of gypsum in building tiles for both exterior and interior walls will be largely extended, is the claim of the officials. As to wall board, it is declared that the use of gypsum is but in its infancy and that a vast trade in this material under present and new forms will enable it to supersede lumber in many forms of exterior building construction as well as for interiors.

GYPSUM ESSENTIAL.

Gypsum blocks from two to six inches thick, hollow, cylindered or solid, are already used throughout the Middle West in class A buildings for partitions, sound deadening, heat and cold insulation and wherever weight-sustaining walls are not required. They are also coming into favor for the outside walls of bungalows, garages and small shops where stucco exteriors are wanted.

Gypsum products are also used in the manufacture of window glass, as filler in paper manufacture as a retarder in the manufacture of cement, for molds and cores for the casting and ceramic trades, in the making of art wares in many new forms and artificial marble, in tile and marble setting, tinted wall brush finish, by dentists, and in many ways in various industries. All these uses and others will be increased if the California gypsum and plaster of Paris is developed as is proposed in this new Los Angeles enterprise.

It is hoped by the officials that work on the railroad and the plant at the mines can be commenced within sixty days, to be followed early next year by construction of the manufacturing plant at Los Angeles for wall board and building blocks. If interest is aroused sufficiently and the co-operation of the transportation service is secured so that existing freight handicaps are overcome, officials of the company declare that these Southern California gypsum deposits will, within a few years, instead of being ignored in government reports, become the chief source of supply for the entire West and for export to all countries served from Los Angeles Harbor.

COUNTRY SALES.

Edwin G. Hart, manager and sales agent for La Habra Heights and North Whittier Heights, reports the following recent sales: To North Whittier Heights Citrus Association, lot in Hillgrove, $1350; to C. H. Mowry, eight acres, unimproved, at North Whittier Heights, $6360; to Dr. Stonebrook, six acres in La Habra Heights, for avocado nursery, $5328; to W. B. Jadden, thirteen acres in La Habra Heights, $13,440; to J. W. Hart, thirty acres in La Habra Heights, $14,864; to Halm, Johnston and Clifton, eighteen acres in La Habra Heights, $11,367; to Urbano Estrada, lot in Whittier, $4500; El Campo Land Company to Frank Pickard, two lots in El Campo Court, $10,000; for Realty Investors Company of Southern California to Duncan Corporation, five acres near Gardena, $5000; for R. H. Mesick to John G. Plank, two lots in El Campo Court, $5025; for C. A. Blake to W. S. Capless, ten-acre walnut grove near Puente, $16,500; for Grace E. Duncan, twelve-acre walnut grove near San Gabriel, $15,000.

Home Builders Save On Building Material

Plumbing Repairs

If you've any plumbing repair work to be done, or fixtures to be installed, ring up our plumbing department. We've crews of competent men who specialize in just this sort of work—make low prices, too. All our work is guaranteed.

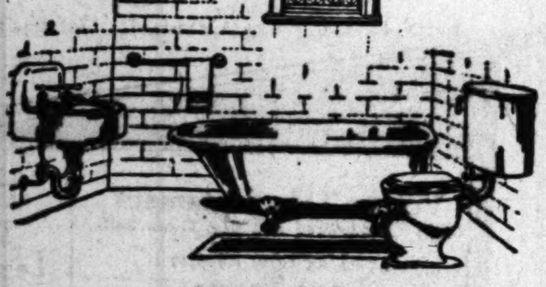
We are the pioneer low-priced building material house in Los Angeles. We supply everything for your building and save you money on every item. Remember, we sell Grade "A" plumbing goods as well as factory "seconds" and damaged fixtures. We can supply just what you need at the right price.

Lumber

Thousands and thousands of Southern California homes have been built entirely of lumber purchased from us. We can furnish you whatever you require, from rough boards to the finest interior finish, and all of it at the right prices, too. Bring in your list and get our figures.

Three-Piece Bathroom Set, $80

Complete to the Rough Plumbing



This bathroom set, just like the illustration, and you have your choice of a 4, 4½ or 5-foot porcelain enameled tub, low style white toilet and wide apron lavatory. These fixtures are all factory seconds and show varying degrees of blemish. Bath tub and lavatory are equipped with No. 1 grade nickel plated fittings and supplies. Toilet is provided with nickel plated post hinge, birch-mahogany seat and all necessary screws and washers to install. This set complete to the rough plumbing for $80.

We can furnish the same set in Grade "A" fixtures and supplies for $90.

Lavatories, $3 & $4

Damaged

A bargain price on some damaged lavatories that we want to move quickly. Of course, fittings are not included at this price.

A good lavatory for many purposes; can be equipped for hot and cold water or for cold water only, at a very nominal price.

Lavatories, $14

Factory seconds of our famous No. 535, wide apron lavatory; completely equipped for hot and cold water, with Grade "A" N. P. supplies. Everything complete to the rough plumbing, $14.

California Bath Tubs, $28 to $38

Damaged tubs of the popular California flat rim type, intended for recesses. We will sell a lot of them at these prices. No fittings included.

Pedestal Lavatories, $20 and $25

We are going to reduce our stock of these lavatories before inventory, and for that reason we have marked them $20 and $25, depending on their condition. Fittings are not included.

Water Heaters, $26

Combination heater and stand; a good practical water heater; only $26.

Lighting Fixture, $12

The handsome fixture shown in the picture has 16-inch bowl and three out-rider lights. A fixture that would ordinarily sell for much more, but especially priced this week at $12. Complete, ready to hand.

Wall Board, $32 Per M

Factory Seconds of Beaver Board.

Seems like 'most every builder in Southern California was buying this Wall Board. It's a real bargain, too; in excellent condition; one side perfectly good, and in many cases but slight damage on the other. ICULTURAL GAINS BY STATE TREMENDOUS.

lopment Over Ten-Year Period ttle Short of Marvelous, Opinion of Authority on Subject.

BY FRANK C. JORDAN,
Secretary of State.

ful development of agri- and allied industries in the California in the last ten little short of marvelous. At when there is a tend- stand around mournfully gloomy prospects, it is for us to pause and take of our accomplishments. just completed an inter- of the Federal census and find some startling figures revealed. No reads them can fail to feeling of optimism. I feel it, and I say without hesitation that California and its citizens should be proud of the advance we have made, and the position we hold today. We have no need to cry hard times. We do have a right be supremely happy, for we are enjoying the greatest prosperity our State has ever known. We are well on our way to continue this prosperity and I look to see the next ten years show even more remarkable progress than has ever gone before.

TREMENDOUS VALUES.

Turning to the figures, we notice that with an approximate land area in the State of over 100,000,000 acres, we have at present 29,000,000 acres in farms, which number more than 117,000, and show an increase of 29,473 in the last ten years. The value of this farm property is placed at $3,431,021,861, an increase of $1,600,000,000, or 112 per cent, in ten years. With this increase of more than $1,500,000,000 in value of farm property, the mortgaged debt on farm property has only increased $160,000,000.

Another interesting comparison is that the average acreage per farm today is 249 acres, while in 1910 it was 316 acres, and in this connection it is also interesting to note the development of intensive farming, for, while in 1910 there were but 22,000 farms under twenty acres in size, today there are over 34,000. We also note that while in 1910 there were only 56,000 farms entirely owned and unmortgaged; now the census figures show in excess of 75,000 farms so owned.

Development is further shown in the fact that the improvement of the farms, which can undoubtedly be taken as an example of prosperous conditions, is placed at over $290,000,000, showing an increase of 117 per cent in ten years. The average value per acre of all farm property ten years ago was $57, as against $116 per acre today. The yearly expenditure for labor now shows $126,000,000, as against $50,000,000 for the same period ten years ago.

FRUITS SHOW GAIN.

Just what this farm development has meant in actual gain is best told by the following comparative figures, showing the amount and value of various products, the figures being based on the census reports of 1910 and 1920, respectively.

We note first the most startling increase in the value of fruits and nuts, which is $270,000,000, as against $50,000,000 ten years ago, or an increase of 434 per cent. In spite of prohibition the grape crop has brought approximately $65,000,000 while that of ten years ago brought about $11,000,000. Semi-tropical fruits show an increase from $60,000,000 to $90,000,000. Walnuts brought $15,000,000 against $2,000,000 ten years ago.

In 1910 live stock on the farms was valued at $127,000,000, in 1920 at $221,000,000, showing an increase of 78 per cent. The latest figures credit the farms with 402,407 horses, 63,419 mules, 2,008,037 head of cattle, 2,400,151 sheep and 909,272 hogs. Poultry numbers 10,811,153 as against 6,087,267 in 1910 and is valued at $15,293,570. Receipts from the sale of dairy products show an increase of 175 per cent being $52,503,964 as against $19,083,297 ten years ago. Wool was valued at $6,695,461 in 1920 as against $2,423,964 in 1909. Egg production amounted to over 57,000,000 dozen, valued at more than $28,000,000.

WONDERFUL CROPS.

The value of all crops raised shows an increase of 301 per cent, the respective figures being $587,600,591 as against $146,526,151. Cereals are valued at $108,000,000 as against $28,000,000, and other grains at $31,500,000 as against $6,500,000 ten years ago. Value of seeds jumped from $800,000 to over $6,000,000; hay from $42,000,000 to $96,000,000; vegetables from $12,000,000 to $47,000,000; miscellaneous crops from $6,000,000 to $26,000,000; orchard fruits from $18,358,897 to $91,687,814; nut crop from 23,000,000 pounds, valued at $3,000,000 to about 67,000,000 pounds valued at $19,000,000.

We also find 1,000,000 acres planted to wheat as against 487,000, and 116,000 acres in corn as against 51,000 acres at the former report.

Those are some of the more outstanding figures. Who can read them without being impressed? To me they point out a splendid progress in the agricultural development of California. They breathe optimism. They show a healthy condition that cannot be torn down by gloomy forebodings. They are a forerunner of still greater things to come. They give the lie to stagnation and depression. They stand as a beacon light, and lead us to look confidently for a continuation of that spirit and pride which have made our State of California the greatest State of the Union in the past, and which will continue to make it the greatest State of the Union in the future.

AUGUST MAKING NEW RECORD.

With 2250 building permits, for a total value of $4,442,137, issued for the first nineteen days of the month, August stands far ahead of any previous month of this year, both in volume and value of permits and promises to exceed the record for any other month in the history of the city, according to C. V. Welch, chief clerk of the building department.

For the same period in last month, 1891 permits, the valuations reaching $3,870,981, were issued. For the same number of days in August, 1920, 1829 permits, for $4,429,590, were issued.

The total to date for this year is 19,876 permits, for $44,247,977, as contrasted with 13,463 permits, for $33,811,279, for the corresponding period of last year. All of the permits for 1920 totaled 25,550, their valuation being $60,023,600.

RESIDENCES ARE IN DEMAND AT ONTARIO.

ONTARIO, Aug. 13.—That the demand for houses is active here is proved by the fact that Mrs. Harriet L. Gray has just sold to the Rev. D. B. Shephard, who recently moved here from Orange, a house she had only completed moving from the site of the new Church of Christ, Scientist, soon to be erected at Euclid and G street, to 622 North Euclid avenue. Mrs. Gray a few weeks ago purchased property adjoining the church site, with a frontage of 62 feet on Euclid avenue. She sold the twenty feet adjoining to the church, taking the house she has now sold in exchange.

P. E. Ostran, proprietor of the Ostran Dry Goods store of Ontario, is planning to build an eight-room house at the corner of C and Vine streets, this city. The residence is to cost $3000. M. Stanford of West Fifth street is to build a five-room residence and garage, to cost $2000. J. B. Koeller has the contract for the building.

NEW TRACT ON WEST WASHINGTON OPENED.

Considerable building and subdivision activity is now under way in the district adjacent to and on West Washington Boulevard. Among the newest of the subdivisions to be opened in this district is the portion of the old Fernandez estate, comprising seventy-one acres, which has been taken over and divided into quarter-acre lots by Carlin G. Smith, subdivider. Gas mains and water mains have been installed to serve this rapidly growing section of the city, and a number of new streets have been finished within the last few weeks. Other public utilities, including electricity, sewers, and telephone lines, have also been installed. The tract just opened by Mr. Smith is served by both the West Washington and the West Adams street car lines.

REALTY FIRM EXPANDS.

The Schwarzkopf-Whitelaw Realty Company, formerly specialists in suburban acreage only, has added other departments, and is now conducting a general real estate business. F. A. Thies is in charge of the city department, and is securing the services of experts for the income, residence, exchange, and other departments.

COMPRESSED AIR WORKS NEW PUMP

Uses Nature's Principle Upon Geyser Plan.

Dispenses With Valves, Rods and Usual Parts.

Pumps in Air, Pushes Out Oil of Equal Volume.

As a major in the Quartermaster Corps during the war, G. A. Christensen, up to that time a resident of San Francisco, was stationed at Long Beach and at that time developed an invention for improved methods of pumping, considered so valuable that the government took over the patents for its own use. While governmental rights were retained, the commercial rights in and to the invention and patents have since been restored to Mr. Christensen, who has made his home in Los Angeles with the intention of manufacturing and distributing his pump from this city.

"The Airlock Pump" is the name the inventor has given to the device, which is entirely new as a mechanical process, although it is founded on what Mr. Christensen declares to be nature's oldest form of pumping, as illustrated in the continuous and automatic operation of Old Faithful geyser in the Yellowstone National Park.

THE DIFFERENCE.

The only difference is that compressed air is the driving fluid in the airlock pump, instead of steam as in the case of the geyser. But, like the geyser again, it works without valves or the usual mechanical parts familiar to the user of pumps in their various forms. The first installation of an airlock pump was made by the government in well No. 5 at Camp Holabird, Md., in November, 1919, and it has given continuous and satisfactory service ever since.

Using compressed air, furnished through any size compressor required, according to the lift or volume of fluid to be pumped, it works under any combination of single or multistage, high or low lift, deep or shallow submergence, moderate or excessive air or gas pressure, slow or rapid flow, and discharges invariably measure for measure of liquid for air.

The technical press has taken notice of the new pump, and an interesting description, with numerous illustrations, appeared in a recent issue of the Mining and Oil Bulletin, published in Los Angeles. These pumps will be made in many forms, but all will be modifications of the basic patents issued to the Los Angeles inventor. It is applicable to oil wells, to water pumping, to mine pumping, and will solve many of the problems and clear away many of the handicaps in connection with the difficulties at present confronting the farmers in the Arizona deserts and in spots of California where the unusually low levels are baffling the water users.

SIMPLICITY KEYNOTE.

Lacking all valves, rods, and other parts frequently needing repairs, which cause vexing delays and often prohibitive expense, the inventor claims the airlock pump is an efficient, a well-balanced pneumatic-hydraulic machine, quite free from mechanical losses due to inertia and friction. It can be worked with steam or gas and can use the natural gas of the oil wells to take the place of the compressed air.

Mr. Christensen has established a laboratory and demonstration plant at 1006 South Hill street.

BECOME HOME OWNERS.

Almost Fifty Per Cent of Those Who Buy Lots Improve Them.

Approximately 48 per cent of the newcomers who buy lots at the various Los Angeles subdivisions do so with the idea of improving them with homes, according to an inquiry made by the Excursion Subdividers of Southern California in connection with its Own Your Home educational campaign. This fact, according to the subdividers, is revealed in the records of their members covering a period of two years. The same records show that about 75 per cent of the lot purchasers are nonresidents of California, 50 per cent of whom subsequently become residents of this community.

In the belief that the average newcomer to Los Angeles is interested in obtaining a view of the city's great industrial development, the excursion subdividers have adopted a plan of conducting two excursions each week to include a tour through the districts where the larger iron, steel, machinery, furniture, clay products and packing plants are located.

SALES CONTINUE BRISK IN LA HABRA DISTRICT.

Edwin G. Hart, manager and sales agent for La Habra Heights and North Whittier Heights, reports the following sales closed through his office: To North Whittier Heights Citrus Association, lot in Hillgrove, $2280; to Minnie E. Holloway, lot in Hillgrove, $1350; to C. H. Mowry of Hartford, Mich., 7.95 acres vacant land for avocados at North Whittier Heights for $6360; to Dr. Stonebrook 5.92 acres La Habra Heights for an avocado nursery, $5328; to W. B. Jadden, 13.09 acres La Habra Heights, $13,440; to J. W. Hart, 20.20 acres La Habra Heights, $14,864; to Halm, Johnston and Clifton, 17.88 acres La Habra Heights, $11,367; to Urbano Estrada, lot in Whittier, $4500; for El Campo Land Company, to Frank Pickard, two lots in El Campo Court, $10,000; for Realty Investors Company of Southern California to Duncan Corporation, five acres near Gardena, $5000; for R. H. Messick to John G. Plank, two lots El Campo Court, $8025; for C. A. Blake to W. S. Capless of St. Louis, ten-acre walnut grove near Puente, $16,500; for Grace E. Duncan, twelve-acre walnut grove near San Gabriel, $15,000.

BUILDING FINE HOME.

EXETER, Aug. 20.—George W. Carr is building an attractive, modern country home three miles northwest of Exeter. The house is expected to be one of the most attractive places in the district. It is located on a beautiful natural site, and the building, which is of two-story design, will cost approximately $15,000 when completed.

BOYLE HEIGHTS OFFICE.

W. J. Miller, who has been engaged in the realty business here for a number of years, has opened an office at the corner of Fourth street and Euclid avenue for the exclusive handling of Boyle Heights property.

There is good and sufficient reason why "L. A. P. B. Co." Face Brick has been selected for the facing of practically all the notable face brick jobs erected in Southern California in the past 34 years. The buildings themselves are the most impressive proof of L. A. P. B. leadership.

Philadelphia Plan—

EQUIPMENT Bonds, regarded by bankers as among the safest forms of investment known, are a direct lien on railway rolling stock.

When issued under the Philadelphia Plan, title to the equipment is vested in a trustee for the bond holders, and the equipment is leased to the company at a rental sufficient to pay the interest and retire the bonds as they mature.

Through the operation of a Sinking Fund, or otherwise, the loan is reduced each year, thereby increasing the security behind each bond.

Empire Tank Line Co. 8% Equipment Trust Gold Certificates are a particularly attractive investment of this character, possessing as an added feature of security, the unconditional guarantee of the Empire Gas & Fuel Company, as to payment of principal and interest.

Price 99½ and interest, to yield about 8.10%.

DAILY TRADE TALK.

Week in Review; Exposition Was the Outstanding Feature; Conditions Favorable for Revival.

BY CHAPIN HALL.

The Trade Exposition, which closed its doors at 10 o'clock last evening, was the most successful demonstration of the new Los Angeles that has yet been made.

Not only to the thousands of buyers who thronged the aisles of the great exposition building between 10 and 2 every day, but to the 200,000 or more representatives of the public who have been inspired by the exceptional display, has the market week brought a new understanding of the greater city which is growing up.

Writers may expatiate and orators may orate of the industrial and commercial development of Los Angeles until their typewriters are inkless and their tongues are frazzled, and still fail to convey the lessons which the exposition taught through the eye.

The details of market week; the number of exhibits; the productions involved; the workers required; the amazing percentage of growth, and all of the statistical wealth of information have been related in The Times during the week, so that it only remains to comment upon the concrete evidences of unbounded success which has attended the efforts of the Chamber of Commerce in staging the exposition.

In a midsummer week it has been the means of giving business a stimulus which will carry it well into the fall season. Hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of orders have been taken, and best of all, the buyers from all parts of the Far West have learned that in this market their requirements can be filled promptly, economically and with superior workmanship.

TREND OF OPINION.

The Trade Exposition, of course, has been the outstanding factor in an otherwise quiet week. The trend of expert opinion is unquestionably optimistic, and well-informed reviewers, bankers and business men continue to assert the slow swing of the pendulum back toward normal conditions.

Some profess disappointment that this swing is not more pronounced, and a few maintain that we are in for a period of calm before the reflex is felt on the Pacific Coast. Just so long, however, as this period is deferred, the shorter it will be when and if it comes, because there is no longer any doubt that conditions in the East and through the great manufacturing centers are improving. Slowly, it is true, but still they are improving. These conditions find inevitable and mathematical reflection here in from three to six months, a portion of which has already elapsed as applied to the upward swing already referred to.

The chief drawback to a full readjustment continues to be the backward tendencies of export trade, a tendency which is likely to persist until conditions overseas become more settled. At the same time it must always be remembered that a large percentage of the slump in our foreign trade is chargeable to reduced costs rather than reduced volume.

Many of the great industrial and manufacturing plants in this country were built on an export trade basis, and when we are told that they are operating at 50 or 60 per cent capacity the meaning may often be read into the statement that they are in reality running at an approximate peak so far as domestic needs are concerned.

Los Angeles continues to show the largest percentage of decline in food and commodity prices, but this decline is rapidly slowing down, and it seems likely that price stability, for the present at least, has about been reached. This in itself will stimulate buying and inspire confidence.

TRADE REVIVAL.

Locally there is much to commend, and such depression as exists is easily explained. We are in the midst of the quietest period of the year normally. Summer activities are well advanced and the fall business has not yet commenced. Many are returning from vacations, but continue "taking it easy." Some of our summer guests have turned homeward, and our fall and winter friends have not yet taken their places. It is between seasons for the shopper.

With the passing of the early September holidays, Labor Day and Admission Day, the opening of the schools, and the invigoration which comes with early fall; the release of quarterly dividends and the general seasonal speeding up it is reasonable to expect a marked revival of trade within the next few weeks.

In the meantime Los Angeles is maintaining her lead position in building. Investors have plenty of funds for attractive offerings, credits are thawing out; bank deposits are increasing; labor is 90 per cent employed; wage reductions are nominal; large projects are under way; failures are few and comparatively unimportant, and the general situation is distinctly favorable.

Throughout the State there has also been improvement. The crop yield is abundant, and farmers have been marketing their produce rapidly and at better prices than were first anticipated. Barley has sold freely for export and it is estimated that there never was a time in the history of the grain industry in California when so little of the season's crop was left in first hands at this period of the year.

BANK CLEARINGS GROW.

Although there was frequent intimation from various sources during the week that business had encountered a temporary calm, this viewpoint was disproved by the "figgers in the case," which in the shape of bank clearings provide an adequate barometer of actual trade conditions.

Although price levels are greatly reduced over a year ago the encouraging fact appeared in bank clearing totals that they exceeded the corresponding week of 1920 by $346,116.38. The gross was $75,180,896.82.

This means that in the face of a decided decline in gross financing the turnover has been heavier than ever to attain the figures quoted and is one of the best assurances available that Los Angeles business is being sustained at a thoroughly satisfactory tempo.

RAILROAD SITUATION.

The outlook for the finanical relief of the railroads is not very promising. Railway officials express little confidence that the bill authorizing the funding by the War Finance Corporation of the debt of the government on capital expenditure account will be put through Congress much before the latter part of the year, and if so, it is not expected that the roads will derive much benefit before the first part of next year. The bill is now being discussed in both Houses, but railroad executives are generally of the opinion that Congress will not take any action before the recess, which is scheduled for this week.

The decided improvement in the position of the railroads is one outstanding feature among recent developments. A net operating income of the Class 1 lines for June of $50,000,000 contrasts most hopefully with the deficit of about $16,000,000 for the same month a year ago. But this is not the whole story. Since July 1 earnings seem to have gone steadily ahead, and it must be remembered that savings in labor costs, likely to amount to $1,000,000, and in fuel costs, likely to amount to $4,000,000 a month, have now taken effect.

These and the various gains in efficiency that have been introduced should give the August returns and those of succeeding months an even more favorable position, relatively speakin.

Reductions of export rates, recently announced, as well as the much more far-reaching, though less obvious cuts in transportation costs, due to reclassification and rearrangement of charges, are already increasing the amount of freight passing over some of the lines.

CROP CONDITIONS.

With news from all parts of Europe and especially from Russia, indicating a great crop shortage on account of the unusual drouth, the fact that the wheat output in the United States is estimated from 750,000,000 to 800,000,000 is of controlling significance. The opening of large credits for the shipment of wheat to Europe shows that foodstuffs will maintain their primary place in our export trade and that there is every reason to expect good prices.

The pack of canned fruits and vegetables is reported smaller this year than last and some varieties, such as peaches, are said to be pretty well sold out. The outlook for this season's dried fruit crop is better than it was earlier in the year due to the fact that last year's holdover is now being moved more freely with good demand for export.

The condition of the rice crop is reported at about 80 per cent of normal as compared with 88 per cent last year and a nine-year average of 93 per cent. This year's production is estimated at 175,000 tons as compared with 215,000 tons in 1920.

The sugar-beet crop is 85 per cent of normal as against 91 per cent a year ago. Estimates of the season's production, based on crop conditions and acreage planted, would indicate a yield of 1,080,000 tons, approximately the same as 1920.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

The Wells Fargo Nevada National bank, in its Business Outlook, says that good progress is being made in financing the export of produce and merchandise through advances by the War Finance Corporation as well as by various banking pools and syndicates which, together, have arranged for heavy loans to many industries.

These loans have helped to move surplus stock and been of material assistance in re-establishing our home markets, thereby releasing tied-up credits for new groups of borrowers. Our foreign trade situation has also been materially helped by the reparations agreement, as Germany is buying heavily of our raw materials; 22 per cent of the June cotton exports of 495,590 bales—a movement of more than twice the size of that shown in 1920—went to Germany. Japanese and Chinese buying has also been stimulated through credits supplied by this country.

However, as Eugene Meyer, Jr., managing director of the War Finance Corporation, says, "Foreign credit is not the critical factor at the present time." He adds: "Europe prefers to take our commodities gradually instead of in a short period, but it does not want to buy largely for future shipments even if credit is offered; the exchange risks are too large.

"The fluctuations in exchange during the past year were greater than the present fluctuations in cotton. If the foreigner has to take a chance on one or the other he prefers to take the chance on the cotton fluctuations rather than on the much wider fluctuations of exchange."

Requirement of the agricultural States will have an important influence on the money market during the next few months, but total demands are likely to fall considerably below the similar movement of a year ago. This is due to the falling of commodity prices, farm wages and general living costs as well as provisions heretofore made by various interests for their present financial needs.

The Stock Growers' Finance Corporation is now functioning and about $50,000,000, subscribed by the larger reserve city banks, is available to the live-stock industry for loans that may extend over a thirty months' period. This is one of the constructive steps that help to relieve the credit strain and in turn to create demand and a better price for our farm products.

CUTS LACK INFLUENCE.

Steel Wage Reductions Fail to Affect Dull Market; Mark Declines to Last Week's Close.

BY ALEXANDER DANA NOYES,
Financial Editor New York "Times."
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—The dull market which prevailed today after the usual rule of a late summer Saturday, the only news with a possible bearing on investment values was the overnight announcement of the steel corporation's third reduction in wages, and the Railway Labor Board's decision continuing to 50 per cent higher pay for work beyond the eight-hour shift.

These announcements barely influenced the market, in which the United States Steel shares did not change at all in price, while the railways were also practically motionless. Only the motor-car stocks and a few other industrials moved to any purpose. In these, there were several declines of a point or more; but in general the day's changes only fractions.

The decline in the German mark today, not of large proportions, brought its price almost exactly to that of the previous week's closing. How utterly confused is the whole question of this valuation of Germany's paper currency is illustrated by the statement of the Reichsbank as of August 15, which reports the somewhat extraordinary reduction of 9,025,000,000 marks in the circulation during the preceding week.

Further decrease of $39,000,000 in the loan and investment account, as shown by the weekly statement of the Associated Banks, marked reduction of $66,000,000 within a month and of nearly $200,000,000 since the beginning of July. Since the high point of the period, reached on the 16th of last October, these loans have now been cut down $1,116,000,000, or 20 per cent and they are less by $737,000,000 than in this week of 1920. This inclusion of securities owned independently of bank note issues makes it difficult to judge how far this immense reduction measures actual contraction of money market credits, but the greater part of it must be a result of the liquidation by speculative borrowers and the shrinkage of business activity. The total outstanding account is now the smallest since July, 1918.

BUSINESS NEWS.

The news budget for the day contained nothing of especial importance except the announcement by the United States Steel Corporation in which a further lowering in wages of unskilled labor is made effective. However, this made no appreciable impression.

The home market was quiet and without definite trend. Several thousand shares of Republic Petroleum changed hands gaining a point during the trading and closing strong at 26 cents. United Eastern on the contrary weakened off two points from early sales at 2.32. Los Angeles Investment was strong at 85 cents. A ten-share lot of Goodyear Textile went over at 58.00, but Goodyear, preferred, was inactive.

ALBERS BROTHERS MILLING.

Directors of the Albers Brothers Milling Company, holding their annual meeting last week, elected Morits Thomsen president of the corporation for the full term of one year. Mr. Thomsen, who is also president of the Centennial Mill Company and a pioneer miller of the West, was, last May, placed at the head of the corporation at a meeting in San Francisco pending reorganization.

After the annual meeting of the corporation, President Thomsen said the outlook for the Albers Brothers Milling Company is excellent, business is on the increase and production in the various plants expanding.

"The plants of the Albers Brothers Milling Company are all running," he said, "and at an average of 75 per cent capacity, which is a very good situation, considering everything. You may state that the company's position is improving and with every indication looking to an upturn in business and big crops in the West, it will make steady progress."

The Albers Brothers Milling Company is one of the oldest flour milling and cereal manufacturing concerns in the West. It has plants in Seattle, the corporation's headquarters; Los Angeles, San Francisco, Oakland, Portland, Tacoma and Ogden, Utah, the latter being the only leased property.

The corporation reached the peak of production in 1918 when its gross earnings were $20,389,000. In common with all other large industrial corporations throughout the country, the milling company faced problems of large inventories and heavy overhead which, it is stated, have now been adjusted satisfactorily.

SAO PAULO BONDS.

Merrill, Lynch & Co. have taken advantage of the present interest in foreign internal bonds, yielding high returns with possibilities of great appreciation with rising exchange rates, by buying up a large block of the State of Sao Palulo, Brazil, 5 per cent gold loan bonds.

These bonds are being offered through their local representative at prices that will bring an approximate present yield of 8 per cent. The issue, however, bears special features which make the possible return on the bonds much higher. The first of these is that the principal and interest is payable at the option of the holder in either French francs, Swiss francs, or sterling.

Because Swiss francs are selling at a much higher rate than either sterling or French francs, it is to the benefit of the holder to cash his coupons in Swiss francs. Increases in value in either of the other two exchanges would enable the holder, however, to take his payments at the most advantageous rate. The return of any one of the three to normal rates would increase the direct income to over 9 per cent, while the profit on the redemption would be over 85 per cent.

The issue is redeemable through a cumulative sinking fund by annual drawings at par. The holder of bonds that happen to be redeemed by lot next January, for example, will receive a return at the rate of about 125 per cent. As the coupons are payable in francs, Merrill, Lynch & Co. have pointed out that they are especially convenient to investors accustomed to making European remittances.

The bonds are the direct obligation of the State of Sao Paulo, Brasil, as well as being secured by first mortgages on 1009 miles of railroad.

MEXICAN RAILWAYS.

A threatened strike of employees of the National Railways of Mexico because of the proposed reduction in wages has been averted, according to a report issued by the Trust Company of Mexico. Most of the railwaymen, through their organization chairmen, have signified their willingness to accept the cut.

The government management of of the Mexican railways is said to be negotiating with Wells, Fargo Express to operate the express service for the government.

MEXICAN PATENTS.

Firms expecting to do business in Mexico, with the improved conditions now existing in that country, may find that although they have registered their trade-marks with the government such trade-marks have been appropriated by unscrupulous manufacturers who have been selling an inferior article as the genuine.

Owing to unsettled conditions in Mexico during the last ten years, many American firms have failed to register their trade-marks and trade-names, according to one of the large American banks located in Mexico City. American manufacturers have been advised to look into the present status of their trade-marks and trade-names in Mexico at once.

WEEK ON 'CHANGE.

Stock sales of the week on the Los Angeles Exchange reached a total value of $297,210.52, comprsing deals in 108,123 shares. Three hundred and eighteen bonds of a value of $149,472.36 were also sold during the week. The bulk of the bond trading was, as usual, in the Liberty issues.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Hunter, Dulin and Company announce the following additions to their Los Angeles office as junior salesmen: John W. Sibley, well known in financial circles, and for many years an accountant with the Santa Fe Railroad; A. B. McAlpine, formerly with the National Bank of Pasadena, and well known to the student body and alumnae of Stanford University for his gridiron performances; W. P. Banning, a recent graduate of the University of California, and son of the late Joseph Banning.

WOULD INCREASE RATES.

Application to increase rates has been made to the Railroad Commission by the City Water Company of Ocean Park, serving the city of Venice. The utility states that since the present rates were established in 1916 the cost of labor has increased 25 per cent and materials have nearly doubled in price. No specific increase is asked.

These conditions find inevitable and mathematical reflection here in from three to six months, a portion of which has already elapsed as applied to the upward swing already referred to.

The chief drawback to a full readjustment continues to be the backward tendencies of export trade, a tendency which is likely to persist until conditions overseas become more settled. At the same time it must always be remembered that a large percentage of the slump in our foreign trade is chargeable to reduced costs rather than reduced volume.

Many of the great industrial and manufacturing plants in this country were built on an export trade basis, and when we are told that they are operating at 50 or 60 per cent capacity the meaning may often be read into the statement that they are in reality running at an approximate peak so far as domestic needs are concerned.

Los Angeles continues to show the largest percentage of decline in food and commodity prices, but this decline is rapidly slowing down, and it seems likely that price stability, for the present at least, has about been reached. This in itself will stimulate buying and inspire confidence.

TRADE REVIVAL.

Locally there is much to commend, and such depression as exists is easily explained. We are in the midst of the quietest period of the year normally. Summer activities are well advanced and the fall business has not yet commenced. Many are returning from vacations, but continue "taking it easy." Some of our summer guests have turned homeward, and our fall and winter friends have not yet taken their places. It is between seasons for the shopper.

With the passing of the early September holidays, Labor Day and Admission Day, the opening of the schools, and the invigoration which comes with early fall; the release of quarterly dividends and the general seasonal speeding up it is reasonable to expect a marked revival of trade within the next few weeks.

In the meantime Los Angeles is maintaining her lead position in building. Investors have plenty of funds for attractive offerings, credits are thawing out; bank deposits are increasing; labor is 90 per cent employed; wage reductions are nominal; large projects are under way; failures are few and comparatively unimportant, and the general situation is distinctly favorable.

Throughout the State there has also been improvement. The crop yield is abundant, and farmers have been marketing their produce rapidly and at better prices than were first anticipated. Barley has sold freely for export and it is estimated that there never was a time in the history of the grain industry in California when so little of the season's crop was left in first hands at this period of the year.

BANK CLEARINGS GROW.

Although there was frequent intimation from various sources during the week that business had encountered a temporary calm, this viewpoint was disproved by the "figgers in the case," which in the shape of bank clearings provide an adequate barometer of actual trade conditions.

Although price levels are greatly reduced over a year ago the encouraging fact appeared in bank clearing totals that they exceeded the corresponding week of 1920 by $346,116.38. The gross was $75,180,896.82.

This means that in the face of a decided decline in gross financing the turnover has been heavier than ever to attain the figures quoted and is one of the best assurances available that Los Angeles business is being sustained at a thoroughly satisfactory tempo.

RAILROAD SITUATION.

The outlook for the financial relief of the railroads is not very promising. Railway officials express little confidence that the bill authorizing the funding by the War Finance Corporation of the debt of the government on capital expenditure account will be put through Congress much before the latter part of the year, and if so, it is not expected that the roads will derive much benefit before the first part of next year. The bill is now being discussed in both Houses, but railroad executives are generally of the opinion that Congress will not take any action before the recess, which is scheduled for this week.

The decided improvement in the position of the railroads is one outstanding feature among recent developments. A net operating income of the Class 1 lines for June of $50,000,000 contrasts most hopefully with the deficit of about $16,000,000 for the same month a year ago. But this is not the whole story. Since July 1 earnings seem to have gone steadily ahead, and it must be remembered that savings in labor costs, likely to amount to $1,000,000, and in fuel costs, likely to amount to $4,000,000 a month, have now taken effect.

These and the various gains in efficiency that have been introduced should give the August returns and those of succeeding months an even more favorable position, relatively speakin.

Reductions of export rates, recently announced, as well as the much more far-reaching, though less obvious cuts in transportation costs, due to reclassification and rearrangement of charges, are already increasing the amount of freight passing over some of the lines.

CROP CONDITIONS.

With news from all parts of Europe and especially from Russia, indicating a great crop shortage on account of the unusual drouth, the fact that the wheat output in the United States is estimated from 750,000,000 to 800,000,000 is of controlling significance. The opening of large credits for the shipment of wheat to Europe shows that foodstuffs will maintain their primary place in our export trade and that there is every reason to expect good prices.

The pack of canned fruits and vegetables is reported smaller this year than last and some varieties, such as peaches, are said to be pretty well sold out. The outlook for this season's dried fruit crop is better than it was earlier in the year due to the fact that last year's holdover is now being moved more freely with good demand for export.

The condition of the rice crop is reported at about 80 per cent of normal as compared with 88 per cent last year and a nine-year average of 92 per cent. This year's production is estimated at 175,000 tons as compared with 215,000 tons in 1920.

The sugar-beet crop is 85 per cent of normal as against 91 per cent a year ago. Estimates of the season's production, based on crop conditions and acreage planted, would indicate a yield of 1,080,000 tons, approximately the same as 1920.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

The Wells Fargo Nevada National bank, in its Business Outlook, says that good progress is being made in financing the export of produce and merchandise through advances by the War Finance Corporation as well as by various banking pools and syndicates which, together, have arranged for heavy loans to many industries.

These loans have helped to move surplus stock and been of material assistance in re-establishing our home markets, thereby releasing tied-up credits for new groups of borrowers. Our foreign trade situation has also been materially helped by the reparations agreement, as Germany is buying heavily of our raw materials; 22 per cent of the June cotton exports of 495,590 bales—a movement of more than twice the size of that shown in 1920—went to Germany. Japanese and Chinese buying has also been stimulated through credits supplied by this country.

However, as Eugene Meyer, Jr., managing director of the War Finance Corporation, says, "Foreign credit is not the critical factor at the present time." He adds: "Europe prefers to take our commodities gradually instead of in a short period, but it does not want to buy largely for future shipments even if credit is offered; the exchange risks are too large.

"The fluctuations in exchange during the past year were greater than the present fluctuations in cotton. If the foreigner has to take a chance on one or the other he prefers to take the chance on the cotton fluctuations rather than on the much wider fluctuations of exchange."

Requirement of the agricultural States will have an important influence on the money market during the next few months, but total demands are likely to fall considerably below the similar movement of a year ago. This is due to the falling of commodity prices, farm wages and general living costs as well as provisions heretofore made by various interests for their present financial needs.

The Stock Growers' Finance Corporation is now functioning and about $50,000,000, subscribed by the larger reserve city banks, is available to the live-stock industry for loans that may extend over a thirty months' period. This is one of the constructive steps that help to relieve the credit strain and in turn to create demand and a better price for our farm products.

CUTS LACK INFLUENCE.

Steel Wage Reductions Fail to Affect Dull Market; Mark Declines to Last Week's Close.

BY ALEXANDER DANA NOYES.
Financial Editor New York "Times."
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—The dull market which prevailed today after the usual rule of a late summer Saturday, the only news with a possible bearing on investment values was the overnight announcement of the steel corporation's third reduction in wages, and the Railway Labor Board's decision continuing to 50 per cent higher pay for work beyond the eight-hour shift.

These announcements barely influenced the market, in which the United States Steel shares did not change at all in price, while the railways were also practically motionless. Only the motor-car stocks and a few other industrials moved to any purpose. In these, there were several declines of a point or more; but in general the day's changes only fractions.

The decline in the German mark today, not of large proportions, brought its price almost exactly to that of the previous week's closing. How utterly confused is the whole question of this valuation of Germany's paper currency is illustrated by the statement of the Reichsbank as of August 15, which reports the somewhat extraordinary reduction of 9,025,000,000 marks in the circulation during the preceding week.

Further decrease of $39,000,000 in the loan and investment account, as shown by the weekly statement of the Associated Banks, marked reduction of $66,000,000 within a month and of nearly $200,000,000 since the beginning of July. Since the high point of the period, reached on the 16th of last October, these loans have now been cut down $1,116,000,000, or 20 per cent and they are less by $737,000,000 than in this week of 1920. This inclusion of securities owned independently of bank note issues makes it difficult to judge how far this immense reduction measures actual contraction of money market credits, but the greater part of it must be a result of the liquidation by speculative borrowers and the shrinkage of business activity. The total outstanding account is now the smallest since July, 1918.

BUSINESS NEWS.

The news budget for the day contained nothing of especial importance except the announcement by the United States Steel Corporation in which a further lowering in wages of unskilled labor is made effective. However, this made no appreciable impression.

The home market was quiet and without definite trend. Several thousand shares of Republic Petroleum changed hands gaining a point during the trading and closing strong at 26 cents. United Eastern on the contrary weakened off two points from early sales at 2.32. Los Angeles Investment was strong at 85 cents. A ten-share lot of Goodyear Textile went over at 58.00, but Goodyear, preferred, was inactive.

ALBERS BROTHERS MILLING.

Directors of the Albers Brothers Milling Company, holding their annual meeting last week, elected Moritz Thomsen president of the corporation for the full term of one year. Mr. Thomsen, who is also president of the Centennial Mill Company and a pioneer miller of the West, was, last May, placed at the head of the corporation at a meeting in San Francisco pending reorganization.

After the annual meeting of the corporation, President Thomsen said the outlook for the Albers Brothers Milling Company is excellent, business is on the increase and production in the various plants expanding.

"The plants of the Albers Brothers Milling Company are all running," he said, "and at an average of 75 per cent capacity, which is a very good situation, considering everything. You may state that the company's position is improving and with every indication looking to an upturn in business and big crops in the West, it will make steady progress."

The Albers Brothers Milling Company is one of the oldest flour milling and cereal manufacturing concerns in the West. It has plants in Seattle, the corporation's headquarters; Los Angeles, San Francisco, Oakland, Portland, Tacoma and Ogden, Utah, the latter being the only leased property.

The corporation reached the peak of production in 1918 when its gross earnings were $20,389,000. In common with all other large industrial corporations throughout the country, the milling company faced problems of large inventories and heavy overhead which, it is stated, have now been adjusted satisfactorily.

SAO PAULO BONDS.

Merrill, Lynch & Co. have taken advantage of the present interest in foreign internal bonds, yielding high returns with possibilities of great appreciation with rising exchange rates, by buying up a large block of the State of Sao Palulo, Brazil, 5 per cent gold loan bonds.

These bonds are being offered through their local representative at prices that will bring an approximate present yield of 8 per cent. The issue, however, bears special features which make the possible return on the bonds much higher. The first of these is that the principal and interest is payable at the option of the holder in either French francs, Swiss francs, or sterling.

Because Swiss francs are selling at a much higher rate than either sterling or French francs, it is to the benefit of the holder to cash his coupons in Swiss francs. Increases in value in either of the other two exchanges would enable the holder, however, to take his payments at the most advantageous rate. The return of any one of the three to normal rates would increase the direct income to over 9 per cent, while the profit on the redemption would be over 85 per cent.

The issue is redeemable through a cumulative sinking fund by annual drawings at par. The holder of bonds that happen to be redeemed by lot next January, for example, will receive a return at the rate of about 125 per cent. As the coupons are payable in francs, Merrill, Lynch & Co. have pointed out that they are especially convenient to investors accustomed to making European remittances.

The bonds are the direct obligation of the State of Sao Paulo, Brazil, as well as being secured by first mortgages on 1009 miles of railroad.

MEXICAN RAILWAYS.

A threatened strike of employees of the National Railways of Mexico because of the proposed reduction in wages has been averted, according to a report issued by the Trust Company of Mexico. Most of the railwaymen, through their organization chairmen, have signified their willingness to accept the cut.

The government management of of the Mexican railways is said to be negotiating with Wells, Fargo Express to operate the express service for the government.

MEXICAN PATENTS.

Firms expecting to do business in Mexico, with the improved conditions now existing in that country, may find that although they have registered their trade-marks with the government such trade-marks have been appropriated by unscrupulous manufacturers who have been selling an inferior article as the genuine.

Owing to unsettled conditions in Mexico during the last ten years, many American firms have failed to register their trade-marks and trade-names, according to one of the large American banks located in Mexico City. American manufacturers have been advised to look into the present status of their trade-marks and trade-names in Mexico at once.

WEEK ON 'CHANGE.

Stock sales of the week on the Los Angeles Exchange reached a total value of $297,210.52, comprising deals in 108,123 shares. Three hundred and eighteen bonds of a value of $149,472.36 were also sold during the week. The bulk of the bond trading was, as usual, in the Liberty issues.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Hunter, Dulin and Company announce the following additions to their Los Angeles office as junior salesmen: John W. Sibley, well known in financial circles, and for many years an accountant with the Santa Fe Railroad; A. B. McAlpine, formerly with the National Bank of Pasadena, and well known to the student body and alumnae of Stanford University for his gridiron performances; W. P. Banning, a recent graduate of the University of California, and son of the late Joseph Banning.

WOULD INCREASE RATES.

Application to increase rates has been made to the Railroad Commission by the City Water Company of Ocean Park, serving the city of Venice. The utility states that since the present rates were established in 1916 the cost of labor has increased 25 per cent and materials have nearly doubled in price. No specific increase is asked.

Philadelphia Plan—

EQUIPMENT Bonds, regarded by bankers as among the safest forms of investment known, are a direct lien on railway rolling stock.

When issued under the Philadelphia Plan, title to the equipment is vested in a trustee for the bond holders, and the equipment is leased to the company at a rental sufficient to pay the interest and retire the bonds as they mature.

Through the operation of a Sinking Fund, or otherwise, the loan is reduced each year, thereby increasing the security behind each bond.

Empire Tank Line Co. 8% Equipment Trust Gold Certificates are a particularly attractive investment of this character, possessing as an added feature of security, the unconditional guarantee of the Empire Gas & Fuel Company, as to payment of principal and interest.

Price 99½ and interest, to yield about 8.10%.

…CTS—with the …per Background

You can get the details of a given security generally from the conventional printed circular.

But something else quite as important is necessary to judge expertly the merits of the security as a desirable investment.

For a background to the detailed facts, there must be a thorough knowledge of basic investment principles and a well developed judgment on such matters as safety, yield, marketability and redemption. And there must also be close familiarity with business conditions, particularly as they may affect the industry represented by the security.

To place at your disposal men who maintain high efficiency in meeting these requirements is an important element in the investment service we offer.

We shall be glad to send you our list of high grade offerings upon request.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 20. — Shorts had matters pretty much their own way during today's brief stock market session. Selling pressure from that quarter brought about more low records, particularly among motors and their accessories, also the less popular steels and equipments.

Extreme recessions of one to four points attended the steady offerings of Pierce Arrow, common and preferred, Willys Overland, preferred, Chandler, Studebaker, United States Rubber, American Car, Pressed Steel Car, Railway Steel Spring, Crucible and Republic steels. United States Steel was not materially altered, traders evidently failing to regard the further wage cut as a bearish argument.

Rails were an unimportant factor, many of the better-known shares of that division failing of quotation. Obscure transportations, such as St. Louis Southwestern, preferred, and Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha, were distinctly heavy. Sales amounted to 140,000 shares.

Bond dealings were nominal with an irregular tone, the Liberty group and most other prominent issues easing slightly where any changes occurred at all. Sales, par value, $3,450,000.

Plenty of Money for Building Loans

Building a new home or apartment-house requires ready money. To expedite its immediate erection we are prepared to make liberal loans. Loans on any projected or recently completed residence or apartment-house that is well located in Los Angeles or its immediate vicinity will be

Closed Immediately Without Delay

Loans to any amount will be made on apartment-houses, but on residences the limit is $5000. Each loan is made for 15 years and may be paid off on or after three years without bonus. Interest is payable June 1 and December 1 in each year and principal is reduced by the payment semi-annually of 3 per cent of the face of the loan. When "Building Loans" are made, papers must be recorded before any material is delivered or labor performed. Details will be furnished on application.

TWENTY FOUR HUNDRED DOLLARS ________ DOLLARS

Block 41 Guaranteed Syndicate

By W J Lewis Trustee

Cert. #38

DIVIDENDS FOR ___ 10 INTERESTS

George Anderson and M. J. Lewis formed Block 41, a one well syndicate in Breckenridge. It paid $2400 on every $1000 invested, $240 on every $100, in one single month. George Anderson's Block 41 and Y.M.C.A. have paid nearly 700% in dividends—still paying. 14 Breckenridge Syndicates paid an average of 233% a month. Now drilling his biggest proposition. He predicts than both of his other successes combined. We believe it will. 4 wells—40 rich acres—4 oil sands. Surrounded by big long-lived production. In the best part of Breckenridge field. True Breckenridge Unit Plan. Only 1500 units. Unit holders get ⅙ of oil. First oil sand 1865 feet. Further proven by two new 2000-barrel wells this week. Hellenic's first well below 1750 feet encountered gas Thursday—$100 buys one barrel out of every 1500 Hellenic receives. When Hellenic gets oil you get your cash every 30 days. (See check above.) Call or write now. Checks may follow telegraphic reservations. Hellenic units now $100 each.

HELLENIC WILL PAY MORE

COTTON MARKET IS SUSTAINED BY BUYING.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—A little week-end covering, with moderate trade buying, sustained the cotton market at the opening today and prices showed 2 to 6 points net rise. The advance met some selling but soon prices were 8 to 9 points over the previous close. Continued hot, dry weather in the Southwest seemed to prevent any aggressive bearish operations in the early trade.

Trading remained very quiet and fluctuations later were narrow and irregular, with some scattered selling in prospects for cooler weather in the Southwest. December fluctuated between 13.41 and 13.52 cents, closing at 13.47 cents with the general market closing steady, net 7 points higher to 11 lower.

Wheat and Corn Weakness Great; Much Liquidation

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—Wheat and corn displayed the greatest weakness today and December declined to a new low for the season while all futures in corn dropped to the lowest since 1906. There was a steady run of liquidation and although there were a few bulges, they met increased selling and the finish was well toward the low point on both grains. Oats displayed strength, being regarded as well liquidated. At the close wheat was 2 to 2¼ cents lower, corn ¼ to ⅜ cent lower, oats ¼ to 2 cents higher with September leading. Rye 1¾ to 2 cents lower.

It was a week of severe liquidation with no response to constructive influences and a demoralized condition all around due to an absence of speculative buying and despite the purchase of nearly ten million bushels of wheat for export.

Traders who bought early in the week were among the chief sellers Saturday, and were also sellers in general. Local traders were bearish and trading support was poor, the latter coming mainly from previous sellers and those who were taking profits in daily and weekly bids. Traders who were bullish at above $1.30 for the September are bearish now at $1.15.

There were reports of frost at Quappelle, in Western Canada, although no damage to the crop was reported. Cutting is well under way through Western Canada and the chances of frost damage are regarded as less than usual. The main interest in wheat is centered in the speculative trade and the exporters' buying. The commission houses were also liberal buyers of September on resting orders. Export sales for the day were 1,000,000 bushels.

Corn was under pressure from liquidating longs and shorts and from cash interests. The buying was by commission houses and to take profits on bids and previous sales. September dropped to 51⅜ cents and December to 52¼ cents with the close at nearly the bottom. Country offerings were fair and the cash demand poor.

Oats had good support from commission houses and investors with changers active in buying September and selling December and the reverse at 2¾ to 2⅞ cents difference against 3¼ cents recently. Selling pressure was lighter. Exporters were after old oats. The movement continues heavy with receipts 182 cars.

Montreal exporters bought 400,000 bushels of rye futures here and a cargo was taken at the seaboard for export. Winnipeg was also a buyer. The selling was by northwestern hedgers.

ORANGES.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 20.—The market on Valencias is easier. Prices are fully 50 cents per box lower than last week, especially on small sizes.

Shipments have been too heavy, resulting in an oversupply that is responsible for lowering prices.

Competitive summer fruits are plentiful and with only 6500 cars of Valencias yet to move, according to latest estimates, shippers are advising to hold back their fruit.

Many shippers have advocated the slowing down of shipments for some time but in some districts the packing houses are anxious to close down while in other districts the fruit is dropping and growers want to clean the trees. Then there are growers that are skeptical as to prices in the fall and on the whole, it has been difficult to regulate shipments.

The past seven days shipments have totaled 752 cars as against 817 cars the previous week. It is expected that shipments will run around 430 cars weekly for the balance of the season.

F.o.b. quotations are now on a basis of $3.75 to $4.50, depending upon sizes and districts.

It is estimated that fully one-half of the Valencias remaining will run 216's and smaller. These small sizes are discounted anywhere from $1 to $1.50 per box in the markets.

LEMONS.

There is no life to the lemon market.

There are no heavy accumulations of stock in the hands of either jobbers or retailers, but the situation is lifeless purely because of unfavorable weather conditions.

Shipments are being cut down. The supply of lemons in California is not heavy and shippers can afford to quit shipping until the demand shows improvement.

There are around 700 cars in storage as compared with 950 cars last year on corresponding date.

F.o.b. quotations are on a basis of $3.50 to $4 per box on best stock.

There are 60,000 boxes of foreign lemons on hand and available for sale within the next thirty days. The available supply of foreign lemons at this time for a seven-year average totals 70,000 boxes.

MAKE PLANS FOR LOWER FREIGHT RATES.

Upon receipts of word from Washington that there is likelihood that the railroads will not grant lower freight rates on citrus shipments from California to eastern points, new life was thrown into preparation for a determined fight before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

California citrus growers and shippers were considerably wrought up over the unsatisfactory news from Washington.

Discussing the situation this week steamship men and citrus fruit shippers expressed the opinion that no time will be lost in providing additional refrigerating facilities on at least one line of coast-to-coast vessels.

"While there may be times when it would be desirable to rush shipments from California to the East by rail to meet a sudden high-price situation," said one of these men, "for the most part the shipments via water will prove entirely satisfactory as soon as a sufficient number of ships have been adequately equipped. Citrus fruits can be shipped by water to Atlantic ports and hauled inland by rail as far as Cleveland at a saving over the transcontinental rail routes to points east of Cleveland."

However, the belief was expressed that as soon as Manager Powell of the exchange returns steps will be taken to renew the fight before the Interstate Commerce Commission for a deduction in rail rates to the Middle West and Central States.

Word from Washington today stated that in his conference with President Harding Mr. Powell freely discussed co-operative and agricultural legislation matters in which the President is said to be interested.

WIDE FLUCTUATIONS ARE BARLEY FEATURE.

Uncertainty as to the general trend of the market caused several fluctuations in the local grain exchange yesterday. While August barley remained practically unchanged throughout the day's bidding, September shipments advanced 50 cents a ton, and October deliveries showed, at the same time, a loss of 75 cents a ton. These contrasting changes were distinctively unusual as compared with the general consistent tone of the market during the week. Milo prices remained unchanged, the wide spread between bids and offers in December shipments illustrating well the little demand for that article at present. Three carloads of barley out of a total of twenty-seven grain shipments were reported.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Financial markets this week failed to keep pace with the brighter business outlook reported by competent observers in various sections of the country. Stocks of the better class were barely steady, while many of the speculative groups displayed greater weakness.

Public interest again was almost wholly lacking and no support from that quarter is looked for until Congress makes known its attitude regarding the funding of railroad obligations, and the proposed tax revision program assumes concrete form.

There was a fair demand for bonds and several new capital issues were readily absorbed. In the main, however, the investment inquiry was limited to rails and some of the better known foreign flotations. Liberty issues reflected further liquidation.

Conditions in the basic industries again were exemplified by the further wage cut of the Steel Corporation. manufacturers put on lower average of production at below 25 per cent.

RECORD-BREAKING VALENCIA CROP.

The Garden Beautiful in Southern California.

INFORMATION BOTH PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC. BY ERNEST BRAUNTON.

MUCH has been written about the probable production of camphor in California on a commercial scale. Many opinions find expression in print regarding the thriftiness and vigor of the trees under certain conditions in some localities. It is not whether a plant can thrive here or there which the planter should consider, but whether it has all the qualities necessary for the justification of its cultivation on a commercial scale.

Close study in Formosa, Japan, China and elsewhere has proven that the camphor content of a tree varies much in individuals and in all trees according to season, temperature, age of tree, and perhaps other factors. So the planting of camphor trees in forests is at best a hazardous undertaking. It has also been found that there are varieties (not species, but mere variations) of the true camphor tree that are camphorless, yielding only camphor oil. Nearly all camphor obtained at present, is secured through felling and therefore total destruction of the tree. These trees are never less than fifty years of age, grown under the most natural conditions and where the annual rainfall is one of the heaviest in the world. A century or more would be required to produce such trees in California.

It is thought that eventually the accepted practice and method will be to make at least annual prunings, and use these, leaves and twigs, from this to distill. It is believed the Japanese, who control the world's output are now following this system, but they are extremely reticent when approached on the subject. Many years ago, the late Dr. E. W. Hilgard said this crop could not be produced in California at a profit because of the high cost of labor. Our State also lacks the necessary atmospheric humidity to induce a sufficient annual growth. Even in the damper sections of Florida, with a heavy annual rainfall, the outlook for the production of commercial camphor is not promising. Taking it all in all, after careful study of the subject for many years, the writer will venture that California will never produce camphor on a commercial scale.

A Base Use?

Out on South Ardmore avenue, Los Angeles, a large Canary Island palm was cut off about two feet above the ground and the base used as shown on this page, quite an ornamental lawn feature, though in a position where none is proper. At the same place, a fine row of callas is grown along one side of the house. When these have "flowered out," the leaves turn yellow and are unsightly. The owner has found that by cutting off the tops and planting asters, the bed may be kept attractive throughout nearly the entire year.

The Nation's Street Trees.

There are elm-shaded villages in New England; maple-shaded towns in New York and the Ohio Valley; oak tree streets in the Southeastern States, and pepper tree lined streets in California, but for the most part this refers only to small towns or cities—never to the congested centers of population where they should have been preserved. Washington, the national capital, is one of the exceptions, and even there the plantings were not always wisely arranged. The tree growth on the streets of the average Californian town or city is ragged and unkempt in appearance, while that of the suburb or small village often is not much better unless the planting has been done under municipal control, and the plantings on a street have been confined to a single kind of tree. The telegraph, the telephone, the electric light and the trolley car have added their share toward the mutilation or destruction of the good trees that were in existence at the time of their coming. Faulty methods of pruning have caused disfigurement and ruin. "Success follows the careful planting of good trees which are given adequate protection and timely attention," says Farmers' Bulletin 1209, Planting and Care of Street Trees, just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. "Every tree should be trained to its proper form while young, so that severe pruning will not be necessary later. Guards are necessary, too, for several years. To the mutilation of severe pruning has been added the destruction of many trees in centers of business because they excluded a little light, or made the store less prominent, or were somewhat in the way of using the sidewalk for merchandise." The bulletin insists that providing shade on city streets is as much a municipal function as providing lights or sidewalks and should, therefore, be cared for by public officials. Probably the most efficient way of arranging for proper supervision, it says, is through an unpaid commission of three or five members which in turn employs an executive officer. Methods of organization are described, and numerous illustrations show how trees should be planted. There are chapters also describing pruning, spraying, transplanting, and other subjects of importance to every town or city, whether it has trees or wishes to have them. The bulletin may be had free upon application to the Division of Publications, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Stable Manure.

No other manures have such a lasting value as stable manures. A field in England was manured for twenty years and then tilled without manure for twenty years, the same crops being grown. While the soil ranged lower in fertility each year, the decline was less rapid than on plats to which various other fertilizers were applied and denied in like manner. Well-rotted stable manure is the best of all substances to apply to gardens.

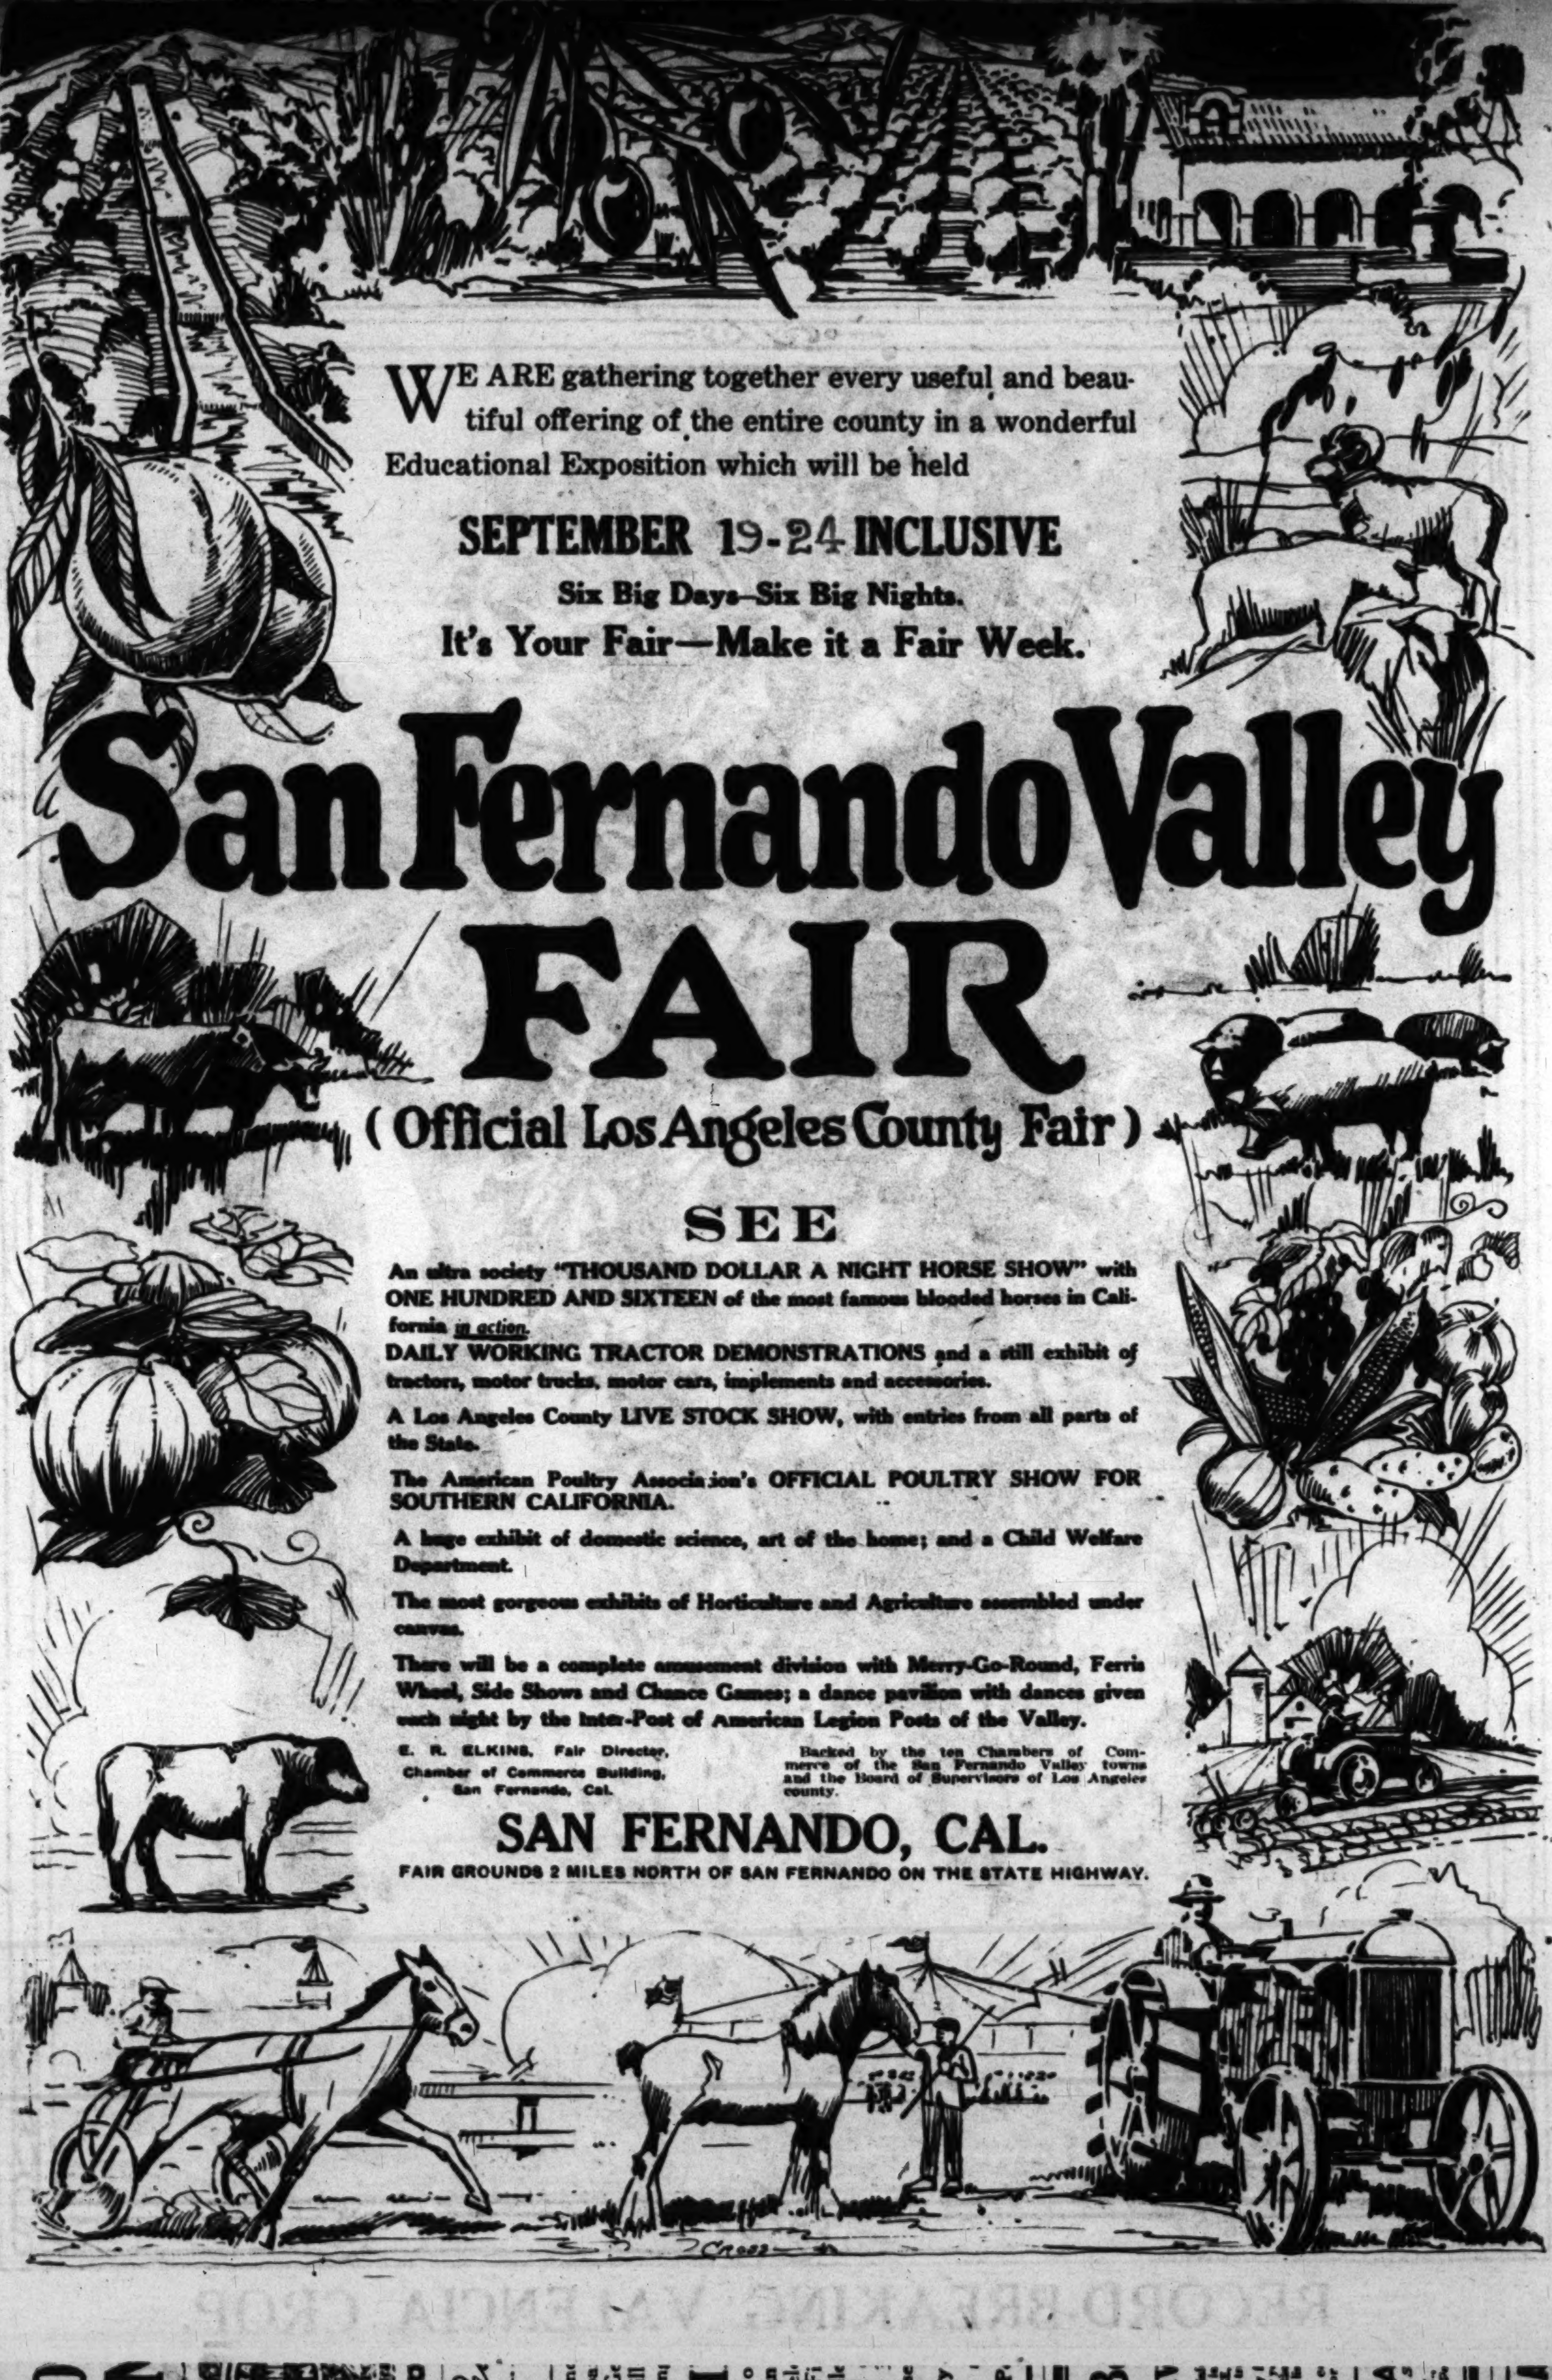
Mistletoes.

The most showy one of native species is Phoradendron flavescens, which grows on cottonwoods and poplars. But a few miles up in the Arroyo Seco they may be found on native trees and have been found on the cottonwoods north of Sacramento and in all intervening sections. The mistletoe on the oaks is not so showy as the one parasitic on cottonwoods, though but slightly inferior and very closely related, being also a Phoradendron (P. villosum.) The name is Greek—Phor, a thief, and dendron, tree. One could plant a cottonwood, slit the bark in numerous places, put a mistletoe berry beneath, tie a strip of cloth around the branch to keep the birds from eating the berries, and doubtless grow all the mistletoes you care for. Or get berries from the other species and try on oaks, apples and a host of trees quite common. In some parts of Europe, especially in England, the European mistletoe (Viscum album) spoils apple orchards and infests many native and introduced trees. In parts of California, oaks often succumb to these vegetable parasites. In Amador county, over 300 were growing on one large oak which was decidedly on the wane. Two other species of mistletoe live on the pines and or cypress and juniper, respectively, the one on the pines being leafless.

Oil and Alcohol.

French and Belgian scientists are experimenting with the berries from the "China tree," Melia Azedarach (of which the Texas umbrella tree is an umbrageous dwarf variety,) as a source of oil and alcohol. By expression, a dirty, yellow fat is obtained from the pulp of the berries, which can be used for soap making, lighting, painting, and which also has some medicinal value. The seeds contain twice as much of this "Margora oil" as the pulp, and fruits should be ground for expression of oil. The tree thrives in California, but as a source of oil it must be handled where labor costs are far less than here.

Instead of paring peaches, plums, etc., with a knife, which wastes much fruit, use a lye bath, which does not injure the fruit.



WE ARE gathering together every useful and beautiful offering of the entire county in a wonderful Educational Exposition which will be held

Phenomenal Layers Not the Good Breeders

WHICH DO WE WANT? BY HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG.

MR. W. B., from Pacoima, writes to the Farm and Tractor Section as follows:

"I notice in a late issue a paragraph concerning a decrease in annual production of Ohio hens, based on statistics gathered by the State Agricultural College. I attribute this to the different (and sometimes wrong) systems of culling; the only safe and reliable system being the trapnest. I believe many of the strains of fowl in commercial plants are losing out in breeding quality and production, because standard requirements are being overlooked, and trapnesting is giving way to systems of culling. Much of the poultry literature of the day treats of culling practices, while the urgent need is breeders of standard-bred poultry. Those trap-nested will tell their own story without any so-called 'systems' of culling. Besides, the only birds that are considered by culling instructors are the S. C. White Leghorns. If our beautiful breeds and varieties were left to the professional cullers for four or five years the races of domesticated fowl would degenerate to a condition from which they have been 'bred up' by the fancier during the past half-century. Yours for better poultry."

Here is the voice of warning. High producers are no new thing; they have been more or less in evidence ever since poultry culture has become a recognized industry. English writers record phenomenal layers as early as 1850, while from about 1875 down to date the phenomenal layer has been a feature of the floating poultry literature of the day. During all these years not a single one of these phenomenal "record" hens has produced a race of females of like fecundity. As a matter of fact, the high producer by reason of good performance and high record becomes depleted, losing in stamina and virility, which renders her undesirable in the breeding pen. The limit of good performance and maintenance of strong physical and breeding qualities experienced breeders place at about 175 eggs per year—a production exceeding that number is apt to so deplete a bird as to render her undesirable in the breeding pen. Indeed, we believe that some of the most successful egg farms never breed their high producers—in fact, crowd them to death for eggs and then to the butcher. The maintenance of the flock is made possible by breeding robust specimens from good laying strains, and then culling out or trapnesting the progeny and discarding the poor producers. So much for the economics in the breeding pen.

There can be no question but what the incessant effort for high-producing hens has militated against standard qualities in breeds. Type has become less important, and color markings even more so. That this will continue we somewhat doubt, because after all the average person will insist on purity of blood in buying breeding stock. This is quite as pronounced in cattle and hogs, sheep and horses as it is in poultry. The boom for production will reach its zenith sooner or later when we shall experience a return to sanity; when average flock production will be the unit of value, and the maintenance of type and color markings in breeds and varieties will be respected. Nature will demand her pound of flesh. There is no virtue without sin, nor riches without poverty, nor high egg production without loss of stamina and procreative force. What is essential is the preservation and perpetuation of all good qualities, so that health and vigor will keep step with economic values. In brief, we want to make the beautiful more bountiful and the bountiful more beautiful; and the way to do it is to maintain type, color markings and productiveness on a safe high average, and not produce here and there an excessive high individual producer, and then holler our heads off about it.

The State Fair Poultry Show.

The premium list for the State Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Show, to be held in connection with the State Fair in Sacramento, has been received, and is (as usual) liberal in its cash awards. In the division of standard fowls, the premiums are, in the singles $10., $8 and $5; pens $12., $10 and $7, to each of the winners of the variety having the largest entry in the show. To those with the second largest entries, the awards are $9, $7 and $4.50 in singles; pens, $11, $9 and $6.50. The list covering third, fourth and fifth awards drop in the same proportions. For the largest and best display of standard poultry, all classes competing, the awards are $15 to first, $10 to second and $5 to third. For best male, $10 to first, and $8 to second; best female, $7.50 and $5; best pen, $15 and $12.50.

In bantams, $10 for the best game male, and $8 for female; $15 for best pen and $12.50 for second. Best male in ornamental class, $10 to first and $8 to second; best female, $7.50 and $5; best pen in ornamental class, $15; second, $12.50.

For the best pair of turkeys, $15 to first, $12 to second and $6 to third. Second best pair, $7.50 to first, $5 to second and $2 to third.

For the best pair of geese, $12.50 to first, $7.50 to second and $4 to third. Ducks, best pair, $10, $5 and $2.50.

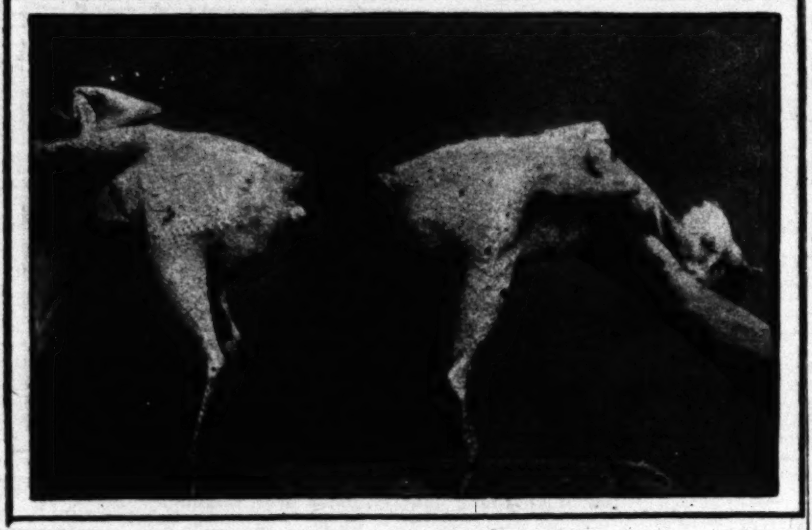
In the single classes, covering chickens, water fowl and turkeys the awards are also liberal, ranging from $7.50 to $3 for first; $5 to $2 for seconds, and $3 to $1 for thirds.

While it is true that the birds are not always in the best of feather in September, it is also true that the State Fair is a good place to exhibit. Attracting all classes of people engaged in rural industry, it affords opportunity for sales of breeding stock and day-old chicks.

Since it begins to look as though Los Angeles will be without a poultry show this season it would seem good business on the part of those poultry breeders who cater to the market for breeding stock to make liberal entries at Sacramento this fall.

Good Buys in Breeding Stock.

The disposition of surplus breeding stock usually confronts the breeder at this season of the year. This ordinarily consists of old hens, surplus cockerels and in many cases (for want of room) birds of both sexes. The marketing of such stock is often forced—the first buyer that comes along with a reasonably good offer "takes the lot;" or the birds are sent to some central point to be disposed of. In this way some really good breeding and occasionally exhibition specimens at times find their way to the butcher. We are not condemning the method nor are we criticising the seller; the point we want to make prominent, however, is that this season of the year is a good time to buy breeding males and laying females. When such can be secured at prices slightly above those for table fowl, it is opportune to invest if in the market for this class of goods. A scrutiny of The Times liner poultry columns will bear out this assertion.



The Naked Truth in Poultry Culling.

Left, hen with well-developed abdomen, indicating she was laying. Right, hen shewing hard, contracted, or drawn-up abdomen, indicating she was not laying.

The Poultrymen's Medicine Chest.

Of all the letters of inquiry that reach this department asking for information, possibly one-half have to do with the physical condition of chickens; in one of two cases it is invariably disease or the presence of lice and mites that causes worry to breeders and a physical decline in their birds. On general principles we have but little patience with sick birds, but we have a very profound respect for the man who feeds and provides conditions for his flocks that will at least keep disease and vermin below the danger line. There are cases, however, where treatment is expedient and advisable, and especially where the ailing birds are valuable as breeders. The following list of drugs and remedies is recommended by the Maine Experiment Station, and is here published with the hope that it will prove of service to our readers with their chicken troubles:

Calomel (subchloride of mercury)—A very useful alterative medicine for fowls of all ages. One-grain pills are usually used. One-fourth grain is a good laxative. It has a very good effect on the liver. It should be followed in two hours by a dose of castor oil.

Cayenne is an excellent liver stimulant when given in not too large quantities. In case of colds, it is useful, and is often used as one of the ingredients in stimulants so often fed to increase or stimulate winter egg production.

Catechu is often used to treat severe cases of diarrhoea. The average dose of powdered catechu is from 2 to 5 grains, and of the tincture from 2 to 5 drops.

Castor Oil—One of the best and most common remedies for diarrhoea. This affliction is often caused by some sour or fetid mass in the intestines; a dose of castor oil will often remove this and thus allay the diarrhoea. It is also a valuable factor to aid in reducing the impacted crop. A teaspoonful of castor oil is poured down the throat and then the crop is manipulated until the softened mass is caused to move on properly.

Epsom Salts (magnesium sulphate)—It is one of the cheapest and most useful of all drugs. It is especially useful in liver trouble and diarrhoea. Half a teaspoonful for a full-grown fowl is a standard dose. It can be fed by mixing in soft feed; but a much more effective plan is to allow the bird to go without food for a few hours and then dissolve the salts in warm water and pour down the bird's throat.

Cottonseed Oil and Olive Oil—Useful when hens are egg-bound, for diarrhoea, and for external and internal use in dressing sores, torn flesh and bound crop.

Bichloride of Mercury—A 1 to 1000 bichloride solution is a germicide and disinfectant for external use, cleansing wounds and preventing infection. It is highly poisonous and to prevent it from being mistaken from water it is well to color it with laundry blue for identification. One can mix the solution by purchasing the standard bichloride of mercury tablets, or better yet, have the druggist make a standard solution.

Medicines in Tablet Form—It is often desirable, because much more convenient and easily administered, to have the medicines in compact tablet form. Wholesale drug houses carry complete lines of such tablets graded according to dosage. They are administered very easily by holding the bird's mouth open with one hand and with the other thrusting the tablet far back into the bird's mouth, so that it is swallowed. The following four drugs in this form are useful:

Salicylic acid, 2½ grains, for use in cases of rheumatism.

Aconite Root, 1-10 grain, for use in fevers.

Bismuth subnitrite, 1 grain for internal irritation.

Day-Old Chicks or Young Pullets?

The day-old-chick industry has not developed without its trials and tribulations, neither is it free from negative influences. Since its product is marketed in an unfinished (undeveloped) condition, its vendors have to a large extent escaped the after risks of mortality in the growing to maturity of the birds. This the purchaser assumes, and if statistics were available as to the percentages of day-old chicks that really attain maturity and become successful commercially, we are quite sure that the list of drones and losses by death would figure quite large and the number of profitable producers be comparatively small. All this undoubtedly keeps and maintains a market for chicks, and since a large proportion go into the hands of the inexperienced, it does not matter greatly after all. It is fair to assume that as many survive as there might be if the hatching eggs were sold direct and incubation practiced by the novice.

There is a point, however, that always appealed to us, viz: would it not be quite as profitable for the egg farmer to bargain for his pullets rather than incur the risk and labor of rearing a flock of day-old chicks? In this way the economy would be (1) the elimination of growing and developing of a lot of males; (2) a saving of feed, time and labor in getting the youngsters on their feet; and (3) elimination of the risk of disease and its attendant dangers (mortality) in bringing his chicks to the producing age. These are all contingencies fraught with danger, not to mention worry and anxiety. Relieved from them, he would be in a position to maintain his flock in good physical condition and hence profitable production.

Naturally the proposition involves possible costs of brooding and rearing and the price that poultry farmers could afford to pay. The rearing of chicks is an art based on knowledge and experience. Obviously those who have mastered it can produce this live product at less cost than those who do not follow it either as a regular business or those who are wholly inexperienced. Allowing for this, it would seem that both seller and buyer could come together and adjust prices that will prove mutually attractive. Some advance has already been made along these lines in districts where commercial poultry culture has attained distinction, and we believe the practice will develop into an important division in intensive poultry culture.

Housing and Yarding.

G. G. W., Escondido, writes as follows for information touching housing and yarding of chickens and turkeys:

(1.) What type of building would you suggest for a flock of a hundred chickens?

(2.) How much yard should 100 chickens have—let me know the minimum amount of space.

(3.) Would you recommend a large building with one common yard for a flock of a thousand fowl, or are you in favor of having separate houses with individual yards for every 100 chickens?

(4.) What type of building would you suggest for a flock of 100 turkeys and how much space should they be given for a yard? I understand it's very important to have ample space for this type of bird.

(1). That somewhat depends. If catering to the market for breeding stock we should use houses to accommodate breeding pens, say twenty-five hens and a cock of the smaller breeds like Leghorns, and a somewhat lesser number for the larger breeds. If for eggs, we should use colony houses capable of accommodating 100 hens, and if land afforded it, we should place them far enough apart so that each colony would "come home" at night and not interfere with its next-door neighbor when out foraging. In the smaller house allow about five square feet of floor space per hen of the medium-sized breeds; in larger flocks two feet is quite sufficient. The fundamentals of a poultry house are sunshine, ventilation and protection. A house the interior of which enjoys sunshine during the day will be quite free from disease germs. Ventilation is important. There must be a good circulation of air without any draught striking the birds while on the roosts. Protection against severe weather in California is not so essential as that from winds. The prevailing cold winds being from the north, the houses should face south, other things being equal.

(2.) If the yarding is only for exercise and not for forage, twenty-five to thirty-five feet per bird will answer. Under this, however, the birds must be made to work (scratch;) this implies scratching facilities. If the colony house plan is adopted, the matter of yarding is solved.

(3.) Our preference is the colony house for layers, and the smaller house for breeding and exhibition stock.

(4.) Turkeys being a wild bird subject to roaming, they should have the sky for a roof and all creation to roam in. In the San Joaquin and Sacramento valleys we have seen the merest suggestion of a shelter for them, consisting of a crude framework covered with a few boards under which the roosts were placed about two feet from the ground. Allowing for this, it is obvious that turkey culture on a commercial scale is hardly a problem for a person with limited range. It has its problems, and we suggest to our correspondent that he secure practical literature bearing on its different phases; it is too large a subject to cover in a paragraph. The same also applies to poultry culture, the better class of literature of which has only recently been treated of in these columns.

The exodus of Mexicans from Orange county to their homeland and to the San Joaquin Valley has given fruit men and beet growers some concern.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION

SUNDAY MORNING, AUGUST 21, 1921.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION.

Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY.

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Tractor Section is the only farm journal in the west printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

The Colorado.

MANY who have become familiar with the arid regions of the West, know "the desert," and love it, assert that in every barren waste there is means of life, though it does not appear to the casual observer. For every arid waste, it is asserted, there is water somewhere within reach of man to make it bloom. Time and labor are the limiting factors in the bringing of this life-giving water from somewhere to the yellow and gray expanses of desert.

Gathering strength from melted snows far up in the Rockies, the murky Colorado hurries, in the last third of its snaky length through as barren a region as is found on the American continent. Yet almost all of this barren waste in Southeastern California, Western Arizona, Southern Nevada, and a strip in Lower California, is capable of raising bounteous crops—if water is provided. Down between beetling cliffs in Boulder Canyon, on the Colorado, Federal engineers are developing the best site for a monstrous dam, which shall be the greatest effort of its kind ever attempted by man. This dam will save enough of the golden stream to irrigate nearly 2,000,000 acres of arid lands, and provide about 700,000 firm horse-power of electricity for the Southwest. This and other dams on the river may, in this generation or the next, store up enough water for the irrigation of every acre of irrigable land in the entire Colorado River basin. Such is the destiny of the great Colorado, a destiny that awaits the initiative of communities which will benefit by this momentous development, and the fatherly interest of Congress.

DESTROY ROADSIDE WEEDS.

Because—they act as centers of weed infestation for adjoining fields; they may be carried for many miles by passing vehicles and animals; they harbor harmful insects and plant diseases; they create insanitary conditions; they are unsightly.

Los Angeles—City of Farms.

PLANS are shaping for an unusual development of the junior agricultural education idea, at Van Nuys. It is proposed to institute, in that district, a farm school, as part of the high school system of the City of Los Angeles. This school, as planned will be the most practical school of the kind in the West. Situated in a district where farming is most diversified, there will be unusual facilities placed at the disposal of pupils to learn almost every branch of farming practiced in California. The Los Angeles City Board of Education, the Los Angeles and Van Nuys Chambers of Commerce, and other important bodies, are enthusiastically at work on the plan. Los Angeles city has within its boundaries more farms, and more diversified farming, than any other city in the United States, it is believed. A large percentage of high school attendants desire to go to the soil for a livelihood. Their desires will be met adequately by this Los Angeles Agricultural College at Van Nuys, if plans now proposed bear fruit.

Some Winter Hints.

"LAY in your winter's wood before zero weather."

"Make the cattle barns weather-tight before frost."

"Before quitting field work for the year, see that the sheep have good winter quarters and sufficient feed stored away."

These are pertinent pointers for the farmer, offered during midsummer by agriculturists of State colleges—not in California. This sort of farm advice, reaching the Golden West, is almost amusing to the farmer who is out tilling the soil in his shirt sleeves in January. There is no cessation of farm work in the fall here. On the contrary, some of the greatest crops California raises are seeded as "winter" comes on. An Illinois farmer complained to a visiting Californian recently that he did not see why Illinois farm lands should not be worth as much as California farm lands. The man from the Coast had a ready and convincing answer for him: "We raise two crops a year on California soil. Why should not California farm lands be twice as valuable as Illinois lands?" Yes, more than twice as valuable, for the California farmer participates with the city folk in the enjoyment of the most wonderful climate in the country, living in a country where opportunities for general life enjoyment are at their maximum.

There will be about 290,000 tons of wine grapes in the State this year.

RECORD SUMMER ORANGE CROP MEETS CALL FOR SMALL SIZES.

GREATER than the crop of any preceding year by over 4000 cars, the Valencia orange harvest of 1921, despite a large percentage of small sizes, has proved most satisfactory to the growers. Twelve thousand cars have moved eastward and northward, and by boat, and over 7000 more are to go.

Mother Nature has once more placed California in the front rank of provident producers by raising for the orange grower this year a crop of both small-sized navels and Valencias.

When the navel crop was coming on this season, and it was observed that practically all sections were producing a large percentage of small-sized oranges, growers were rather doubtful as to the marketing possibilities of a small California orange. People had become so accustomed to buying larger oranges, many argued, that they would have to be educated to the use of the small fruit.

The process of education was one that was easily accomplished by retailers of the country in a short time. The method was a simple one when analyzed by students of economics. In fact, one did not have to be a student to see that the small-sized orange would fit a popular demand for more fruit at cheaper prices. With prices in all other commodities being slashed by manufacturers and producers to meet the demand of consumers for cheaper food and clothing, the retailer saw an opportunity in the small-sized California orange that offered great sales possibilities.

Small-sized California oranges were prominently displayed in the windows of the retailers of the country, and consumers were urged to buy them in larger than dozen lots, as they had been accustomed to do with the larger oranges. Oranges were offered in odd lots at bargain prices, and in even lots at odd quotations, to stimulate the movement of this unusually large crop of small oranges.

The bargain appeal to the consumer worked. The grower moved greater quantities of fruit into the various markets of the United States than had ever before been heard of. The jobber and retailer profited on the deal with increased business, which turned rapidly and afforded quick profits. The consumer profited because he was able to purchase greater quantities of oranges, equal in quality and flavor to the larger oranges, but offered at slashed prices. In fact, the whole navel deal fitted in with the general trend of retrenchment of expenses which was sweeping the country, and is still being felt in commercial circles.

And now Mother Nature has provided a crop of sweet, juicy Valencias, which is running 50 per cent to small sizes, ranging from 216's to 324's.

For several months growers have been picking for size, leaving the small-sized oranges on the trees, in the anticipation that this fruit would mature in larger sizes. According to reports from the packing-houses, many groves in various sections have been gone over from three to four times with this idea in view.

Again, now that the Valencia season is well along, the small-sized California orange is meeting with a ready demand, in the face of competition from other summer fruits.

During the summer months many oranges are used in fresh fruit, drinks, salads and other light summer dishes. The small-sized orange fills this demand ideally.

From the standpoint of the retail trade, this repetition of the small-sized orange in the Valencia crop has been very desirable. With the decreased quantities of other fresh fruits this summer, caused by adverse weather conditions throughout the various producing sections of the East, the retailer has fallen back on the orange to supply the consumer's demand for fresh fruit.

Bargain prices in all lines, from clothing to fruits, are the vogue now, more, perhaps, than during the navel season. Everyone is looking for bargains.

The California Valencia business, which has risen within the past ten years until today it is nearly as great as the navel business, is amply supplying the consumer-craving for oranges during the summer.

Surely Mother Nature was a far-sighted and provident producer when she planned and fashioned the unusually large crops of navels and Valencias to supply the cry of the consumer for more fruit at cheaper prices.

A Response to the Insistent Demand for More Summer Oranges.

Many thousands of acres of young Valencia orange groves like this one, a grove in the Yorba Linda section, will, within a few years increase the golden flow of summer fruit to supply the increasing demand. Next year, it is predicted, more Valencia oranges will be shipped from the Golden State than any other variety, or all other varieties combined, thus dethroning King Navel, who has held sway ever since the orange-growing industry was established in California.

BLACKEYE PROSPECTS.

SANTA ANA.—Orange county's production of blackeye beans this year will reach 125,000 sacks, it is estimated, a crop that will be four times greater than that of last year. The blackeye acreage was increased largely by the lack of early rains, and much of the lima-bean acreage was planted to blackeyes to take advantage of the late rains, which were very beneficial. W. C. Jerome, W. J. Cheney and John Osterman, the growers in charge of the 1920 blackeye pool, issued a call for a growers' meeting at Santa Ana on Saturday, June 25, to form plans for forming another pool for selling the 1921 crop.

The hot, dry weather of July caused the rapid development of red spider in fields and orchards.

GAPEWORMS ARE OFTEN SPREAD BY TURKEYS.

Turkeys are probably the natural hosts of the gapeworm—a serious pest among young chickens—and are an important factor in their spread.

During three winter seasons, beginning in December, 1916, a total of 635 chickens and 679 turkeys were examined in the Washington city market. No gapeworms were found in the chickens, but 22.5 per cent of the turkeys were found to be infested. From one to eighteen worms were found in each of the infested turkeys.

In view of the complete absence of gapeworms from a large series of adult and approximately adult chickens, and their common occurrence in a similar series of adult and approximately adult turkeys, all obtained at the same market at the same season of the year, it would appear that adult chickens are poorly adapted as hosts of gapeworms. It is also evident that not merely young turkeys may harbor the worms, but that these parasites are very common in adult turkeys. That turkeys above three years of age may harbor gapeworms has been established.

In the perpetuation of [illegible] from year to year on infested farms the two chief factors appear to be turkeys and contaminated soil. Whether, in the absence of turkeys from a farm, gapeworm affliction among chickens will regularly disappear has not been definitely established, but it seems probable that it may often do so. Gapeworms among chickens appear to be more prevalent on farms where turkeys frequent the chicken runs, than on farms where there are no turkeys. Available evidence indicates that gapes has a tendency to disappear on farms following the removal of turkeys. Chickens, unlike turkeys, are readily susceptible to infection with gapeworms only while they are young. They become less susceptible as they grow older. Adult chickens are seldom likely to spread infection, for in those instances in which gapeworms develop in adult chickens the parasites are likely to live only a short time.

Losses from gapeworms can be greatly reduced, if not altogether avoided, by keeping young chickens on ground that has not been exposed to contamination within at least a year, by chickens with gapes, or by turkeys, and by excluding turkeys from it during its occupancy by chickens. As gapeworms appear rarely to occur in adult chickens, brood hens may be associated with young chickens with little risk of infection. The simplest means of preventing or reducing losses from gapes appears to be the exclusion of turkeys from farms where chickens are raised.

PARASITES REDUCE PROFITS IN POULTRY.

It would require considerable space to discuss the various species of parasites infesting fowls. Since practical poultrymen are more interested in preventing fowls from becoming infested, by eradicating the pest when it invades their flocks, general methods of prevention of infestation and eradication of the parasites should receive immediate consideration.

Fowls infested with one or more species of external parasites are not profitable and the following remedies to rid them of infestations are offered by the California Department of Agriculture:

An ointment has been found to possess advantages over a powder, as the former is more efficient, and the effect more lasting than the latter. The ointment is prepared and used as follows:

Ammoniated mercurial ointment, U.S.P., with a lard base, instead of lanolin, as called in the pharmacopoeia. Blue ointment is said to be a little more effective in equal amounts, but at the same time it is more expensive.

Of three pieces, the size of a pea, rub one under the vent, and one under each wing. The operator is cautioned to rub the ointment well into the skin, in order that there will be no lumps adhering to the feathers which may be picked off by the birds, and thus produce mercurial poisoning.

In dealing with external parasites of fowls, it is necessary to remember that some of them remain on the bird constantly, while others spend a part of their time on roosts; hence, in order to eradicate the parasites completely, the premises should be disinfected with contact sprays, such as creosote or kerosene. As a rule, a single application in either case is not sufficient. It is advisable to repeat the operations at intervals of a few days, so that those parasites which have hatched subsequently, or were concealed in cracks or crevices, may be killed.

FAIR PLANS GROWING AS EVENT DRAWS NEAR.

SAN FERNANDO.—With the dates set for the San Fernando Valley Fair, September 13 to 18, only a few weeks away, the fair is beginning to loom as a big event. The tractor department has three huge tents, covering nearly 180,000 square feet of floor space, assigned to it. Applications for exhibit space have been coming in steadily and the tractor-working demonstration, which will be held on the 700-acre Lopez ranch, one mile north of the town of San Fernando, will see many different kinds of tractors in action. An exhibit in the tents will be trucks, tractors, automobiles, trailers, and a great array of implements and accessories.

The live-stock department is thoroughly organized and at the present time it would be hard to tell whether the cattlemen or the swine breeders will have the most impressive showing. The swine breeders are taking advantage of the fact that this is the official Los Angeles County Fair and are organizing those interested in this industry so that a comprehensive display may be made.

The poultry show is to be the only official American Poultry Association show in California this year and will be in charge of E. I. Hammond, a poultry fancier who has been instrumental in promoting many successful poultry shows.

A newly added feature of the fair will be an exhibit of cats. The Glendale Cat Club has sponsored this department and has promised an exhibit of at least fifty of the most beautiful thoroughbred cats in the western country.

A night horse show will be a notable feature of the week. One thousand dollars will be spent in awards each evening. The arena will be beautifully decorated and lighted and in it will be seen in action many of the most beautiful thoroughbred horses on the Pacific Coast. Famous hunters will be seen in their jumps, polo ponies in their lightning-like runs, turns and stops. Fancy steppers and horses that fox-trot, together with cowboy and cowgirl stunts, will fill a program each evening with thrills as well as frills.

A large tent is set aside for the valley industries and the fair management reports the space in this tent almost completely sold and arrangements being made to take care of an overflow. Tent space is arranged for agriculture, horticulture, citriculture, domestic science and the art of the home.

Work on the grounds is being rushed with all possible speed and it is expected that the grand stand around the arena will be completed next week.

The judges for the poultry exhibit will be Henry Mumford of South Pasadena and A. G. Goodacre of Compton. Fritz Thott of Glendale will judge the bantams. Lewis Salisbury of Pasadena will judge the rabbits and cavies, and George England of Inglewood will be the judge of the utility classes.

Robert O'Neill, manager of the power farming exhibit, reported several new entries among the tractor firms who will enter the tractor working demonstration contest and also many new pump, implement and accessory firms who will enter the still show.

The report of the live-stock division superintendent, M. H. Adamson, brought to light the following additional entries for the week: Brant ranch, twelve head of Duroc-Jersey swine; also Guernsey cattle. Eastman rancho, at least one entry in each division of Poland China swine. Adohr Stock Farms, entries of prize Guernsey dairy stock. Carl Ray's ranch, at Lankershim, will exhibit Jerseys and Holsteins and will enter their famous Airplane Belle, the first cow in the world to ride in an airplane. Michael's Stock Farm, Ventura, will exhibit their $25,000 bull, among several other entries. Fred Hartsook and J. F. Buston, both of Lankershim, will make entries of Toggenberg goats and will also have entries in the cattle division. Ira Young, also of Lankershim, will exhibit both Toggenberg and Saanen goats.

Better Demand For Breeding Stock.

Sierra Vista Stock Ranch, Inc.,
Perris, Cal., Aug. 3rd, 1921.

Mr. J. V. Kimball,
Adv. Dept., Farm and Tractor Section,
L. A. Times,
Los Angeles, Cal.

Dear Sir;

Now with confidence returning and with pork steadily advancing there is going to be a better demand for breeding stock and it will pay, in our judgment, to do a little advertising.

Yours very sincerely,

SIERRA VISTA STOCK RANCH, Inc.
By (Signed) O. H. Cash.

START LABOR BUREAU.

SANTA ANA.—Designed to serve as a clearinghouse for farm labor in Orange county, the Orange County Farm Labor Association has been formed here and is now in active operation. The office is in charge of J. F. Jackson, formerly with the Hummell agency in Los Angeles. He is now making a labor survey of the county, in order to know the ranchers' needs. It is hoped the new enterprise will be able to place laborers wherever they are needed, at the right time, and thus help to prevent a labor shortage during the rush seasons. No charge will be made laborers for this service, it is stated. Officers of the association are: President, D. Eyman Huff of El Modena; vice-president, C. V. Newman of Tustin; secretary-treasurer, W. J. Cheney of Irvine. W. G. Mitchell of the Irvine ranch, C. A. Johnson of Huntington Beach, Harry W. Lewis of Santa Ana, Dr. I. G. McBeth of Fullerton, John Osterman of El Toro, Hugh T. Thomson of Villa Park and C. L. Crumrine of La Habra are directors.

A PRODUCTIVE PLACE.

LINDSAY.—Otis White of the Lindsay district is a firm believer in intensive farming, putting his theories into demonstration on his ranch near Lindsay. With the exception of a well-laid-out home site, Mr. White has planted his forty acres to olives and pomegranates, with an intercrop of a large variety of paying crops, principally seven or eight varieties of melons, sweet potatoes, beans, corn and Thompson Seedless grapes. In one small tract the order is changed and plums and pomegranates are alternated in the main rows. A family orchard includes peaches and apricot trees. This is Mr. White's second year on the place and he has had an income almost from the start. Less than two years ago the tract was barren land. Eventually either the olive or pomegranate trees will be uprooted, but for several years both crops will be available without deteriorating effect. Another year of small produce is possible. The pomegranates are already bearing about 100 boxes.

POMEGRANATES FOR DYES.

STRATHMORE.—Frank Gehring, publicity man for a Porterville bank, has become interested in a project for the manufacture of dyes from pomegranates grown in this vicinity. Almost the entire output of pomegranates of South Africa is now used successfully in the manufacture of dyes. If this success can be repeated here, many ranchers will plant pomegranates.

PEACHES RUNNING SMALL.

EL CAJON.—The peach harvest is about over. The crop was a fair one, but the fruit ran to small sizes. Good prices were received from fruit shipped East.

Cultivating corn, beans and beets under a July sun is not pleasant, but it's death to the weeds.

MOVING

Yes, we are moving to our new home; it was either go forwards or backwards and we chose the former. We are doubling our capacity of the old plant and hope to be in a position to supply all our customers with baby chicks and hatching eggs next spring from our 3500 breeding hens mated to high record male birds.

We are Booking Orders Now!

COCKERELS

We are offering the grandest lot of breeding cockerels we ever owned, each and every one a son of a hen with an "ACTUAL" trap nest record over 200 eggs for her twelve-month pullet year laying. They are so good we are willing to sell them subject to your approval. Mr. M. A. Schofield says in a letter under date of June 8 relative to his purchase of forty: "I have never raised a more active and vigorous bunch of cockerels and naturally I am expecting fine results."

If we can breed them good enough for such noted and successful poultrymen as A. Schofield, Joseph H. Tumbach, Fred Richardson, Charles G. Weaver and many others, surely they would please you. Priced at $10.00 each and up. We have a few too good for the butcher at $4.00 each or $3.00 each for the lot; they are all from high record hens, but do not come up to the $10.00-grade in looks only.

We believe we can give the people of California more real value for the money than they could possibly obtain by sending away for unacclimated birds.

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS.

COACHELLA.—The season's first dates to appear on the market were harvested July 24 in the gardens of Arthur Spencer. These earliest fruits are seedling dates, small in size and of exceedingly fine flavor. At a mass meeting of some 100 residents of the valley, called for the purpose of protesting pending contracts between the Gillett-Rosenberger interests and the government date gardens, a committee was appointed to investigate the matter and if deemed necessary, to call another meeting. The protest arises from the terms of contract by which the Gillett-Rosenberger interests agree to plant and care for all date offshoots of the Saidi variety in return for one-fifth of these offshoots.

PEACHES BRING GOOD MONEY.

MENTONE.—Peach growers of this section who are shipping their peaches to the East believe that, due to the shortage of the crop there, occasioned by the heavy freezes, the prices this year will be far above the average. Work on handling the crop from the "Green Spot" above Mentone, has been started, and over 300 are employed at the big Sunshine Heights packing-house. A hundred and fifty cars is the estimate of the crop, most of the peaches being J. H. Hales, from one orchard of 200 acres. Every day for three weeks 10,000 packed boxes of fruit left the house. J. H. Strait & Co. is packing the fruit and shipping it to the East. The same company is also operating a house at Bloomington, handling the fruit from the big orchard of E. A. Parkford there. The orchards of Dr. Rudolph Schiffman, W. H. Bradley, William Dennis and E. F. Van Leuven at Redlands Heights are producing most of the fruit on the Green Spot this year. The entire output of Elberta peaches from the Parkford ranch was sold for cash, and the grower realized almost twice the price offered by the canneries. The Hale peaches from the Green Spot have been packed and shipped East each year, and have always brought fancy prices.

STOP ALFALFA CUTTING.

YUMA.—Alfalfa growers have stopped cutting alfalfa for the season, and will let the remainder of the crop go to seed. There will be about the normal output of alfalfa seed.

PEDICULOIDES PRESENT.

SANTA PAULA.—Work in the insectaries of the Limoneira Ranch and Santa Paula Growers' Association has been somewhat hampered by the activities of pediculoides, a secondary parasite on black scale which has been hatched in the insectaries and groves and has attacked workers, causing a sort of rash that, in some instances, has required a physician's care. The outbreak, however, is not serious, and as the collection of parasites is about over for the season, growers and officials are forgetting the pest. The pediculoides was not introduced as a parasite, and its presence is very unwelcome to the State Department of Agriculture officials fostering the aphycus and other beneficial insects.

NO WATER SHORTAGE.

HEMET.—There is no water shortage in Hemet Valley, contrary to reports recently circulated. Z. A. Faull, manager of the Lake Hemet Water Company, announces that water has been and is being delivered to growers strictly as scheduled and that the Hemet reservoir carries a supply fully adequate for the season. While it is true that less water is being delivered than in years of plenty, the growers knew of this situation when the season opened, with the result that orange groves and deciduous orchards in which especial attention was given to cultivation to conserve moisture, have not suffered in the least. The only growers who have suffered are those who were negligent in cultivating or who refrained from applying water for too long a period to their apricot orchards during the ripening period.

HONEY OUTPUT LOW.

RIVERSIDE.—Honey production in Riverside county has fallen off this year to one-tenth of the normal output. County Bee Inspector B. H. Stanley of San Bernardino county finds the same situation throughout his district and reports: "The average production per colony has not been exceeding fifteen pounds, whereas fifty pounds is an average yield in normal years. The bloom this year, though fairly heavy, has lacked nectar. Prices have fallen, also, 8 cents being the offering for shipments. The total shipments have been light, the bee men hoping for better prices later on.

THE COUNTY EXHIBITS.

SACRAMENTO.—Some idea of the extent of the county exhibits that will grace the huge Agricultural Pavilion at the State Fair here September 3 to 11 can be had from the number of counties that already have sent in their reservations for display space. These assurances of participation by the different counties is accepted by officials of the exposition as proof positive that the [illegible] will keep pace with the onward march of events and that this year's show will be "bigger and better than ever before." The counties that have entered exhibits are, Alameda, Calaveras, Yolo, Sacramento, Kern, Colusa, San Joaquin, Fresno, Santa Barbara, Riverside, Monterey, San Francisco, Placer, Mendocino, Kings, Modoc, Lassen, Shasta, Siskiyou, Trinity, Stanislaus, Los Angeles, Solano, Tulare, Santa Cruz and Butte. Agricultural Pavilion is a busy place these days, with crews of carpenters, designers and other skilled artists at work preparing the exhibits of the California State Fish and Game Commission, State Department of Agriculture and the several counties.

LAST OF PRUNES SHIPPED.

BANNING.—The Banning cannery has started its run on peaches. Tuscan clings and Elbertas are being canned. R. L. Parks, local manager for the Prune and Apricot Growers' Association, has received orders to ship out all of the 650 tons of prunes held here. It is encouraging to have last year's crop out of the way, even though the price received was low. The Banning Drying Company has cured 500 tons of apricots this season, a big output considering strikes and some bad drying weather.

RED BIRDS WINNERS.

YUCAIPA.—Deciduous fruits in San Bernardino county are paying good returns on the investment, according to reports from various orchards. This year was not a particularly good one for the Red Bird cling peaches, because of the late frosts, and yet there have been good returns, in many instances, from the crop. The best fruit was from the trees, which sold at the orchard for 179 Red Bird cling peach trees, planted on two acres. There were 1000 lug boxes picked fro mthe trees, which sold at the orchard for $1.50 a lug box. The trees are 10 years old, and have always been good producers. The pear men are well satisfied with the opening price for Bartlett pears, which was $70 a ton. This is $20 a ton less than the price last year, but the growers feel that the price is a fair one, considering the downward trend in farm products, and the fact that many canneries were offering not more than $80 a ton for peaches that they paid $100 and $105 a ton for last year.

GOOSE RAISING PAYS IF THERE IS PASTURE.

Practically all the geese in this country are raised in small flocks on general farms, and few, if any, farms are devoted entirely to raising geese. Geese can be raised successfully in small numbers, and at a profit on farms where there is plenty of grass or pasture land with a supply of water. The birds, both young and old, are very hardy, and are rarely affected by any disease or insect pests. Grass makes up the bulk of the feed for geese, and it is doubtful whether it pays to raise them unless good grass range is available. Geese are the closest known grazers, and both the mature geese and the partially grown goslings will get their entire living from a good pasture so long as the grass remains green. So says a Department of Agriculture poultry specialist. He adds:

A body of water where they can swim is considered essential during the breeding season, and is desirable during the rest of the year. If there is no natural pond, an artificial one, or tanks, may be supplied to advantage. The market for geese is not so general as for chickens, and this fact should be considered. The demand and the price paid for geese are usually good in sections where goose fattening is conducted on a large scale. Many geese are kept in the South for the production of feathers rather than for their flesh, but the use of feathers is not so general as it has been, making that end of the business less profitable.

Geese are fed a ration to produce eggs during the latter part of the winter. They are allowed to make nests on the floor of the house, or in large boxes or barrels, or in shelters that are provided for that purpose.

The eggs should be collected daily, and kept in a cool place, where the contents will not evaporate too freely; if kept for [illegible] chicken hens, while the last ones which the goose lays may be hatched under either hens or the goose. If the eggs are not removed from the nest in which the goose is laying, she will usually stop laying sooner than if they are taken away daily. The desire to set can usually be broken up by confining her to a slat-bottom coop, with water to drink and only a very little feed for from two to four days.

From four to six goose eggs may be set under a chicken hen and ten or eleven under a goose or turkey. Eggs set under a hen should be turned by hand, the same as eggs set in an incubator, as they are too large for the hen to turn them readily. Hens used for hatching goose eggs must be dusted with insect powder, and have good attention, because the period of incubation of goose eggs is longer than for hens' eggs, being from twenty-eight to thirty days. Dust the hens, thoroughly, two or three days before the goslings are due to hatch. Goose eggs also may be hatched in incubators, and the goslings successfully raised in brooders, although this is not a common practice.

Goslings hatch slowly, especially under hens, and they are usually removed from under hens or geese as soon as hatched, and kept in a covered basket or box, lined with warm cloth or flannel, kept in a warm spot until the hatching is over, when they are put back under the hen or goose. Goslings hatched under hens should be examined for head lice, and a little grease—lard or vaseline—applied with the fingers on the head and neck. Some breeders who hatch with both geese and hens give all the goslings to the geese, which make the best mothers. A few breeders prefer to brood the goslings artificially, keeping them from one to three weeks in the house at night in a covered bushel basket.

To keep a record of their age and breeding, the web of the feet of the newly hatched goslings should be punched. Hens with goslings may be confined to the coop, and the goslings allowed to range. In mild weather, the hens are allowed to brood the goslings for from seven to ten days, when the latter are able to take care of themselves. It is very necessary to keep the young goslings dry, so they are usually kept confined in the morning until the dew is dried off, and they should not be allowed to get into water until partly feathered. This occurs when they are from two to four weeks old, depending on the weather and their range. Goslings caught and apparently drowned in a cold rain may sometimes be revived by drying in flannel near a fire.

Good-sized growing coops with board floors should be provided for the goslings, which must be protected from their enemies. When on range, the young birds need some attention, as they may get lost or caught in post holes and odd corners. Young goslings, if confined, should be given good grass yards and the coops removed frequently to fresh grass. It is better to keep the growing goslings separated from the old stock. Shade should be provided in hot weather. If very young goslings are allowed to run with large birds they are apt to be injured or killed.

FINDS FAITHFUL HEN BETTER THAN BROODER.

BY HELEN CHAFFEE TEMPLE.

The farmer's busy wife usually manages to raise a few dozen young chickens for "frys" each year, despite the stress of other duties. Quite often, in these modern incubator days, she "raises them by hand." I have done so. In fact, for the last five years, I have reared large families of unappreciative young frys "by hand." Quite often, despite my devotion to their wants, they would droop around and sometimes die, or, if they were husky, wandered afar after elusive bugs, hawks or stray cats carried them away. Last season, I lost more than one-third of my most promising frys via the hawk route. This season, I vowed that I would raise no chicks, but the stir of spring and the usual call to grow things took root in my reluctant system. I began plans for the yearly batch of chicks. But I refused to buy a foster-mother for them. I found that hens were just as capable of raising twenty-five or thirty youngsters as they were of rearing small families of ten or twelve.

I, therefore, laid plans so that the eggs under the hens and incubator would hatch at the same time. Four hens were set and the incubator started, and, when they brought off their chicks, each was given an average of twenty-eight chicks, including her own. The hens looked rather skeptically at their large families at first, then decided that they had done an awfully fine bit of work at hatching, and mothered their entire broods with zeal. Of the entire lot of chicks, only three were lost, this being the best record that I have had.

The hens were given rainproof sleeping quarters in their coops. Each hen was kept entirely separate from the others, thus avoiding the confusion of swapping chicks. The coops were ordinary slatted affairs, allowing the little chickens freedom, but confining the hen. The hen, thus confined, kept [illegible] the old hen sounded her call of warning, and chicks scurried for shelter. Chicks with wooden "mothers" often are too busy to watch for their enemies. Hawks or cats will return to a chicken yard after the unprotected chicks, once they have found them.

The time saved in caring for the chicks has been a big item with me, as I believe I am busier than the average farm wife. The hens will hover the chicks when they need hovering. They eliminate the worry of keeping a brooder going or chasing the chicks into a fireless brooder. Quite often chickens will stand around in cold bunches instead of going into their brooder box. Instinct sends them to a hen for warmth.

I fed my little chickens three times a day during the first few days, then eliminated the middle feeding by placing enough chick food in feeders for them in the morning. When they were a week old, I began feeding cracked wheat and kafir corn at night, and bran wetted with milk or buttermilk in the mornings. I kept chick food in their feeders for them until they were three weeks old, then eliminated it entirely. Water fountains ended the worry of providing clean water three or four times a day. My system of feeding was entirely wrong, according to some chicken authorities, but the chickens surely grew. I was not compelled to spend more than a half-hour a day with them, this season, including the cleaning of coops and drinking vessels. If I were late in returning home after an afternoon out, I did not worry about the chickens. I knew that the faithful old hen was still on the job, to keep them warm.

The bugbear of raising small lots of a hundred or more chickens will never bother me again. I'll let the hens do the worrying. My time is too valuable.

PICK UP DUCKS BY THE NECK, NOT LEGS.

Ducks are usually mated in flocks of about thirty females with five or six males, as the latter do not fight each other. The number of males may be reduced to one for every seven females about the first of March and again changed a month later to one male for eight or ten females. Active, healthy, mature females of about eight pounds weight should be used for breeding.

Select ducks with short necks, medium long bodies, flat backs, and good depth to [illegible]

In handling ducks, pick them up by their necks, rather than by the legs, as the latter are apt to break easily. Ducks lay their eggs early in the morning, and should be confined to the house or pen until 9:30 or 10 o'clock.

SPRAY ROOSTS WITH CRUDE PETROLEUM.

Mites, as well as lice, are troublesome and harmful to poultry. They do not live upon the birds like lice, but during the day hide in the cracks and crevices of the roosts and walls of the house, and at night they come out and get upon the fowls. Mites suck the blood, and if allowed to become plentiful, as they certainly will if not destroyed, will affect seriously the health of fowls, and consequently their ability to lay eggs. Thorough applications of carbolineum, kerosene, or some of the coal-tar preparations sold for this purpose, or crude petroleum, should be made to the interior of the poultry house.

Commercial coal-tar products are more expensive, but retain their killing power longer, and the cost of treatment may be lessened by reducing with an equal part of kerosene. Crude petroleum will spray better if thinned with one part of kerosene to four parts of crude oil. Both the crude petroleum and the coal-tar products often contain foreign particles, so should be strained before attempting to spray. One must be sure that the spray reaches all the cracks and crevices, giving special attention to the roosts, dropping boards, and nests, and the treatment should be repeated two or three times at intervals of a week or ten days.

ANNUAL BUREAU MEETING.

POMONA.—At Ganesha Park, Wednesday, September 28, the annual meeting of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau will be held, under the auspices of the Pomona center. A good program has been prepared. Prizes for the dairy cow competition will be awarded, and a report on the egg-laying contest to be staged here soon will be made. The contest buildings have been erected, and many of the birds will be on hand at the time of the annual meeting.

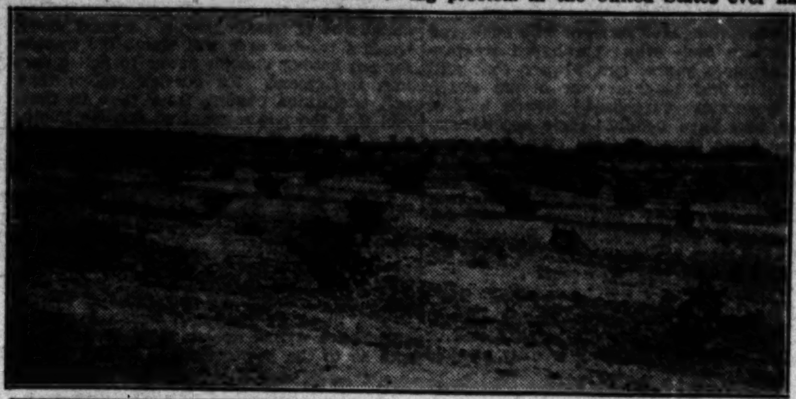
TRY ZANTE CURRANTS ON VINEYARD PROJECT.

BY MRS. ROBERT A. MACK.

PORTERVILLE.—One of the largest horticultural developments in Tulare county this year is the 3600-acre Callison Lands project in the Poplar-Tipton district, west of Porterville owned and operated by Wylie M. Giffen of Fresno, president of the California Associated Raisin Company.

Under the direction of F. R. Weisendanger, superintendent, 640 acres of the tract has been planted to raisin grapes this season, the entire work of grading, leveling, planting and cultivation having been done since November, in addition to the drilling of five wells and installation of electric pumps. One of these wells has a capacity of 1300 gallons per minute. A number of other wells have been dug on the remainder of the tract and pumps installed ready for operation.



Notable Vineyard Near Tipton.

Field of Zante currants shown in above picture; below, F. R. Weisendanger, superintendent of Callison Lands Company, beside Malaga vine planted as cutting this year.

The 500-acre field of Malagas, Thompsons and Zante currants, with rows of healthy, hardy, vines, some of which have attained a growth of five feet from the cutting, is a sight worth seeing. A 90 per cent stand has been secured in this division. These vines have had three irrigations and four cultivations. The Muscats and Thompsons have a 95 per cent stand and are from one and a half to three feet in height. Then acres of Zante currants were planted as an experiment, and are especially vigorous. They were set out in May and are now two feet high. A young nursery of 200,000 Thompson, Muscat and Malaga plants is a special feature of the Callison Lands and are particularly vigorous.

R. Schmidt of Fresno expects to use the long method in pruning the Thompsons and Zante currants next season, staking and wiring at the same time. Mr. Schmidt favors thorough establishment of the root system before pruning.

It is probable that 240 acres more of the Callison Lands will be prepared for planting to grapes next season.

CANTALOUPE CROP A RECORD BREAKER.

BRAWLEY. — The car-lot movement of cantaloupes from the Imperial Valley exceeds all previous records. On August 8 the movement had reached 10,668 cars, or 1358 cars in excess of the total movement of 1920, which was the heaviest of preceding seasons.

Although the movement has been exceptionally heavy, the total might have reached 12,000 cars had it not been for the ravages of aphis, which resulted in the condemnation of between 6000 and 8000 acres of late melons, according to the horticultural inspectors.

Cantaloupes apparently have been received kindly by the consuming public at reasonably good prices this season. Although a considerable percentage of the crop was still to be sold on July 9, the markets had held exceptionally well up to that date. Most distributors are well pleased, and do not look for serious losses at the end of the season. Without doubt the light fruit crops throughout the United States are in part responsible for the good demand for early cantaloupes.

To move upward of 10,000 cars of iced cantaloupes in such a short time has been a Herculean task. Probably no such marketing problem in the United States ever has been handled with so little confusion. At no time was there a shortage of cars. Ice was plentiful, and the excellent service of the transportation companies is reflected in the reports of the good quality and condition of the melons arriving on the market. Every effort had been made to insure the shipment of mature melons, and the rigid inspection by the horticultural inspectors without a doubt aided materially in reducing the number of immature melons, of which the public has complained in previous years.

Not only have the cantaloupes found favor in the sight of the consuming public, but the honey dew melons have also met good demand, at prices satisfactory to the producers. The early efforts of the growers and distributors to ship only properly matured melons have resulted in a steady movement of these melons into consumption. The same may be said of casabas, which are now moving in considerable volume.

Bonelli System Monolithic Concrete Pipe for All Purposes.

PATENT ALLOWED.

Concrete when properly mixed and poured wet between two forms as contemplated in the Bonelli System, and then allowed to remain contained between the forms for from twenty-four to forty-eight hours before removing the outside forms, makes a concrete pipe that will not leak at all after a few days' time, and will stand a pressure according to the thickness of the wall you make and the reinforcing that is put in. We pour as many feet or miles as are desired, making a continuous jointless pipe with all Ts, Crosses, Elbows, Outlets, Gates, Stand Pipes, Plugs, Expansion Joints, Valves, etc., made and set at the same time without any joints to leak or bother. Local economic conditions regulate the kind of inside forms to be used, which are of great variety. A better pipe for less money. You may be convinced of the above facts by calling at Arthur Black's Ranch, Palmdale, Cal., where it is in use. Ask him or John Boyle, Upstore Ranch.

LIVE STOCK ON THE SUGAR-BEET FARM.

There is a close and important relation between the production of sugar beets and the raising of live stock, especially cattle and sheep. Not only will the live stock, if properly handled, produce an important part of the farm income, but they are very essential to soil improvement.

The keeping of live stock enables the beet grower to make the best possible use of the beet tops, which, in connection with roughage, easily produced, keeps the live stock in good condition, and enables the farmer to return the mineral element in the tops to the soil and increase the supply of humus, which is of especial importance in irrigated sections. Sheep as well as cattle thrive on beet tops, but it is wise to feed them sparingly at first.

In some localities, stock is pastured on the tops after the beet roots have been removed. This saves time and labor, but it is rather wasteful of the tops, and frequently injures the ground. It is usually more satisfactory to gather and haul the tops to the feed yard, and feed them from a rack, or they may be used as silage, either in a silo or in a trench four to five feet deep, and long and wide enough to hold the tops and the roughage necessary to make the silage. A layer of straw about six inches deep should be put in the bottom of the silo. The beet tops and straw or other roughage should then be added in alternate layers, and firmly packed to prevent spoiling.

The by-products of the beet field and sugar mill that are of especial importance to the farmer are the beet tops, pulp, molasses, and the waste lime. Many farmers sell the tops. This is usually not the best practice. The tops are of greater value as a stock feed and contain elements which should be kept on the farm. Beet pulp is likewise an excellent stock feed and may be used either fresh as it comes from the mill, or dried. Beet molasses is the residue after the crystalizable sugar has been removed from the concentrated beet juice. It must be fed by itself, or mixed with chopped roughage by spreading it over beet pulp, alfalfa, etc., or drying it with beet pulp. Waste lime is a by-product of the sugar mill, which, under certain conditions, is of considerable value to the farmer in correcting the acid condition of the soil, and in making the heavy soils more friable.

HOW TO SKIN A HIDE WITHOUT DAMAGE.

The California State Department of Agriculture offers the following remedies for the prevention of defects in removing hides or skins:

Instead of skinning out the head in one piece, cut across at the base of the horns and then down the left side of the face, close to the eye, and through the left nostril. Cheek meat should not be left on the hide or skin.

When skinning the legs, first cut off the dew-claws, make a transverse incision at the heel, then rip in a straight line along the back of the leg to what is known as the knee, and skin out the leg on either side of the incision.

From the ripping open cut down the belly, start well forward at the brisket and make a slanting cut back to the knuckle joint of the fore limb and skin carefully from the incision. Then again, from the ripping open cut down the belly between the root of the tail and the bag (preferably nearer the latter,) cut up along the hind leg to the point of the hock (sometimes termed the knee,) and skin around the leg from the incision.

Removing the hide from the butt and rump requires extreme care if scoring is to be avoided. In these regions the knife is used sparingly and the hide should be pulled taut when it is used. Pulling and beating the hide as much as possible prevent scores.

When skinning along the belly and side of the carcass make long, sweeping strokes with a sharp knife by pulling the hide firmly up against the cutting edge held where the hide and flesh join. Bad damage on the neck and shoulders will not result if a sharp knife is used and the hide is pulled up against its edge and at the same time large sweeps are made instead of short blind cuts.

Rip down the under side of the tail to the tip and remove all the bone.

When the hide or skin is removed, spread it on the floor and slit each ear twice lengthwise so that all parts will lie flat while being cured.—(J. P. I.)

Live Stock Bulletin.

cently made a record of 33.65 pounds of butter in seven days. This makes a total of eight cows in the Hartsook herd to complete seven-day records of thirty pounds or better with an average of 33.43 pounds for the eight head, the range of records running from 30.54 to 36.61 pounds. In addition to these records, six cows have made better than 29 pounds; four others, over 28 pounds; and six have gone over 27 pounds each in seven days, which makes an average of 30.30 pounds in seven days for twenty-four head. Fifteen head have milked over 100 pounds in a single day.

Robert N. Clapp, proprietor of Sycamore Acres, Nuevo, announces a public sale of approximately seventy head of registered Holsteins from his high-class herd on Friday, October 21. This herd is rated as one of the strongest in the country in the blood of King Segis and contains a number of nationally famous show ring winners.

The A. W. Morris & Sons Corporation, Woodland, Cal., will make a public sale offering of registered Holsteins on Thursday, November 3. The number to be sold has not yet been definitely fixed, but the event promises the most sensational offering ever made by the Morris firm in an individual sale.

Desirable Type of Percheron.

Europe is looking to the United States for draft horses to replace animals killed during the war.

Adirondac Wietske Dairy Maid, the famous forty-one-pound cow owned by the Bridgford Holstein Company, Patterson, Cal., is making another wonderful yearly record. In the first 100 days on test she has to her credit 11,025 pounds of milk, several hundred pounds ahead of last year's record, and is still milking over 100 pounds per day.

Sharon Rose Novena, the first cow sold in the Rosamaines Rancho dispersal at Riverside, Cal., last October, has recently freshened and on official test has over thirty-one pounds butter to her credit. She is now owned by Robert N. Clapp, Nuevo.

LICE LOWER PROFITS IN RAISING SWINE.

Lice are injurious to all classes of hogs, but the greatest losses occur in pigs and poorly nourished hogs kept in unsanitary quarters. The losses are caused by irritation, unthrifty condition, functional disturbances, arrested growth and low vitality.

Only one species of lice commonly affects hogs, and this parasite obtains its food by puncturing the skin of the host and sucking blood. It can be eradicated by hand application, spraying, medicated hog wallows, and dipping. Dipping is the best method of applying treatment. Crude petroleum and tar creosote dips are effective remedies.

SAVE TRACTOR OILS FOR LOUSY SWINE.

When the crank case of the tractor is drained, save the oil for the hogs. They will appreciate it when it is placed on gunnysacks wound about a post in the hog lot, as it will go a long way toward ridding them of lice, and the eggs of lice. Another way of using the waste oil is to spray it on the hogs after they have been herded into close quarters. But the self-oiler system is better.

The best time to oil the hogs is in the morning or evening, as the oil has a tendency to interfere with radiation of heat through the skin of the [illegible]. The [illegible] operation must be repeated at intervals to be effective.

GET WATER RIGHTS.

OAKDALE.—The State Water Commission, in a recent decision, confirmed the Oakdale and South San Joaquin irrigation districts in their appropriation of 1920 second feet of water from the Stanislaus River, to irrigate 145,000 acres of land, but stipulated that this water must be entirely in use by Jan. 1, 1926. The districts will immediately build dams and additional canals to use the water.

Shade, a covered hog wallow, and plenty of fresh water to drink is the summer demand of the hog.

MIDDLE WESTERN FARMERS STILL HAVE FAITH IN POWER FARMING.

INTERESTING facts about farmers' experiences with tractors over a period of years have been elicited through replies to several thousand letters sent out by the Bureau of Public Roads to farmers in the Central and Corn Belt States.

In that section of the country, the depreciation on tractors, which is generally chargeable to days' work done, is vastly greater than in California, for the reason that tractors are used on an average of but sixty-four days in the year, whereas the California farmer is enabled to use his tractor every day in the year except during rain storms, and actually uses the tractor an average of about 220 days a year. But until a similar inquiry is made in California, the public must depend largely on deductions made from answers to questionnaires made by farmers operating tractors elsewhere.

At the time of making their early reports 84 per cent of these men believed their tractors would be profitable investments. Eighty-two per cent of those who used their first machines for field work in 1920 still considered that they were profitable, and 83 per cent stated that they intended to buy others when the ones they were then using wore out. Sixty per cent of those who have sold their first tractors and purchased others, and 32 per cent of those who have sold their first tractors and have not purchased others, consider that their early machines were profitable investments. The men who had purchased new tractors had owned them about one and one-half years, on the average, and estimated that they would give about five and one-half more years of satisfactory service. Eighty-nine per cent believed that the new tractors would be profitable.

SOME AVERAGES.

On the average, the men who were still using their early tractors for field work had owned them about four and one-half years. In this time they had spent $187 for repairs—about $40 per year—and they estimated that the machines would last five years more.

In 1917 and 1918, when these men gave the first reports of their experience, they had increased their acreage by an average of 14 per cent since the purchase of their tractors, and at the same time had reduced the number of work stock kept by about 20 per cent. There had been little further change, either in acreage or number of work stock, on the farms where tractors were still in use in 1920.

In many cases the first tractors evidently were not the sizes best suited to the needs of these farmers. In all, 512 of the men reporting had bought their second tractors, either to replace or to supplement their first ones. Of these, 268, or 52 per cent, purchased the same size as they first owned; 126 purchased larger sizes, and 118 purchased smaller sizes. Four hundred and twenty-nine of the men who were still using their first tractors stated that they intend to buy others when their first ones are worn out, and also gave the size which they intend to buy. Of these, 248, or 58 per cent, intend to buy tractors of the same size as their first ones, while 103 intend to buy larger sizes, and the remaining 78 intend to buy smaller sizes.

The men who had disposed of their early machines paid on the average $990 for them, kept them a little over three years, and received $490 for them. Thus the average annual depreciation was a little more than $150.

There was no great difference in the length of time the men in the different States kept their early machines. The Dakota farmers received an average of $665 for the old machines which they had sold—considerably more than was received for old machines in any of the other States. This greater sale value was due, in part, at least, to the fact that most of the early tractors in North Dakota and South Dakota were larger and more expensive than in the other States.

The tractor operator has evidently been partly responsible for the success or failure of these early tractors. Only 11 per cent of the early tractors which were still in use for field work in 1920 had been operated by hired help, and only 12 per cent of the men who had replaced their first tractors with others depended on hired help, while 25 per cent of the men who had discontinued the use of tractors for field work had allowed the machines to be operated by hired help.

Of more than 1200 farmers who answered the letters and who purchased tractors four or more years ago, 81 per cent still use their first machines or others which they have since purchased. Nearly half of those who have bought their second machines have changed their opinions as to the best size for their purposes, as indicated by the sizes of the machines purchased. The men who had sold their first machines had kept them for an average period of a little more than three years, and sold them for an average of $490, approximately half the first cost.

SUMMARY OF REPLIES.

A summary of the replies from 1219 men who are still operating the same farms or similar farms in the same locality showed that in 1920, 534, or 44 per cent, still owned their first machines and used them for field work; 446, or 37 per cent, had replaced their old tractors with new ones which were used for field work; and 239, or 19 per cent, did not use tractors for field work. Seventy-one of the 239 still used their old tractors for belt work.

About one-half of the machines purchased in 1916 and 1917, one-third of those purchased in 1914 and 1915 and one-fourth of those purchased in 1913 or earlier were still being used for field work. Of 808 men who purchased their machines in 1916 and 1917, 410 still owned the same machines and used them for field work; twenty-five of them had purchased other tractors and used both for field work. Two hundred and seventy-five had replaced their old tractors with new ones which they used for field work; of these, 227 had sold their first tractors and forty-eight still had them; thirteen of the latter used their old tractors for belt work only, and thirty-five did not use them at all. One hundred and twenty-three did not use tractors for field work; of these, 67 had disposed of their tractors; thirty-five used them for belt work only, and twenty-one still owned the old tractors, but used them for neither field nor belt work.

Of 331 men who purchased their machines in 1914 and 1915, [illegible] still owned and used them for field work in 1920; of this number, 106 had purchased other tractors and used both for field work; 133 had replaced their old tractors with new ones which they used for field work; of these, ninety-nine had disposed of their first tractors and thirty-four still had them; of the latter group ten used their old tractors for belt work only and twenty-four did not use them at all.

TEST TRACTOR PULL WITH DYNAMOMETER.

FULLERTON.—On the ranch of C. C. Chapman a dynamometer tractor test was made recently to ascertain the exact power required in the handling of various implements and at the same time to ascertain the steadiness of tractor power. A great many times a tractor user will blame the tractor for not having enough power to pull a certain implement. He doesn't realize that soil conditions change from time to time and that the power required for one implement is more or less than for another make of implement which seems to be exactly the same size.

For this reason a dynamometer test was made by F. D. Fouch of the Tractometer Company in conjunction with the foreman of the C. C. Chapman ranch, using a three-section, spring-tooth harrow and a Tioga tractor. These dynamometer tests also show slippage and the steadiness of power.

The State of Nebraska has a law that requires a dynamometer test to be made both as to the power derived at the drawbar and also at the belt before machines can be sold in the State. If the machine does not measure up to its advertised horse power makers are then required to reduce their advertised horse power to a basis safe under what the tests show.

California soil conditions being as varied, it is a good plan for a tractor owner to have his machine equipped with a dynamometer so that he may know at all times just what is a load and thereby not overload the tractor.

Learning the Truth About Tractor Pull.

A Fullerton citrus ranch foreman put a dynamometer on a recently purchased tractor and found exactly what was the effort of the machine with certain tools.

WORTH-WHILE HINTS IN FARM CARPENTRY.

BY HERBERT A. SHEARER.

There are names for all of the different parts of a farm house. A few of these parts, the most used ones, are shown in the drawing.

Small wooden houses for the farm are easily constructed, so that anyone who is handy with tools can do the work. But it helps considerably to know the names of the different parts, and the way they are put together.

The diagram represents a cross section through the side of a house, at the junction of the roof. It shows the different parts of the house skeleton, and their relation to each other.

The names of the different parts, as they are marked and referred to by letters, are as follows:

A—the plate. This is made of two pieces, usually 2x4s, doubled and spiked into the top ends of the studding.

B—the studding, usually 2x4s.

C—the rafters, usually 2x4s.

D—the roof boards. In this drawing they are shown as narrow strips, spaced to catch two courses of shingles, with two rows of nails. If felt roofing is used, the roof boards are laid close together. To make an extra good "felt" roof, the roof boards are tongued and grooved.

E—the outside boarding. It should be cut diagonally, with a miter cut. Then each board forms a brace, to resist high winds.

F—the clapboards. It is better to use a layer of building paper between the outside boarding and the clapboards.

G—the fascia.

H—the quarter round moulding.

I—the eaves board.

J—the plancher or soffit.

K—the shingles.

The Livestock Bulletin.

BY ROBERT T. EVANS.

One of the sensational Holstein records of the year is under way in the herd of John Saxer, Modesto, Cal., where the senior three-year-old Moorland Colantha Rose has milked over 18,000 pounds in 182 days and has over 700 pounds of butter to her credit in the same time. She made over 126 pounds of butter in her sixth month. This heifer has been cared for, fed and milked throughout the entire time by Olga Saxer, 17-year-old daughter of Mr. Saxer, who is handling her in this test in a manner that might well be the envy of some of the best men handling test cows. Moorland Colantha Rose is an exceptionally good individual, with plenty of size, and has a correspondingly good pedigree, being a granddaughter of Colantha Johanna Ladd.

S. O. Walker, Visalia, will disperse his richly-bred herd of registered Holsteins early in October. This herd contains around thirty daughters of the famous bull, King of the Black and Whites, the first bull whose seven nearest dams averaged over 30 pounds butter in 7 days. This great bull himself will be sold and he is still in splendid vigor and condition.

Seven more A.R.O. daughters have been added to the list of Sir Ormsby Skylark, the sire of Duchess Skylark Ormsby. Maxwell Farms, in San Fernando Valley, reports that Bessie Mercedes Ormsby Skylark, dropping first calf at 3 years 1 month, made 22.6 pounds butter from 486.6 pounds milk in 7 days, and 91.25 pounds butter from 2119.9 pounds milk in 30 days. Rag Apple Johanna Skylark, at 2 years 5 months, made 21.49 pounds butter from 460.8 pounds milk in 7 days. She is out of the 1000-pound cow, Rag Apple Johanna McKinley Segis. Nancy Ormsby Skylark, freshening at 2 years 4 months, made 20.11 pounds butter from 415 pounds milk. She is out of the famous 40-pound cow, Nancy Lucy Hengerveld.

The excellent herd of registered Holsteins owned by Alex Whaley, Tulare, will be dispersed at public sale on October 6. Included in the herd are twenty daughters of the noted young sire, Sir Aaggie De Kol Acme II, one of the best bred yearly record bulls of the breed. Mr. Whaley does not intend to retire permanently from the Holstein business, but has some extensive changes and improvements to make in his farm before he will be ready to establish another herd.

Mooresta Ormsby of Vina, who sold with three of her daughters in the Gotshall & Magruder sale of Holsteins at Ripon for a total of $2400, has presented her new owner, F. L. Hogue, Santa Barbara, with a fine heifer calf. This great young cow, only 7 years old, now has six living daughters and promises to be the founder of a notable family.

Miss Valley Mead De Kol Walker, the famous dam of King Korndyke, Pontiac 20th, Sir Prince Aaggie Mead and Sir Aaggie De Kol Mead, after completing the splendid 305-day record of 1006.24 pounds of butter from 22,148.4 pounds of milk, has freshened again after a short rest, dropping a fine heifer calf by Sir Pietertje Ormsby Mercedes 43. She is again on test and in seven days made 33.14 pounds of butter from 725.4 pounds of milk, and in thirty days 133.45 pounds of butter from 3021.4 pounds of milk, with 108.7 pounds for her best day. She is being continued on yearly test again by her owners, A. W. Morris & Sons Corporation, Woodland.

The Bastanchury Ranch of La Habra is intending to exhibit Berkshire hogs on the fall circuit. They will show at Sacramento, Santa Rosa, Stockton, Fresno, Hanford, Ventura and Riverside.

The premium list for dairy products at the State Fair, to be held at Sacramento September 3rd to the 11th, together with entry blanks, can be had from Dr. C. L. Roadhouse, University Farm, Davis, Cal. Liberal prizes are offered for creamery butter, for cheese of various types, as cheddar, California, jack, Swiss and goat, and for various classes of milk and cream, including goat milk and milk powder and condensed milk. Gold and silver medals and cash prizes to a total of $261 are offered for the winners in these various classes of milk and cream. Of special interest in this connection is the class for dairy inspectors. This consists of exhibits in any other class, from dairies or dealers under the supervision of the inspector, and the inspector may claim exhibits from any dairy or dealer in his territory unless such dairy or dealer is under a city inspection department which is itself competing. The inspector who gets the five highest scores, each from a different exhibitor, will receive a gold medal and $25. The second man gets a silver medal and $10. All entries to milk and cream must be shipped not later than August 29, addressed to Director in Charge of Dairy Exhibits, Consumers Ice and Cold Storage Company, Sacramento.

Another fine record was recently made in the Hartsook Ranch herd of Holsteins when Korndyke Model Hartog III produced 33.64 pounds of butter in seven days and 131.69 pounds of butter in thirty days.

Tuesday, October 4, is the date set for the dispersal at public sale of the herd of registered Holsteins owned by S. O. Walker, Visalia, Cal. The herd now numbers approximately sixty-five head, including the famous bull, King of the Black and Whites, and about thirty of his daughters.

The sale of about forty-five registered Holsteins from the herd of Robert T. Curtis & Son, Exeter, Cal., will be held on Wednesday, October 5, at the Tulare sale pavilion, Tulare. Several splendid young daughters of the $12,000 bull, King Korndyke Pontiac 20th, and the noted thirty-four-pound, four-year-old [illegible] will be included in the sale list.

The series of Holstein sales in Tulare will be rounded out by the dispersal of Alex Whaley's choice herd at Tulare on Thursday, October 6. The high quality of this herd has become well known through the excellent official records made by its members, the uniformly high-class representation it has afforded in some of the best public sales, and the succession of high record and popularly bred herd sires used over a period of years.

It is very gratifying to know that owners of grade dairy herds are becoming dissatisfied with the use of just ordinary service bulls. Not only are they getting rid of scrub sires, but they are insisting that the herd bull must come from a dam with a good record. This is sound business judgment, for the use of a good bull, even in a grade dairy, means a sure future increase in herd production and will pay for the added cost of a good registered sire many times over. Bulls coming from a line of proven ancestors should be able to increase the future production of any grade herd. Farmers generally realize this fact and are going in stronger every year for herd sires which are backed with records as well as pedigrees.

The Holstein breeders of California should find cause for satisfaction with the condition of their business from their public sales [illegible] total of 1067 head sold for an average of over $[illegible], which may be taken as a fair average worth of all registered Holsteins in the State, as many of these sales were dispersal sales which included old and defective cows and a large number of very young calves, both bulls and heifers. The prices ranged from $9,250 down to $25, but with very few selling under $100.

Robert N. Clapp, owner of the Sycamore Acres herd of Holsteins at Nuevo, reports that in spite of the extremely hot weather his cows are doing nicely. He has just put a twenty-six-pound record on Wakefield Segis Chicago Boon, a daughter of the $20,000 bull, King Segis Pontiac Chicago. She milked as high as 105 pounds of milk per day while on test and dropped a fine heifer calf sired by Pearl King Segis Pontiac, the thirty-seven-pound son of King Segis Pontiac. Mr. Clapp is now busy getting the fall show string lined up and hopes to have them in good shape by show time. He has some excellent prospects to pick from and should be able to make a good showing in the black and white division.

EARLY STRUGGLES OF ARIZONA CITRUS MEN.

BY W. S. CHILDS.

The writer wishes to thank W. J. Murphy, who came to the Salt River Valley in 1882, and Rev V. A. Vanderhoof, who came to the Salt River Valley in 1892, for kindness and information that has made this record possible.

The history of orange culture in the Salt River Valley is closely connected with the history of irrigation in that district, and when the orange growers of Southern California were leaping ahead and settling the problems of marketing and co-operation, the orange growers of the Salt River Valley were wrestling with flood waters, and using every possible means to build a storage dam.

In the fall of 1882, W. J. Murphy, the father of orange culture in the Salt River Valley, and who was then building the Santa Fe Railroad through Prescott, was asked by Gov. F. A. Tritle to make a trip to Phoenix to investigate the possibilities of the valley. Mr. Murphy was so delighted with the country that he remained the entire winter, deciding to return and make his future home in Salt River Valley.

During that winter Mr. Murphy's attention was attracted by the golden fruit hanging on the trees in several of the yards of homes in the Salt River Valley, and although there were no commercial orchards, a vision of the Salt River Valley as a great orange country was opened up to him.

The next year he visited Los Angeles, and was surprised and impressed by the enormous citrus development around that city and Riverside. While visiting Riverside, Frank Miller called Mr. Murphy's attention to the fact that, although the oranges in the lowlands suffered from frost, those on the higher lands were untouched.

Returning to Arizona, Mr. Murphy carefully looked over the Salt River Valley, and decided that the "Camel Back" district was the best place for a citrus orchard, and with this in view, a company was organized.

Arizona was fully awake to the possibilities of irrigation by this time, and contracts were being let for the building of the Arizona Canal, planned to encircle the northern half of the valley and irrigate the highlands, the lowlands being irrigated from the Stallings Canal. Mr. Murphy bid for and received the contract to build the Arizona Canal, completing the same in three years. He also built the first brush dam across the Salt River, to supply the Arizona Canal with water.

After the Arizona Canal was completed and water was running, the Ingleside Land Company, of which Mr. Murphy was a stockholder, planted 100 acres to Washington Navel oranges in the Camel Back district, just below the Arizona Canal. The trees were secured from California at a cost of $1.25 each, and were planted twenty-two feet apart by the square system. These 100 acres were planted about 1887, and the planting is known today as the Ingleside grove. It is considered by Mr. Murphy as the first commercial orchard in the Salt River Valley.

About the same time, five acres of sweet seedlings from Florida were planted by Mr. Weeder. R. B. Butler, the present owner of this grove, believes it to be older than than the Ingleside orchard.

At this time it seemed that water was assured and a boom was started. Orchards consisting of grapes, figs, apricots, almonds and peaches were planted here and there. The famous Ward orchard was planted about this time; a Mr. Titus planted twenty acres to oranges, and Chaplain Scott planted one-half section to fruit trees, including oranges.

In the spring of 1894, a traveling man came to the Salt River Valley, selling grapefruit trees. He represented a Southern California nursery. He had no trees, but had numerous pictures of trees in Southern California loaded with fruit, and was a very fluent talker. He sold many grapefruit trees for future delivery in the Salt River Valley. It was about this time that the Clayson grapefruit grove, consisting of twenty acres, was planted. This is considered the first grapefruit orchard planted in the Salt River Valley.

Up to this time, things seemed rosy, but soon the early maturing fruit trees began bearing, and the markets were flooded. They had developed a large fruit industry, but had neglected to develop a market. California had a fair market for its fruit, and many of the Salt River Valley growers called their fruit California fruit. This worked well for a while, but, being based on false foundations, it did not succeed permanently.

Fruit was fed to the hogs, or allowed to rot on the trees, and everyone became disgusted with fruitg rowing. This, of course, affected the citrus plantings, and many who had citrus orchards began to grub them out. Mr. Titus grubbed out his orchard and planted alfalfa and the famous "Horse Ranch," a large citrus grove, was treated likewise.

Following this depression, a series of dry years occurred, and there was no water in the Arizona Canal. Many allowed their orchards to die from lack of water, but by hauling water in barrels the Ingleside company saved seventy acres of its 100 acres. A very large orchard, belonging to L. C. Bryan of Switzerland, died for want of water. There were very few pumps, and water was indeed scarce.

These were the years that tried men's souls, the years of 1899-1905, called by many the "seven years of drought." Water was scarce, but money was scarcer, and men lived on jackrabbits and wore their clothes till they became rags. Very few of the citrus orchards were saved, and the ones saved were probably kept alive by the spark of romance that man associates with oranges.

Every one was pulling for a storage dam, and, in 1906, work was begun on the Roosevelt dam, and a new hope filled the hearts of those who had held their faith through the long years of suffering. In 1909, two years before the completion of the Roosevelt storage dam, water was again flowing down the Arizona Canal. Water, which had always been uncertain, now became assured.

After the completion of the Roosevelt dam no one doubted the future of the Salt River Valley, but there was no sudden boom in fruit plantings. The farmers had not forgotten the years of hardships and distresses, and they were in no hurry to try the experiment over again.

Since the completion of the Roosevelt dam citrus plantings have steadily increased, and every year sees a substantial addition to the citrus acreage in the Salt River Valley.

FRESNO SENDS FIRST CARLOADS OF FIGS.

Growers in the Coachella Valley have been sending shipments of fresh figs to eastern markets for many years, but not until this season have San Joaquin Valley growers tried out the eastern centers on fresh fruit. On June 24, a trial shipment of a carload of figs was sent from Fresno, and arrived at Chicago in excellent condition. More carloads have been sent since, and have been eagerly absorbed by the eastern buyers. Coachella Valley, because of a limited fig acreage, has been unable to supply the demand, and the Fresno fig growers step in to supply the deficiency. The Forkner Fig Gardens are preparing to ship large quantities of figs east this year.

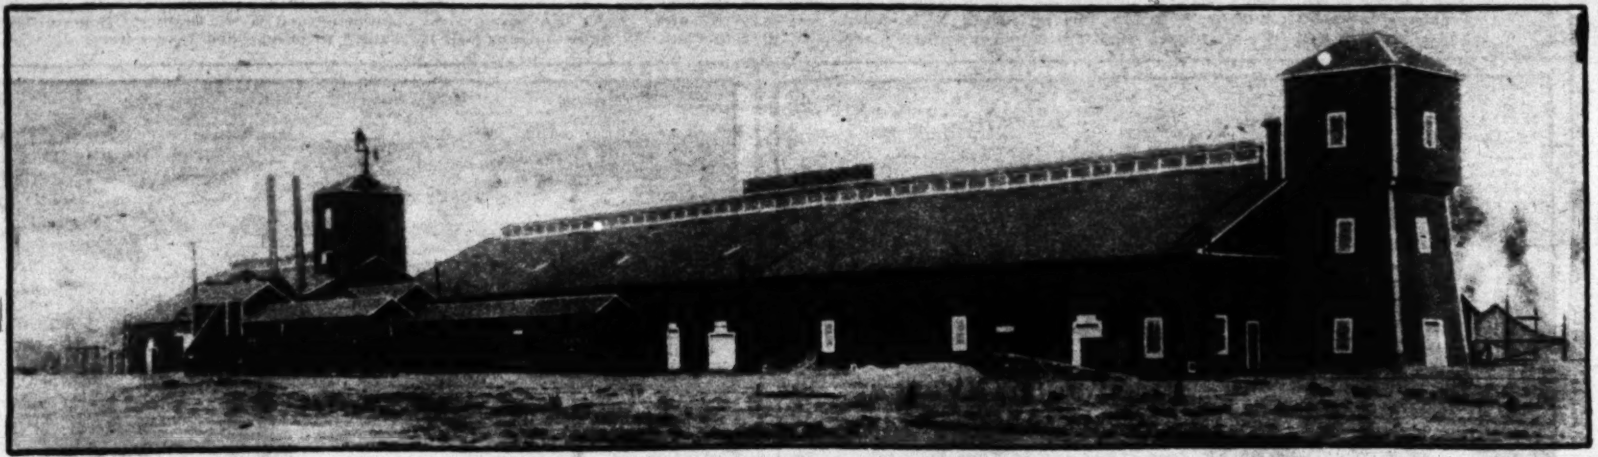
What Prohibition Didn't Do to the Grape Industry.

Picking grapes in a California vineyard.

WINE may be taboo in official circles, but the luscious grape from which it is made is still produced in bountiful quantities, and the popularity of this product of the vine has, if anything, increased since the advent of prohibition.

Before the dry law went into effect, California wineries were fast overtaking the producers of the famous wine districts of Europe, and the champagne, red and white wines of the Golden State were building up a reputation for quality that meant much to the grape growers of the wine districts. Prohibition, it was feared, would wipe out of existence the entire industry dependent upon the wineries for a market. But the unexpected happened, and the wine grape growers received greater prices for their crops than they did in the old days, an amazingly large number of persons in the East, North and South developing a keen appetite for California wine grapes.

The market absorbed all the fresh grapes offered, and thousands of tons of them were shipped long distances, in lug boxes, crates and barrels, in spite of the fact that a very large proportion of the fresh fruit would not be in fit condition for table use. A slightly fermenting grape seemed to have a certain appeal to purchasers, and practically no shipments of fresh grapes were refused for lack of freshness at destination.



A big San Joaquin Valley winery that has been taken over for the manufacture of grape syrup.

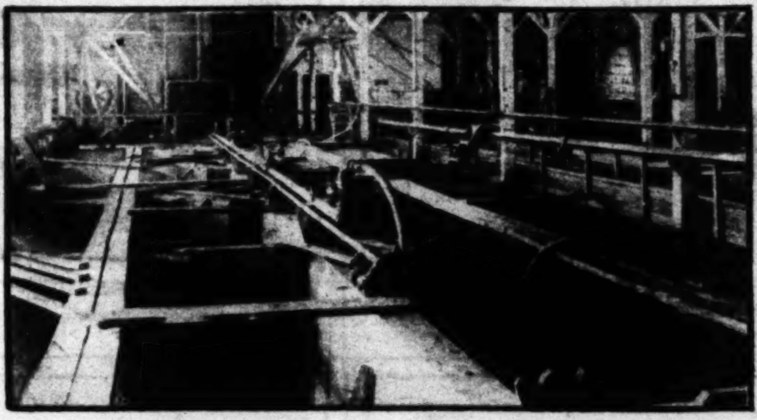
Dried grapes, too, came in for a veritable wave of popularity, and whereas in former years only the choicest raisin grapes were thought to be suitable for drying, now all varieties looked alike to the public. Dried grapes, it seemed, had acquired a peculiar "medicinal" virtue, particularly the ones that had always been known strictly as "wine grapes." These juicy grapes, it was found, would dry excellently in the sun, or in dehydrators, keeping all the sweetness, flavor, "'n everything," even if all the water had been dried out. It was the water that was apparently most objected to, anyhow.

Last season and the season before every grape grower in California, and elsewhere, for that matter, made, or could have made, big profits from the season's crops, whether the grapes were sold fresh, dried or to manufacturing plants engaged in producing grape syrup. And the dawn of the coming grape harvest time is just as rosy with promise of profits as any that has gone before.

If one buys a vineyard today he pays the kind of price demanded for "war babies" several years ago, and there is a surprisingly large number of buyers ready to pay the price, with a surprisingly small number of vineyardists who are anxious to sell.

Some of the closed wineries are being reopened and devoted to the making of grape syrup. Some one, it appears, had been amusing himself by figuring out how many plates of hotcakes, waffles and other breakfast breads were consumed every day, and had arrived at a total so staggering as to come to the conclusion that the American people were just "honing" for a new table syrup to make batter cakes better. And what fruit had the most sugar content and flavor most suitable for this new syrup? The grape, of course. The U. S. Department of Agriculture said so. The syrup of the grape, too, could be converted into a most excellent soft drink. Then some one careless enough to leave the cork out of a bottle of the syrup mixture made the truly horrifying discovery that the product thus neglected would lose its sweet disposition and develop qualities like those that made Maud famous. There seemed to be a tremendous market for grape syrup all at once, even in advance of any systematic advertising, and advertising, as everybody knows, is some teller.

The production of this improved "pancake veneer" in the several California plants making it in 1920 was oversold before the makers were aware of what was happening. One of the largest plants devoted exclusively to the manufacture of grape syrup and located in the heart of the San Joaquin vineyard district, is now doubling its capacity, and the company plans to add other wineries to its manufacturing equipment to meet the demand. All of which redounds to the interest of the grape grower, for thousands of tons of fresh grapes will be demanded this year to keep the syrup factories going, and with spirited demands for fresh grapes, raisins, and other products of the vine, the syrup manufacturer will have to pay a pretty good price, in view of competition.



Interior of a former winery, now used for making grape syrup.

An old grape vine.

Co-operation has been developed to its highest form by the raisin growers of California, for the bulk of the crop is grown, picked and marketed through the growers' association. A new form of co-operation is now being tried by the people back of the grape syrup industry, with the idea of bringing together the grape grower, syrup manufacturer and food distributor, so that each will work for the benefit of all. Stock in a plant located near Kingsburg, Cal., is sold to local grape growers and to eastern food brokers and distributors. In return for his stock ownership the grower is guaranteed a certain minimum price for a part of his crop, while the broker's wants are first filled before any outside orders are accepted for grape syrup.

In the old days both the Federal government and the State agricultural college maintained corps of experts whose business it was to devise ways for growing more grapes for wine making and for producing more and better wines. Now these same experts are turning their thoughts toward creating new uses for wine grapes, and they have already suggested several new products that can be made from surplus grapes, including vinegar, denatured alcohol, cream of tartar, stock feed from refuse pomace, etc.

Taking it by and large, the grape growers, it seems, can trim their sails to whatever wind that blows. If prohibition is here to stay, grapes will find a market in the fresh state, as raisins, grape syrup or other manufactured product. In addition, the market for ordinary grape juice has scarcely been invaded by the California grape producer, as this potential field has been left almost entirely to the concord grape growers of the East. That wine grapes can be made into a very palatable grape juice was shown at the Panama Pacific Exposition, when a California concern won first prize for a grape juice made from the local vines, in competition with that product from all the established grape juice centers of the East.

A vineyard in the foothills of the Golden State, or in the sunny, if somewhat hot, valleys of the interior, is a mighty pretty possession, and it will now, and from all signs in sight at least, continue to pay big dividends. The grape has always occupied too important and too intimate a place with man since the dawn of history to be put out by such a little thing as prohibition. The juice of the grape is not intoxicating per se, and there are too many legitimate and perfectly lawful uses to which grapes can be put to bring about a serious impairment of the viticultural industry.—[By A. L. D.

An orange box makes a good nest. Remove the top, put the box on its side and nail a strip about three inches wide along the bottom in front. It is preferable to fasten this box to the wall, as it takes too much room on the floor. Each box, the middle piece being left intact, makes two nests. There ought to be one nest for every four or five hens, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. Straw or other material used for nests should be kept clean and fresh. Be sure to keep enough straw in the box to prevent eggs striking the floor. If an egg breaks, the hen may learn to eat it, and this is a difficult habit to break.

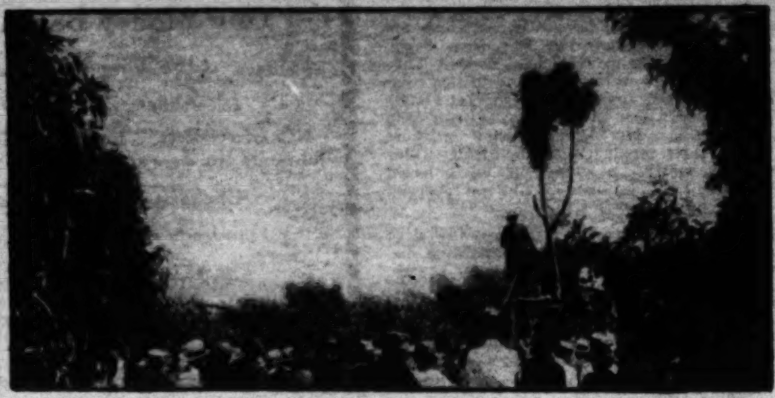
Top-Working Methods Shown at Avocado Field Day.

BY ROBERT W. HODGSON

ONE of the features of the recent avocado growers' field day, held at Puente, was the discussion and demonstration of top-working methods. Each speaker on this subject had the undivided attention of the growers.

In every new horticultural industry one of the subjects which early engages the attention and interest of the grower is that of the perpetuation of meritorious varieties, and the testing of introduced sorts through top-working. Of thorsands of seedlings thus tested, the greater part are discarded. Those that remain, however, and which merit further trial, as well as judiciously selected sorts from foreign climes, must be propagated. Therefore, those engaged in young horticultural enterprises early find it necessary to investigate and try out various propagation methods.

Such is the situation today with the avocado industry. Thousands of seedlings, either barren or producing inferior fruit, are ready to be top-worked to varieties which have been tested and which are believed to be worthy of perpetuation. It does not always happen that the best methods for working over seedling trees are those which first come into prominence, or which sometimes even come to be the usual methods employed. It is the writer's belief that the avocado industry has been passing through a period of this sort, criminating during the last year or two in the development of several methods of avocado grafting which seem to be especially promising. Perhaps better and simpler methods are still to come. Certainly experimentation along propagation lines should not stop until all known methods have been tried. This leaves room for considerably more study and work.



Demonstrating avocado top-working before a large crowd of growers at the Puente meeting.

Quite naturally, the first propagation method resorted to by avocado growers—the tree being an evergreen and similar in other respects to citrus—was the standard method used for the latter class of fruits, namely, budding. It is not the writer's purpose to discues this method here, since its use has become so widespread and well understood as to need little description. Suffice to say, however, this method is not without its objections. Not a few competent citrus budders do not find their efforts with the avocado successful. The operation is by no means so simple and easy as with citrus and most other fruits.

During the last year or so, however, there have been developed at least three methods of grafting the avocado which are comparatively simple, and which still, when properly followed, are quite successful. Two of these methods were demonstrated at the field day meeting of the Avocado Association. They are worthy of more general trial by avocado growers.

CLEFT GRAFTING.

Dr. Will R. Manning of Fillmore is generally given credit for the introduction of the cleft grafting method to the top-working of avocado trees. Dr. Manning's method differs in no way from the old standard cleft graft system as used for generations by deciduous growers, with the exception that, on account of the fact that the avocado is an evergreen an dhence must be top-worked when in active growing condition, more care is taken in performing the operation.

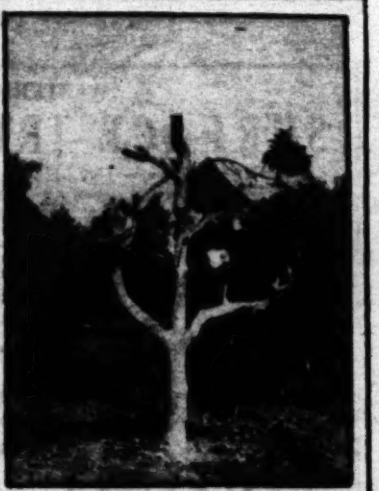
Features of greatest importance in the use of this method, as emphasized by Dr. Manning, are its use only during the early part of the season and preferably before active spring growth has begun, and the selection of wood for the scions. Well seasoned wood of the previous season's growth, and preferably second growth, is recommended, as more succulent growth dries out and shrinks before union takes place. It is truly remarkable how much wood it is necessary to cut from a tree in order to obtain even a few good scions for cleft grafting. This constitutes a common criticism against the method. Special precautions are also necessary in waxing and rewaxing the grafts. However, if the work is properly done, at the right time, and with properly selected scions, the method is a very satisfactory one.

Tree prepared for grafting, with platform built for the speaker.

BARK GRAFTING.

Several bark grafting methods have been tried and reported on. S. W. Funk of Charter Oak, at one of the meetings of the association last year, discussed two methods which he had used and found successful. One of these methods is in reality the old method of chip grafting, much used in the top-working of figs in European countries. In using this method, wedge-shaped pieces a half-inch or so in width, about the same in depth, and two to three inches long, are cut from the stub. Into these, scions are fitted, and help in place either by means of a small, flat-headed nail, or merely by wrapping with waxed muslin. If the work is carefully done, the results are quite satisfactory, although the union is apt to be weak for a season or two.

The other method reported on by Mr. Funk is a modification of the old method of patch budding, except that a scion is used instead of the patch, and the limb is cut at the time of grafting. A rectangular piece of bark, extending in only to the cambium, is stripped from the stub. Into this a scion, trimmed down so as to expose a large amount of cambium surface, is fitted and held securely in place, as in the case described above.



Bark-grafted avocado tree, showing means for protection of scions.

As far as the writer knows, the true bark graft, in which the bark is split down from the edge of the stub for an inch or so, and into which a scion, trimmed with a long sloping cut, at least two inches from heel to toe, with the bark side pared down to the chlorophyl carrying cells, is placed, has not been used for the avocado. In recent years this method has been used with splendid success with a number of trees, including the walnut, and it should at least be given a trial with the avocado.

SIDE GRAFTING.

At the Puente field day meeting, Mr. Funk also demonstrated a method of side grafting which is being used very successfully and quite extensively by E. E. Knight of Yorba Linda, who is usually credited with first using it on the avocado. In this method, the grafted limbs are not cut back until after the scions have begun to grow. A "T"-shaped incision is made in the bark at the point of grafting, into which a scion, shaped as for a true bark graft, is inserted. The longer the sloping cut on the scion, the greater is the cambium surface exposed and, hence the better the graft. The bark is pulled in tightly, using ordinary cotton tape or heavy muslin strips, which are thoroughly waxed over, sealing over all cuts. Where properly done, it is surprising how rapidly these side grafts grow. The writer has seen several where, six weeks after insertion, the scions had grown twelve to fifteen inches.

Selection of scions in the last three methods described does not appear to be of such importance as with the cleft graft method, and particularly with the side grafting method. Mr. Knight has used soft terminal shoots with splendid results.

Avocado buds and grafts are very tender and susceptible to adverse conditions, as many growers will bear witness. The best possible care of the tender growing scions is none too good. They should be shaded against sunburn, and the trees should be given plenty of water. The grafted tree should be thoroughly whitewashed, or wrapped with burlap, or both. Plenty of small limbs or "safety" branches should be left to carry the sap.

Certainly, methods of avocado top-working are improving all the while, and it is to be hoped, indeed the writer would even venture the prophesy, that in the next five years much more progress will result from the efforts of the many progressive growers who are now trying new methods.

ALFALFA MEN CHANGE THEIR ORGANIZATION.

A meeting of the directors of the Alfalfa Growers of California, Incorporated, was held recently at the offices of the association in Los Angeles, the result of which was the incorporation of the California Alfalfa Growers' Exchange, which is the new federating association.

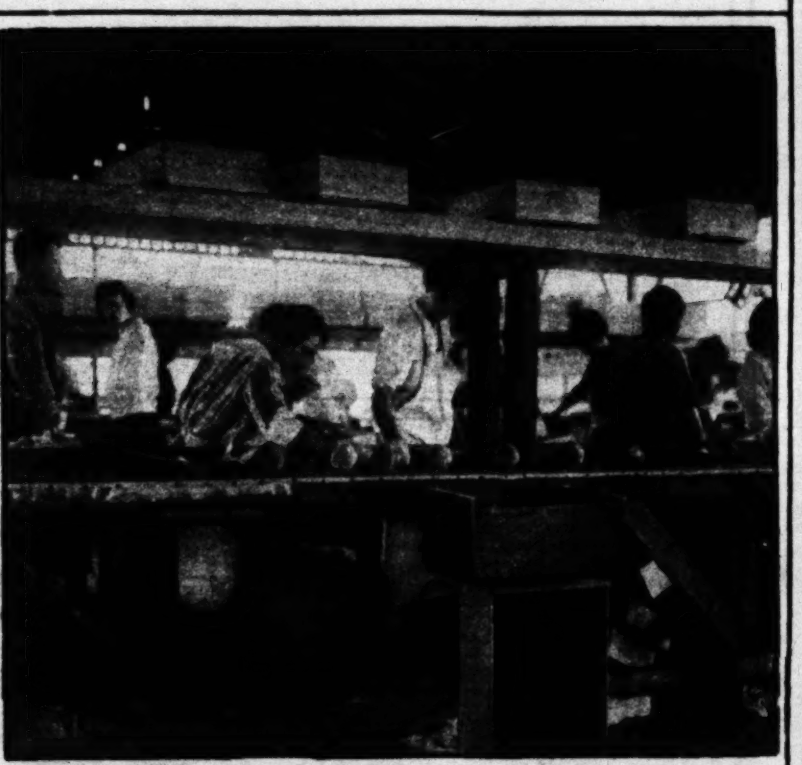
Experience has shown that the old plan of operation, under which the individual growers from all over the State were direct members of the State association and which made it necessary for the growers to do all their business through the State association in Los Angeles, had become unwieldly, according to an announcement from the manager. Taking the tSate as a whole, the larger portion of the hay produced for marketing purposes is sold and consumed near the place of produution, as has been ascertained from actual marketing experience, and, therefore, a system devised upon the assumption that all matters pertaining to sales and collection must be handled through the central office before final accounting with the grower could be made, caused unnecessary delays and did not work satisfactorily.

Under the new organization the grower is a member of his local association, which, being itself incorporated, will have direct control over all of its business, including that of marketing its product. It controls its own funds, accounting direct to its own members. The local associations will use the State association only in connection with the business outside of their own districts.

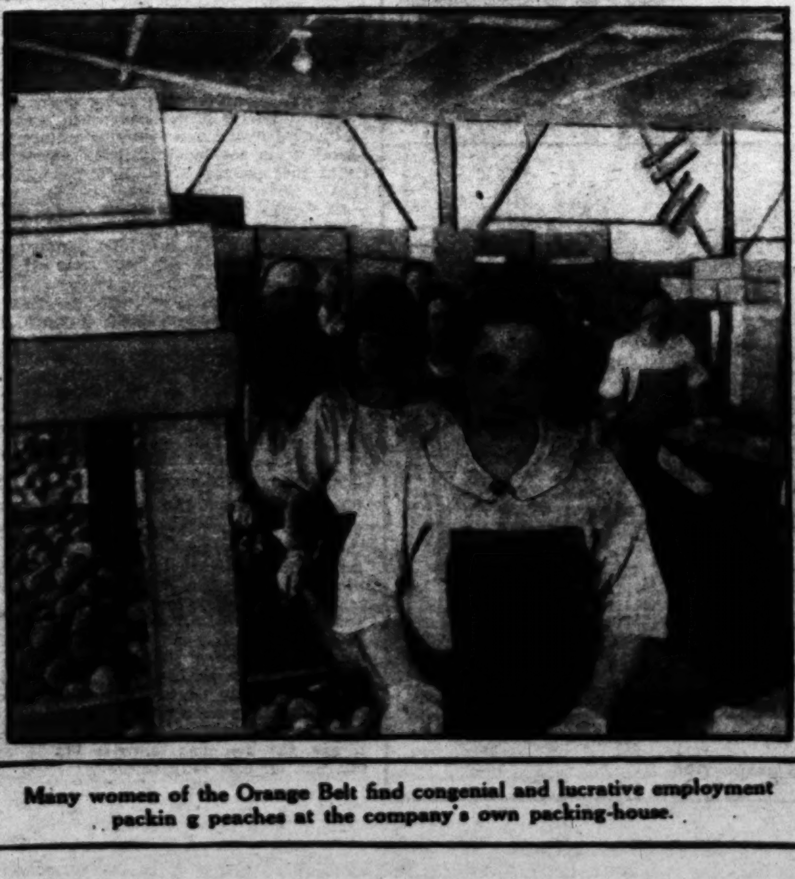
Easterners Clamor for Hale Peaches From Redlands.

This peach orchard of 20,000 trees, at Mentone is the property of the Redlands Heights Ranch Company of Pasadena. From it are being harvested this year nearly 1000 tons of J. H. Hale peaches, most of which are being shipped East at good prices. There are also many acres of Elberta, Tuscan and Phillips cling peaches, but the demand is for the large luscious Hales. There are 1060 acres in the ranch, and over 800 acres in cultivation. There are 13,000 lemon trees 5 to 9 years of age, 6000 navel orange trees 4 to 7 years old, 9000 Valencias, 8000 cherries, 3500 pears and 200 avocado trees. Nearly 100 inches of water are supplied by gravity from a tunnel in Mill Creek Canyon. Many miles of underground cement conduit carry water to the orchards. The company, incorporated in 1914, is composed of Dr. Rudolph Schiffmann, president; William J. Dennis, vice-president; N. H. Ellers, secretary-treasurer; E. F. Van Luven, F. C. Schiffmann and W. H. Bradley. It is an interesting venture in a district given over mostly to orange growing. Eventually, directors say, the entire holding will be planted to orange and lemon trees.

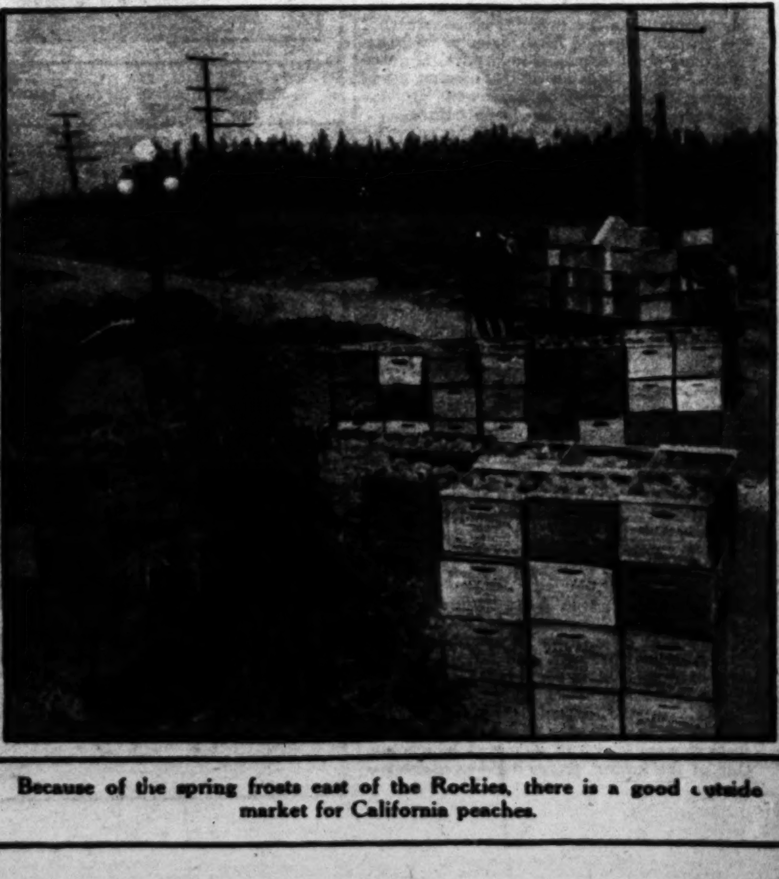
A force of 80 persons is busy harvesting, packing and shipping fruit from this ranch. This is a seven-year-old J. H. Hale tree.



The peaches are carefully graded, and wrapped in tissue paper before being packed.



Many women of the Orange Belt find congenial and lucrative employment packing peaches at the company's own packing-house.



Because of the spring frosts east of the Rockies, there is a good outside market for California peaches.

CHOICE FLOWER SEEDS
FOR PRESENT PLANTING

The following list is a selection of leading varieties which should be sown now. They will furnish you an abundance of Autumn, Winter and Spring flowers. These seeds are no plus ultra in quality. They are of our own sowing and can be relied upon for high germinating qualities and trueness to type. You cannot buy better.

COLUMBINES

(Aquilegia coerulea hybrids)

Our strains of these are of the true, large flowered, long spurred types. Blossoms are of remarkable size, elegantly formed, with spurs of extraordinary length. If sown now, will give you a wonderful display of bloom early in the Spring. Useful for cut flowers, easily grown, popular everywhere.

	Per Pkt.
H. & S. SELECTED PINK SHADES: A superb collection, including all shades of pink from lightest to darkest. Contains wonderful shades of apple blossom, dark rose, etc. Extra choice	$ .25
H. & S. SELECTED BLUE SHADES: All colors from palest sky blue to deepest purple, with intervening shades and bi-colored varieties, all of superb effect. No better strain in existence	.25
H. & S. PRIZE MIXED: Superb mixture, comprising all of the separate selections offered above, with innumerable other shades and combinations of colors	.25

CALENDULAS

ORANGE KING: For a crop of late Fall and Winter flowers, make a sowing of our superb strain of this well-known Calendula. Our latest selection of this type is something different. Blossoms are of giant size, perfectly formed, absolutely double. Color, rich, dark orange.	.15
LEMON QUEEN: A grand selection, with immense double flowers, rich lemon yellow in color. This variety will prove a fine companion to our Orange King	.15

CINERARIAS

H. & S. PRIZE MIXED: Our strain of these is one of the best in existence. Its quality is not only known in California, but generally throughout the United States. Seed saved exclusively from pot-grown plants, dwarf in habit. Enormous, compact heads of bloom and a color series of matchless beauty. Individual blossoms often four inches in diameter. A packet of seeds includes all colors, from pure white to darkest crimson, with all of the intermediate shades of pink, lavender, blue, carmine and bi-colored types. Sow now for early Spring flowering	.50

THE SCENARIO THIEF.

BY [illegible]

"WELL, it's finished at last—and it's a peach of a story even if I did write it! Of course the next thing is to sell it, but that shouldn't be much trouble if I can only get Miller to read it."

With a sigh that expressed both a sense of weariness and of satisfaction Gladys leaned back against the big eucalyptus tree and idly tapped the manuscript with the rubber-end of the pencil. Within the last few weeks she had tried so hard to make good—not as an author but as an actress. It had been the dream of her life to become a "lead" in the film world, and for this reason she had left New York and come to Los Angeles. However, following several weeks of unsuccessful effort, after haunting the studio lots day after day and vainly trying to get acquainted with the directors, she had about decided to take the advice of certain oriental philosophers and to "kill out ambition," at least so far as acting was concerned. Then had come to her the inspiration to write a scenario and, after mapping out to write a scenario and, after mapping out the story in her mind, she had gone, with pencil and paper, to the eucalyptus grove near the Brent studio and sat down to work. For four hours she had struggled with the synopsis and now that it was finished she was very tired, but very happy.

"If I can only get Miller to read it!" she repeated to herself as she rose from the ground and started toward the studio. She was surprised to find how all her weariness left her as she sped along the path. Still more surprised was she, on arriving at the studio, to find "Information" exceedingly kind and obliging. An office boy was dispatched at once to look for Miller, the director-in-chief, who soon appeared and invited Gladys into his office.

"A scenario, eh?" said Mr. Miller. "Well, let's have a look at it, girlie."

Miller took the proffered script and Gladys could see that he was interested from the moment his eyes rested on the title, "Stronger Than Death." Page after page Miller turned, without a comment and finally handed the manuscript back to her with polite regrets.

"Can't quite see it, girlie," he said "There's good stuff in it, but it isn't properly built up. It might make a story if it were worked out a little more fully and if it had a different ending. In its present form it's altogether too crude and—pardon me—too amateurish. Sorry, girlie. Good bye."

From the studio Gladys walked directly to her little room in a cheap apartment house on West Fourth street. It was a long walk, but it takes 5 cents to ride on a street car. Gladys, therefore, took the "ankle express" for town. She had a few cents left but she had a specal use for these few pennies. She wanted to buy some stamps, for she had some important letters to write. After purchasing envelopes and postage she went to her room and, sitting down at the table, wrote two or three brief letters. The last missive was to her sister in New York. It read:

Miss Rose Nealy, New York.

Dear Sister.—You remember that story I wrote you about a few days ago? Well, I finished it—and it's been rejected. Didn't you think it a good story from the little I told you of it? I told you I was at a loss for a title, but finally I called it "Stronger Than Death." Just think! The story of a spirit-bride who returned from the Great Beyond to guide her bereaved husband—but you remember it. It WAS a great story, I tell you—but it was turned down flat. I took it to Miller and he called it "amateurish." Well, Sis, I'm through. I'm tired, hungry and my clothes aren't fit to wear to a 10-cent eating joint. So I'm going to quit. By the time this reaches you I will be in another world. Good bye, Sis—and try to forgive me.

All the love in the world to you.

Gladys.

A few weeks later Rose Nealy, a pretty, well-dressed young woman, was seen, among other "extra" girls, on the lot at the old Brent Studio. She was curious to have a glimpse of the studio that had been the cause of her sister's troubles and she wanted, if possible to see Director Miller. It took her but a short time to become acquainted with the girls on the lot, for they were a sociable set—albeit, as "exclusive" in their own way as the members of the Four Hundred.

"You ought to get plenty of work in this picture," gushed one young girl, speaking to Rose. "If you've done stock, it ought to be [illegible] peach of a story. It's called 'The Spirit Bride,' I think—and it's all about a girl who died and then came back to earth and materialized herself and showed her husband, or lover, where to find a gold mine—or something of that kind."

"Why, that's Gladys' story!" gasped Rose.

"That's what?"

"Nothing—no matter!" said Rose, but she stepped away from the group of girls and began to ponder. "Can it be possible?" she reflected. "Do they really do such things?" In her heart there burned the thought of vengeance. "If it's true—if it's true!" she murmured. "He shall pay for it—he shall pay!"

A few days later everybody at the studio was talking about the new girl, Rose Nealy. She had managed to see Miller, had told him of her experience in the theatrical world and had secured an important role in "The Spirit Bride." She was not the "lead" but she had captured a part which made her the envy of the "extras."

"How did she do it?" asked one of the chewing-gum girls, as he stood, with arms akimbo, before a group of her companions.

"Search me!" exclaimed another girl, dabbing at her face with a small powder puff. "Just came here a few days ago—and now look at her. Here I been hanging around for months and can't get a look-in! Wouldn't it jar you?"

"She simply vamped him, that's all!" volunteered a black-haired little beauty. "We could all get jobs if we'd be decent—or, rather, indecent!" she ended bitterly.

However, regardless of the opinions of others, Rose came to the studio day after day and succeeded in making many friends among the actors and actresses who were on "the inside." Miller, it was evident to everybody was infatuated with her and the star of the cast was none too well pleased at the attentions which Miller paid to Rose. Things went swimming along beautifully for awhile. Cameras clicked, directors shouted, property men sang and cursed, as the mood struck them, scenes were set up and "struck"—and the good sun kept shining as it always does in Southern California, everybody was happy and Miller was in his glory.

"You're going to have the nicest little dinner of your life tonight!" said Miller to Rose, one day, just after Rose had finished a particularly hard scene. I'm sorry you had to [illegible]

"Oh, that's all right!" returned Rose, smiling. "I could make that jump ten times a day—and feel all the stronger for it at night. Did I hear you say something about supper tonight? Yes? Say, Millie, I wish it were supper time right now!"

No sooner was she dismissed for the day than Rose went at once to her room and dressed for the party—a party at which only two were to be present. For half an hour she "primped" and finally, when she was all ready, she opened a dresser drawer and took therefrom a gleaming instrument. At the "Honk! Honk!" of Miller's auto horn, Rose left the house, greeted her escort pleasantly and entered the machine.

The supper at Barlow's Cafe was proceeding nicely enough. In fact, the meal was about finished when Miller, sipping a "small black," looked up at Rose and said, "Well, girlie, what do you think of 'The Spirit Bride' by this time?"

Rose looked her questioner straight in the eyes as she replied; "It's all right, I suppose—only I can't go on with my part."

"What's the joke?" asked Miller, uneasily.

"It isn't a joke—unless you want to take it that way," returned Rose, with her gaze still fixed steadily on him. "I repeat that I do not intend to go on with my part. And that isn't all—you are not going to finish the picture."

"Why—what do you mean?" gasped Miller, sitting up straight and looking at her frowningly.

"I mean this," said Rose, rising and facing him like a maddened tigress. "I mean that you are a thief, and the worst kind of a thief in the world. You are a thief of ideas. You are a highwayman in the kingdom of thought. You stole my sister's story, "Stronger Than Death," you gave it a new title and expect to produce it and make yourself famous and rich. But you will never finish it—for I am going to kill you!"

Miller found himself looking down the bright blue barrel of a revolver. It was not a pleasant situation for the director, but he was an actor and he tried his art on Rose.

"I think you'd better reconsider before you pull the trigger," he said smiling. "You see, pistols make awful noises and you might attract attention!"

"I am willing to take the consequences," replied Rose. Her face was aflame with anger. She trembled a little. Miller saw that she meant business. He threw up his hands in a supplicating manner, but she mistook his action for an attack, and as she pulled the trigger a loud report rang out through the house, and—

Gladys started up quickly, rubbed her eyes, looked at the manuscript at her side, took it up, glanced at the title and smiled. Having been asleep, she had not noticed the approach of Director Miller as he came walking toward her, accompanied by Director Johnson. Pausing near Gladys, Miller glanced down at her with a little smile.

"Love letters?" he asked.

"No," replied Gladys—"a scenario."

"Yes?" said Miller. "Do you mind if we have a peep at it? Everybody's writing 'em. Somebody will write a good one one of these days."

With a little hesitancy, Gladys handed him the script.

"How's this, Johnson—'Stronger Than Death'? Think Main street would fall for the title?"

Johnson smiled and said nothing and Miller read on, to himself. Page after page he turned. Directly he whistled softly.

"Say, girlie,—maybe, maybe this is what we're looking for. Say, this doesn't sound at all bad! Would you like to walk to the studio with us? We'll look it over and talk it over together. How about it? Come along!"

Miller lifted her to her feet.

"And I'm not dead? And you won't steal my scenario?" said Gladys, laughing a little hysterically.

Miller looked at her curiously. "Been dreaming, girlie?" he asked.

And in the heart of Gladys, as she walked toward the studio with the two men, the angel of Success was singing.

quite scared out, and murmuring something apologetic, she fled to the shack.

Pete went back to New York State in time for school, not so sorrowfully as he might have done, for Dolores and Merton seemed to have fallen in love deeper than in those sickening days of their courtship, and Pete was glad to get out into clear air again. No doubt in remorse at hurrying him off, they gave him the unpopular lion skin for his very own; and Dolores slipped her gun into his trunk when she was packing for him.

But Pete didn't worry, not he! Why should you or I? What earthly use are little brothers anyway? He left any cares he may have had in that brown shack along the Sapillo; so did Dolores; so did Merton; so shall we if we go there. Everybody does if they can but find the way there—and back.

The Two Houses.

In the heart of night,
When farers were not near,
The left house said to the house on the right,
"I have marked your rise, O smart newcomer here!"

The other replied,
"Newcomer here I am,
Hence stronger than you with your cracked old hide,
Loose casements, wormy beams, and doors that jam.

"Modern my wood,
My hangings fair of hue;
While my windows open as they should,
And water-pipes thread all my chambers through.

"Your gear is gray,
Your face wears furrows untold."
"—Yours might," said the other, "if you held, brother,
The Presences from aforetime that I hold.

You are but a heap of stick and stone;

Stand they, when dawn crawls in;
Visible at night; yet hint or warning
Of these thin elbowers few of the inmates win.

"Babes new-brought forth

Yea, throng they as when first from the void upfetched!

"Dancers and singers

Rich-noted throats and gossamered fingers
Of heels; the learned in love-lore and the dunce.

Who smile and greet their friends and kin,
And down my stairs depart for tracts untried.

Said the new-built, awestruck, faint,
"When I shall lodge shades dim and dumb—
And with such spectral guests become acquaint?"

Such shades will people thee,
Each in his misery, irk or joy,
And print on thee their presences as on me!"

CARE OF THE BODY.

Charles R. Forbes, director of the War Risk Bureau, said:

"Unless immediate action is taken to correct conditions at Johnson City we will have as many casualties there as we had in the World War, from an equal number of men."

I will go farther than this, and state that far more U. S. soldiers have been killed, or made chronic invalids, by medical malpractice, than were killed and injured by the enemy.

Scarcely a week passes in which I do not receive enough pitiable stories of this kind to fill the Care of the Body.

Diabetes and Diet.

DIABETES is not a disease, but a symptom of a disease, caused by overeating, especially of proteid food. Medical men now recognize this, to some extent, treating it by a short fast of a few days, also administering whisky, which is not necessary. What is needed is not merely a short fast, but a permanent cutting down of the surplus food.

Diabetes loves the fat man, and Joslin proves it by a string of figures.

A study of weight, for height and age, of 1000 cases of diabetes, under his observation, proves that when a person begins to put on excessive weight he starts for diabetes.

In Joslin's test, no person over 50 years of age and 20 per cent underweight developed diabetes.

* * *

Men and Plants.

AN INSECT, brought to California to prey on a citrus scale, is said to be preying on human beings.

In like manner, germs introduced to kill other germs attack the human body.

Men, animals and plants become a prey to invaders, only when resistance is lowered.

Men are enervated by eating starvation foods, or over-stimulating foods.

Plants are enervated by starved soil, or by over-stimulation with animal excrement, or concentrated chemical fertilizers.

Men should eat clean, natural foods. Plants should be fertilized with clean, pulverized rocks and leafmould.

Summer Sea.

Soft, where the winds are blowing, blowing,
Lest on an angry wave
Phantom ships a-sailing, sailing,
Break on a rocky grave.

Down 'neath a beach tree bending, bowing,
Hid in a cove remote;
I found the sea shells sobbing, sobbing,
Where derelicts float.

Come! Love, the sun is sinking, sinking,
Down where the breakers sigh
See how the sea cliffs beckon, beckon,
Charmed by an opal sky.

Think you, the music now returning
Hails from a sudden tide,
Dashed on the surf near the cove of yearning
There to abide?

See! now the tide is rising, rising,
Taking my ships away,
Stealing my beautiful fantasies,
Joys for a day.

Ah, Love! the lights from the Orient
Fall where the sunbeams flee,
Fall where the waves are calling, calling,
Lost on a summer sea.

IRIS ASHTON.

How to Prove It?

An American in dear old London was bragging about his auto. He ended his eulogy by declaring:

"It runs so smoothly you can't feel it, so quietly that you can't hear it, it has such perfect ignition you can't smell it, and as for speed—boy, you can't see it!"

"But my word, old dear," interrupted the Briton anxiously, "how do you know the bally thing is there?" — [American Legion Weekly.

Passing of the Fiacre.

Paris is losing its fiacres and this means of transportation is being replaced by the taxis. A few years ago it was computed that there were 8000 of these small carriages moving about the streets of Paris, but at last count there were only a few more than 200.

The Little Poor Man's Country.

—BY—
John Steven McGroarty.

A MAN lives in another world when he leaves home and journeys with wayfarers. And, for a while, and while the sensation is still new, he is often in swithers as to just how to conduct himself.

Particularly is this true, we think, of a hill man used to quiet and a decorous state of mind that goes with his environment. By gollies, a hill man is at sea, as the saying is, when he meets up with these gypsying wayfarers who traipsey up and down the world from year's end to year's end without a thought or a care as to where they are going or when they will come back.

Any place that a wayfarer hangs up his hat is home to him. And, so far as we can see, he doesn't give three whoops where that place is.

Well, sir, it was with what seemed to be an endless company of wayfarers that we fell in on the very day we left the Valley of the Wonderful River on the trail of the North Star in quest of dim forests and blue lakes of which we had dreamed this long and many a day.

And the company of the wayfarers was pleasant company. And it was a fascination to think ourself one of them. We bought a silver ring to wear so that we might be known of them till our journey's end, and we would be back again with the neighbors in the green Verdugo Hills.

The Man With a Mania for Abbreviations.

FOR a night and a day there was no one except wayfarers in our caravan. And then a man of the country dropped in on us, as the saying is. And he was a strange sort of man, too. And we would like to tell you about him.

He was a man who was possessed of a queer mental malady—nothing less than a mania for abbreviations. He cut his words short, as though it were a labor for him to speak fully. He even went so far as to merely nod his head in lieu of utterance whenever it was possible for him to do so.

You would think to look at him that there was no reason at all for this display of verbal laziness, for he was a big man with a deep chest and plenty of breath. And, when he spoke he had a voice that even William J. Bryan might envy.

Now, for some reason or other, the wayfarers persisted in plying the abbreviator with all manners of questions concerning the country. You will find that this is a habit that wayfarers have. They want to know where they are and what there is about each place that a man could be interested in.

It was with a certain sense of horror that we listened to many of the abbreviator's replies. He called Los Angeles "Los," simply; the sun-kissed harbor of San Pedro, where the ships come in from sea and spread their white sails in flight across every ocean, he referred to as "Pedro." The good gray town of San Bernardino, which is the gateway to the Empire of the Sun, this vandal called "Berdoo."

In silence and shame and humiliation we swallowed it all, as the saying is. If there be a drawback to being a hill man, it is that he is, by nature, diffident. He is slow to speak in the presence of strangers.

Ah, we thought, if we only had this fellow back home with the neighbors on the stone fence of an evening when the sunset purpled the skies and the lights of the automobiles were flittering like fireflies up and down the Calabasas Road, what a trimming he would get!

And yet, the worm will turn, as the saying is. And it was when the abbreviator referred to San Francisco that we ceased to be aworm for another minute. Right then and there we lit into him. We had come to the limit of endurance. We lit into him, and we lit into him good.

Remembering the Man Who Knows About the Saints.

IF THERE be one thing more than another that we just can't stand it is to hear anyone call San Francisco "'Frisco." It is nothing less than downright vulgarity. And a man would better be guilty of petty larceny, a thousand times over, than be guilty of vulgarity.

A man might be a sneak thief and still make some pretension to gentlemanly demeanor, but he can never do it if he be vulgar.

When we had finished the abbreviator, and had thrust him into oblivion, as you might say, we thought of the man who knows about the Saints, and of whom we have often told you in our reports of the proceedings of the neighbors in the green Verdugo Hills.

And it may be that you all will remember that time when the man who knows about the Saints told us of St. Francis.

It was one evening when the neighbors were gathered together on the stone fence watching the sunset on the Ventura Mountains. And a poor, frightened little rabbit ran by with a dog hard on its heels. And the dog caught the rabbit and ground it cruelly to death between its sharp fangs—that time when the man who knows about the Saints told us of St. Francis.

And he said that if St. Francis had been there among us the rabbit's life would have been saved. That it would have jumped into his rough brown tunic for protection. That rabbits and every creature that God made flew to Francis for sympathy and help. And that even wolves grew tame and docile at the sound of his voice and the touch of his hand.

Don't you all remember us telling you that?

Well, sir, we remembered this, and we remembered that the man who knows about the Saints told us that San Francisco was named for St. Francis; that San Francisco is, indeed, the Spanish words for St. Francis.

San Francisco.

Wrap her, O Fog, in gown and hood
Of her Franciscan Brotherhood.

Hide me her faults, her sin and blame;
With thy gray mantle cloak her shame.

So shall she, cowled, sit and pray,
Till morning bears her sins away.

Then rise, O Fleecy Fog, and raise
The glory of her coming days;

Be as the cloud that flecks the seas
Above her smoky argosies;

When all her throes and anxious fears
Lie hushed in the repose of years;

And all fulfilled the vision we
Who watch and wait shall never see—

Who in the morning of her race
Toiled fair or meanly in our place,

But, yielding to the common lot,
Lie unrecorded and forgot.

—[Extract from poem by Francis Bret Harte.

And, by ginger, when we heard this vulgar abbreviator refer to the city of San Francisco as "'Frisco" it was as though he had met St. Francis himself on a high road and had said, "Hello, 'Frisco," to him.

A hill man just naturally can't stand for a thing like that. And that's why we pitched into the fellow, as the saying is.

Francis Who Was Wed to My Lady Poverty.

SOME of us who sat on the stone fence that evening when the man who knows about the Saints told us of St. Francis, wondered that the greatest harbor in the world, and one of the great cities of the world, should be named for such a man.

For, if you will stop to think it over, you will see it is a thing that seldom happens that great harbors or great cities are named for men who were considered of no account, or crazy, by a hard-headed and cold-thinking world.

And, certainly, if it were now that Francis were to stand in a market place as he did in a market place of the Umbrian Hills, 700 years ago, changing the fine and costly raiment he wore for the garb of a wondering beggar at his side, and throwing away all his earthly possessions as a man might throw chaff to the winds, he would be thought crazy.

But, that's what Francis did. And he went out into the highways and the byways of the world a mendicant. He gave his life to the poor and needy, the helpless and the sick. He washed the lepers' sores and kissed their rotting cheeks.

Certainly the world would regard a man as being crazy who would give up wealth and home and ease and luxury to do that. And the world of the time of Francis was the same kind of a world that we have now. And they said, in those days, that Francis was a fool.

But, wolves couched at his feet and licked his hands. The little wild things flew to his bosom for safety from harm and danger. The birds of the air covered him with leaves when he slept on the bare ground at night in the cold.

All this and more the man who knows about the Saints told us that night as we sat on the stone fence in the green Verdugo Hills watching the sunset flame in glory upon the Ventura Mountains. But still we wondered that such a man could be so long and so well remembered, and so honored down to this day.

But, do you all not recall that it was then that the man who used to be a statistician told us that it is such men, and such men only, that the world remembers.

The Little Poor Man's Wonderful Country

AND so it was that we came with the caravan of the wayfarers to the country of this little poor man whose bride was My Lady Poverty.

This is the country of St. Francis, we said to the wayfarers, as we came at last within sight of the noble harbor and the domes and towers of the city sitting on thrice its seven hills.

His country, surely, we said, although his eyes never beheld it, or the eyes of any civilized man until long centuries after Francis was laid in the dust of Umbria from which he sprang.

His country because it was his name that was given to it when the brown-robed brothers that wore his sandals came to it in the long ago. His name that will linger upon it as long as time shall last; and the memory of him as deathless there as the hills and the sea.

This is the city of romance, we said to the wayfarers. This is the port o' ships that has lured the wandering sail within its Golden Gate endlessly since Juan de Ayala steered the prow of his daring galleon hither in an August sunset of a century and a half ago—the first of all the ships to come.

If you shall see a ghostly sail wandering under the crescent moon through the Golden Gate tonight, we said, it will be the sail of Juan de Ayala's ship.

And we shall take you to a haunted hill, we said—to that brown hill from which swart old Don Gaspar saw the peerless harbor for the first time—the hill upon which white men had never stood before.

Up from San Diego had Don Gaspar come, fighting his desperate way over mountains and through valleys and the tangled wildernesses of the chaparral in search of Monterey that hid its bright waters from his anxious and longing eyes.

But, what was Monterey compared to this that Fate had in store for him? Each man has his own Guardian Angel, it is said. And, if so, then Don Gaspar de Portola might well have thanked that tireless companion of his that he was led beyond Monterey, around the swinging lomas, to look upon the mightiest of harbors, and thus to put his name forever upon the everlasting scroll of fame.

Then came the great Padre Junipero, apostle and father of California, to look upon the harbor. "Now must we fling our Mission line with ships," he said. "The foot of man can go no farther."

And he blessed it with the voice of holy prayer and lifted the waters in his hand and baptized it with the name of the Little Poor Man of Asissi whose bride was My Lady Poverty.

They built a Mission there. And it is standing still against the flame of fire and the earthquake's shock. And time has passed—long, long years of time—and he is with the dust, the great-souled Franciscan who gave the place its name and baptized it with water in his hands.

Here came Argonaut searching for the Golden Fleece. In the misted distances are the hills that poured out their treasures in the great days of '49—days the like of which the world had never seen before and will never see again.

And the City of St. Francis sits elate upon thrice its seven hills. The tireless winds of the sea beat through the Golden Gate, making the old music of the songs of wandering sailormen among countless masts in St. Francis's harbor.

The Wanderers' Lodestone and Still the Port o' Dreams.

WE WERE told that San Francisco is not the place that once it was. They mean by this that it has lost its charm.

It is only old roisterers who say this. America has sobered down a lot in the past few years. And, no doubt, San Francisco has sobered down with the rest of the country.

There was only one time that the abbreviator man who was with our company of wayfarers, really became anything like loquacious, and that was when he told us what San Francisco was "in the old days."

"In the old days," he said, "San Francisco was crowded all day and all night, all the time, with just one danged thing after another. It had the Barbary Coast, the Poodle Dog restaurant the Cliff House and a thousand bar-rooms with sawdust on the floors. You could get a schooner of steam beer and a full meal with it for 5 cents in those days in San Francisco," he said.

And, by gollies, we guess it really was a gay and festive spot, as the saying it.

It couldn't help but be like that, with the traditions of the old Comstock and the "days of '49" in its blood. Days when men cared as little for a dollar as though it were a leaf on the tree and they were the owners of unbounded forests, as Bob Ingersoll said. Days when the beggar of yesterday rode in a golden coach on the morrow. When fortunes came and went like sands slipping through a glass.

Put those same conditions now into the most staid and Puritanical town on the face of the earth and it will run riot with Godlessness in a day.

With cities, as with men, we must write their faults in the sand and their virtues on the tablets of love and memory. And San Francisco, whatever can be said against it, must have this said in its behalf that it always had a warm and kindly heart.

It was, and it perhaps still is, the best beloved of all the cities of the world.

When its dark hour came—those few years back—and it lay black and broken and spent, a thing of ashes and ruin, see how the great heart of the world leaped to its succor!

And the world can never forget with what unparalleled courage San Francisco then lifted itself from its ashes. Before the bricks of its tumbled walls were cool from the flames that followed, the City of St. Francis had set out upon its own restoration.

Maybe it is not now the same city that once it was, but, oh, it is a great city. And a wonderful and a very beautiful city.

And all around it how wonderful and how beautiful everything is. The mighty harbor with its ships, the shining isles, the rivers flowing from the golden hills, Tamalpais uplifted like a green monolith against the stars, the soft outlines of Marin and Contra Costa, and the Golden Gate. And, at night, the myriad lights mirrored upon the waters.

The Little Poor Man's Country—it is like the soul of Francis in its glow and glory.

The Married Life of Helen and Warren.

Helen's Parsimonious Retrenchments are Exposed at a Company Dinner.

BY MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"WE asked 'em to dinner—not to glowered at the library clock. a midnight supper," Warren "I'll wait another ten minutes—then I'm going to eat."

"Here they are now!" Helen was at the window.

A taxi had drawn up—but only a solitary passenger emerged.

Always disgruntled when dinner was delayed, Warren strode grimly up and down, his hands thrust belligerently into his pockets.

"Dear, something must've happened. They wouldn't be this late."

"You sure it's tonight? You're so blamed careless about dates."

"I marked it down," she darted over to the desk. "The Milners for the 17th—tonight," consulting the calendar pad, "and the Humphreys tomorrow."

"Why the Sam Hill do you have 'em two nights running?" irritably.

"It was the only night the Humphreys had free before they go away—and we asked the Milners two weeks ago."

"I'll have to take that goose out—it'll be all dried up," announced Annie from the doorway. "And that tomato soup's going to curdle when I put the cream in—if it stands much longer."

"I'm sure they'll be here in a moment now." Helen followed her out to the kitchen to examine the large Mongrel goose browned to a delicious crisp.

"It's been ready ever since seven—it ain't my fault if everything's spoilt. And I'd like to get through some time tonight," sulkily.

"I'm sorry, Annie, but I'll give you an extra afternoon next week. Now you'll do the best you can, won't you?"

The maid propitiated, Helen hurried back to conciliate Warren.

"Oh, no, dear, not yet," as he started into the dining room. "Wait just five minutes more. It'd seem so rude to be eating when they come."

"Rude? When we've waited an hour? You tell her to put the grub on the table."

"There!" as the telephone jangled out. I knew something had happened."

But it was not the Milners. It was a long distance call for Warren.

"Bet that's Bentley from Philadelphia," as he strode to the instrument "Why in blazes didn't he call me at the office?"

Helen was elated. There were always delays about connecting long distance. If only he would be kept at the telephone until the Milners came!

While he swore at Central and banged on the receiver hook, she hung out the window, straining down the dimly-lit street at every approaching motor.

Ten—seven—five minutes of eight! And still no sign of the Milners. The clock was striking the hour when Warren finally slammed up the receiver.

"I don't think they're coming now," resignedly Helen followed him into the dining room. "Something serious must've happened."

"Well, something serious'll happen here—if I don't get something to eat."

"She'll bring in the soup right away. We won't have the hors d'oeuvre. We'll save those for the Humphries tomorrow night. Oh, wait, dear, don't use that!" Taking the monogrammed napkin from Warren, she gave him an every-day one instead. "And don't get a spot on the cloth—it'll do for tomorrow. Wait, I'd better put a tray cloth under your plate."

"Better get me a bib and be done with it," he snorted, holding up his plate while she hastily spread the cloth.

"I'll put back those brandied peaches—we'll save those for tomorrow."

"See here, I want something to eat tonight. What else you goin' to save for tomorrow?"

"Just the goose, dear. It'd be a shame to cut that just for us."

"The goose!" explosively.

"Annie, you can fry some bacon and eggs. Make it three for Mr. Curtis—quickly as you can. That goose will be delicious for tomorrow night."

"Bacon and eggs! This isn't breakfast! Think I'm going to wait an hour for dinner—and then be put off with bacon and eggs?"

"There's a wonderful salad—we can't keep that. But think what a waste to cut into that goose. And you can have another plate of soup," hopefully.

"Oh, I can? Trying to fill me up on soup, eh? Hold on, what now?"

"I just want to put these salted almonds away before they dry out."

Warren viewed this additional economy with scowling disgust. Nor was he appeased by the large platter of bacon and eggs that Annie soon brought in.

"So I got into my dinner coat for a feed of bacon and eggs!"

"Dear there's those candied sweet potatoes—and all that asparagus." Then thoughtfully, "I wonder if I couldn't use that for the salad tomorrow?"

"No, you couldn't! We're going to have something to eat TONIGHT!"

"Oh—oh!" starting up at the peal of the door bell. "That can't be—"

"Now don't get excited." Warren forked another piece of bacon from the platter. "They wouldn't have the nerve to breeze in after eight."

But Helen waited with held breath while Annie went to the door.

Voices in the hall. Mrs. Milner's shrill treble!

The next moment their tardy guests were ushered in. An accident in the subway was the breathless explanation. Three people had been seriously hurt.

"Between stations—and of course there was no way of phoning you," finished Mrs. Milner, still shrilly excited.

"Warren, you take Mrs. Milner into the library—I know she wants to rest. I'll see about dinner," frantic to get the bacon and eggs off the table. "I'm afraid things are a little cold."

"It doesn't matter if they are cold—we've kept you waiting long enough."

In spite of Helen's stammered protests Mrs. Milner, hastily removing her hat, insisted on going right into the dining room.

What excuse could she make for the bacon and eggs? Helen's agile brain was turning somersaults as they took their seats at the table.

Her usual inventiveness failed her utterly. She could think of no plausible lie to explain away that betraying plebeian platter.

"That soup curdled when I tried to heat it," announced Annie sullenly.

"Very well, just bring in the roast—and remove that platter," furious at the girl's stupidity for not taking it away while they were in the hall.

Then, with a nervous laugh as she caught Mrs. Milner's amazed glance at the bacon and eggs:

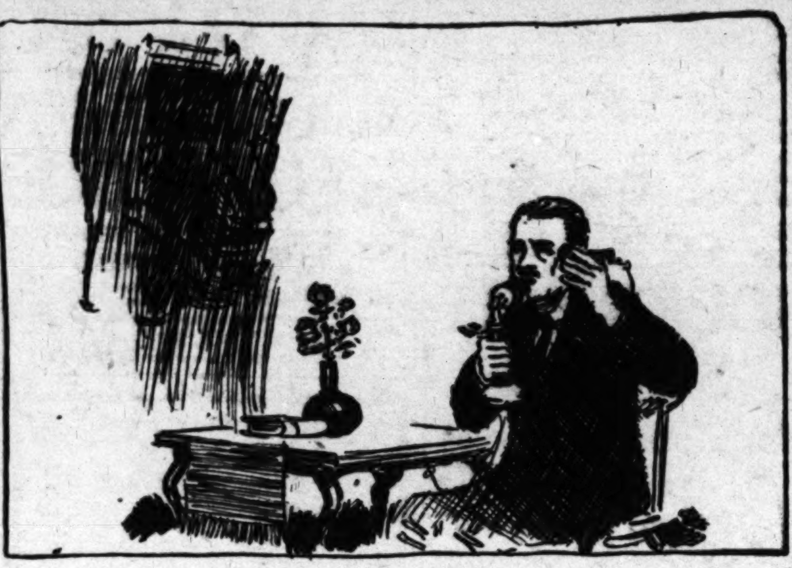
"Isn't that an amusing dinner dish? But Warren's on a diet—and I was afraid the goose we're having would be too rich for him. Now do tell us about the accident," she rattled on. "Just how did it happen?"

Mrs. Milner was launched into a detailed account of the rear-end collision when the over-browned roast was brought in.

As Warren carved, Helen tried desperately to catch his eye. He must bear out her lie about the diet! She coughed, wriggled and tried vainly to reach his foot under the table.

"The breast, Mrs. Milner?" serving her generously. "And you, Milner?"

Both guests and Helen served, he proceeded bountifully to help himself.



"Dear, you know you shouldn't eat that—it's much too rich for you."

"Now that don't go! Think I'll pass this up, just to bolster—"

"Why, Mrs. Milner, you haven't a napkin!" interrupted Helen with nervous haste. "Annie is so careless about setting the table."

Hurriedly replacing the monogrammed napkins and the salted almonds she had thriftily removed, she managed to give Warren a vigorous nudge.

To her furious dismay he threw back his head and laughed uproariously.

"Ha, ha, Kitten, the joke's on you! It's too good not to tell."

Then, calmly ignoring her blazing glance, he turned to Mrs. Milner.

"We thought you weren't coming," with a chuckle. "So Helen swiped all the frills off the table to save for another blow-out tomorrow. I put up a howl when she held out the goose—but she switched me off to bacon and eggs."

"Don't you mind, Mrs. Curtis," consoled Mr. Milner as Helen crimsoned to the verge of tears. "Don't let him tease you. I think economy's a mighty fine thing. If more women were like you there'd be fewer cases of bankruptcy."

Helen's gratitude for Mr. Milner's kindly tact did not lessen her flaming resentment at Warren. That he should deliberately make a joke of her embarrassment!

She could only mince over her food. The lump in her throat made swallowing impossible. Fortunately, the conversation drifted back to the accident. And the Milners, rehearsing every detail, did not notice her constraint.

After dinner Helen brought out a precious bottle of cordial. It was one of the times when a stimulant was needed—anything that would divert attention from her still poignant self-consciousness.

Mrs. Milner, still unstrung from their ordeal, made an early move for departure. It was not quite ten when she suggested phoning for a taxi.

"I don't want to go back in that subway," with a shudder. "I'll never feel safe in it again."

When a little later the taxi was announced Warren saw their guests to the elevator, Helen having said goodnight in the hall.

Swiftly taking refuge in her own room, she closed the door. She heard Warren come back through the hall and into the library, but she did not join him, as always, to talk over the evening. Instead, she slipped out of her gown and into a kimono.

She was sitting before her dressing table slowly brushing her hair, and staring at her still flushed face, when Warren opened the door.

"Sulking, eh?"

She met his eyes in the mirror, her own burning with indignation.

"Sore at me for showing you up? The only thing that saved that situation was telling the truth and making a joke out of it." Then with a snort, "A bacon and egg diet! Did you think they'd fall for a spavined, knock-kneed lie like that?"

"They might have," still gazing hostilely into the mirror, "if you hadn't—"

"Huh, I saw her lamp that platter. And the way you hopped around changing the napkins gave the whole show away. Next time don't be in such a blamed hurry to snatch everything off the table. And if you can't make your lies more plausible—try telling the truth for a change."

Yeats on Mme. Blavatsky.

A large part of the last installment of William Butler Yeats's "Four Years" in the August Dial is devoted to Mme. Blavatsky, the famous theosophist. On his first visit to her home Yeats was startled by a cuckoo hooting at him from a clock, although the clock was run down, and the weights off. William Ernest Henley said to Yeats, "Of course she gets up fraudulent miracles, but a person of genius has to do something; Sarah Bernhardt sleeps in her coffin." And Yeats writes:

"Mme. Blavatsky sat nightly before a little table covered with green baize and on this green baize she scribbled constantly with a piece of white chalk. She would scribble symbols, sometimes humorously applied, and sometimes unintelligible figures, but the chalk was intended to mark down her score when she played patience."

"On one occasion Mme. Blavatsky seemed to bundle herself up, becoming all primeval peasant, and began complaining of her ailments, more especially of her bad leg. But of late her master—her 'old Jew,' her 'Ahasuerus'—cured it, or set it on the way to be cured. 'I was sitting here in my chair,' said she, 'when the master came in and brought something with him which he put over my knee, something warm which inclosed my knee—it was a live dog which he had cut open.'"

Those who go through life merely accumulating money are the real muckrakers. Also, they miss much fun.

BROTHER CHARLEY. Well Charley this is a funny World where a man has neighbors on 1 side of you that you couldent fine no better peopl no wheres and on the other side peopl that they aint nothing to mean and small for them to do and allways trying to make you missable.

A man name Martin and his wife is tho peopl that we got liveing the next door on the left and I and Martins been going down town on the same train to gather and thats the way how we got aquanted so the other night I and him happen to get on the same train comeing home and set in the same seat and I ast him why dident him and his Mrs. come over some night and play cards and he says he dident need nothing to put him to sleep and I guess he ment I would probily fill him up with beer but beffore we got home he promused to bring the Mrs. and come over and last night was the night they come. Well Charley you ought to see this here Mrs. Martin. She aint nothing but a girl you might say and pretty as a pitcher and dresses as good is a course girl and you could set down and read the evening paper with out no electrick light if she was in the rm. with her dimonds.

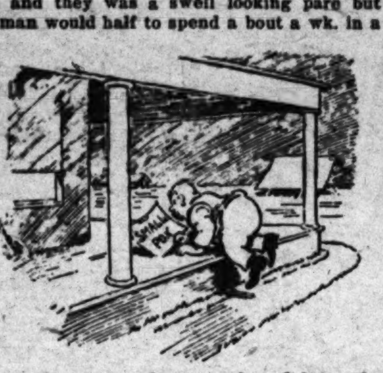
She took quiet a shine to Grace right a way and ast her did she sew her own close or where did she get them and Grace says no in deed she hadent had no time to sew her own close sence 3 yrs. a go when little Ed was born and Mrs. Martin says she thot may be the close was made beffore that and the reason she thot Grace must of made them was on acct. of she never seen nothing like them in the stores wile she was shoping. So of corse Grace was tickeled to deth like all the wommen when you swell them up a bout there close and her and Mrs. Martin got a long fine but Mrs. Martin dont play cinch so we set down and played rummy and Martin insist it we should play for $.01 a pt. to make it intrusting so we played a wile and I loose $1.50 and Grace loose $.80 but it was worth the money the fun we had.

So after we was threw plain cards and we was seting a round drinking a bottle of home brew and all of a sudden they was a crash on the back porch and I and Martin run out there and a cat had knocked the garbidge pale over and I called Grace to see whos cat was it and she says it was Hamiltons cat and the peopl that lives the next door to us on the other side that the Martins lives on. And Grace says the same cat had been doing it right a long because all most evry A.M. she found the pale laying on the porch so I says why dont they feed the cat at home and she wouldn't half to go prolling a round the neighbors hood to get some thing to eat and then Martin says may be the Hamiltons was sore at us and starved there cat on the purpose so as she would come over and undisterb us evry night and he ast me if Id gave Hamilton any reason to get sore at me that would make him pull off a trick like that.

So I says well may be Hamilton was sore at me but he dident have no more reason to be sore at me then me to be sore at him because it was a horse a peace so Martin ast me to tell him a bout it so I told him that we had gave a party 1 night and hadent ast the Hamiltons on acct. of them not calling on Grace after she had payed them a call when we 1st movved out here so Hamilton and his wife got sore on acct. of us not asking them to our party and 1 of the boys that come to the party got to many drinks under his belt and done the foxy trot out on the side walk and Hamilton sent for the night watch man and had me arested for disterbing the piece and so a little wile latter to get back at him I fixed it up with the sherrifs ofice to send 1 of the deputys out to Hamiltons house 1 p.m. when Mrs. Hamilton was giveing a party and plain action bridge whist for money and the deputy told Mrs. Hamilton she was arested for runing a gambleing house and of corse nothing come of it accept that they was a peace in the papers a bout it and I onily done it to get even.

So Martin says probily Hamilton suspect it me of bean the 1 that sent the deputy out there and was trying to make things missable for me by starveing there cat so as she would yowel a round our house all night and Martin says if he was me he would lern Hamilton a lesson and I says how and he says for me to think up some trick to play on him so he would quitt monking with me. So Im going to try and think up some thing and I would shoot his cat onily it aint the cats falt that there starveing her to deth and a cats got to eat the same is a human bean.

Well Charley I wisht you and Mary could get a look at Mrs. Martin when shes dolled up for the evening and shes pretter than Mary Pickford or any of them stage beatys and last night she had on a dress that you kept thinking may be it would fall off because you couldent see what was keeping it on but it must of been attacked on some wheres with stables or some thing and her arms and neck and soldiers was bear and all spred over with this here tacklum powder and evry time she come clost to you you thot you was in a Green house or to a funeral or some wheres. Martin was all dood it up to and they was a swell looking pare but a man would half to spend a bout a wk. in a barber shop beffore he would look good enough to run a round with her.



I snuck over on there porch and hung the sign up.

Well Charley I wisht it would warm up a little and Im burning pretty near a ton of cole a wk. and still Grace comeplanes a bout how cold the house is but I guess she would comeplane of the cold if we was liveing down to the South Pole and if the house was relay cold last night like Grace says why dident Mrs. Martin make some remmark a bout it because if any body was cold she ought to been with out no more than a batheing sute on you might say.

Rgds. to Mary and take care of your self.

Your Bro.

Allison, Ill. Feb. 12.

Brother Charley. Well Charley I guess this here Hamilton will keep his cat to home and mine his own busness beffore I and him is threw with each other. I found out today from Grace that Mrs. Hamilton is going to give a party the day after tommorow night the 14 and the way I found out a bout it was the little irish girl that comes and sets in the house with the babys wile wear out nights found it out from Hamiltons higher girl and thats how I come to find out a bout it.

Grace was telling me a bout it at breakfast this A.M. and wile she was telling me a bout it a idear come to me because she says it was going to be a valentine party because the 14 is valentine day so I thot all of a sudden a bout sending this here Hamilton a valentine not 1 of these pretty ones that folds up with flowers on them but a comical 1 only it would be so comical it would make him sore and he wouldent get no laugh out of it. So I set down besides Martin on the train going down town and I told him a bout me going to send Hamilton a valentine and he says it was a grate idear only you should ought to go stronger then that and pull off some thing else on him a long with it and I says what could I pull and he brot up a bout the party the Hamiltons is going to have and ast me couldent I get a hold of 1 of these sines the helth bord hangs up on a house when the residence has got some decease and got to be quarnteed and he says if I could get a hold of 1 of them sines and hang it under the electrick light on Hamiltons porch the night of the party the guests would all of them see it and be scared to go in the house and turn a round and go home and Hamilton and his wife would set there all evening wondering why dident there frends come to the party.

Well Charley I seen right a way that was better than sending him a valentine but Im going to send him a valentine to and I got 1 down town today and going to male it to him tomorrow and its some valentine Charley a pitcher of a big hog drawed on it and then theys some pottery under the pitcher that says.

They ought to keep you in a pen
Not let you be with other men
Your not a man but just a big Dissgusting stupid greasy pig.

I guess that will give him some thing to think a bout hey Charley but I was going to tell you a bout the sine I got a hold of and it says SMALL POX in big letters on it and I'm going to sneek over there the night of the party as soon is it gets dark and hang it up right under where they allways got the electrick light on the porch and the guests cant help from seen it when they get ready to ring the door bell and then they will see the sine and beat it home and Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton can have there party all to them self and may be some peopl might think it was a dirty trick but it aint 1-2 as bad is starveing your cat so as she will come over evry night and knock over a mans garbidge pale over. And yowel a round the house.

Well Charley I will write and let you know all a bout the Hamiltons big valentine party hey Charley.

Your Bro.

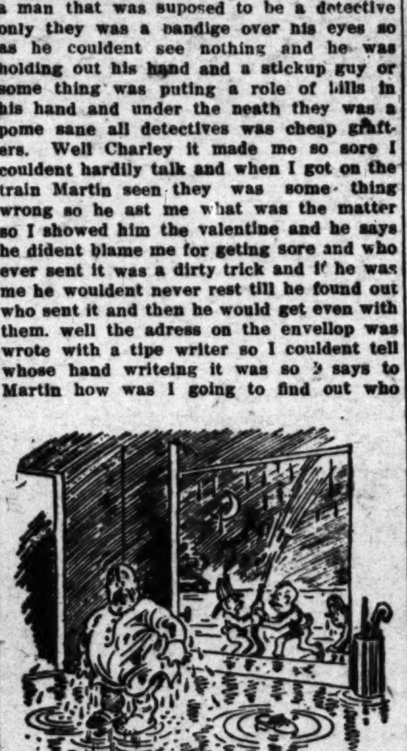
Allison, Ill. Feb. 15.

Dear Charley. Well Charley Grace has went to bed and says she wouldent set up no longer with me because I was to mean and cross and I guess I got a right to feel sore but she dont know nothing a bout it because I dident tell her nothing a bout it.

Well Charley I told you a bout me sending Hamilton that valentine and I just ment it in fun and what do you think he done Charley but he must of did it beffore he ever got my valentine because I sent it to him Wed. A.M. and when I stoped in at the P. O. Wed. on the way to the train to go in town they was a letter there for me only it wasent no letter but a valentine 1 of the dirtest you ever seen Charley a pitcher of a man that was suposed to be a detective only they was a bandige over his eyes so as he couldent see nothing and he was holding out his hand and a stickup guy or some thing was puting a role of bills in his hand and under the neath they was a pome sane all detectives was cheap grafters. Well Charley it made me so sore I couldent hardily talk and when I got on the train Martin seen they was some thing wrong so he ast me what was the matter so I showed him the valentine and he says he dident blame me for geting sore and who ever sent it was a dirty trick and if he was me he wouldent never rest till he found out who sent it and then he would get even with them. well the adress on the envellop was wrote with a tipe writer so I couldent tell whose hand writeing it was so I says to Martin how was I going to find out who sent it and he says I thot you was a detective but I dont know no body mean enough to pull off a stunt like that and he says I bet it was your friend Hamilton and as soon is he menshoned Hamiltons name of corse I knowed it must of been him.



The hole lore floor of the house was under water pretty near and I was a reck.

Well Charley what do you think of a man that will pull off a dirty trick like that and he aint man enough to come out and say some thing to my face and I told Martin I says I would go to Hamiltons house on my way home that night and call him out on the porch and bust his jajw for him out on the porch and bust his jaw for get in to all the papers and I would get in bad and besides that would spoil my idear a bout hanging the small pox sine on Hamiltons door because if I took a punch at Hamilton he would probily half to call in the Dr. and go to bed and they wouldent be no party. So I decide it to try and hold on to my temper and that night when I sene the Hamiltons was eating there supper I snuck over on there porch and hung the sine up and then I came home and ett supper and set where I could look over on there porch and what do you think Charley he was to cheap to light up the electrick light on the porch and it was as dark is pitch but he dident never light the light all evening but just left the porch dark and of corse the peopl that come to the party couldent see no sine or nothing else on the porch so they went in the house like they was nothing wrong and I could hear them singing and enjoin them self till after midnight. What do you think of a guy Charley thats so cheap he wont light up his lights but just as soon leave his frends stumble in the dark and brake there neck.

Well Charley I finely went to bed when I seen they wasent nothing comeing off and as soon is I got up yest. A.M. I looked over there and some body had tooken the sine down all ready. Well I guess Grace must think Im sick or something the way I been acting yest. and today because Im still so sore yet that I cant hardily talk to no body and if it wasent like picking on a baby I would go over to Hamiltons house right now and bust his big nose for him.

I dont half to tell you Charley that I dident never take a nickle that wasent comeing to me and the only thing I ever got from stick up men was abuse and thats because I been after them all my life and if it wasent for me theyd brake in to the mayors house wile he was eating his lunch and steal his lunch and steal the cream off of his coffee but they aint been 1-2 the stick ups and burglerys sence I been over looking that end of it and now this swell head pup trys to call me a thief and a grafter but you can bet your last shirt that he will hear from me beffore Im threw with him the cheap bum.

Well Charley they should ought to be a law against sending these here valentines and may be it might be all O. K. to send them pretty valentines with the flowers on them to the wommen but they should ought to bar these here comical ones and there a bout as comical is a hanging over to the county jail and it might be all right to send them for a joke but not try and inselt some body and call them a crook. Hes so crook it him self that you couldent pull corks with him hey Charley.

Your Bro. F. A. GROSS..

Allison. Ill. March 1.

Bro. Charley. Well Charley I wisht you could of been along with us last night you and Mary the both of you but I dont know if Mary would of liked to went a long or not because we was over to the Martins and when your in the same house with a lady that dresses like Mrs. Martin a womman must feel pretty slopy a long the side of them close Mrs. Martin wares and of corse I aint sane that Mary cant look good when she wants to but this here Mrs. Martin has got them all beat when it comes to close but at that shes all ways talking a bout she wisht she could get a hold of some close like Grace wares and only last night she was after Grace to leave her borry 1 of her dresses and ware it to a mask raid.

Well Charley Martin give us some cock tales that he made them up him self and if a man drunk 3 of them you would start down the dranege cannel in a finger bold but he give us 2 of them and a few bottles of beer and beffore the evening was over Mrs. Martin was lerning Grace the ballad dance and you ought to see Mrs. Martin dance Charley and its better than any thing I ever seen down to the columbia but if Grace had to make a liveing ballad danceing she would starv her self to deth for lack of nothing to eat and they wasent nothing in Martins house that she dident run in to it and I bet if the chairs and tables could talk they would of hollered murder.

Well we didnt play no cards but we fooled a round and done this in that and they turned on the phonegraf and I and Mrs. Martin danced to gather and I thot I had a arm full of flowers and then we set down and talked and Martin ast me hadent I did nothing to Hamilton for sending me that valentine and I says no I hadent because I and Grace had talked it over to gather and Id told her all a bout it and I and her had made it up in our mind to not do nothing more about it but just leave the Hamiltons a lone and act like they wasent no such peopl and then Mr. and Mrs. Martin both says they thot we was suckers to leave Hamilton get off so easy when hed inselted I and Grace so I says well I cant think of nothing to do only go over there and bust him in the jaw and Martin says well may be he could think up some thing himself and if he could think up a good 1 he would tell me because he was my frend prosecuting attorneys, its own arresting officers, etc., and can do as it likes, in all cases. When the Medical Board was given these officers it was not to hound the chiropractor, but to suppress the traffic in opiums and drugs, and to arrest abortionists. The State Legislature never intended that a chiropractor should pay taxes on an operating table, and then give the medical board authority to break into the chiropractor's office, to use this tax money to prosecute the taxpayer, and to confiscate his table on which he makes his living. The State Medical Board has the State funds to campaign with, in California, while in all the other States medical societies must pay from their private funds for actions against drugless physicians, etc.

"If the people of this State knew the activities of the State Medical Board (and they will know it before next election) they would make short work of the prosecution of chiropractors."

A few weeks ago I published, in the Care of the Body, a letter from the secretary of the State Board of Health, stating that it is not that body, but the State Board of Medical Examiners, that is doing these things.

However, so far as the public is concerned, this is merely a difference of tweedledum and tweedledee.

Tyranny of Trifles.

FOLLOWING is from the Kansas City Star:

Doubtless most of the people in the world have to spend so much time with the details of living that they rarely get a birdseye view of life, high enough out of the trees to see what the forest is like. Earning, eating, sleeping, rearing children, take up so much of a lifetime. Perhaps at long intervals, at a church, a theater, in reading a book, or in watching the sun retreat and the stars come on watch—and at a birth and a death—a vague, unsatisfying view of a cosmic meaning will be vouchsafed, perhaps long enough to make the world wonder unhappily what all the truth is. But the mere act of living requires so much energy that human beings can't remain always at concert pitch in their devotional exercises and the white heat of faith lapses often into a mere habitual saying of prayers.

Most of the things that deaden us are inextricably a part of the routine. Yet it may be believed that as men toil up the steep slopes they will find some way of reducing the tedium of the adventure, that the traveler may lift his eyes more and more from the strange path he treads to the wide skies overhead. Perhaps the fruits of labor will in time go more equitably to those who have labored. At any rate it may be that some day there will not be so many who fail to comprehend life as they are living it, missing the sense of it, engulfed in the things that compose it; so inexpert that they cannot leave off their keyboard exercises and catch for the moment the great overtones, the sequence of the music, and the motif.

The Mormons.

THE Mormons were the earliest American pioneers, who made the desert "blossom as the rose," and that in the face of great privations and difficulties. They had been preceded, thousands of years before, by ancient and forgotten southwestern peoples, whose canals, in some cases, they utilized.

Mormons landed in San Francisco, on the Brooklyn, in July, 1846, and in 1851, founded San Bernardino, in Southern California, purchasing twenty-seven square miles of the Lugo ranch, for $77,500, in deferred payments.

When I lived in Arizona, the Mormons, who have many settlements there, were regarded as frugal, industrious and good neighbors. They are mainly of American, English, Scotch or Scandinavian stock.

Col. J. H. McClintock of Phoenix, Ariz., State Historian, sends me an interesting volume, of which he is the author, entitled, "Mormon Settlement in Arizona." It bears evidence of careful and conscientious research. There is a wealth of portraits and other illustrations.

This book is a valuable addition to the history of the Southwest.

The Menace of State Medicine.

IT IS not only outsiders, but also broad-minded men within the ranks, who are protesting against the growing aggression of the political doctors. Thus, at a joint meeting of doctors, dentists and druggists, held in New York, Dr. John J. O'Reilly, introduced by Dr. A. J. Ochsner, a prominent Chi[illegible] denounced the "[illegible]" of State medicine. He said:

"Don't let the safeguarding of the public health be taken out of your hands and put into the power of machine politics!

"Lay aside your robes of professional dignity, if necessary, and fight it to the last ditch!

"Go to the people with the issue — tell them the truth. The family doctor has more power than the political boss—if he will use it."

Stimulants and Narcotics.

MORE liquor is going into China, as the use of opium falls off.

In America, more drugs are being consumed as the use of alcohol decreases.

All of which shows that, in the unnatural life we lead, human beings will use some stimulants and narcotics.

The best thing to do is to see that they get those that are least harmful, such as light wines and beers.

Military Hospitals.

CONSIDERING the revolting disclosures that continue to come before the U. S. Senate committee, as to conditions in hospitals, where Army veterans are being mistreated, I again ask why a small amount—say only 1 per cent—of the millions expended on "regular" treatment, should not be allotted to the establishment of an inexpensive resort, where these unfortunates may be well and kindly treated by natural methods—diet, fresh air, exercise, hydrotheraphy, etc.—by which means thousands are continually restored to health, who had been given up as hopeless by "medical science?"

During the Senate investigation Col.

There are numerous Arch Supporters put on the market to correct flat feet that are made over a form, and in some cases answer the purpose. There is no ready-made Arch Support manufactured in this way that will give the desired results in more than 10 per cent of the cases. The reason is that there are different ligaments in the foot that may be affected and thus cause pain in the various joints. Our Arch Supports are made by perfect measurements, and are guaranteed to relieve every case.

WESTERN ORTHOPEDIC APPLIANCE CO., 941 West Seventh Street, Los Angeles, California.

and dont like to see a man get the worst of it and thats the kind of a frend to have hey Charley. Martins entirely diffrent from a big stiff which is to cheap to light up the lights in his house when hes giveing a party.

Well Charley I wisht you and Mary could see the Martins and I bet they aint no body living near you thats as good Co. as them and I and Grace is pretty lucky to have them liveing the next door to us only we dont no more than brake even on neighbors with the Hamiltons on the other side.

Well I guess I aint told you a bout I and Grace is going to give a party and I thot we was all threw with partys for a wile but Grace says that Mrs. Martin told her we should ought to give a hole lot of partys on acct. of us bean new peopl in town and if we wanted to stand in good we should ought to enter tane a good eel so wear going to give a party next Fri. night only it wont be none of these here stew partys or no ruff stuff but evry thing the best and up to the date and Mrs. Martin has gave Grace a lot of tips a bout how should a party be ran and I guess the peopl will think wear as good is the Hamiltons or any of them swell heads before wear threw but of corse we aint going to ast the Hamiltons because I wouldent have them in the house.

This here partys going to cost us some money but its like Mrs. Martin told Grace if you want to live right you got to pay for it and they cant no cheap skates get by with the right peopl in a place like this here. Grace is going to serve them with sand wiches and ice cream and coffee and cake only not no cheap home made ice cream but get it from the drug store and they will be 16 of us all to gather the Martins and the Curtis and Carrys and some other nice peopl we met a round here and you might say its the cream of Allison society and of corse we got to play auction bridge whist on acct. of that bean the swell game a round here tho it aint near the game like cinch is.

Well Charley I wisht you and Mary could be here for the party even if it would leave 1 couple out of the card game because with you here they would be 18 of us including ? and Grace but any way take care of your self and regards to Mary.

Your Brother,

F. A. GROSS.

Allison. Ill. March 14.

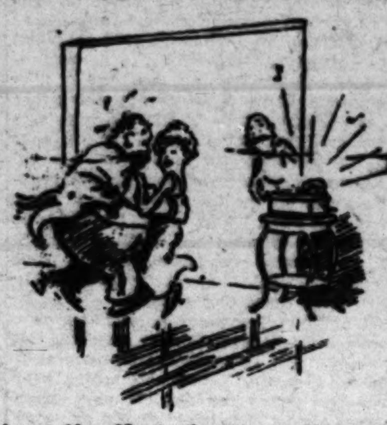
Brother Charley. Well Charley I guess I would be better off if I was a cheap skate like some peopl and if I was a cheap skate they wouldent of never nothing came off like last night. Well Charley I been so sore sense it come off that I was a bout to pull my gun on some body with out naming no names but a man can be drove so far Charley and not no farther and if it wasent for what would happen to Grace ? would shoot this here Hamilton full of led and take my medison only I dont beleive theys a jury in the world that would convict me when I told them what he pulled off.

Well Charley theys a big diffrunts between a joke and not a joke and if Hamilton thinks that what he done was funny I feel sorry for him but he dident do it because he dont know how to do nothing but cause he dont know ho wto do nothing but play mean rotten tricks like sending me that valentine.

Grace wont never give no more partys Charley and I dont never want to hear the word party so dont never tell me a bout no party Charley.

Well Charley we was seting in the parlor I and Grace and waiting for Mr. and Mrs. Martin and the rest of our guests to come and it was geting kind of late and Grace kept sane a bout how late it was geting and all of a sudden the tellephone rung and I went and ansered the bell and ast who was it and it was Mrs. Martin and she says to excuse her for calling up but she couldent wait no longer to find out weather she couldent do some thing for us and find out who was it and I ast her what she ment who was it and she says she ment who was it the krape was hanging on the front door for and ? says they wasent no krape on the front door and she says Id better go and look and I went out there and sure enough they was krape on the door like they was some body dead. Well Charley come to find out the Curtis and the Carrys and 2 or 3 other peopl was comeing to the party to gather and just beffore they start it to ring the door bell they noticed this here krape on the door and a couple of the wommen pretty near fainted a way and finley Curtis says lets ring the bell and find out whats happened but Carry says no he dident feel like comeing in to a house where they was krape on the door when he was all drest up gay for a party so finely they decide it to go over and ast the Martins if they knowed any thing a bout it on acct. of them liveing next door

Mrs. Martin screamed when they told her a bout it and then her and Martin and the rest of them come back and seen the krape again and Mrs. Martin was pretty near haveing histerics so Martin took her home and Martin says to the other peopl that it looked like some think awfull had of happened and says evry body had better go home and after a wile when Mrs. Martin got back her nerve she would ring us up and find out what could of happened and then she would call the rest of them up and tell them a bout it. Well it wasent till pretty near 10 a clock that she got her nerve up and called up on the phone and then of corse we explained that it was 1 of Hamiltons dirty tricks and Grace wanted Mrs. Martin to come over and have the party and Grace would call up the rest of them peopl and tell them a bout it and we could have the party any way and better have it late than never but Mrs. Martin says her party close was all off and hung up and it would be 2 hrs. beffore she could get drest again so she was sorry that it had happened but they wasent nothing she could do accept tell me that if she was me and any body had of put some thing like that over on her she would of shot them full of holes so Grace called up the Curtis and the Carrys and told them about the miss take but some of them was like Mrs. Martin with there party close off of them and hung up all ready and they all says they was so worred a bout seen the krape that they couldent come now even if they was drest and they says theyd been seting up to hear from Mrs. Martin a bout what had happened and they wouldent of never been able to sleep if something had of relay happened but now they was so releived that they thot they would try and go to sleep and forget it and so 4th.



I and Mrs. Martin danced together and I thought I had a arm full of flowers.

Well Charley that was all right and nice of them to feel so sorry for us but what a bout the refreshments and the 3 qts. of ice cream from the drug store and it was there best stuff 80 cts. a qt. and how a bout the 2 new decks of cards we had boughten for the party and how a bout I and Grace going to all that trubble and dressing up swell and so 4th. Well Charley Mrs.. Martin says we should ought to posepone the party and have it some other night but Grace says she was threw with partys and I says the next 1 that says some thing to me a bout a party would get a crack in the jaw..

Thats what a man gets for not bean no cheap skate Charley and if I had of been a cheap skate and left the light off on the front porch like Hamilton done the cheap stiff the 1st. peopl that got there wouldent of saw the krape and would of rang the door bell and then ether I or Grace would of went to the door and they wouldent of been no trubble.

Well Charley Im trying my best to hold on to my temper so as I wont go over to Hamiltons house and shoot him up but as Grace says it probily wasent Mrs. Hamiltons falt but just Hamilton him self and I wouldent have no right to make a widdow out of her just because her husband aint no good and a speshuly when I dont know weather hes going to leave his wife enough to live on.

But I guess you know me well enough to know that he aint going to get by with out no come back and I will pull off some thing on him that will make him wisht he had treated I and Grace with respect and I feel like going right over to there house and hanging the krape on there own door and see how they like it only Grace says whats the use of giveing them back there krape because ? and her cant live for ever and it dont do no harm keeping some a round the house.

Well Charley wait till I get back at him and regards to Mary.

Your Bro.   F. A. GROSS.

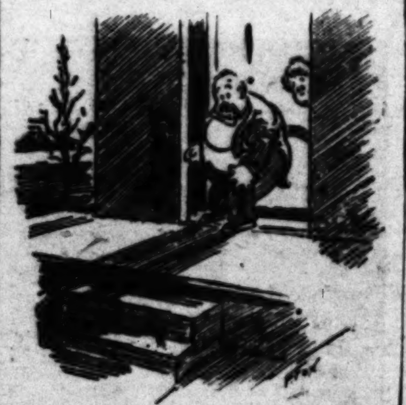
Allison, Ill. March 20.

Dear Brother Charley. Well Charley this will be a surprise to you after what I been telling you right a long and it wont supprise me only I had a suspect it all the wile that this here Martin was wrong. He dident never act right some way so finding out a bout him dident supprise me like it would of if I hadent of suspect it him all the wile.

Well Charley it wasent Hamilton that was pulling all the dirty work like sending me that valentine and hanging krape on my door and so 4th. but it was Martin all the time and I and Hamilton is good friends now and he says he dident never mean no harm to me and says both him and Mrs. Hamilton and there higher girl thot the cat was geting enough to eat. And he says he wouldent never think of mixxing up in no brall with his neighbors so I and him feels the same way to gather a bout it and they wont be no more trubble between us.

Well Charley you wont hardily believe a man could live as mean and nasty is this here Martin trying to make trubble between neighbors and I will tell you the reason why he done it Charley and you will see what kind of a bum he is and no wonder I never relay liked him. In the 1st. place he was sore at Hamiltons because Mrs. Hamilton hadent payed no call on Mrs. Martin and Hamilton says that him and his wife seen right a way that Martin wasent no good and thats why Mrs. Hamilton dident call on Mrs. Martin because she dident want to get mixxed up with them and the Hamiltons is high society here so Martin got sore because him and his wife couldent horn in to the 4 hundred club. So he used me for a Tool you might say and kept edgeing me on by sane that it was Hamilton that was doing all them things to me and all the wile he was doing them him self so I would think it was Hamilton and keep pestering him like I done. Grace says at 1st. that may be Martin was onily doing it for a joke but Hamiltons higher girl and Martins higher girl is pals and Martins higher girl told Hamiltons higher girl that Martin was sore at Hamiltons and that why he done it. Well Charley between I and you they was an other reason that Grace or Hamilton dont know nothing about it and I will tell you a bout it onily dont say nothing even to Mary. This here Martin was sore at me Charley on acct. of the way his wife looked at me and thot may be ? was trying to steal his wife and you know Charley that I aint in that kind of busness but I cant help it if a womman looks at me onct in a wile and I noticed Mrs. Martin myself so of corse her husband could see it to and they couldent no body help from not noticeing it unlest they was blind. But what could I do a bout it nothing.

Well Charley it all come out last night and we had some big time and I dont never want an other time like it only Im glad that I and Hamilton under stands each other and Hamilton says he will see that the town pays for what ever dammige was did a round my house. Martin was to yellow to stay home wile he was pulling off his little trick and nether him or his wifes been home sence yest. beffore supper and the house is shut up but he needent be scarred Im going to do nothing to him not now any way because Hamilton says for me to lay lowe and pertend like I dident know the truth and if Martin tries some thing more Hamilton will go in with me and we will run him out of town and an other reason is acct. of Im sorry for Mrs. Martin and to bad shes got to be tide up to a man like he and you couldent hardily blame her for looking at an other man onct in a wile.



Sure enough they was crape on the door.

Well Charley I aint got much time so I will hurry up and tell you what come off, I and Grace went to bed early last night and we wasent hardily no more than in bed when we heard the fire whistle blown and all of a sudden we herd the fire enjine and hose cart out in front of the house and then the front door bell ringing like they was trying to wake up the town and ? thot may be the house was on fire so I run down in my night gown and opened up the door and pretty near got drownded. Well Charley the hose was turned right on me and me with out nothing on only my night gown and they give it to me full forse all over. Well I tride to holler at them to quit but a man cant holler very good with the hose turned in to your mouth and I guess it would of been all off with me only for Hamilton comeing.

He grabed the 2 guys that was holding the nozzle and busted 1 of them and told them if they dident shut off the water insolently he would have them all in jail and they seen who he was and shut it off. Well Charley the hole lore flr. of the house was under water pretty near and I was a reck. But I had sense enough left to send Grace up stares beffore ? done any thing else. When she was out of the way Hamilton come in and brung the fire men a long with him and then he ast them what did it mean and at 1st. they says it must of been a falts allarm but he says dont try any monky busness with me and the best thing you can do is tell the truth and then he told them right out what he suspect it and they owned up to it and told us how Martin had got them to do it and they thot it was just a joke between frends or they wouldent of had nothing to do with it.

Well Charley what do you think of that. Martin give them a peace of money and got a few drinks under there belt and then told them to pull this off and says it was just a joke and that I and him was frends. A fine frend hey Charley.

Well Hamilton give them a awfull balling and then told them to beet it and if they ever done any thing like that again he would get them and hes 1 of the bord that runs the town so you can bet they payed a tension to what he says.

Then Hamilton come in and told me to go up stares and get some dry close on because he wanted to talk to me so I went up and finished my bath with a towl and put on a pare of pants and a shirt and come down and I and Hamilton had a good long talk.

Well Hamilton says that him and his wife had knew a bout what Martin was puting over no me for sevrul days but they thot it wasent there busness to but in unlest they was some real dammige done and when Hamilton seen the fire dept. out in the front of my house he thot it was a bout time to enter fear and I thanked him and we talked it all over and had a drink to gather and shook hands and he went home onily he told me beffore he went to not try and do nothing untill I could get Martin good and to wait for Martin to make the next move.

Well Charley it looks like I and Grace would be in right with the Hamiltons and the rest of the 4 hundred club and may be Martin will know enough to not try nothing more but if he does I and Hamilton will have him drove out of town onily a man cant help from feeling sorry for Mrs. Martin and ? wont do nothing to injur her because a womman cant be blamed for looking at an other man onct in a wile.

Well Charley when Martin comes back I guess he will be supprised to find I and Grace hobbling a round with the Hamiltons and the other high monky monks hey Charley.

The Lily Pond.

Beneath the fern's frond,
Sleeps the dark pond
In its mossy frame;
Where lily pads lie,
The dragon fly
Is a jeweled flame.

The fairy ships swing
Within the ring
Of its waveless deep,
With lily white sails
Ruffled by gales
That their perfumes steep.

This enchanted place
Mirrors the face
Of the elfin queen,
When the moon at night
Is a crescent bright
O'er the pond's dark sheen.

Here a little path,
The aftermath
Of the deer's sharp hoof,
Comes awinding through—
And great oaks grew
A sheltering roof.

Breathing and Singing.

FOLLOWING is from S. Wesley Martin:

"In Physical Culture Magazine for August, abdominal breathing is advocated, for singing, by H. A. Rutschow, D. C. He ought to know better

"In the 'Art of Singing,' by Alberto Randegger (considered the greatest authority on singing,) written more than forty years ago, it is stated authoritatively that abdominal breathing is wrong and is harmful for women. Alberto Randegger was president of the Royal College of Music, and was knighted by Queen Victoria, for his services to the art of music.

"If the body is properly trained, and held in the correct position, abdominal breathing is impossible. Abdominal breathing is only possible when the abdominal muscles are allowed to sag. It is through ignorance of this fact that the cure of asthma was not discovered by vocal teachers, years ago.

"Advanced vocal teachers are beginning to see the necessity of developing the body, but they have not yet found out the immense importance of training properly the lower abdominal muscles, in order to enable them to hold up the diaphragm. If ever they discover this, they will probably find more important work in curing asthma and preventing tuberculosis, and other ailments than in training people to sing.

"If only people knew how to breathe, we should all have the health and freedom from disease of wild animals, instead of being virtually ham-strung."

Latest Radium Discovery

Many discoveries have been made with RADIUM, but the last eclipse them all except the discovery of RADIUM Sulphate as a cure for the lungs. This last one is THE REJUVENATOR, an aluminum apparatus filled with RADIUM Sulphate which when applied cleans out all diseases from and including the colon down to the knees and rejuvenates the tired, worn, feeble, middle aged and elderly people of both sexes, making them feel twenty years younger. With those people who must labor while standing and walking all day, its influence is wonderful. After applying it one hour each day for a week, they prefer to stand in a street car to riding home seated on a bench.

It is absolutely safe to use, because there is no operation connected with its use like that discovered by Mme. Curie and to prove that it is a better RADIUM than Mme. Curie's discovery, we invite any and all those affected in the parts already named to use one of them free of charge for a limited time and we will send a free booklet to any address. Write us.

The VALLEY FLOOR.

A FRIEND once said to me: "What's the use of my going to the Yosemite! I can't climb, and I don't like to ride horseback."

"Well," I replied, "you can enjoy yourself in the Yosemite without either climbing or riding horseback. You should be able to get an immense amount of pleasure out of what may be found on the valley floor, or seen from there without climbing a bit. There are the canyon walls, with their infinite variety of feature and color, which are just about as much his who does not climb as his who does. You can see Yosemite Falls from the hotel, even, and you can drive to Bridal Veil Fall, to Mirror Lake, to the Happy Isles, and many other points about the valley floor. No, because you cannot climb, and do not care to ride horseback, is no reason why you should stay away from the Yosemite."

I may have overdrawn it a little bit; perhaps the walls and what belongs to them are not quite as much his who does not climb as they are his who does, but certainly the floor is—indeed, it is apt to be much more so, because of closer and more frequent communion.

When in the Yosemite, the mountains are ever drawing me upward. So for a long time all that I knew about the valley floor was gained during hnatches of time which were grudgingly spared from tramping the high places. I thought there was not very much to see or learn about on the floor that was worth while, and that what there was I could sort of absorb as I raced across it to and from the trails which led above.

The Floor of Yosemite is a Place of Wonderful Interest.

BUT one time I made the acquaintance of a lady who was in the habit of spending several weeks in the valley every year or two, and to whom a trip to the rim was so tiring that often she would not get to the top during her entire stay. Yet I found she was getting as much enjoyment out of the region as I was. I found out, too, that below the valley walls there was a world for investigation which I was almost entirely missing; for she told me of things which I never knew existed there—not one or two only, but literally scores of them. And what she knew about the birds, trees, and flowers of the region made my knowledge of them seem very meager.

So I reformed, took more time from the high places, and learned something about the valley floor. Its geography I already knew pretty well, from tramping across it, and from looking down upon it from the trails.

The bottom of Yosemite Valley is "as level as a floor"—with some qualifications, of course. For about six miles it is so level that the Merced River meanders from side to side, forgetting that it is a mountain stream, which it only happens to remember after it has passed the western portal. The origin of the level floor was due to a moraine at the lower end, which served as a dam, and behind which fine rock-waste and silt lodged, until the basin was entirely filled with the material. For many years the plant creation has been doing its part in making the top soil rich and fruitful by adding organic waste.

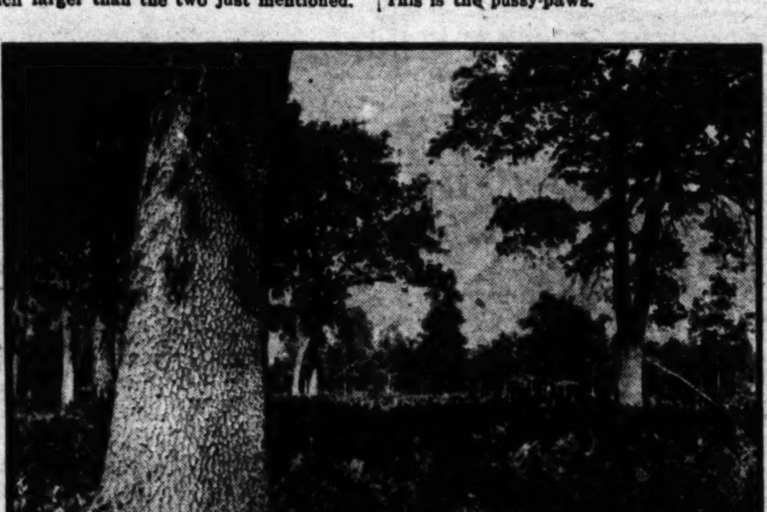
The floor is a checkerboard of forest patches and little meadows, with a few small clearings scattred about, which the early settlers made. Highways run up and down on both sides of the river, with interlacing crossroads and connecting bridges. All this can be seen to better advantage from the trails midway on the canyon walls than on the valley floor itself; but frequent travel soon makes one familiar with the roads, paths and local features.

There Are Magnificent Trees on the Valley Floor.

NEARLY every kind of tree which grows commonly in the nearby region may be found on the floor of the valley. The red fir is the only exception that occurs to me now—you must climb the rim to find that. There are only a few sugar pines—three or four, I believe—but they are fine specimens. They are near the river, opposite the Royal Arches. One of them stands so near the stream that a wing-dam has been built to keep the current from undermining it.

Of the yellow pines there are hundreds, some of them patriarchs towering 200 feet, and with a girth of twenty-five! Some of these big fellows are near the road to Mirror Lake, and others are along the path from Curry's Camp to the Power House.

There are plenty of incense cedars and Douglas firs; but no sequoias—the big trees" as they usually are called—except a few thrifty young fellows which have been transplanted to the valley by man. Some of these young sequoias guard Galen Clark's grave, and a couple stand across the road from the Sentinel Hotel. It is not an uncommon impression with persons who have never visited the Yosemite that the big trees are not found native in the valley, and it is somewhat of a surprise to them to learn that the nearest are located about fifteen miles northward, in the Merced and Tuolumne groves situated respectively on the Coulterville and Big Oak Flat roads. The Mariposa Grove, about twenty-five miles south of the valley, and near the Wawona Road, is much larger than the two just mentioned.



In the Fern Gardens of the Yosemite.

Two species of oak are common, the California live-oak and the mountain live-oak. The former is the more plentiful. In the groves scattered over the low ridges out in the valley are found many specimens of this splendid tree from four to five feet in diameter. The mountain oak loves a rougher, rockier habitat.

Along the Merced River, around Mirror Lake, and in the Tenaya Canyon there are to be found the broad-leaved maple, large-flowering dogwood, mountain or Sierra maple, laurel, alder, willow, and a species of the cottonwood—whose white, cottony seeds during the latter part of June cover spots of the valley floor as with a light fall of snow. About the same time, too, you will find the dogwoods a mass of white. On the talus slopes and in the mouths of the side canyons there are various species of brushwood, of all degrees of uprightness from scrubby oaks to trailing thimbleberry vines.

The Flowers Are Protected by Park Regulations.

THE floor of the valley is a wonderful flower garden; not that there is any longer the great profusion of bloom that prevailed a generation ago—according to accounts—for until a few years ago the hand of man was not stayed from plucking anything that his eye caught sight of. But the variety is still there, and may be found, if you only make the circle of your search wide enough. The flowers are now protected by park regulations. During the last two weeks in June, one season when I kept a list, I found over fifty species of what we would commonly call wild-flowers in bloom. A list kept through the whole summer would probably run to three times that number.

One of the very common, as well as showy, flowers in bloom from June to August is the blue penstemon, or azure beardtongue, as it is known to many. I remember seeing, near Camp Lost Arrow, an old, old pine stump that was almost completely circled by a ring of these beautiful, sky-hued penstemons. They found in the humus about the decaying roots an abundance of nurture, and gave in return a circlet of sapphires to beautify the spot!

I remember, too, the shooting-stars which grew along a little ditch out in a pasture near the upper end of the valley, and how nearly I came to being swamped in my efforts to photograph them; and the yellow pond lilies in a swamp near the center of the valley which I could not get to at all.

There Are Snow-Plants on the Rim But Not in the Valley.

I ONCE found some dried-up specimens of the snow plant along the woods west of Camp Lost Arrow. I think they must have been planted there, as their natural habitat in that part of the Sierra is somewhat higher than the floor of Yosemite. They are not uncommon on the uplands around the rim of the valley. And they would probably flourish on the floor itself in certain locations among the open yellow-pine woods.

Among the flowers which are still plentiful, there is one that you cannot help but notice. It has been spared, because singly, or in a bouquet, it is not attractive. Yet where it grows in masses, as it does everywhere on the sandy openings, it is beautiful. This is the pussy-paws.

This reminds me that Tabby, as far as the names of her anatomical parts are concerned, is pretty well represented in the plants of the valley. Besides pussy-paws, just mentioned, there are cat-tails and cats-ears. The former are found in several of the swampy places, while the dainty little calochortus, whose common name is "cats-ears," dwells in the border of the woods along the meadows. One place you may find it is in the strip of timber along the river, near the bridge west of Camp Curry.

Of the wild-flowers of the valley floor blooming in June and early July, I think the azalea holds first place in the good graces of most visitors. With me, however, it is hard-pressed by several others, among which are the alum-root—that beautiful, wine-tinted member of the Saxifrage family — the azure penstemon, the mariposa tulip, the columbine, and the collinsia. It may be said in favor of the azalea, that it not only offers us beautiful flowers and lots of them, but also sweetens them with a delicate perfume. At various places along the road on the south side of the river, between the village and Camp Curry, there are thickets of azalea bushes which in the blooming season are banks of floral loveliness.

Yosemite Falls from the valley floor.

Formerly the mariposas were plentiful. But for many years every day was "open season" for them with the thoughtless tourists who were attracted by their graceful loveliness. They finally became so scarce that to find them one had to search the woods on the talus slopes. Now that wild-flowers are protected in the valley, the mariposas should speedily find their way out on to the valley floor again. For, wherever they have a fair chance, they spread rapidly.

The Fern-Gardens of Yosemite Are Marvelous.

OF FERNS there is no end. There seems to be species for every condition of habitat. They are in the wet, swampy places, on the sides of the dry rock cliffs, in the dripping caves and wall-crannies around the waterfalls, and carpeting the ground in the thick forests and in the open woodlands. It takes a Muir or a Hall to call them by name. But fortunately anyone may admire them and enjoy the grace and beauty with which they invest the spots they have appropriated for their homes, without an introduction to them by name. Muir has written interestingly about them in his "The Yosemite," and the Halls have listed them all in their "A Yosemite Flora"—about twenty-five species for the Yosemite National Park, more than half of which are found within the valley itself.

Next to the luxuriant fern-gardens of the open groves, the fern-draperies about the waterfalls claim my devotion. But to the fern-gardens I give first allegiance. One of the most glorious of these is just off the path which leads from the bridge east of the Sentinel Hotel to the Lower Yosemite Fall. Whenever I have passed that way, I have not been able to resist the temptation to wander off through the ferny jungle. I can still feel the swishing of the gracefully curving fronds as I pushed my way among them!

If you visit the Yosemite during the latter part of June or early in July, you will learn where the wild strawberry patches are. One is between the Sentinel Hotel and Yosemite Falls, among the scattered oaks. There is another on the edge of the orchard north of Camp Curry. And there are still others, which you should have the pleasure of finding for yourself. The berries will be the sweeter, if they are your own discovery.

There are a number of excursions about the valley which require little or no climbing. There is the morning trip to Mirror Lake to see the sunrise—or rather a whole row of sunrises; a visit to the Indian village, and to the little cemetery where Galen incompetent surgery is carried on under the protection of a majority of our American hospitals, with grave danger and detriment to a vast number of patients,' were passed today by the Western Surgical Association, in the closing session of the annual convention. In adopting the resolution, the members appointed a committee to confer with the directors of the Carnegie Institute, with a view of bringing about an investigation of all hospitals in the United States, 'so that the public and professional conscience may be aroused against these abuses.'"

And all this, as I have said, is so altogether and pitifully unnecessary, because, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, these unfortunates might have been restored to health and happiness by simply ceasing to do that which made them sick.

The Army and the Forests.

THE U. S. Army Department has announced that army fliers can no longer protect the forests of the National Reserve, because of lack of funds.

And this, just at a time when fires are most to be dreaded.

The only expense involved is for gasoline.

Millions for destruction, and not a cent for construction—or protection.

Perhaps public-spirited citizens of Southern California might subscribe to pay the United States Army the cost of the gasoline. If this is done, I will chip in $20.

Electricity.

ARTIFICIALLY produced electricity is a stimulant, like whisky. It may sometimes be useful, but the results are not permanent. Electrical appliances make an imposing show in doctors' offices, and enable them to charge more than they could if they merely told their patients to fast, and clean their colons.

Get Nature's electricity from natural deep breathing, produced by exercise in the open air.

Joseph Danziger writes, in Physical Culture:

"When meat was rationed in Germany it was done suddenly. From unlimited quantities the people were reduced to four ounces a week. Soon thereafter the doctors reported their diabetic patients recovering, as though by a heavenly miracle. Throughout Germany the disease was hardly known, in the latter years of the war.

"The explanation is simple. Over-indulgence in meat poisons the liver. One of the many and little understood functions of the liver is to convert sugar into glycogen. If sugar itself is taken up by the blood, it is the duty of the kidneys to filter it out and eject it. When the poisoned liver is no longer able to function properly, and fails to convert sugar into glycogen, the sugar itself gets into the blood and the perfectly normal kidneys reject it. The patient's body, deprived of sugar, sets up a demand, a craving for it. The doctor forbids its use—but continues to poison his patient with a heavier than ever protein diet. Was ever logic more perverted?

"When the blockade deprived German diabetes patients of meat, they could no longer poison their livers. The latter therefore recovered and resumed the manufacture of glycogen out of sugar, the kidneys raised no objection to this substance, and the craving for sugar with all of the other painful symptoms of diabetes vanished. Hence diabetes is not a 'kidney complaint,' but the sign of a diseased liver."

Sugar was also scarce in Germany during the war. Refined cane sugar is harmful and should be avoided.

For Medical Freedom.

FOLLOWING resolutions were unanimously adopted by the American Ostheopathic Association, in convention at Cleveland, O., July, 1921:

"That we do concur in, and without any reservations whatever, indorse the opinion rendered by Chief Justice Clark of the North Carolina Supreme Court, to-wit, that 'this is a free country and that any man has a right to be treated by any system he chooses.'

"And further, with the declaration made by Dr. Benjamin Rush, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, that 'medical liberty is of the same value as religious liberty.'

"And further, that until man has acquired a perfect mastery over disease, we deem it to be highly desirable and imperatively necessary that each system of healing be granted the fullest liberty, under regulatory law, to develop its research, education and practice, in its own way.

"And further, that medical liberty, under regulatory law, the public welfare thereunder, and the right of each citizen to choose his own doctors, are best guaranteed and maintained by separate examining and licensing boards, for each system of healing."

Honey.

SOME who give up harmful sugar, substitute honey. This is a mistake. Honey should not be eaten with food, but may be used, in moderation, to sweeten lemonade, tea or coffee. Dr. Axel Emil Gibson writes:

"Used in connection with starchy or nitrogenous food, honey will give rise to gastric disturbances, directly or indirectly. Its saccharine element starts processes of fermentation in the starchy part of our foodstuff, while its manite acid breaks up the nitrogenous compounds. The gas, which is always present in weak stomachs after mixtures of honey with meals, is an unmistakable indicator of the presence either of fermentation or decomposition, according to the predominating starchy or nitrogenous character of the food."

Queer Questions.

I RECEIVE queer questions from some of my consultants, showing the gross prevailing ignorance regarding diet.

What can you expect, when a great majority of physicians tell them nothing—because they themselves do not know? So, to hide their ignorance, they say "eat what you please," or "eat what seems to agree with you."

A man asked me what he should eat, when he was fasting.

A woman writes to ask whether strawberries, raspberries and cantaloupes are fruit, or vegetables.

Is it any wonder that so many are sick?

• • •

Garbage Fed Hogs.

CONTRACTORS are not to be permitted to feed garbage to hogs, in or near Los Angeles, because it offends neighboring noses, but they may take it to a near-by county, and do so.

The smell from a garbage feeding plant is a trifle, compared to the danger of eating hogs fed in this filthy manner. Wading knee deep in corruption that is often crawling with maggots, they frequently drop dead before they can be killed.

That such a practice should be permitted is a satire on our manifold "health" activities.

If you eat pork, be sure that it is not from garbage-fed swine.

• • •

Caruso.

CARUSO is one of the latest victims cf medical malpractice and popular ignorance, in regard to the care of the body.

He had been what is erroneously called a "good liver" and his blood was charged with waste matter.

He was operated on several times in America, but his physicians did not tell him how to avoid doing the things that made him sick.

Then he went to Italy, where, after attending a banquet, he developed fever and an abscess, resulting in peritonitis.

And so he died, another victim of ignorance.

When will people begin to study the laws of health, so that they may get well and keep well?

A Wise Man's Will.

JUDGE HUGH R. STEWART of Chicago left a will disposing of a modest estate of $35,000. In his will he said:

"To my fellowmen I wish to express myself by saying that there is more real pleasure to be found in the pursuit of happiness than in the pursuit of worldly wealth, and that real happiness can only come through right living and right thinking, and by doing to others as we would they should do unto you," the will reads in part.

"It is better to strew roses than thorns in the pathways of life. There is nothing so productive of good and lasting results as kindness, and there is nothing so wanton and cruel as unkindness.

"We cannot take with us the wealth of the world, but I believe that our every good deed done, every kind word spoken and every effort put forth here to make for happiness

Along The Sapillo

By Nellie Ballou

"I'LL bet your old outfit belongs to a movie company after all." Little Pete put his hands under his head for a pillow and yawned contentedly, looking up at the bare rafters and shingles of the shack that kept out the cold breeze of the mountains. "It's too wild and woolly to hold out."

Merton leaned forward from his sagging, comfortable arm chair, punched the fire until it threw up a cloud of snapping sparks, put on a pine knot, and settled down again, smiling. Merton's family had been horrified when he and his pretty little bride, Dolores, chose New Mexico for their new home.

Merton's success in business reassured their eastern friends, however; and finally Merton's parents, convinced that 14-year-old Pete ran no risk of scalping, permitted him to visit his older brother for the summer.

Pete had been disappointed to find that Merton and Dolores had a house noticeably more convenient than the big, meandering old house back in New York State. His brother seemed to get much pleasure from a country club. Their neighbors and friends went to the same kind of entertainments they would have found anywhere in a small, polite community.

Pete did not see a cowboy for several days after his arrival. When he did chance upon a stray one in town, he took him for an ordinary farm hand in for the week's groceries, until he started to walk and clanked his spurs. Immediately Pete classified him as bogus—nobody but sissies would wear high-heeled boots like a woman. Mexicans, too, were frauds—not a red sash—not a knife in sight!

One day Pete slipped out of the house looking for some trace of all he had hoped to see; down street and alley, the most promising he could find. Their was none of them that could match the ways of his native town in dirt, disrepair, and general unsightliness. Pete hoped he might find just one glimpse through the door of a saloon and dance hall, so convenient and picturesque in screen thrillers. But he found nothing answering that description, and decided he would have to inquire its whereabouts, as it must be hidden very skillfully to escape notice. It would be great to tell the boys back home that he had seen that very place so often haunted by two-gun desperadoes.

He was careful to bring up the subject in an offhand manner while Dolores was out getting dinner that evening.

"Saloons?" Merton answered. "Oh, no, there aren't any here. The State has been dry since 1918, I believe.

"Maybe there are some in the little places around here and there," Pete persisted.

"Not if anybody knows it," Merton laughed.

Pete was so quiet that night that Merton thought he must be getting homesick. But that was not the trouble. Dolores was the first to guess the truth.

"I've afraid things are too tame for little brother," she confided to Merton after Pete had gone to bed.

"Aw!" Merton scoffed. "Hardly! Not when he's used to a place like our home town! Why, we've shown the kid some kind of a good time every day."

"But listen, Merton. Yesterday Pete was sitting on the porch watching me sew, and all at once he said:

"'Dolores, aren't you afraid at night when Merton goes downtown?'

"Afraid?' she asked him. 'What do you mean?'

"'Well, worried, maybe—just sort of worried?'

"'Why, what is there to worry over?'

"'Oh, I don't know,' he said, 'but you know people have been shot, and there are always crooks sneaking around trying to get good fellows drunk and then stealing their money.'"

"Ha ha ha! That's a good one!" Merton went off into a fit of laughing. "What kind of a place does he think this is?"

"That's it!" Dolores exclaimed. "He's disappointed. He came here looking for Indian raids and he gets taken along with a crowd of silly grown-up people on auto rides and to club luncheons. How would you have liked it when you were his age? How did you feel when you wrote and asked your business partner if this was a safe place to bring your bride, and he met us at the train with an armed guard and everybody thought it was a great joke?"

"Oh, cut out the fond memories, Lolo!" Merton exclaimed, getting up and pretending to hunt for a book.

"Well, he is disappointed, and about ready to give up and go home."

"We might rent a wild west show to amuse him," Merton suggested ironically. "What else can you think of?"

"Merton, it has been two years since we have had a real vacation."

"I know it. Hit the high spots and make the point at once. We will take the summer off and go with little brother to Yosemite, heh?"

"Would you do that if I wanted to?"

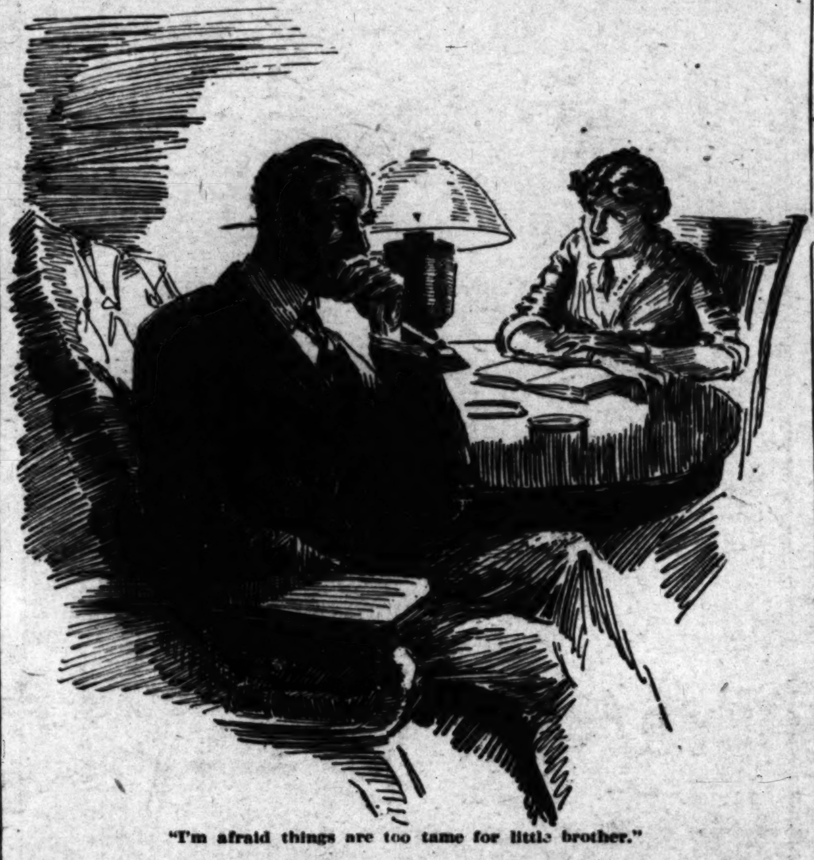
Merton screwed up his face comically and looked thoughtful. "I suppose I would," he said at last, rather grudgingly.

Dolores seized the chance while it was piping hot. "All right, I will hold you to that, Merton. Only, instead of going to California for all summer, we're going to live in the little shack up on the Sapillo for six weeks—the place where we spent our honeymoon."

"Oh, my girl!" cried Merton, delighted. "I didn't think you would ever go back again, you got so homesick for civilization."

"Did I?" she laughed, and looked very mischevious.

"I thought you did," Merton hesitated," and I thought I had better get back to work."



"I'm afraid things are too tame for little brother."

"Yes, certainly, of course!" Dolores nodded wisely and smiled.

"You don't think I got lonesome, do you?" Merton demanded, feeling as if perhaps she were laughing at him.

"Oh, no, oh, certainly not!" She made her eyes very large and round. "It may be very good for Pete." Merton thought it better to change the subject.

"I'm sure it will," she answered. We'll see how he likes the idea in the morning."

No one who ever knew a boy of Pete's age could have any doubt of how he would welcome the news. He didn't say much, but his very freckles beamed with satisfaction.

"I somehow knew there was something down here, or people wouldn't talk so much about it," he confided to Dolores after Merton had gone downtown to his store.

"There's plenty of something everywhere, Pete, if people don't get so tied up with stores and going with a certain bunch of tired and tiresome folks that they can't get away and be human."

This sounded so unlike Dolores that Pete turned and looked at her hard. "You aren't sore on Merton, are you, Dolores?" he asked. "Maybe I oughtn't to say that, but you haven't got any folks out here, and you better let us know if he doesn't treat you right."

Dolores sat down suddenly and began to laugh. She laughed and laughed, until after a while she began to cry. Then she started laughing again. Pete was very uncomfortable. His mother never acted that way and he didn't know what to make of it. But he liked Dolores better than almost any girl he had ever known, because she was such good fun and always stuck up for him when Merton or anybody guyed him. So he sat down a safe distance from Dolores and waited until the air should clear a bit. At last she seemed to recover, and she wiped her eyes and only giving a queer little laugh now and then, she looked quizzically at Pete and asked:

"What in the world would I 'be sore on' Merton for?"

"Nothing. I just asked. I thought maybe you might be. I just asked."

"I see." Dolores twisted up the corners of her little mouth.

"Pete!"

"Huh?" Pete started as if someone had grabbed him by the collar.

"Pete, there never was such a good man as Merton, was there?"

"No ma'am—yes ma'am—he's all right far as I know."

"I know he's your brother, and all that, but, Pete, did you like him—oh, an awful lot, when he lived at home, before he got married?"

"Yes, I liked him all right," Pete said without emotion.

"Look here, Pete." Dolores made a great effort as if to arouse someone dying who had a dreadful last secret to impart. "Pete, try to think hard: how did you and the boys you played with feel about Merton?"

"Aw, we never bothered him much. It wouldn't have done any good." And Dolores was encouraged to continue.

"Now, how about Roger, my brother—he was Merton's age, and a good friend of his?"

"What?"

"All of your crowd hung around Roger most of the time; chose him for your leader on camping trips and all that, didn't you?"

"You bet! Roger's some fellow!"

"You never asked Merton to go along. Why didn't you?"

"Oh, I don't know. It wouldn't have done any good, I guess."

Dolores threw up her hands in despair. "How do you boys know when you like a man? Why did you like Roger, and not like Merton?"

"Oh, Merton's all right," Pete said patiently, wondering what in the world had struck Dolores, anyway. But she changed the subject cheerfully and abruptly.

"Pete, where would you rather live—in town, like this, where you have everything just as it is back home, or out on a nice, big ranch, with crops growing, and some cattle, and workers who are tired but jolly in the evening—where it makes a lot of difference whether it rains or not—where you have a chance to be a friend to a horse, and where you would get lonesome if it weren't for your dog?"

"I've always thought I'd like to have a ranch," Pete pondered.

"Merton had a chance to get one two months ago," Dolores added.

"That so?"

"But he thought it would be too bad to give up our house and the store here, and our friends; most of them came here from the East for their health."

"Yes, I s'pose so," Pete acquiesced peaceably, but he added after a little heavy thinking, "It seems to me a ranch would be mighty nice."

"That's the way it seems to me," answered Dolores with spirit.

"Didn't you and Merton intend to get a ranch when you came out here—as soon as you made enough money?"

"That was the plan," Dolores said dryly, "into which I had gone with my whole heart. I thought if I got Merton out West, he would keep as I had him. He hadn't said or done a sissy thing in the six months we were engaged. He isn't a mollycoddle. I don't care how much he looks like it; he isn't at heart, at least; it's just an ugly habit of his, and he'll get over it, if I can only get him out-of-doors, and away from people that give him the germs."

"Do you mean he has' the t.b?" Pete gasped, at this metaphor.

"No, I mean he has the sissiphus," Dolores broke out savagely. "He gets up, walks around all day, and goes to bed a sissy. He uses face cream and perfumed hair tonic; he remembers every compliment a woman has paid him since he was five years old, and he always takes the trouble to repeat them for our acquaintances, in a joking way, but he never lets one slip; he comes home and tells me every little unpleasant rub and remark he gets all day long—things not even a child would notice; if he gets a tiny pin scratch, it has to be tied up, and when people ask what is the matter, he tells them all about it; and he is afraid of spiders!"

"I know it," Pete consoled. "Mertie always was that way."

Dolores squinted speculatively. "You're just that way, too, aren't you, Pete?"

"It's a lie!" Pete shrieked. "I'm not anybody's mama's darling!"

Dolores jumped at the first exclamation. She thought Pete was going to hit her, perhaps, out of sheer force of habit in such cases. But he stopped with his face within six inches of hers.

"Oh, Dolores," he apologized," I didn't know at first you were just kidding. I didn't mean to call a lady a liar. Honest, I'm sorry."

"Now I know what you think of Merton," she triumphed. "You didn't know why you boys 'didn't bother him,' but I have found out."

"Aw, Merton's all right," he advanced lamely. "He'd be as mad as anybody if you called him a sissy—maybe not mad enough to fight—but—he'd—"

"Come home and tell his wife about it," Dolores finished.

"He might fight," Pete insisted hopefully, "if it was put up to him strong enough. One good fight would fix him up all right. You know how a little feller can't stop after he licks somebody. Maybe a kid used to run always, but just let him have one real good fight, and he gets to be a regular feller and runs with the gang after that."

"Pete, which would you rather have for dinner tonight, all the ice cream you can eat, or a nice, juicy watermelon?"

Pete's indecision was so acute that Dolores had both, and in spite of her misgivings, they were all able to start next day for the hunting camp far up in the mountains along the wild little creek called the Sapillo. They made the journey by automobile as far as was practicable, but stored the car at a ranch when the trails seemed to demand more primitive means of travel; hired pack burros, and set out on a regular hike, as Pete joyously declared.

Merton was dismayed. Of course, on their honeymoon, he and Dolores had traveled in this romantic, but rather strenuous way. But now they were older—

"Nearly two years older," Dolores silenced him on that score.

Then Merton insisted on a trusty guide.

"But we already know the way. A guide would simply be a stranger to spoil our family party."

They might run up against wild animals in the forests.

CARE OF THE BODY

CONDUCTED BY HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N.D.

The Cost of Carving.

A LOS ANGELES man went to Baltimore for an operation, at Johns Hopkins Hospital. He was accompanied by a friend, who arranged with the managers of the hospital for a fee of $3000. After the operation, the friend was called into the office and told: "We shall have to charge Mr. ——— $5000 instead of $3000." "Why?" "We find that he is a wealthy man."

Excitement was recently caused in surgical circles by the announcement that the board of trustees of Johns Hopkins Hospital had established a maximum fee of $1000 for major operations. Several surgeons are said to have been making from $100,000 to $200,000 a year.

It is often explained that the poor are operated on for little or nothing. I notice, on part of these high-priced surgeons, no eagerness to accept such work.

It is not, however, the high money cost of carving the human body that I would emphasize—although that often bankrupts families—but the cost in unnecessary suffering and premature death.

While armies kill and maim hundreds of thousands of soldiers on battlefields, surgeons are killing and maiming as many men and women, every year, on operating tables.

The first surgical operation of which we have any record was performed, under hypnotism, many thousands of years ago, in the Garden of Eden. This operation was notable, not only because it was the first recorded, but also because the patient recovered.

The growth during the past few years of the mania for unnecessary and dangerous surgical operations, involving the extirpation of necessary organs of the human body, is one of the greatest perils that threaten the human race. It is truly a saturnalia of El Machete that we behold. It has come to the point where, for almost every disorder to which the human body is subject, an operation is recommended. The unfortunate sufferer is threatened with sudden death if he does not submit to the knife. The list of necessary organs that may be carved from the body, and yet permit the victim to crawl around, is constantly increasing. There are the tonsils, the vermiform appendix, the ovaries, the womb, the kidneys (or one of them,) the thyroid gland, the prostate gland, and yet more. Recently the extirpation of the gall bladder has been recommended. Members of the Oregon State Medical Association in session assembled, declared that it is "as useless as the appendix." A Texas physician announces that the only means of curing alcoholics is by surgery, and the professor of abdominal surgery in the medical department of the Kentucky University holds that "in the vast majority of cases chronic dyspepsia may best be cured with the aid of the knife."

Fashions in surgery come and go, as in millinery. Some twenty-five years ago an enthusiastic Chicago surgeon introduced orificial surgery. The rectum is a great nerve center, and the seat of many ailments. Therefore—cut it out. Sometimes the patient died on the operating table. The operation was practiced all over the United States. Many lost their lives, many were ruined for life, and made miserable; few were improved. The fashion has passed. Even the inventor gave it up.

Sometimes these operations are repeated several times, or until nature yields and the patient succumbs.

Eminent surgeons have boasted of removing thousands of appendices and ovaries. Recently there has been something of a let-up along this line. The dangerous after-effects have become too manifest. The more intelligent and conscientious physicians recognize the danger, but among the rank and file the money-making butchery goes on, unchecked.

In a great majority of cases these operations are not only unnecessary, but dangerous, and when the patient survives, are always followed by injurious after-effects, in the shape of chronic invalidism and shortened life. This must naturally be expected, for they do not remove the cause. The idea of cutting out an organ of the body when it offends would be ludicrous, were it not so pitifully sad, in its effects on the unfortunate patient. When a man has a pimple on his nose, no one suggests that the nose should be cut off.

After a brief period of apparent improvement, come the inevitable after-effects—"adhesions" and so forth. Raw flesh naturally adheres. More operations are necessary, until, in many cases, the victim becomes a miserable wreck.

Dr. H. H. Lindlahr writes:

"The evil after-effects of surgical operations do not always manifest at once. On the contrary, the surgical treatment is frequently followed by a period of seeming improvement. The troublesome local symptom has been removed, and the after-effects of the mutilation have not had time to assert themselves. But sooner or later the old symptoms return, in aggravated form, or a new set of complications arises. The patient is made to believe that the first operation was a 'perfect success' and that his latest crop of difficulties has nothing to do with the former, but is something entirely new. At other times he is assured that the first operation did not go deep enough, that it failed to reach the seat of the trouble, and that it must be done over again.

"And so the work of mutilation goes merrily on. The disease taint in the body sets up one nidus of inflammation after another. These the surgeon promptly removes; but the real disease, the venereal, psoric or scrofulous taint, the uric or oxalic acid, the poisonous alkaloids and ptomaines, affecting every cell and every drop of blood in the body, elude the surgeon's knife, and create new ulcers, abscesses, inflammations, etc., as fast as the old ones are extirpated."

A Milwaukee physician wrote to a physician in one of the leading Chicago hospitals for a diseased appendix and a healthy appendix, for comparison. The Chicago doctor replied that he could send a bushel of healthy appendices, but that it was difficult to get a diseased one.

Removal of the tonsils is considered a "minor operation," yet it is dangerous and unnecessary. Many have died under the operation. Otherwise they suffer more or less all their lives. Here is a statement by C. C. Carr, M.D.:

"The tonsils are excreting glands. Nature has created them for the elimination of impurities from the body. Acute chronic tonsilitis, followed by enlargement and cheesy decay, means that these glands have been habitually congested with morbid matter and poisons, that they have had more work than they could properly attend to.

"These glands constitute a valuable part of the drainage system of the body. If the blood is poisoned through overeating, faulty food combinations, or with scrofulous, venereal or psoric poisons, the tonsils are called upon, along with other organs, to excrete and eliminate these morbid taints. Is it any wonder that frequently they become inflamed and subject to decay? What, however, can be gained by destroying them with iodine, or extirpating them with the surgeon's scissors or guillotine?"

Remember that, in a great majority of cases, people who are thus butchered may be restored to health by simple, natural methods.

In some cases, it is true, surgery repairs damages. That is constructive surgery, and is admirable. Nowadays, for one case of constructive surgery, there are a hundred of destructive surgery.

It is also true that some foolish women become obsessed with a mania for operations, after they have undergone one. Why, however, should a conscientious physician consent to what he knows to be unnecessary and harmful, unless it is that he "needs the money?"

Some surgical operations are undertaken for the desire to excel in a brilliant manner, or for experiment—more of which goes on than the public has any idea of—but most of them, it must be admitted, are for the low purpose of earning a big fee. This pernicious activity is largely stimulated by the abominable practice of fee-splitting between "good, old, family doctors" and surgeons, the former receiving, as a rule, commission of one-third. Half a dozen States have found it necessary to legislate against this evil, which is said to be more prevalent in California than in any other State of the Union. This disgrace to what should be a noble profession is condemned at almost every meeting of medical men, but they have not succeeded in abolishing it. Speaking on the subject before the Syracuse Academy of Medicine, Dr. T. H. Halstead, retiring president of the academy, said:

"Unless energetic and radical measures be taken to prevent it (fee-splitting,) there will soon exist a widespread suspicion of the integrity of the whole medical profession. If dishonest methods are being practiced in the business dealings of doctors with their patients, or between doctors at the expense of the patient, then, if we know this, and do nothing to expose it, we shall surely suffer in the public estimation, when the exposure comes, as come it must, sooner or later. The great majority of the profession merit the confidence reposed in them by their patients and by the public, but if this majority does nothing to prevent the growth of the system pursued by a few physicians for defrauding and betraying their patients, then all must suffer—and all should suffer.

"The family physician should stand between the surgeon and his patient, looking after the latter's interests, and using his judgment as to the advisability and the necessity, for instance, of an operation. He cannot permit his judgment to be influenced by any financial consideration, and if he does, he betrays the patient, who has placed his confidence in him. A man who permits himself to accept from such surgeon, consultant or specialist a division of the fee, or a commission, without his patient's knowledge, inflicts an injury on his character which sooner or later will tell on his reputation, because these things which cause a moral deterioration have a way of showing themselves unconsciously."

One of the most eminent surgeons in the United States, Dr. Cabot, has admitted that of several thousand cases on which he had operated, the autopsy showed that his diagnoses had been correct in not more than 50 per cent. Norman Barnesby, M.D., writes:

"Surgeons are but men, influenced by various motives, subjected to strong temptations. Granted a license such as no other body of men possess, and restrained only by general social and economic laws, and such interpretation as they choose to give to their self-imposed code of 'ethics,' is it to be wondered at that they assume an arrogant superiority toward the general public, and hence often come to value lightly the health and even the lives of the helpless folk who are so completely in their power? It is true that this very irresponsibility brings out, in some, the noblest traits and highest altruism; but only too frequently it breeds a cruelty and criminal recklessness that is simply appalling to those who know."

Regarding the incompetence of some who undertake surgical operations, Dr. Barnesby makes the following astounding statements:

"It may seem incredible, but it is no less a fact, that many novices in surgery have such an imperfect knowledge of anatomy that they are unable to recognize certain internal organs when they see them, and not infrequently they mistake one for another."

If hospital nurses should tell all they know, a man would sooner venture against a shower of shrapnel, than submit himself to the dangers of the operating table.

Several earnest physicians have recently suggested that there should be laws to control this butchery. In England definite steps toward that result have been taken. Dr. Rigby, who first proposed a surgical court of inquiry, in the Independent Review, thus introduced the subject:

"Sufficient has now been said to answer my purpose; i. e., to found a basis on which to establish my thesis that the present position of operating surgery has founded what is in fact a new tribunal, and one, moreover, of great and far-reaching power, with very little, if any, responsibility; and that in the interests of the people at large it is quite time this far-reaching power and lack of responsibility should be seriously inquired into, and that if it is found necessary, its powers should be limited, and its responsibility vastly increased, by bringing each individual case operated upon—at any rate where a fatal termination ensues—under the notice and investigation of an authorized court of inquiry; either a new court of inquiry to be established for the purpose or some modification of the present coroner's court."

The question of regulating the administration of anesthesia by law, in England, is also receiving widespread attention in that country, both within and without the profession.

In America the American Health Association, at an annual convention, advocated the more extensive use of autopsies, in checking up diagnoses in hospitals.

To those who may think my criticism of surgical abuses too caustic, I commend perusal of following Associated Press dispatch from Denver, published a few years ago:

The Pleasant Ellen

By S. B. McFarlane.

"WELL, an' what you think happened?" Uncle Joe stopped, knife in one hand, the bamboo cane upon which he was carving a mission bell in the other, and gazed impressively upon his listeners. "A great, big lump of gold, as heavy's a man's head, come rolling out under his pick!"

"He'd found the mine?"

"He sure had!" Uncle Joe leaned back and surveyed his audience, consisting of Jimmie and the twins, genially. "He'd found the 'Long Tom' and he sold her out for 'bout five or six million and went back to 'Frisco and bought the biggest house in the whole shebang."

"Gee! I wisht I could find a mine!" sighed Jimmie. "Did you know him, Uncle Joe?"

"No, I didn't exactly know him," answered the old man, "but I read all about it in the paper, an' I've allus sort of felt 'sif I knew him."

"I guess you know about 'bout all the mines in California, don't you, Uncle Joe?" asked one of the twins.

"Well, I dunno—there might be a few I ain't heard about," said Uncle Joe modestly. "But when you've took an interest in something for a long time an' read about it a lot, you can't help but know right smart 'bout it. Yes, I guess I do know something 'bout mines."

"I just bet you do," said Jimmie. Then he went on: "Say, Uncle Joe, when're you going to go and find 'The Pleasant Ellen'?"

Uncle Joe bent over his cane again, his bushy eyebrows drawn together. "I dunno, sonny, I dunno."

"'Twas in a dream you seen it, wasn't it?"

The old man nodded. "Yes. I remember it, just like 'twas yesterday. The papers was full in them days of the 'Blue Bell' lode, an' I'd been reading about it, setting out on the porch in a rocker. I must of fell asleep, an' yet didn't exactly seem 'sif I was asleep, either. Seemed like I was a going through the mountains, on a trail, an' I had a roll of blankets an' a frying pan an' a pick an' everything like miners have. 'Twas getting along toward evening. Half of the canyon was in the shadow already. Seemed 'sif I was thinking 'bout where I'd make camp for the night, when, all of a sudden——" Uncle Joe's faded gray eyes became bright. "I come round a shoulder of the mountain, an' there, down below me, was a sort of a little valley opening into the canyon. I could hear the sound of water running and it looked pretty good to me. So I packed right down and made camp for the night. Seems like I slep' all night an' was a-lyin' in my blanket looking about me in the morning, when, all at once, on the canyon wall beyond me, I seen something glittering in the sun. I kep' a looking at it an' a looking at it. All of a sudden, it come into my head what it was. I jumped up an' grabbed my pick an' run over to the wall. I give my pick one good swing an'—a great big lump of gold fell off under it, just as easy, an' come—bang—right down on my foot! 'Twas such a hard knock it sort of dazed me. When I come to, there I was setting in the rocker on the porch again an' one of the milk crocks your gramma had set out on the porch rail to sun, had joggled off some way an' was lying, broke to pieces, right around my foot!"

"Gosh! I bet that was a whopper, that mine!" said Jimmie. "What'd you call it 'The Pleasant Ellen' for, Uncle Joe?"

Uncle Joe chuckled. "Well, 'twas such a sort of a pleasant place an' there was a girl I knew in them days an' her name was Ellen; Ellen Barker was her name. So I just put them two together an' called it 'The Pleasant Ellen!'"

"Why didn't you go right out an' discover it, Uncle Joe?" piped up one of the twins.

Uncle Joe looked out beyond the low, blue hills which rimmed the valley, to where old Whiteface's blue shoulders rose. "Well, of course, I wanted to go right then an' there—seemed to me 'sif I could just start out from the foot of old Whiteface an' walk right straight up to it. But your grandpa had been taken just a few months before an' your gramma was left without anyone to help run the ranch but your ma, an' she only a girl. Your grandpa had always been awful good to me, when I come here just a kid to work, so't just seemed 'sif it sort of depended on me to stay an' help keep the place going. Then just before your gramma died, your ma came back a widow with you three little children an' there 'twas! Just seemed 'sif I never could see to getting away. But some day——" A far-away look came into his faded blue eyes; his lips set in a firm line as he began to cut the bell's clapper.

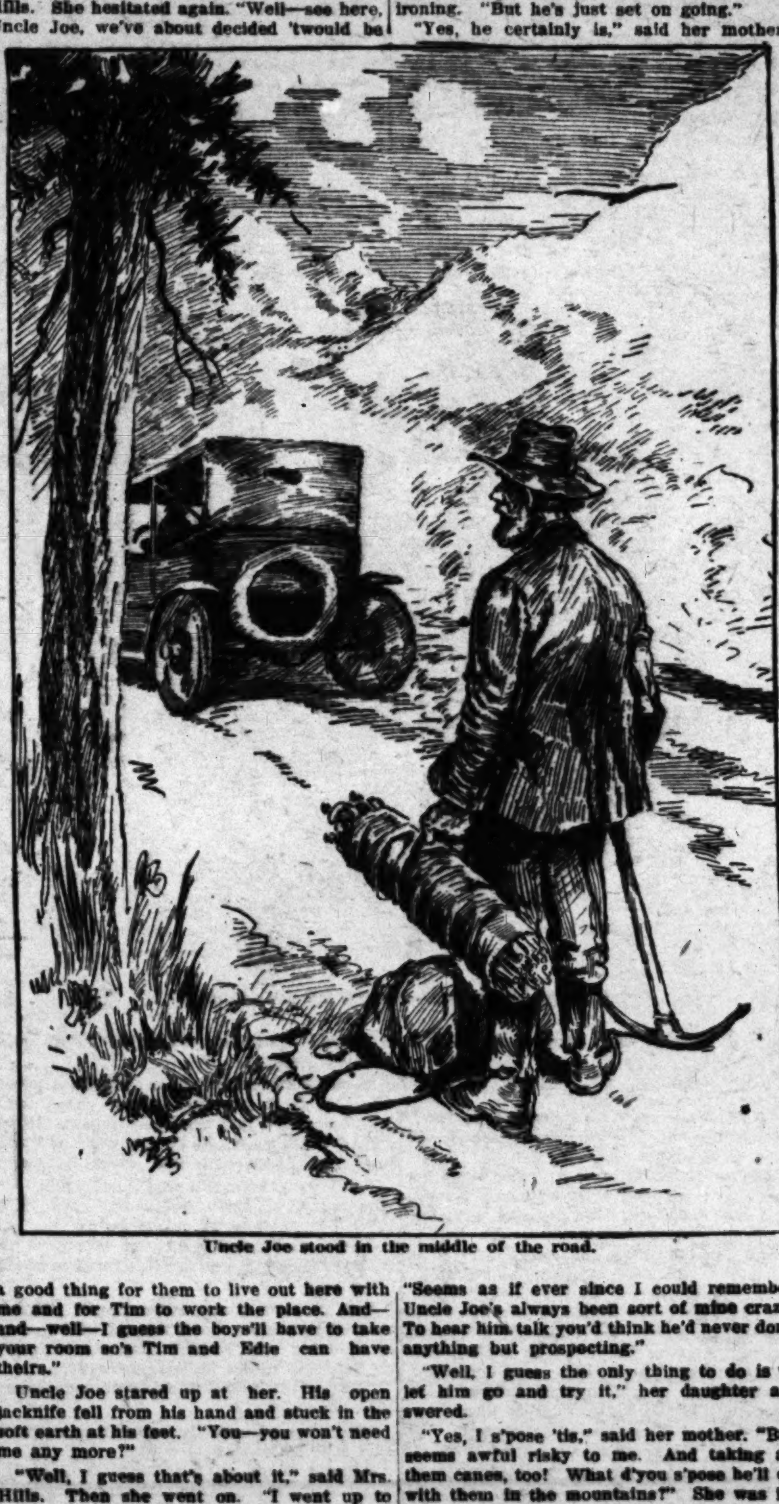
"Do you think you could find it now, Uncle Joe?" asked Jimmy.

The old man laid down his cane and emphasized his words with his right hand. "You give me a pick an' a roll of blankets an' some grub an' put me down at the foot of old Whiteface and I'd go so straight——"

He was interrupted by a woman's voice. The boys' mother stood in the door. "You boys go in and wash up. Dinner's most ready," she commanded. Then she turned to Uncle Joe. "Uncle Joe, I got something I want to tell you." She hesitated. "My, that's a real pretty cane, ain't it?" she said, bending over the cane in Uncle Joe's hands. "Yes, it's real pretty," she repeated, vaguely. Then she set her mouth firmly and went on. "Well—what I wanted to say was this—Edie's going to be married next week."

"Why, 'sthat so!" said Uncle Joe. "'Sthat so! She and Tim, I s'pose?"

"Yes, she's going to marry Tim," said Mrs. Hills. She hesitated again. "Well—see here, Uncle Joe, we've about decided 'twould be a good thing for them to live out here with me and for Tim to work the place. And—and—well—I guess the boys'll have to take your room so's Tim and Edie can have theirs."



Uncle Joe stood in the middle of the road.

Uncle Joe stared up at her. His open jacknife fell from his hand and stuck in the soft earth at his feet. "You—you won't need me any more?"

"Well, I guess that's about it," said Mrs. Hills. Then she went on. "I went up to Mr. Perkin's just soon's we decided about this. I'd heard him say he wanted someone to help about the place. And he said he'd be glad to take you. It'll be a real nice place for you, Uncle Joe. Their work ain't hard and Mis' Perkins is an A-1 cook. You'll be right near to us and you can come and see us often." She rose with a relieved air. "Come on in the house now, I guess Edie's dished up by this time." She started toward the house.

But Uncle Joe did not seem to hear her. He had turned and sat staring out of the open barn door, far to the east where old Whiteface's great shoulders rose above the valley.

"Yessir," said Uncle Joe, as, a week later, he bent over his precious canes, which he was carefully rolling in a piece of old sacking. "Yessir, he worked on that lode for fifteen years an' never made his grub out of it, an' then one day, all of a sudden—— Look here, ain't you boys unpacked that sack enough times? That train leaves in an hour an' a half an' we want to git down to the deppo in plenty of time. 'F you want something to do you hold these canes while I roll the burlap 'round them tighter."

Mrs. Hills, out in the kitchen, shook her head doubtfully. "Seems like an awful lonesome thing for an old man like that to go off up in the mountains all by himself."

"I know, ma," said Edie. She carefully smoothed the collar of the waist she was ironing. "But he's just set on going."

"Yes, he certainly is," said her mother. "Seems as if ever since I could remember Uncle Joe's always been sort of mine crazy. To hear him talk you'd think he'd never done anything but prospecting."

"Well, I guess the only thing to do is to let him go and try it," her daughter answered.

"Yes, I s'pose 'tis," said her mother. "But seems awful risky to me. And taking all them canes, too! What d'you s'pose he'll do with them in the mountains?" She was interrupted by the entrance of Uncle Joe. Over his back hung his sack, bulging at strange and unexpected angles; his pick was over his shoulder; under his arm he carried his bundle of canes. The little boys capered at his heels.

"Well! You do look like a real miner!" said Mrs. Hills. "You certainly do!" She went into the pantry and came back with a brown paper parcel in her hand. "Here's enough lunch for two days, so's you won't need to begin cooking right away. Now if you don't get along all right, you come back, Uncle Joe, and we'll help you look around and find another place. Don't you stay up there in the mountains if you don't like it."

"And remember us when you find your mine, Uncle Joe!" said Edie gaily.

"Aw, come on!" chorused the twins. "You'll miss the train! Don't stand there talking all day!"

But Uncle Joe stopped. Silently he grasped Mrs. Hill's hand, then Edie's. "You folks have always been mighty good to me," he said huskily. With a glance about the little kitchen, he turned toward the door. But on the sill he stopped and straightened himself up. "I'm going to make every one of you partners in 'The Pleasant Ellen,'" he said magnificently, and with a rattle of tinware, strode off down the road.

It was about 2 o'clock that afternoon when, following the directions given him at the station, Uncle Joe started up the long white road which stretched out toward the foot of old Whiteface.

"Gee! I thought Emporium was right at the foot of Whiteface," he said to himself after a half-hour's plodding. "Don't seem 'sif I was any nearer than I was when I begun walking." With a weary grunt he slipped his sack from his shoulder and sat down by the roadside. As he sat mopping off his face, a car stopped beside him.

"Want to ride?" asked a man's voice.

Uncle Joe looked up gratefully. "Why, be you going toward the mountain?"

"Right up to the foot of the trail," said the man.

With a sigh of relief, Uncle Joe clambered into the Ford, laying his sack and his pick and his bundle of canes at his feet. The car started off. A cool breeze came softly rushing across his face. The great blue wall of the mountain seemed to sweep toward them.

"Going camping?" asked the stranger, with a glance toward the sacks.

"Well, I dunno as you'd exactly call it camping," said Uncle Joe. "I'm going prospecting, looking for a mine I got a line on."

"Is that so?" said the stranger. "Why, I didn't know there were any mines around Whiteface." He looked at the old man curiously.

"There ain't no mines!" Uncle Joe's voice was blank. Then he drew himself up confidently. "Oh, I guess there be plenty of mines hereabout. Why, there was the 'Red Streak,' Jake White struck in '89, an' the 'Little Lady' Joe Bowers got such a big pile from in '84—that was a big one—an' the 'Robert E. Lee'——" He rambled on happily. Suddenly he stopped in the middle of a sentence. "Sho! I guess you think I'm doing all the talking."

"That's all right," said the stranger. "'Tisn't often I meet a real old—his eyes twinkled—"prospector."

"Well," said Uncle Joe modestly, "I dunno as you could call me a real old prospector. I been doing farming for some years, but seems like mines have always sort of interested me more than anything else. Yessir, they have always intrested me more, somehow."

"I guess they must have," said the stranger. His voice was solemn, but his eyes still twinkled.

They were climbing now, the Ford breathing strenuously. Behind them the flat valley spread out like a great fan. Before them the pines toward the summit of Whiteface stood out like the trees in a Noah's ark. At a turn in the road, the man stopped: "Here's where your trail begins," he said.

"I certainly am obliged to you, mister," said Uncle Joe.

"Oh! That's all right," answered the other. "Hope you'll have good luck. If you happen to come out this way stop in and tell me about it. That's my place down there." He pointed to a large, gray structure, with the words "Valley View House" across its front, standing at the mouth of a canyon. Then, with a snort and a rattle, he was off.

Uncle Joe stood in the middle of the road, his sack at his feet, his canes in one hand, the pick in the other. "Well, here I be!" he said. "Here I be!" He looked up at the mountain towering above him. Coiling across its flanks like a great rope until it finally disappeared over a high ridge, lay the trail. High in the air swept a buzzard. The silence was broken only by the soft rush of the wind through a little pine beside the road. Uncle Joe turned and looked out across the valley to where Emporium lay, its white buildings softened by a blur of haze. Beyond them a long, creeping line of black and a white plume of smoke told that the "Overland" was just coming in. From the tennis canyon wall where, in the sunshine, something still sparkled brightly." "The gold—I—I—found it at last!"

The man looked at him, then at the canyon wall. "Gold! Gold! What you talking about? That ain't no gold! That's an old tin can the sun's shining on. What're you doing, anyway, looking for gold up here?" He stared at him curiously, as the boys had stared.

Uncle Joe looked at him piteously. "A tin can?"

"Yes, sir, a tin can. And this ain't no gold mine, either." His voice became threatening. "It's private ground and I'll give you just five minutes to pack up and clear out. I don't run no free camping ground—nor lunatic asylum, either! Now you get out!"

Uncle Joe gave one look at his face and turning stumbled back where he had left his blankets. With trembling hands he crowded them into his bag and took up his pick and his canes. Then he started off down the stream.

For about fifteen minutes he hurried along, with an occasional furtive glance behind him. At last he sat down on a fallen log beside the trail. His legs were shaking. There he sat, staring in front of him.

Finally, he shook his head. "'Twasn't 'The Pleasant Ellen' after all!" he said in a flat voice. He looked about him with dull eyes. 'Where is "The Pleasant Ellen?' "

After a little he got up and went on. The trail went down and down as steadily as that of the first two days had climbed. It was on the shady side of the mountain, and manzanita, scrub oak and sage, with here and there a ruddy marone, made of it a pleasant little path. But Uncle Joe, eyes set on the ground before him, saw nothing of this. All through the long morning he plodded dully on. Occasionally his lips moved, as if he were asking himself a question. Once or twice he sat down for a few moments on a rock. But soon he would get up and go on again.

The sun was riding overhead when the sides of the canyon began to open out a little. Occasionally, at a turn of the trail there would be a glimpse of a flat blue horizon down where the mountain's sides ran toward the south. The trail still went down, down. Uncle Joe still ploded on. Suddenly the path came around a shoulder of rock. The old man, staring in front of him, stopped. Before him, fan shaped, stread a wide, blue valley, checkered with square fields; on a shoulder of the mountain beneath him was a large, gray building with the words, "Valley View House" across its front; in the distance, under a blue film of smoke, the clustered buildings of a town. The old man put his hand to his eyes.

"Where be I?" he said dully. "Where be I?"

He turned and looked up at the mountain behind him. He could see nothing of the trail he had come down on today, but across the canyon at whose mouth he stood he could see the ever rising twists and spirals of another, which somehow looked familiar. Uncle Joe stood staring at it, a perplexed, half-dazed look in his faded blue eyes. Suddenly he smiled a wry little smile. "I've been up there—an' I've come out again. I—didn't find 'The Pleasant Ellen.'" He stood there for a few moments looking wistfully up at the great wall of the mountain. All at once his legs began to shake under him. He put his hand to his head, then, leaving the path he began to plunge blindly down through the brush to the bottom of the canyon, still clutching his sack, his pick and his canes. When he finally reached water he plunged his hands and face into it, then dropped down upon the ground and lay there, his eyes closed.

Fifteen minutes passed, then half an hour. He opened one eye, then another. Finally he sat up and looked about him. Suddenly he jumped. Up on a little bench of land rising behind him was a little shack. Uncle Joe stared at it a moment, then, breathing hard, got up stiffly. He took up his sack, his pick, and his canes, ready for instant flight. He cautiously went up to the shack and peered in its window. It was empty. Putting down his things, he pushed open the door. He stood looking into the little room, with its few rough pieces of furniture, rather wistfully. Finally, with a glance over his shoulder, he stepped into the shack. Treading on tiptoe, he walked around the room. He opened the empty cupboard, he examined the cot in one corner, he even sat down, for a moment, in the dilapidated armchair which stood before the rusty little air-tight stove whose battered pipe ran out of a hole in the wall. Finally with a sigh, he got up and started out again. At the doorway, though, he paused. Again his glance ran around the little room. He looked up at the side of the mountain, where lay the trail which would lead him out into the world again, the world which only meant work as someone's "hired man" for him; then his gaze went out into the little canyon, lying cool and green before the door of the shack.

Suddenly he threw his head back. His lips set in a line almost defiant. He looked over his shoulder at the interior of the shack once more, then he went out on the little porch and took up his sack and his canes. He brought them in and set them down in a corner. Then he started on a hunt through the underbrush for sticks. He found not only the latter, but also some torn sheets of newspaper and an old pasteboard box. He did not venture to build a fire in the shack, but made a fireplace of three stones from the bed of the stream. Soon he had quite a fire going in a cleared space on the bank. He dug into his sack and brought out his bag of groceries. He measured out the coffee and set it to boil. He fried three slices of bacon in his frying pan, and, last of all, he mixed three flapjacks in his tin cup and fried them in the bacon grease. When all was ready, he filled his tin plate and sat down on the doorstep of the shack. "Gee! This seems like home!" he said to himself as he poured out a cupful of muddy coffee. "It sure does!"

After everything had disappeared, to the last burnt edge of flapjack, he breathed a contented sigh. He carried his dishes to the edge of the stream, scoured them vigorously with sand and rinsed them in the running water. After they had been carefully placed in the sun to dry, he found a shady spot for himself and, stretching out luxuriously, slept for half an hour. When he woke up he sat looking about him for a few minutes, rubbing the sleep from his eyes. Then he went up to the shack and brought out his bundle of canes. Carefully he unwrapped them from the burlap, scrutinizing each one. He set them up in a row along the front of the shack. Then he stepped back and surveyed them proudly. After they were all arranged he took the one he had been working on when he left the ranch, sat down on the porch step and set to work on a Mission Bell, humming "Annie Rooney" under his breath.

Half an hour passed. The mission bell was almost done. Suddenly he looked up, eyes wide open, his breath coming a little short. From down the stream came the sound of voices. As the old man sat there, staring in the direction of the sound, all at once some bushes overarching a little path which ran down along the bank of the stream, parted and a little girl came into the clearing. When she caught sight of the old man she stopped short. For a moment she stood there, gazing at him. Then her eyes went to the campfire, with the skillet and coffee pot beside it, and the shack, against which stood the sack and pick. She turned and rushed back into the brush.

"Oh! Auntie! Do hurry up! Here's a real old miner camping out!" Uncle Joe heard her call.

In a few minutes she came in sight again dragging by the hand two ladies, rather red-faced and breathless. For a moment the three stood there in silence. Then Uncle Joe rose stiffly and took off his hat with a flourish.

"Good evening, ladies! Won't—" Suddenly a man's voice interrupted him.

"Well, I declare! It's the old prospector!" Uncle Joe turned and found himself facing the man who had brought him up from Emporium three days ago.

"You got back pretty soon. Did you find your mine?" inquired the latter, jocosely.

The old man swallowed hard. "I—I—" But he was interrupted by one of his visitors. The little girl had gone up to peer into the shack and had called her aunt to look at the canes ranged along its front. The two women were examining them. One of them now turned toward Uncle Joe. "Are these for sale?" she asked.

Uncle Joe stared at her in bewilderment. "How!" he said.

"Are they for sale, the canes?" she repeated.

"Why—yes'm—I guess they be. I ain't never sold none—but—" stammered the old man.

"How much are they?" asked the other woman. "I'll get one for Ed, Mame, if they aren't too much."

Uncle Joe looked at the other man helplessly. "Here, you let me manage. I'll make a sale for you," said the latter, a twinkle in his eye. "He's sort of shy, he's lived by himself so much," he said to the ladies. "He says he hasn't ever sold any of these before but he'll do it this once to oblige you. They [illegible] picked up the [illegible] one with a buffalo head carved upon it and regarded it with the air of a connoisseur in canes.

"How much does he want for them?" asked the older woman.

"Well, now, as long as he isn't in the habit of selling them, he hasn't any set price." He picked up the bear cane and held it out, squinting admiringly. "Now, how much would that cane be worth to you, madam?"

The woman examined the cane. "Well, I'd give him two-fifty for it," she said after a moment.

"I'll ask him," said the man. He went over to Uncle Joe and spoke to him in a low voice. Then he came back. "He'll sell it for three and carve any two initials on it while you wait, into the bargain."

"Oh Auntie! Do get it!" urged the little girl.

The woman hesitated a moment. "All right. I'll take it," she finally said.

"He'll get to work on it right away then," said the man. "Now, why don't you come over here and sit down on the rocks by the stream, where it's cool and comfortable. You can watch him carve the initials and—perhaps if he feels like it, he'll tell you some of those stories of his about the old mining days. I got to go back to the hotel now, but I guess you can find your way down the path all right." He gave Uncle Joe a strange, significant look and his left eyelid descended for an instant. Then he went whistling off down the path.

The others sat in silence for a few moments, while Uncle Joe's knife began on a large E. Then the little girl spoke. "I guess you could tell us a lot of interesting things about mining, couldn't you?"

Uncle Joe looked up for a moment from his work. "Well, I s'pose I do know right smart about mines—" he said. His wrinkled blue eyes seemed to look beyond the two ladies and the little girl, before they went back to the E again. He was silent for a moment. Then he spoke. "This letter E sort of reminds me of a mine called the 'Double E.' 'Twas way back in the '70's—"

The sun had left the eastern hills and the ladies had gone down the path half an hour ago, but Uncle Joe still sat by the stream. A contented little smile played about his lips. In his hand he held three silver dollars. Suddenly he turned. The tall man who had twice befriended him was coming along the path. He came over and sat down on a log near Uncle Joe.

"Say Uncle how long you been here?"

"I just came this afternoon," said Uncle Joe.

Well, I suppose you know this is private land? The company owns way back into the canyon here."

Uncle Joe folded up his knife with trembling fingers and began to get up stiffly. "I didn't—I'll pack up right—"

"Now hold your horses a minute;" said the other. "I'm not chasing you away. I came up here to talk business with you." He picked a sage leaf and began to chew it reflectively.

"I guess I told you before that my brother and I run the hotel down there." Uncle Joe nodded.

"Well, we keep pretty full all the year round, mostly with tourists. We got the hot springs and we got the climate, and we set a fine table. But that isn't enough for people. They want some place to go to. They want to see something, most of them, that's different from what's they've seen all their lives; Indians, or cowboys, or miners, like those people this afternoon. So we keep one or two of the boys dressed up sort of fancy, like cowboys in a movie show, and they take a party out every day or two up to what they call 'Perspiration Point' to get the view out over the valley; and we bring them up to the falls near here—that's where [illegible] be an old Indian [illegible] come to see him and buy baskets of him. But old Charlie died last year and by the summer there isn't much left of the [illegible]." He looked shrewdly at Uncle Joe. "Now, I take it you didn't find your mine?"

Uncle Joe shook his head silently.

"What do you think you'll do next?"

Uncle Joe sighed. "I—I guess I'll have to go down and try to find something on a ranch."

The other was silent for a moment. Then he turned. "Well, suppose we make you a proposition; you stay up here and live in the cabin—it's good and water-tight; we'll keep you supplied with bacon and coffee and flour and you can come down every day and get some fresh stuff from our garden, and we'll pay you five dollars a month. That'll be our part of the bargain. You dig a little into the bank there and let your pick lay out where people can see it and dress sort of rough like you are today, and when people come up here you tell them some of those stories of yours abut gold mining. You ought t make a good bit selling those canes, too, if you don't give them away, like you would have done today if I hadn't kept you from it." He looked at the old man. "Well, what do you say to it?"

Uncle Joe sat silent, his eyes fixed upon some ants which were tugging at a dead beetle. Suddenly he turned and looked his visitor straight in the face. "Look here, mister," —— He paused and swallowed hard. Then he went on. "I—I ought to tell you—I ain't no—I ain't never done no min—"

The man turned and interrupted him, his face solemn. "See here, uncle, I've lived out here twenty odd years. I ought to know a miner when I see one, oughtn't I?"

Uncle Joe looked at him. The man's left eye descended in a prodigious wink. "I ought to, oughtn't I??" he said.

"Well," said Uncle Joe. He grinned sheepishly. "I—I guess you ought."

"Then we'll call it a bargain," announced the other. He rose. "I ought to be down at the hotel now. You come down tomorrow and we'll have some grub for you. Make yourself at home in the cabin. And say—" he stopped. "If I was you I'd dig a little out of that bank the first thing tomorrow. There'll likely be some folks up in the morning. I heard those ladies telling some other people about you, down at the hotel." He disappeared down the path.

Uncle Joe sat motionless on the log for some time after he had gone. Suddenly he got up and, going over to a little pile of odds and ends of boards which lay against one end of the cabin, came back with one about two feet long in his hands. Bending over in the waning light, he began to cut the outline of some words on the board. As he cut them he repeated them to himself with an odd, contented little whistle of his breath— "The Pleasant Ellen."

The Sunset Hour.

The sunset hour—
When the dark sea
Assumes a deeper darkness,
Breathes one loud thunder note,
And, waxing faint,
Soft ripples 'gainst the sand,
To murmur long!

They All Go Bathing!

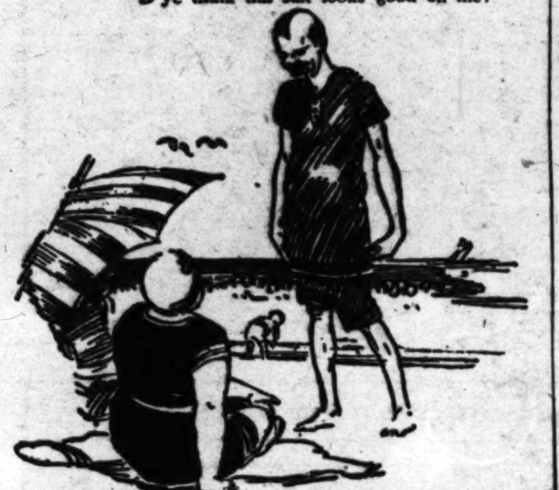
PROLOGUE.

Bathing beaches are populated by two herds of homo: bathers and beachers . . . these subdivide into Dumbbells and Dizzies . . . . Dumbbells are what cause the iris to contract in pain and severely try one's faith in Genesis; while the frabjous, delectable, and soul satisfying apparition presented by the Dizzies is a balm to the swooning orb and plays upon the optic nerves as on a harp of a thousand strings . . . Gentlemen, be seated.

Scene I.—"You Watch the Baby."

The Potters, Pa, Ma, Bill, Mamie and the Baby have come down to the cool waters to bedew their parched frames and minister to their molten minds; to lave and loaf and let the world boil by. Pa, the family beast of burden, is carrying the umbrella, the Baby's clothes, and whatever the other members of the family do not want to carry. The scene opens with that time-honored discussion between Pa and Ma: who will take the first turn watching the Baby. Bill is already in . . . Mamie is just melting into Pose Number Three . . .

PA: You watch the Baby while I take a dip,
Then I'll come and mind him while you make a trip.
MA: O, I'm too hot to wait up here;
You hold 'im first while I go, dear.
PA: Well, come with me and let 'im stay;
He can't wander so far away.
MA: You'll have to stay where you can see . . .
D'ye think this suit looks good on me?



"Whadothye think of this suit of mine?"

PA (lying like a gentleman and a husband:)
It looks just fine, it looks just fine—
Whaddye think of this suit of mine?
MA (lying like a lady and a wife:)
It looks just fine on you, my dear;
A person would think it was bought this year.
PA: This year? Ha, ha; likewise ho, ho . . .
Why, I bought this suit five years ago . . .
MA: It doesn't look nearly as old as that . . .
(wistfully)
Do you think this suit makes me look too fat?
PA (gallantly:)
Why, of course it doesn't . . . come on, let's go.
Ma (timorously:)
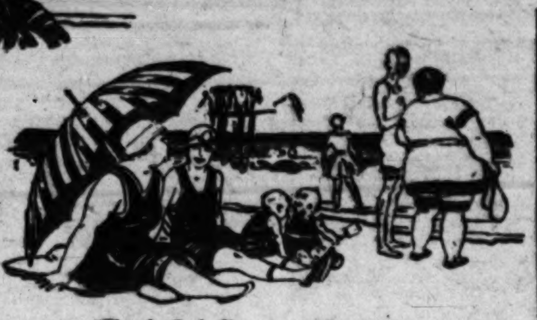
I think I'll wait for a minute or so . . .
(brightly)
I'm scared the Baby might wander away—
You go and swim for a while . . . I'll stay.

(Pa shuffles down to the water, while Ma arranges the Baby on a quilt under the umbrella . . . near by sits a neighbor, Mrs. Redlin, with her baby, aged two.)

MRS. REDLIN:
If it isn't Mrs. Potter . . . and the baby, too!
What a dear little baby! . . . coo-coo . . . coo-coo.
MA: Is that your baby? Well, isn't it sweet!
And how is the darling standing the heat?
MRS. REDLIN:
My dear, he's a perfectly wonderful child,
But this terrible weather is driving 'im wild.
MA: The poor little dears can't stand much heat,
And you must be careful of what they eat . . .
MRS. REDLIN:
You know it's his second summer, too.
I'll be so glad when the child pulls through.
MA: The second summer is always the worst.
Does he . . . . etc., etc.

(All of which is too intimate to interest any but mothers, and how do we know that you, gentle or wild, as the case may be, reader, are a mother?



"Thank God, I'm not so fat as that."

(Some minutes later:)

MA: Ain't it disgraceful the way they dress?
They couldn't get by with very much less.
O, lookit that woman . . . isn't she fat!
Thank God I'm not as fat as that . . .

There is no comfort like unto that which descends upon the soul of the plump lady who sees a plumper lady on the same beach . . . it gives her a new, glad courage . . . in fact, it was the hope of seeing such a person that brought both of them there.

Scene II.—"Now, Bill, Behave."

Bill is engaged in that labor of love so dear to the young male; teaching the female of the species to swim. This particular, after a fashion, lady has been taking lessons since the lake was a puddle . . . Bill is but the newest of a long line of earnest instructors . . . but Elsie toils not, neither does she swim, and yet Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed as is Elsie, nor the Queen of Sheba, either . . . learning to swim is one course the dear girls will never take from a correspondence school.

ELSIE: O-oo-h, hold me up, here comes a wave . . .
Here, let me down . . . now, Bill behave.
BILL: C'mon, you don't try hard enough
Kick out your heels . . . there, that's the stuff.
ELSIE: I'll never learn to swim, I see . . .
Don't you feel sorry for poor little me?

(Be careful when they pull that "poor little me" stuff. "You're so big and strong" comes next.)

BILL: You're getting along just great, old top.
Now kick once more . . . that's bully . . . stop.
You swam that all alone, you know—
Say, I'm a teacher—ain't it so?
ELSIE: I love to see you plow along,
But then you're O, so big and strong.

What did we tell you? The dear old brother of contented cows)

Now hold me up, I'm gonna float.

BILL (to canoeists:)
Hey, gwan away with that doggone boat!
You've got all the rest of the lake, you dub . . .
Gwan now, beat it from here with that tub . . .
ELSIE (round-eyed with admiration—at least that's what Bill thinks:)
Why, I'd be afraid to bawl 'em like that.
(Yes, she would.)
BILL (bravely:)
They'd better not monkey with me, that's flat;
I'd take the both of them to the mat.
ELSIE (cowly:)
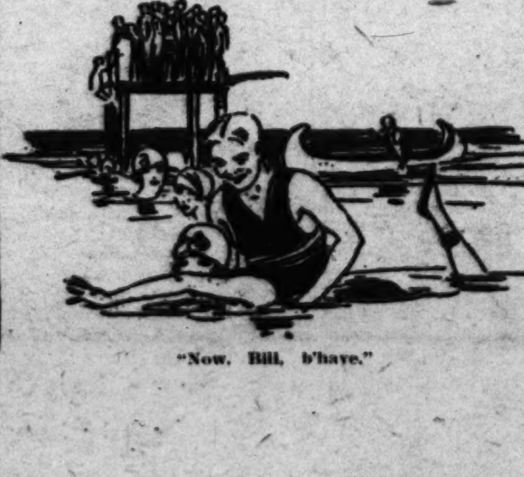
O, I just love a man that's brave . . .
Now, William, stop . . . Now, Bill, behave . . .

Scene III.—"Don't You Ever Peel?"

After all, you can't blame the dear girls for buzzing the Life Guards, what with having to look at the portly gentlemen bathers who have watermelon waist lines or are all sunk down in the middle like an old grave . . . we see Mamie chinning one of the Bronze Apollos who make the beaches safe for democracy . . . incidentally, why do they always wait till the victim is going down for the third time before they rescue him?



"Now, Bill, b'have."

MAMIE: What a lovely tan! . . . don't you ever peel?
What a beautiful color! . . . how does it feel?
LIFE GUARD (who is as modest and shy as any actor:)
This ain't nothing to what I'll get;
I'll get a real tan, don't you fret.
MAMIE (romantically:)
What a wonderful life by these wild, wild waves,
Rescuing people from watery graves.
(Isn't that pretty?—she read it.)
It thrills me to think how you must feel—
What a beautiful tan!—don't you ever peel?
LIFE GUARD:
I've saved a lot of 'em, don't you fret,
But this ain't nothing to what I'll get.
MAMIE: It must be thrilling to be a Guard,
With muscles so big and strong and hard.
LIFE GUARD:
Here, feel my arm—some arm, I'll say;
There ain't many guys what can get that way.
MAMIE (feeling his arm gingerly:)
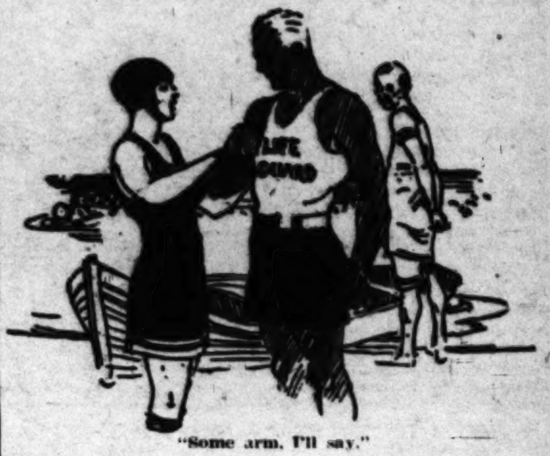
Boy, some muscle! I'll say you'll do . . .
But feel my arm—I've got some, too.

(They're getting along famously . . . Life Guards are all like that . . . but hist and hark, who comes this way? . . . none other than Pa himself, and is this his little datter with the bold, bad man? It is. Ha!)



"Some arm, I'll say."

PA (suddenly behind Mamie:)
C'mon, it's time for us to go . . .
MAMIE (slightly fussed:)
But Pa, I haven't been in, you know.
PA: Go on in, then, don't be slow . . .
If you don't go in your Ma will rave . . .
MAMIE: I'm not going in . . . I'll spoil my wave!

(So Pa, who is plainly baffled by this curious feminine logic, retreats to where Ma is parked with the Baby, and as the curtain goes down you might hear the following composite ensemble from various quarters of the beach:)

MAMIE (to Life Guard:)
O, I just love a man that's brave.
ELSIE (to Bill:)
Now, William, stop . . . Now, Bill, behave . . .
MA (to Pa:)
Look at her, Pa, if you think I'm fat . . .
Thank God, I'm not as fat as that!
(And that's that.)

The Birth of a Heart.

Upon an island in the tropic seas
The ruins of a templed city stood;
From out its walls had grown gray olive trees,
Tall feathered palms, the green of cypress wood.

And in a garden once for beauty famed,
A marble statue stood, a godlike form
Conceived by ancient art—defaced and maimed
By ages of decay, by ruthless storm.

The pagan peoples, who with rythmic song
And graceful dance had crowned its lusty grace,
Were mingled dust through ages long,
And it, alone, survived a glorious race.

Long had the winds been bearing o'er the sea
And to this island god, the groans of man,
The gasps of starving babes, the tortured plea
Of pain, the curse of those beneath the ban.

And thus a miracle had come to pass,
For all this woe had knit into a heart
That bled beneath the breast of stone, alas!
Because it could not help to bear a part

For unlike man's, this heart within the stone
Could never love and thus some peace attain—
Nor share the woe that grew with ev'ry moan,
Nor could it break beneath its weight of pain!

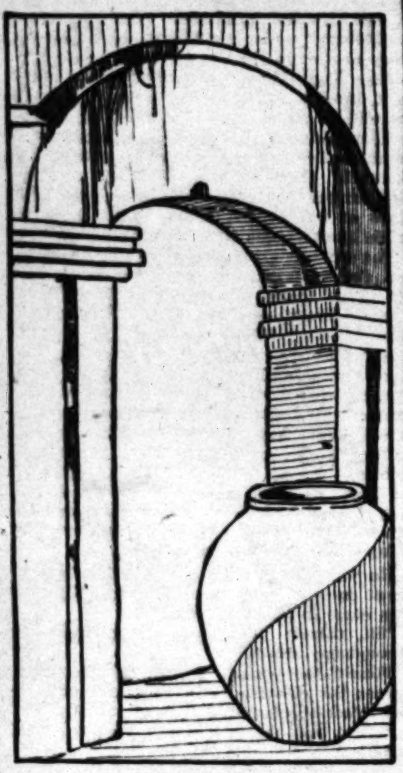
THE HOW IN HOUSES

HOW TO PLAN HOW TO BUY HOW TO SAVE

THE SPANISH COLONIAL HOUSE.

THE similarity between the climatic conditions of Spain and Southern California makes the adoption of Spanish architectural forms and decorations especially appropriate. When we say Spanish decorations and furniture we do not refer to that style, once so popular, called mission furniture.

Spanish colonial architecture as found in Mexico and parts of our Southwest has had an interesting development. The friars who came first to Mexico were poor and utility was the sole consideration in the structures which were erected for them by the Indians. Therefore the buildings were, for the most part, unadorned. They needed protection both from the inhabitants and from the sun; therefore the buildings were low, the walls thick and the eaves broad and overhanging. To resist possible earthquakes the structures took on a stability which gave the appearance of severity and somberness.



Entrance Arch.

The Concentration of Ornament on a Few Salient Points.

THEN the wealth of the eighteenth century produced a wonderful change. The people had both the time and the money to spend on decoration. And here we need to learn from them, in decorating our rooms, to concentrate the ornament at a few salient points, leaving broad surfaces to themselves. This fact, as well as the conscious producing of shadows by arches and deep windows, lends to this style of architecture a forceful picturesqueness which no other possesses.

No two of their buildings were constructed or decorated alike, but were planned, as ours must be, to suit the special environment and economic condition.

The characteristic form of construction of the house is around a patio, inclosed by the house on either three or four sides, which secludes the domestic life. They took the garden within, as it could not be trusted without. In California, where this style is so well suited to climatic and social conditions, the front porch is rapidly disappearing, being replaced by the inclosed garden or patio.

A Pleasing Feature is the Patio With Its Fountain.

AROUND the patio were wrought iron balconies and arcades with iron hanging lamps. The stuccoed wall had a gate and wicket which was reached by a corridor or tesselated pavement. A fountain usually occupied the center, surrounded by beds of flowers which, with the walks, formed a patterned floor.

The modern patio may have a glass roof. In one house where the skylight is 24x30 feet, it is constructed on an iron track with ball-bearing bronze wheels and is pushed back on the roof in summer.

Many kinds of shrubs and trees were planted within these inclosures, of which we find the following mentioned: fig, bay, cedar, magnolia, pomegranate, persimmon, orange, lemon, oleander, guava, banana, chinaberry and palmetto. Over the walls climbed wistaria, rose and clematis vines.

Tiled Pools, Walks and Benches Are Attractive Features.

THE court was paved with large, flat stones, brick or black and white marble, sometimes in patterns. The rooms contained vaulted ceilings of soft red brick or stone covered with plaster. Glazed tile was used for decoration, both inside and out. This, in the early structures, showed the Arab influence. These Moorish tiles are wonderful in color and texture. In America we have succeeded in producing some most distinctive tiles which are especially suited to the decoration of the rough plaster or concrete used in Spanish houses. Unusually decorative effects may be produced in tiled pools, walks and benches in outdoor or indoor gardens.

The Spanish have long appreciated the value of color as a stimulant and the effect of color combinations on the esthetic sense. They have made effective use of red, yellow, gold and blue in their decorations. We never tire of their cream-colored walls, blue-green window trim, venetian red eaves and tiled roof. How much better is this cream-col- sun, than the glaring white that is some- ored plaster in a land where there is much times used. The broad striped awning also adds a color note which is effective. Many of the original colors used have faded, but we find in sections the repeated use of dull red with blue, yellow and black and also chrome and black. Many of the floors are made of large red tile.

The patio is unfinished if it does not contain one or several water jars. In dry sections water for household use was kept in these jars, sometimes almost large enough to contain the Forty Thieves. These are often in color and the smaller ones stand on pedestals. In a corner of the wall or at each end of an oblong pond or fountain basin they are an acknowledged decoration. Sometimes they are planted with flowers, but it is better not to do this as they were not originally intended for flower pots and some respect for tradition must be preserved.

The dome, or half orange as it is often called, is used not only on the exteriors of the buildings but may be repeated as a motif in lamp shades, in niches and in semicircular glass decorations over the doors.

Wrought Iron Accessories Belong to the Spanish Type.

NOT only the Spanish, but the Indians in Mexico, were quite expert in the use of wrought iron for railings, lamps, bolts, knockers and andirons. All of these are used in the decoration of Spanish interiors today. Plate glass doors ornamented with iron grills, low casement windows with small iron balconies and iron decorations around the fireplace are architectural features.

Wrought iron wall lights as well as floor lamps have silk or parchment shades. The parchment shades are suitable both on account of the material and the color. Hanging lamps also are used.

Tapestries and draperies are much used and are effective with the plain-toned plaster walls. Oriental fabrics brought to Mexico by sailors from the Philippines, as well as from China and Japan, were found in many of the missions. These fabrics, especially the lighter linens and silks, are more appropriate for use in California than are many of the heavier hangings sometimes used. Many of the ornate fabrics can be used here that would be less suitable with walls that were decorated with a decided color or pattern.

WOOD carving and decorations and carving on leather are both much used. The Indians carved many benches, using the symbols of the elements and their gods. Chairs are covered with ornamented leather or covers of silk. Tile has in most places replaced the wood carving formerly used around fireplaces.

There are firms making period handles and knockers from whom there may be bought suitable metal fixtures.

There is still much to be done in the manufacture of suitable materials and designs for this style of architecture. Less attention has been paid to it than to other styles, except by a few concerns. This is more fundamentally American than any other style and many features of it are adaptable in other sections of the country. It is an expression of the needs and the feelings of a modest, thoughtful and persevering people. How much of their real distinction do we lack when we overload our houses with unnecessary things which spoil the simplicity of broad surfaces—a decoration in themselves.

Side Lights.

CONSIDERING THE LAMP.

In selecting a lamp, the height should be determined by the height of the furniture with which it is to be grouped. If it is to be grouped with a table and a chair the proportion is better if the back of the chair reaches about two-thirds of the distance up on the lamp. The light at this height is also suitable for reading, but if used only for illumination the lamp may be higher. The color of the shade, especially the tone of the under side, must be carefully chosen. Some tone of pink or yellow is best as it gives the softest light and is much better than are tones of blue or green. If pink or yellow is not suitable for the whole shade and does not blend with the other colors of the room it may be used as the lining, with another color used over it. The color of parchment gives a very good light quality which helps to popularize this style of shade.

ROLLER SHADE LACE CURTAINS.

Don't despise all lace curtains because some you have seen have been atrocious. A very attractive window decoration for rooms where much light is needed from the windows, are linen and lace curtains on rollers in place of the regular roller shade. These are very well suited to be used on casement windows, which are often a problem in curtaining. All-over lace patterns in flowers, bird and conventional designs are attractive when used this way. Austrian cloth edged with lace is used for both drapes and shades. This cloth may be bought for less than a dollar a yard.

It is earier to come back physically from one's vacation than to come back financially.—[Boston Transcript.

YOSEMITE, THE GLORY OF THE GOLDEN STATE

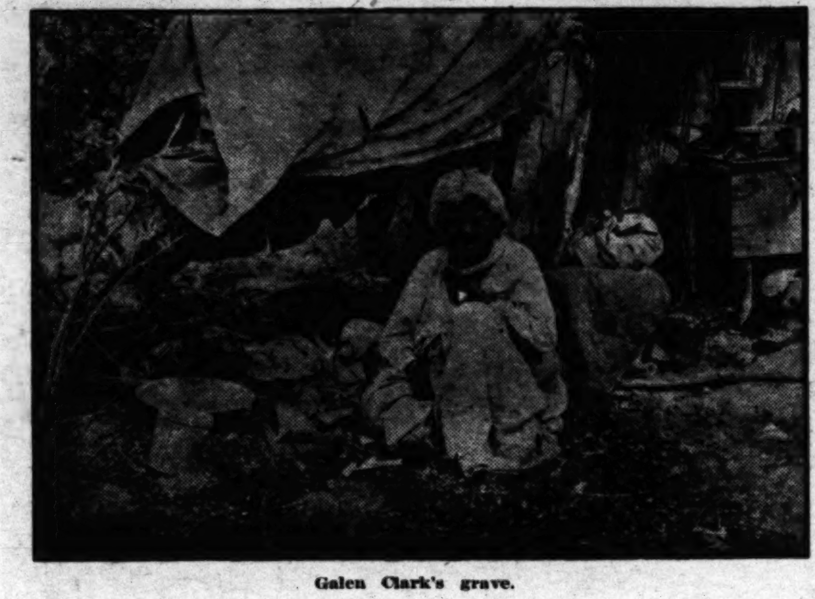
Clark, who was the guardian of the valley for so many years, is buried, and where James Lamon, the first actual white settler of the valley, lies peacefully sleeping; an afternoon jaunt to Bridal Veil Fall to see the rainbows; picnics among the Happy Isles; moonlight excursions to Yosemite Falls, where the wonderful lunar rainbows are seen; and rambles through the woods and meadows as varied as one chooses to make them.

There Are Indians Still Living in the Yosemite.

THE Indian village and the cemetery are not far apart, and both may easily be visited the same half-day. The forenoon is the better time. Visit the Indian village first, for at that time you will be more likely to find the inhabitants at home and stirring around at their morning tasks. Perhaps you will find one of the women roasting or grinding acorns, as was my good fortune when I once visited the camp. I also found "Old Mary" weaving at a basket. She was sitting in the shadow and it cost me "four-bits" to get her out where the light was good and pose for a picture. A sure way to drive the Indians into their huts is to try to take snapshots without first buying them off.



Galen Clark's grave.

The most characteristically Indian things about the village are the storehouses, of which there are three or four. They are built after the old Indian fashion, set up on posts to protect the provisions from animal marauders, and thatched with grass to keep them dry. I have noticed, however, that the owners don't fully trust the grass thatch, but add a piece of canvas for surety.

The Indian village is situated just in front of Indian Canyon, by the side of Indian Creek, upon which they depend for water. To reach it, follow the most northern of the two roads north of the river. Where this crosses Indian Creek, a road branches off upstream to the village.

Big-Trees Are the Unique and Striking Mōnumem of Galen Clark.

THE cemetery is about half a mile west of the Indian village, on the opposite side of the road. It contains probably forty or fifty graves. I have been there several times, but there are only three of the graves which I shall always remember, those of Clark, Lamon and Hutchings, men whose lives were intimately connected with the history of the valley. The sequoias which Galen Clark brought from the Mariposa Grove many years ago as tiny seedlings and planted on the lot where he is buried, and which he tended with solicitous care until they were well-rooted, have grown to be respectable saplings—as big trees go—and look as if they were scheduled for an existence of several thousand years. The old Yosemite pioneer is likely to have as striking a monument, and one that may prove to be almost as long-lived, as do the ancient kings of Egypt in their vast pyramids.

Lamon's grave is marked with a monument that is fairly eloquent with sentiment. It is a fragment of what was once the third one of the Cathedral Spires. It seems that when the valley was discovered by the whites, in 1851, there were three pinnacles of the aCthedral Spires. Before the place was again visited by white men, one of these had fallen. After Lamon's death, his old friend, John Conway—trail-builder in the Yosemite for many years—brought a fragment of the Cathedral Spires. Before the place place at the foot of the Cathedral Spires and placed it at his grave.

"Old Mary" at the Indian Village.

THE PLEASANT ELLEN.

courts below the hotel suddenly came the laughing sound of girls' voices. For a moment the old man stood there looking out over the valley. Then, with a sigh, he lifted his sack over his shoulder, clutched his bundle of canes, and started up the trail.

The sun had already gone from his side of the canyon, though the high western slopes of old Whiteface were still bright, when the trail, which had steadily climbed, suddenly began to run down into the canyon. All at once the old man stopped and listened. Then he quickened his footsteps, shuffling clumsily down the path, his sack bumping against his shoulder, his canes rattling. The trail descended steadily for five minutes or more. Then, suddenly it ran out into a little level saucer of land across which bubbled the stream which Uncle Joe had heard from above. The old man threw off his pack, knelt down on a convenient rock and, making a cup of his hands, took several deep drinks of the water. Then he sat back on his heels and looked about him. Suddenly he gave an exclamation. He had just caught sight of a small, gray cabin across the stream. Taking up his pack, he splashed noisily through the shallow, brown water. He went around to the front of the cabin. Then his face fell. Windows and doors were boarded up, a pile of chairs and tables were heaped up under a shed, while a sign nailed across the door read, "Sierra Camp. Open July 1."

The old man read it aloud. "Well, I guess I'll have to wait some time for the folks!" He laughed rather dolefully.

He laid his things down and wandered about the camp, finding only deserted cabins and tent floors. Finally he came back and sat down on the edge of the porch, where he had laid his sack. For a few moments he sat there, staring silently at the slopes of the mountain which rose about him. The sunshine had left even the farthest peak now, a chilly little breeze began to drift up the canyon. A tiny shiver ran up along the old man's back. Suddenly he jumped.

"Gosh! What was that!" Then he grinned sheepishly. A gray lizard had run across the porch and lay panting, gazing up at him from the step. The old man rose stiffly. With a little sigh he went over to his bulging sack and got out his roll of blankets and his lunch. Solemnly he sat on the edge of the porch munching his sandwiches and hard-boiled eggs. Having finished his supper, he went down to the stream for a drink. As he knelt there in the twilight, he caught sight of something yellow under the water. He bent over, staring at it, his eyes big. Suddenly he plunged his hand into the icy water and drew it out full of sand and gravel. Hurriedly he pulled out his handkerchief, emptied the sand into it, and carried it back to the tenthouse. He spread it out on the floor and peered at it in the dusk. But, all of a sudden, it was too dark to see anything. He got up and began to paw about in his sack. But his fumbling hands seemed to find everything else but matches. Finally he gave up in despair and carefully folded the handkerchief up. He put it into his pocket, took off his shoes, rolled himself up in his blankets and lay down on the floor.

"I'll get the twins one of them patent coasters they're so crazy about, an' Jim——" he was saying to himself, when suddenly he sat up with a start. The sunshine lay across the floor of the porch in great streaks. Two boys were bending over him.

"Say, daddy, it's sure a shame to disturb your nap, but can you tell us which trail takes you out? We sort of lost our bearings last night," said one of them.

Uncle Joe, his face streaked with dust, his beard full of leaves and pine needles, stared at them in bewilderment. "Why, where be I?" He looked around him at the deserted cabins and the mountains. "Shucks! I clean forgot where I was!" he said sheepishly. He pointed in the direction in which he had come into the camp the night before. "If you want to git out by Emporium, that's the trail I come over from there."

The boys thanked him and were half-way down to the stream, when suddenly the old man started to his feet and called to them. "Here! You wait a minute! I got something—I—" He was fumbling in his pocket. Finally he drew out something wrapped in a handkerchief. He stumbled after the boys.

"Look—I ain't never seen none before—p'raps you can tell me—is it gold?" His voice sank to a hoarse whisper on the last word. He unfolded the handkerchief with shaking hands.

The boys bent over it curiously. The older one took up a piece of the gravel and scrutinized it. Then he shook his head. "No, that ain't no gold. Them's just little specks of mica in it. What made you think it was gold, granddaddy?" They looked at the old man curiously. Then, as he made no answer, they slung their packs up again and started off up the trail, with one or two backward glances in his direction.

Uncle Joe stood for a few minutes where they had left him. With a stubby forefinger he turned the pieces of gravel over, one by one. "Last night it was all yellow and shiny, and now——" Suddenly he turned and, flinging the handkerchief full of gravel onto the ground, walked slowly back to the porch where he had left his sack. He took out his package of lunch and ate two jelly sandwiches, a hard-boiled egg, and some watermelon pickle. After his meal was finished he sat staring before him for a few minutes. Finally he rose. "Well, guess I better be getting along," he said, with a little sigh. Awkwardly he lifted his sack onto his back, took his bundle of canes and his pick, and started off.

He made slow progress this morning, for the trail circled up and up across a slope against which the sun beat mercilessly. His canteen had long been empty and the hands of his round-faced nickel watch pointed to 3 o'clock, when he finally came to a place where another trail turned off from the one he had been following. He threw down his pack and dropped down in a patch of shade under a rock.

"I declar, seems 'sif I was 'most beat out." He lay there panting, staring up at the two trails. The upper one climbed higher and higher until finally, it crept out of sight over one of the mountain's topmost ridges. Uncle Joe peered up at it. "Don't seem like 'The Pleasant Ellen' could be way up there!" he said to himself. He looked at the other trail. It seemed to drop into the canyon. "I've allus sort of thought 'twould be down where it was cool an' nice." At last, with a sigh, he rose and, with a [illegible] glance at the old trail, started down the [illegible].

Although this trail descended as steeply as the first had climbed, Uncle Joe went along very slowly. Several times he stopped to rest. About sunset, however, he finally reached the bottom of the canyon and a fair-sized stream. Throwing down his things, the old man knelt down by the water and dipped his tin cup into it several times. After he had drunk until he could drink no more and bathed off his face and hands, he sat back on his heels and looked about him. It was a green, little open place among the mountains in which he found himself. His eyes, burning from the glare of the sun on the upper trail, rested on cool greenness about him with relief. They wandered off up a little flat valley which opened out of the main canyon. He sat there looking up across it. Suddenly an eager look came into his faded blue eyes. He got up and stood staring about him, at the stream, at the trees, at the little valley.

"Gosh! I believe it's it! 'The Pleasant Ellen!' " he cried. For a moment he stood there, gazing about him. Then, rather suddenly, his legs trembled under him and he sat down. "Gosh! It's all just 'bout exactly as I thought 'twould be! Just exactly! Seems 'sif it must be it!" He murmured to himself.

There he sat, while the last rays of the sun crept over the top of the eastern canyon wall and a light mist began to rise along the bank of the stream. All at once, with a little start, he got up stiffly. Whistling "Annie Rooney" under his breath, he began to stoop around in the underbrush hunting for sticks. They were hard to find in the half-light, though, and presently he gave up the search and came back to the place where he had left his sack. He fumbled around in its depths and drew out the remaining remnant of lunch. He made his supper off a crumpled sandwich, two dry cookies and the last piece of watermelon pickle, rolled himself in his blankets and was asleep in a moment.

The sun was streaming down into the canyon the next morning when he woke. He sat up and looked about him, blinking. Then a smile broke over his face. "I've found 'The Pleasant Ellen!' he said. Slowly he rose, with one or two involuntary grunts. He stood stretching himself. Suddenly, his eyes opened wide and he stood staring at the canyon wall about a hundred feet across the stream from him, across the little, green valley. For a moment he stood there motionless. Then, with hands that trembled, he seized his pick, dashed across the foaming, shallow stream, up across the little valley, to where the sun shone full upon something which sparkled in its light.

He was half-way across the valley when, all at once, a man's voice behind him made him come to an abrupt stop.

"Hi, there! What you doing, tracking through my alfalfa?"

"Uncle Joe turned. Behind him, coming across the clearing in great strides, was a tall, black-bearded man in blue overalls.

"What you doing, I say?" repeated the stranger.

Uncle Joe stared at him, speechless. Finally, he raised one hand, and pointed to the ENTERING a public bar in the old days, a wanderer asked for a pint of beer. He started to drink it, and at the same time to put his hand into his pocket for the money to pay for it.

Finding that he was a nickel short, he said nothing, but continued to drink the remainder of his beer. When he had finished he placed a nickel on the counter and made for the door.

"Hi, mister!" shouted the barman after him. "You're a nickel short!"

"Count again," retorted the tramp, "and you will find it's yourself that's short!"

Too Swift.

NO PRESIDENT ever traveled as much as did ex-President Taft, now Chief Justice. Apropos of his many absences from the White House, they used to tell a story of a couple on their bridal tour who arrived in Washington one morning. The groom approached one of the station guards and said:

"We are on our honeymoon and we are very anxious to see President Taft. I suppose the best plan would be for us to check our baggage and go right up to the White House and hang around the entrance until he comes out, wouldn't it?"

"If you are anxious to get a close-up of the President, my advice to you is to stay right where you are. You've got a better chance to see him by staying right here than going up to the White House. Ever since he has been President he is always going or coming out of this station," replied the guard.

On Mr. Taft's first speaking tour West, while he was Secretary of War, he waxed warm in one of his speeches made from the rear platform of his car, about Kansas, its soil, its crops and its pretty women.

"Hell," interrupted a man on the outside of the crowd, "you've been in Iowa for three hours."

There Are Some.

"THERE'S many a true word spoken in typographical errors," said Upton Sinclair, the novelist, as he sat under a Pasadena palm, correcting the proofs of his last book.

"You remember the error that made a 'thriving young lawyer' a 'thieving young lawyer?' I have no doubt there was some truth in that.

"Well, in a recent magazine story of mine a chap who was suing his employer for damages for a broken leg sustained in a fall of three stories was made to say to the judge: " 'Mine is one of the dangerous trades, your honor. I am a widow cleaner.' "

In Sunny Spain.

ELINOR GLYN, the novelist, was talking to a reporter about her long visit in Spain.

"The death rate for babies is fearful in Spain," she said. "If it were not for that sad fact the world would soon contain more Spaniards than Chinese; for the Spanish are a remarkably prolific race. Families of fifteen and even twenty children are not uncommon among them.

"But these children die off in their infancy because their mothers are so very ignorant of hygiene. I once heard two Spanish doctors joking—joking bitterly, you know—about this maternal ignorance which does so much harm.

" 'Yes,' said the first doctor, 'Donna Pilar's new baby died off, of course. At the age of two months she was feeding it on pork, cheese and wine.'

" 'Pork, cheese and wine—a good diet that for a two-months-old baby,' said the second doctor. 'The rich Homers, though, have a better one for their youngster. They give it for dinner every evening a brace of chops, fried potatoes, sweet pudding and a stiff whisky and soda, with coffee, liquor and a good strong Havana cigar to follow.' "

Enough is Enough.

INCREASED traffic facilities, tunnels, and the many projected plans for increasing transportation conditions will not benefit the traveler for long, according to an official of a large corporation. The number of business firms which will establish Los Angeles offices as soon as new lines of traffic will permit them will, added the official, quickly eat up all the added space.

"It reminds me of a story of a member of the American commission which lately visited Japan," he continued. "The American, watching a suburban train pull out of a Tokio station with platforms and even roofs packed with commuters, asked his Japanese host, 'Why don't you put on another train?'

" 'What's the use?' was the answer, 'they would only fill it up again.' "

Unusual.

THE teacher was struggling with a class of 6-year-olds of foreign parentage. Sometimes the older brothers or sisters brought them to school to be admitted, and quite often the required information for their record cards was obtained from them. The teacher had been patiently and tactfully trying to extract some of the missing data.

"What is your father's first name?" she asked dark-haired, wide-eyed Minnie.

"I don't know," answered Minnie, with a shoulder shrug.

"But you must know, Minnie. Think! What name does your mother call your father?"

Minnie smiled proudly and affectionately. "My mama don't call my papa no names," she answered promptly. "She likes him."

Point of View.

AT A recent cricket match in the north of England two local sides were ready to start to play when they suddenly discovered that one of the umpires had failed to put in an appearance.

The local grocer was appointed as substitute. All went well until a "Yorker" came down and glanced off the turf onto the batsman's leg.

"How's that?" cried the bowler.

"Hout!" said the grocer.

But the batsman remonstrated.

"My leg isn't in front of my wicket!" he declared angrily.

"Ain't it?" retorted the grocer. "Well, just leave it where it is, and come along to my end and look for yourself."

Evading the Stickers.

BISHOP HUGHES was talking about agnosticism at a luncheon in Portland.

"An agnostic asked me once," he said, "if I didn't come across a good many things in the Bible that I couldn't understand.

" 'Of course, I do,' said I.

" 'Well,' said the agnostic, 'what do you do about it?'

" 'My dear friend,' I answered, 'I do just as I would while eating a nice bit of planked shad. When I come to a bone I calmly lay it on one side and go on enjoying the delicious shad meat, letting any idiot who insists on choking himself on the bones do so.' "

Diplomacy.

SENATOR LAFOLLETTE said at a dinner in Madison:

"I am glad that we have kept out of the League of Nations—out of the scramble to strip Germany.

"Yes, I am glad we are not in the scramble which England and France are making for Germany's possessions. England and France are polite to each other in this scramble, still they remind me of little Tommy.

"Little Tommy and sister May were told that there were two apples on the dining-room table for them. They hurried to the dining-room. Tommy said:

" 'Take your choice, May.'

" 'No,' said May, 'you take your choice.'

"Each kept insisting that the other take first choice, and each kept eyeing the two apples, one very big and juicy, the other small and green.

" 'Take your choice, May.'

" 'No, Tommy, you take your choice.'

"Finally May broke the deadlock. She reached out and took the bigger apple. But Tommy was on her like a ton of bricks.

" 'Put that back and take your choice!' he yelled furiously."

Eye to Business.

A TRAVELING salesman driving his car along a country road came upon a victim of a grade crossing accident. The car was a complete wreck and its former occupant just "coming to." He leaned over the injured man and shook him.

"What's the matter, brother, an accident?"

"Yes."

"Didn't the engineer blow his whistle?"

"No."

"Did anyone see it?"

"No."

"Well, tell me, has the claim agent been around yet?"

"No."

"Then, for heaven's sake move over and let me lie down."

Perspective.

THEY are telling in Greenwich Village a story about Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, whose exposition of sculpture has had a wonderful success in Paris and London.

Mrs. Whitney was sketching one day in the country when a young farmer came and stood staring over her shoulder while she worked.

Though this sort of thing always annoys her, she worked on in patient silence, while the farmer breathed heavily in her ear. Finally though, the man began to criticise.

"It ain't bad," he said; and then he screwed up his eyes and added, "It seems to look better further off."

Mrs. Whitney laughed.

"Well," she said, "so would you."

Turned the Tables.

"WHAT do you men know of women's work?" fiercely queried the lady orator.

"Is there a man here," she continued, folding her arms, "who has, day after day, got up in the morning, gone quietly downstairs, made the fire cooked the breakfast, sewed the buttons on the children's clothes, cleaned the pots and pans, and swept the kitchen, and so on? If there is such a man in the audience let him rise up. I should like to see him."

In the rear of the hall a mild-looking man in spectacles timidly arose. He was the husband of the eloquent speaker.

This was the first chance he had ever had to assert himself.

Up Against It.

SENATOR HIRAM JOHNSON was discussing the various restrictions which it is proposed to put on immigration.

"We certainly have got to restrict immigration somehow or other," he said, "or the immigrants won't leave the native population room to breathe.

"Conditions in Europe since the war are so bad that practically everybody wants to come here. I said to an immigrant the other day:

" 'You immigrants all succeed remarkably in America. I wonder why it is?'

" 'It's because,' the immigrant answered, 'we know that if we don't succeed we will have to go back and live in our own land again.' "

Thompson was interested, but Robb was quiet and seemed drowsy. Suddenly he brightened up.

"I saw three of them playing marbles in front of the postoffice this morning," he remarked.

"Why, what's the matter with you, Robb?" asked Mr. Barker. "I'm talking about snails."

"Well, I'm talking about messenger boys," said Robb. "Go on with your conversation."

that the growers of Imperial Valley were

"I have my gun," said Dolores. "Didn't you bring yours?"

"No, my camera and acetylene reading lamp and a few books made so much extra weight, that I left it at home."

"Well, you read to them while I shoot them," Dolores laughed.

And so they soon found themselves comfortably settled in the old shack. With the sighing pines and the occasional plaint of an owl, and even at times the cry of a bobcat far away, the old place with its open blaze, and the tin dishes on the rude table that Dolores was setting, seemed fairly to gleam with coziness. Doubtless the acetylene reading lamp would have added tone to the place, but Merton had not yet unpacked it and his books; Dolores had seemed to have forgotten to do it for him; so they got along very well by the ruddy light of the fire.

"This is something like!" Pete went on, sniffing at the savor of frying bacon, coming from the shed kitchen. "This is how I have always wanted to live! Is this place yours, Mertie, or do you rent it?"

"It belongs to a friend of mine, my partner's brother. Any of us use it that want to come."

"Say, I'd want to come often!" Pete stretched out his feet, and they met an obstruction. Lazily, he raised his head, and looked to see what he was kicking.

"What is this fellow I'm lying on? A mountain lion?"

"Yes."

"Do they grow this big around here?" Pete asked in surprise.

"This one did. He looked larger than that when he was alive."

"You saw him alive?"

"You see a scar there on my shoulder?" Merton went to great pains to remove his collar and necktie and open back his shirt. Pete was able to see by close examination a faint mark.

"Did that fellow do it?" he asked with interest.

"I guess you must not have read my letters I wrote home. I told all about it."

"I was pretty busy going to school then. I had a hard teacher in the fifth grade." Pete was quite apologetic.

"Oh, it doesn't matter. You'd have heard about it if I had been killed all right."

"Did you come near it?"

"Did I? I met that beast in close quarters down a ravine about half a mile from here. I shot at him and wounded him, and from then it was a hand-to-hand fight, you might say. But he didn't get me, after all."

Pete was examining the lion's skin closely.

"Look!" he exclaimed, parting the fur on the head. "There's the place where you shot him—that little hole."

"But you see, I was so close I couldn't get a good aim. It wasn't my shot that killed him. She had a better chance, and got him."

"Who? She? Who?"

"Dolores."

Springing up, Pete confronted Dolores, who was coming in with a skillet of bacon and crisp fried potatoes.

"Merton's been telling me about that mountain lion you killed."

"Did he show you his scar?" Dolores asked. Something in her face made Pete afraid that she would begin laughing and crying if he said much to her just then. He ignored the question.

"You ought to take that rug home to keep. I would. Somebody might steal it up here."

"I had it cured and made up," Merton interrupted, but somehow Dolores never has liked it."

"To me it smells of something unpleasant," Dolores said, and went into the kitchen.

"Well, just think of Dolores killing that!" Pete gloated. "She is the best girl I ever want to see." He smoothed the tawny fur and moving over from the shaggy bearskin which divided honors in front of the fireplace, laid his face on Dolores's victim.

"It doesn't smell," he said judicially, "or at least it wouldn't if you'd air it awhile."

"I think she hates it because it tried to kill me,' Merton explained in a low tone. "She has always been sort of queer about the whole affair. Sometimes I could hardly make out how she felt."

Pete said nothing more on the subject, as he lay on the flattened panther, staring into the ever-changing pictures of the fire. But in going past Dolores as she sat by the little table after their simple supper, he managed to catch one of his coat buttons in her hair and gave her an unmerciful start. That, in Pete, was an almost unheard of evidence of the deepest admiration and understanding. Luckily Dolores took it in the spirit in which it was meant, having had brothers of her own. And when he snapped at her with a wet dish towel while helping in the kitchen afterward, she felt such a cheering glow of human sympathy that she prolonged the dish-washing as much as possible.

The six weeks took wings and flew. Dolores grew more silent as the time went by. Pete climbed, explored and hunted small game feverishly. Merton, after his rambles in the pine-scented mountains looked with some distaste to his return to the store. He even spoke vaguely of getting a ranch some of these days. Pete was jubilant.

"Say, Dolores," he whispered when they were fishing one morning, "I think old Mertie will buy that ranch yet. If he does, I'll not go back home; we'll send for Mother, and all of us can live out here. I bet I could ride the range all right."

"I don't know, Pete," Dolores said doubtfully. "Merton has sold dry goods and gone to tea parties so long, that I haven't much hope left. It seems to be he gets worse every year."

"He's only 30 now. Won't he be the prize lemon squeezer if he keeps on?"

"I hoped things would change when we got him out here, Pete."

"Don't you think he is just a little better—there's the ranch, and—he shot a rabbit yesterday, hit it the first pop."

Dolores shook her head.

"And Merton isn't bad. He just don't know what's the matter with him."

"No, he is so good to me that I'm ashamed of myself to think about him this way. And I love him so that I can't bear to see him so—so— Oh Pete, if only he'd get mad and just raise thunder once, just to show that he could—I would be the happiest woman alive."

"What'd he have to get mad about?"

"I don't know—the kitchen stove, maybe—but he just gets more kindling and tries again."

Pete kept a gloomy silence. The troubles of Dolores weighed more heavily upon him than anything his honest, freckled person had encountered hitherto.

"Yesterday, when we were crossing that deepest place in the creek, I was about to let myself fall off the log. I thought he might try to save me. It wouldn't make any difference whether he did or not; if I drowned knowing he tried, I should be dying happy, at least."

"Dolores!" Pete shook her by the shoulder roughly. "Don't you get that way, wanting to croak yourself. You're crazy when you talk like that. Mertie is lazy, and acts like some old maid, but he'd come out of it if something happened. It's like I said once, if he ever got real mad and had a big fight he'd be all right."

"Who is there to fight with him, and what would they fight about?"

"Well, I just wish some big, strong guy the size of Merton would start in to take you away from him. That would be a good start. That would make him the maddest."

Dolores laughed scornfully. "No danger of that!"

"Well, I wish it would happen, and happen quick. I wish a big Indian would come busting out of the woods—"

A furious shouting for help brought both Pete and Dolores to their feet. Dolores seized the rifle that had lain beside her on the ground, and stood breathless, wide-eyed.

The shouts were coming nearer, and the sound of someone running.

"Is it Merton?" she gasped.

"I never heard him holler so before; I don't know."

"Merton!" Dolores screamed. He was coming through the forest on a break-neck, desperate run, and close behind him was an earnest she-bear.

"Help! Dolores!" Merton had evidently not seen his wife and Pete until he was almost upon them. His eyes were glazed with terror. With a death grip he clung to a short-handled ax with which he had started out a short time before to get poles for a new porch railing for the shack. At sight of her husband pursued by the ugly beast, Dolores, less steady of nerve than when she had seen the mountain lion, turned pale and let the rifle fall. Merton had gone a trifle past her before he could stop and turn about, and he, Dolores, and Pete, all stood face to face with the angry bear. And Dolores was nearest.

The bear moved forward a bit, snarling with menace.

"She and her cubs attacked me, and when I drove them off, and started to run, she chased me," Merton began the tale as if he were telling it at his own fireside. But his teeth were chattering.

[illegible] Merton gasped, as the bear made another movement.

Hardly looking at the bear, she turned full upon Merton. At first her eyes were wide an vacant, but as she looked at her trembling husband, a queer light of frightful pity and disgust flamed up, and her lips curled like those of some hateful serpent in woman form. She bent slowly and groped for the gun she had dropped.

"Dolores!" Pete turned white under his freckles. "Dolores! don't look like that, don't you dare!"

He snatched the rifle from under her hands and flung it into the middle of the little stream. Dolores stood, gazing at the place where it splashed, and the vacant look came back into her eyes. She did not even turn to look at the bear, which, puzzled by the addition of more enemies, was a little slow to start operations, although she was advancing steadily.

Like a crazy boy, Pete leaped and shouted before Merton to wake him from his seeming trance. They were like wooden dummies, those two; the frightened man, and the woman who both loved him and despised him.

"Merton! Save her! Save Dolores! The ax—the ax—kill the bear!"

Looking helplessly at the ax, at Dolores, at Pete, and at the bear, in turn, Merton moved forward.

The act hurried the bear's plans, and she rose fiercely on her hind feet, striking Dolores a glancing blow on the head, which sent her stumbling forward against Pete. Left alone with the beast, Merton saw her in all her hideousness; the teeth gleaming in her horrid jaws; the red road traveled last by whatever had been weaker than she; a faint breeze brought her evil odor to his nostrils and sickened him. He backed off a few steps.

"Coward!" taunted Pete. "Dolores knows you are a sissy, I'm glad she has fainted and doesn't know you're a coward besides. You yell for your wife to kill your bears and lions. Yah! White-liver, Yah!"

The red rushed to Merton's face and neck, and the veins stood out alarmingly. He seemed to stiffen all over, and he lifted the arm and hand that held the ax. He rumbled some awkward oath.

Encouraged, Pete redoubled his invectives. With a hoarse cry that might have come from a cave dweller, Merton sprang at the bear. Once again in history, an audience had made possible what nothing else could have brought about. Seeing that Merton no longer needed encouragement, Pete threw water in Dolores's face so that she, too, might revive and get the full benefit of the prowess of her husband.

And it was no usual sight that her bewildered eyes saw.

Within arms' reach of each other, the man and the bear fought. Striking out furiously with her paws, snapping, snarling, growling when a stroke from Merton's ax took effect through her thick hide, the bear was a grotesque, unreal, monster. But the effect of her power was only too apparent. With a single blow she cut open Merton's shoulder and blood was added to the horror of the combat in fresh quantities from moment to moment. Not all of it was human. A wound in the shaggy neck was doing its full part.

Not so much scared as excited, Pete gathered a heap of stones, short heavy pieces of fallen branches, anything he could find that might be of help to his brother. Of the outcome he had no doubt. He was acquainted with the bears of rather temporary, but appealing literature in which man's peculiar brain power eventually overcomes the members of the brute creation.

One advantage Metron and over his opponent: not that he used his mind, but that he had longer arms than the bear. Once he was able to get a grip upon the hairy throat just beneath the jaw, and by main strength, aided by fury of killing, a great tonic to primitive force, he held off the animal for fully ten seconds—not long, but long enough to get in a crushing blow on the [illegible] shoulder. The animal did not flinch, but her aim and accuracy fell off noticeably.

"Give it to 'er, Mertie!" cheered Pete.

Dolores was moaning and alternately hiding her eyes and then straining them to see what harm each blow had done. Aimlessly now a part of the time, the bear's paws swept the air, and Merton was becoming careless. The way opened up; he was dealing a heavy cut with the ax upon the same spot where he had struck before, when a left swing from the bear struck him full in the side, throwing him off his feet and down the bank of the creek.

Instantly Pete and Dolores were down and after him. The water was not deep, and they dragged him out to the edge and peered fearfully upward, expecting to finish the battle with bruin themselves; for Merton was too dazed to move. A queer gasping and moaning showed that he was just getting his breath back again after having it knocked out.

No bear appeared. Had she decided to go off? Had she had enough for one day? Cautiously Pete stuck his head above the edge of the bank. Dolores tried to pull him back by the feet when he made a sudden scramble upward. She had seen enough valor to last for a while.

"Let me go! She's dead! The old bear's dead, all in a heap."

And so she was, with Merton's ax still sticking in her skull. Pete and Dolores looked with awe and respect. That last even exchange of blows seemed solemn and terrible. If there had been no one there to get Merton out of the water, it would have been a life for a life. Dolores broke down and cried after they had helped him home, and had strapped up his two broken ribs as best they could, and had stopped the bleeding from his shoulder and the numerous scratches that appeared upon examination.

Pete felt rather unnecessary at the time, and set off into the woods after the cubs of the old bear. He saw them, but they were big enough to look out for themselves. They made a hasty escape up a heavily wooded gully. Pete did not follow. He surmised that father bear might appear on the scene. Instead, he struck into the woods to the scene of the late battle, removed his clothes, and spent a few anxious minutes groping for the rifle he had thrown into the creek. He found it.

Again carefully dressed, he experimented with the bear, and finding her quite lean, he tied her hind feet together, inserted the rifle between them, and arrived home about supper time, dragging the quarry with him. All evening he seemed not to be needed, so he spent the time out in the kitchen by an oil lamp, cleaning the mud out of Dolores's gun.

In spite of the condition of the bear's hide, scanty of hair, badly cut here and there by the ax, scraped by the dragging she had received at Pete's hands, and mutilated by the worse skinning he gave her next day, Dolores insisted upon its careful preservation, and at the ranch to which they moved in a few weeks, it occupied the chief place of honor in the living-room. Strange to say, Merton never mentioned a word about it to anyone. He even was embarrassed when Dolores called visitors' attention to it proudly.

Merton's injuries kept them a week longer on the Sapillo than they had expected to stay. During that time Pete hardly saw Dolores alone at all, but of course that did not bother him. One afternoon when she was gathering sticks for a quick fire, she came upon him suddenly, sitting under a tree, trying his teeth on green pinons. Dolores swooped down upon him, almost upsetting him, and kissed him all over his face before he could get his breath. It was the first and only sign he had had that anyone recognized his part in the work, but he would have been content without it.

Pete's face got red, and the only expression that he could manage was meant for a forbearing gratitude, but resembled stony indifference so closely that Dolores was

JUST LIKE A M

BY LUCIAN C

[illegible] Without a Vice.

SPARBOROUGH is one of those immensely respectable suburbs in Westchester, between the Bronx and White Plains. It is literally a town without a slum. Hurlbut was one of the immensely respectable citizens of Sparborough. He was literally a man without a vice.

Hurlbut was in charge of the credit department of a great wholesale house, and what is more reputable than a credit man? Being a credit man is like being something in a bank. Hurlbut was so correct that he reflected a kind of righteousness on the credit man's job instead of the job's reflecting it on him. He was so correct that nobody called him Bill, although his first name was William. He was often pointed out as a model to other husbands.

The Hurlbuts had lived at Sparborough for five years. William was chairman of the greens committee of the Sparborough Country Club, and Margaret was president of the Sparborough Improvement Association. They had twins, a white house in the colonial manner, and a Rankin sedan. There is something as inherently respectable in twins as there is in a Rankin sedan, and everybody knows what a Rankin sedan is—so well-made, so economical, and not in the least sporting.

Margaret Hurlbut was a Bryn Mawr girl. All Bryn Mawr girls are nice, but Margaret was extremely nice. She was extremely patient also. She did not believe in corporal punishment, and she had brought up her twin boys to the age of five without ever once spanking either of them.

Now there is probably no reason in the nature of things why William Hurlbut should not have gone on exemplifying all the virtues to the very end of a long and useful life. But the fact is, he didn't.

On the last Saturday in April, William Hurlbut took his friend, Arthur Tompson, to Sparborough for the week end. Arthur was a bachelor who expected soon to be married, and he was earnestly considering the purchase of a house in the suburbs. William had volunteered, after the fashion of suburbanites, to show him Sparborough.

After lunch at the Hurlbut's—one should, of course, say luncheon, in speaking of the Hurlbuts—they visited the Sparborough Country Club. They were standing on the veranda of the clubhouse, from which one had almost a birdseye view of the course, when Maisie Blaze drove up in the yellow speedster she affected. Maisie parked the car and nodded to William as she walked into the club.

"Who is that?" Arthur asked.

Men who didn't know Maisie Blaze invariably asked, "Who's that?" when she went by. Maisie was slim, dark and full of the "elan vital."

"That's Mrs. Blaisdell—otherwise Maisie Blaze," William said.

"Yes?" said Arthur, raising his eyebrows after the fashion of a man who wants more information and doesn't want to ask for it in so many words.

"She's the local siren," William explained. He did not mean to be insinuating; his tone quite unconsciously expressed his disapproval of Maisie Blaze. She was rather the leader of the younger set in the town and in the club. This set irritated William though it would have puzzled him to say precisely why. If pressed he would have said that they were irresponsible, or that they lived only for a good time, or something equally damning and equally general.

"What d'yu mean siren?" Arthur asked.

"Oh, she's perfectly nice," William answered. "But she's just like any young widow looking for trouble."

Such a speech was really not like William Hurlbut. He was a little astonished at himself for making it. And when he turned to lead the way into the house to show Arthur the club cups and saw that Maisie Blaze had stopped almost in the doorway and was standing there talking to Mrs. Green, he was a little worried for fear she might have overheard. He would not have liked her to overhear a remark so unkind. But, William immediately reflected that Maisie had been at least a dozen feet away when he made the remark and that he had spoken in rather a low tone, and that it wasn't in reason to suppose that she could have overheard. William was entirely governed by what was in reason, or so he believed.

William showed Arthur the cups, and played a round with him, and introduced him to the people he ought to know. Arthur spent Sunday with a real estate agent and went in with William on Monday morning quite completely sold to Sparborough. William was pleased. He felt that Arthur would make a solid addition to Sparborough. He was the sort of man William sometimes wished there were more of—a man of thirty, a business man, a man who wasn't light minded. Sparborough was, he would have admitted, chiefly populated by solid, respecable citizens. But there were people like Maisie Blaze and her crowd—the Greens and the Medways and Phil Barker and Ann Follett—who were perhaps too young to feel the seriousness of life and people like Mr. and Mrs. Bronson, who, though mature, had the frivolity that sometimes accompanies inherited money.

On Monday evening when William Hurlbut got off the 5:15, which regularly dropped him on the Sparborough platform at 5:50, he saw the yellow speedster of Maisie Blaze drawn up beside the walk in defiance of the parking rules. William experienced a strange, and for the moment, an inexplicable desire to turn his head the other way as he walked past. But just before he reached the speedster he remembered the remark he had made about Maisie Blaze and knew why he wished to avoid speaking to her. It was part of William's character that he instantly turned toward the speedster instead of away from it. Maisie Blaze was standing beside it watching the passengers coming down the platform with an expectant eye.

"How do you do, Mr. Hurlbut?" she said William paused.

"Hello, Mrs. Blaisdell," William said cordially. "Expecting someone?"

"Yes," said Maisie Blaze. "I'm expecting Mrs. Walker out from town for dinner, but I'm afraid she hasn't come."

William turned to survey the platform. The last half-dozen commuters were hurrying toward the ramp. The train was moving out of the station.

"No," William said. "She didn't come." He hestitated. He wanted to be on his way, yet he wanted to say something pleasantly hopeful to the disappointed Maisie. "She may be on the 6:10," he added.

Maisie Blaze slipped into the seat of her low car, in which one did not so much sit as lie.

"In the meantime," she said to William, "I'll take you home."

William was in the habit of walking to and from the Sparborough station. It was just a mile, and he felt that a mile walk morning and evening was the least he could allow himself, even if he did play golf every Saturday afternoon during the season, and take a stroll every Sunday afternoon when the weather permitted. Besides—

"Jump in," said Maisie Blaze. She started the engine.

"O, I wish you wouldn't trouble yourself," said William.

"I shan't. I'd much rather drive you over than sit here waiting. It's chilly, and besides I never did like waiting."

William rather awkwardly took the seat beside her. He felt exposed in the low car, without the enclosing sides of his Rankin sedan, without a top, without even a windshield. He did not approve of speedsters, He did not approve of Maisie Blaze. He instinctively recoiled from permitting her to drive him home. . . . But, after all, there was no harm in it and there was no getting out of it, either. He hoped she wouldn't drive as fast as she usually did. She had been arrested once for speeding. . . .

But Maisie Blaze did not speed. The large ninety-mile speedometer under the cowl gave a premonitory quiver or two and settled at a point just beyond ten. Indeed, the car moved so slowly through the streets of Sparborough that William was uncomfortable. He felt that as long as they were going so slowly he ought to talk and he did not want to talk to Maisie Blaze: he could not think of anything to say to Maisie Blaze.

She said nothing. She seemed to be thinking. Or did such a woman ever think?

William was mildly occupied with this question, when Maisie Blaze turned her head and smiled at him. William felt a curious and incredible thrill when she smiled at him. It was a slow smile, and yet a smile that somehow lighted up her whole face; her eyes positively sparkled when she smiled. William was aware of the scientific fact that eyes do not and cannot sparkle. But he observed that Maisie Blaze's eyes did sparkle—there were little points of light in their brown depths when she smiled.

"You know, Mr. Hurlbut," said Maisie Blaze, "I have an odd feeling about you." She paused. Her eyes were again on the road.

William was more than a little surprised He had not been aware that Maisie Blaze had any feeling about him. Also, he was curious. He could not imagine what was coming. There was no precedent in his experience for such a remark. He turned expectantly to Maisie Blaze. But she seemed to have forgotten her speech. She seemed to be completely engaged in driving her car. They were witthin a block of the Hurlbut house. In another moment he would be getting out of the speedster and going into the house.

"Well?" he said

Maisie Blaze drove her car the remaining hundred yards and stopped it opposite William's front door. William got out. But naturally he turned to Maisie Blaze.

"Do you mind my being quite frank?" she asked. And as she spoke she looked straight into his eyes. The little points of light were gone now; her eyes were velvety; it occurred to William that Maisie Blaze was not, perhaps, an altogether happy woman, even if she was frivolous.

"I should be glad to have you speak frankly," William said.

"Well," said Maisie Blaze, and dropped her gaze, "it's an odd thing to say—but I have sometimes felt that you didn't approve of me." She paused.

"Why," William began. "Why—" He really didn't know what to say. The truth was, of course, that he didn't approve of her. Margaret ddn't approve of her. But William could hardly say as much. Besides, he didn't seriously disapprove of Maisie Blaze. It was only—

"Not that you've ever said anything—I mean snubbed me," Maisie Blaze continued. "It's just a feeling I've had. Perhaps there's nothing in it. But you see how it is, Mr. Hurlbut. You're one of the best-known men in Sparborough and I have a tremendous respect for you—everybody has. And—well, it's just the way you look at me when I speak to you—in passing. It makes me feel as if I were a naughty little girl."

"Why—Why," said William, "I don't think anything of the sort."

"I'm glad," said Maisie Blaze simply. "I was afraid you did. And of course I'm not a —a very useful citizen—or anything."

William held out his hand. He couldn't quite assure Maisie Blaze that she was a useful citizen, and yet he wished suddenly to assure her of something.

Maisie took his hand and pressed it. William felt that she had a nice hand. Indeed, William felt that she was a nice girl—a surprisingly nice girl.

"Thank you," said Maisie Blaze. "It's good of you to understand. I knew I could trust you."

William lifted his hat and smiled, and Maisie smiled back—that slow smile which lighted up her face and made the little points of light sparkle in her eyes, and gave William a curious and incredible thrill. The yellow speedster started down the street and William turned toward his own front door.

Margaret met him in the hall.

"Wasn't that Mrs. Blaisdell you were talking with?" she asked.

"Yes," said William, "she was at the railway station to meet some woman who didn't come and she volunteered to drive me home."

"H-m-m-m," Margaret said. "I wondered how on earth you happened to be with her. It must have been rather trying."

"Why, no," William said honestly, "it wasn't tryng at all. She—" He hesitated. He had been about to tell Margaret what Maisie Blaze had said. He always told Margaret everything. But hadn't Maisie implied, by that phrase about trusting him, that he wasn't to repeat what she had said? Of course he could tell Margaret—he wasn't bound to confidences that excluded his wife.

But it might sound rather silly when repeated.

"She what?" Margaret asked.

"She—a—a—a—" Again William hesitated.

"William," Margaret said, "your trick of beginning a sentence and then pausing indefinitely before going on is most annoying. Will you please go on."

"She struck me as a much more—well, a much nicer person than I had always supposed she was," William said.

"It's a habit of hers," Margaret said tartly.

"What?" said William.

"I say it's a habit of hers—to strike men as being a much nicer person than they had always supposed."

"Well," said William judiciously, "she has seemed rather flirtatious."

"Rather," said Margaret.

William, with a guile that he did not know he possessed, changed the subject abruptly with an inquiry about the twins.

He did not see Maisie Blaze for several days after their chance meeeting at the railway staion. He found himself strangely expectant of meeting her. He intended to be just as friendly as he could be when he did meet her. He quite wanted to meet her. He found himself remembering her smile and those lights in her eyes. It would be even pleasanter to experience them again.

He experienced them again at the country club on Saturday. He was going through the club on his way out after playing nineteen holes when he ran plump into Maisie Blaze.

"Oh, Mr. Hurlbut, do come and have tea wth me," said Maisie Blaze.

"I'd be delighted," William said.

He was an hour late for dinner and Margaret was inclined to be petulant about it.

"I wish you had teleph [illegible] said.

"I hadn't any idea it was so late," William protested.

"But it isn't like you to forget," Margaret countered. "What were you doing, talking to Mrs. Blaisdell?

William knew it was a chance shot, but it wasn't any easier to meet for being that. He felt his face grow red. He felt that he must look guilty.

"Why, yes," William said, "I was."

He hoped his tone sounded matter-of-fact.

"Well," Margaret said. It was one of those noncommittal "Well's" which promise nothing except a "to be continued."

After dinner Margaret reminded William that she was going up to Boston to visit her mother for a few days.

"I hope, William," she said lightly, "that Mrs. Blaisdell won't occupy all your attention while I'm gone."

"What nonsense!" William said.

"I'm perfectly serious," Margaret replied, "Mrs. Blaisdell is a dangerous woman—and you've been with her twice in the last week."

"Just chance," William said. "I probably shan't so much as meet her on the street while you're away."

"Do you mind my being quite fr being quite frank?" she asked.

"Well," Margaret said, "I really think you ought to be circumspect in my absence. You know what a gossipy place Sparborough is."

"My dear Margaret," said William testily, "are you seriously considering the possibility that I might be gossiped about.?

"Very seriously," Margaret said slowly. "I think, for instance, that you oughtn't to call on Mrs. Blaisdell while I'm away."

William rose to his feet and strode across the floor.

"Good God, Margaret," he cried, "have I ever called on Mrs. Blaisdell while you were here?"

"No," Margaret admitted; "that's why it would be so pointed if you called while I was away."

"But who said I was going to call on her while you were away," Willam roared.

"You need't shout," Margaret said sweetly.

William opened his mouth to speak, thought better of it and stood staring at Margaret.

"I must say you surprise me." he said. "I feel as if I didn't know you at all. Five minutes ago I couldn't have imagined you saying such things."

"Five days ago," Margaret countered, "I couldn't have imagined you running around with Mrs. Blaisdell."

"But I'm not running around with her," William groaned. "I haven't the slightest desire to run around with her. I don't care if I never see her again."

William was instantly conscious that this last statement was a lie. He had not meant to lie. But what he said was a lie. He wondered if he ought to modify the statement. He wished he had said, "I don't particularly care if I never see her again." That would [illegible] strong enough.

"I'm awfully glad to hear it, William," Margaret said.

William spent the first evening of Margaret's absence reading a new book on business management. It occurred to him that it would be pleasant to call on Maisie Blaze. He caught the idea in the very act of occurring to him. He was shocked at himself for entertaining it. He went so far as to realize that he might actually have called her up on the telephone if it had not been for what Margaret had said. He might even have gone to see her.

The next evening passed in a similar fashion, except that he was by now becoming used to this astounding impulse of his to see Maisie Blaze. He rather enjoyed the impulse as long as he refused to act on it. And he could not act on it. He resolutely put the idea out of his mind five evenings in succession and then on the sixth evening, the last one before Margaret's return, Maisie Blaze called him on the telephone.

"Oh, Mr. Hurlbut," Maisie said, "I'm so glad you're in. It's Phil Barker's birthday—and we've just discovered it. We're going to celebrate and we want you to help. Can we call for you in half an hour?"

"Why—why—" there was certainly no harm in joining a birthday party of which Maisie happened to be a member; even Margaret could not object to that, "why—I'd be delighted," William concluded.

"Good for you," said Maisie Blaze. "We'll be round in twenty minutes or half an hour at most. We're going to the club and dance."

William hastened into his dinner clothes. He had no means of knowing what the others were wearing. But dinner clothes could hardly be out of place at an informal party. He was dressed in fifteen minutes, except for his tie. Margaret always tied his bow ties. But he managed in fifteen minutes more to do a passable bow. It was another fifteen minutes before they drove up.

There were three cars besides Maisie's, and William was simultaneously invited to enter all of them.

"You're coming with me," said Maisie Blaze. "I haven't room for more than one and you're chosen."

"I'm flattered," William said to her.

"We're going around to pick up the Greens," Maisie explained.

"It's 10 o'clock now," William said. "And it's eight miles to the club."

"It won't take long," Maisie assured him.

They arrived at the club at 11 and then William discovered that the party consisted of the Greens and the Medways and Ann Follett and George Hemenway and Gertrude Barker and Phil. It was precisely the crowd he had always felt to be irritatingly irresponsible. For a moment William wished he hadn't come. But he did want to dance with Maisie Blaze.

William found it a curiously upsetting experience. He hadn't danced with anyone for a long time. He had supposed that putting one's arm around a girl in dancing was a formal convention, like shaking hands. But he was curiously embarrassed in putting his arm around Maisie Blaze. He wanted to and he was afraid to. He danced a dozen dances with Maisie Blaze. He suddenly realized it was late.

"Maisie!" he said.

"Yes—Bill," said Maisie.

William colored. He had not meant to call her Maisie. He never had called her anything but Mrs. Blaisdell. But he had got to thinking of her as Maisie.

"It's—it's—" he stammered.

"It's what?" asked Maisie Blaze.

"It's 1 o'clock," he said.

"Oh," Maisie said, "it's time for supper. We've got two bottles of champagne—to toast Phil."

It was half-past two when the supper was over, and the party began to break up. Maisie couldn't at first find the key to her car. And when she did, the battery refused to turn over the engine. The rest had gone on ahead. William dug the crank out of the tool box and started the engine.

"It's raining," Maisie said, as the car moved off.

"Yes," William agreed.

"I'm afraid we're in for a wetting."

"No harm done if we are," William said lightly. He was sitting beside Maise Blaze, his shoulder just touching hers, and he cared nothing whatever for a bit of rain.

Maisie stepped on the throttle and the low car shot out of the club drive into the road to Sparborough.

The rain was coming hard now [illegible] he speedster was splashing mud over the hood and into their faces.

"There's a marshy place just below Bronson's," William warned her.

"I know it," Maisie answered. "We'll stick to the middle of the road."

But she didn't. She ran off a yard or so as they passed the Bronson house.

"Look out!" William cried.

It was too late.

The car slowed down sickeningly, slowing in the mud, and stopped.

"We're stuck," said Maisie Blaze.

William got down to see. They were stuck. One rear wheel had buried itself to the hub in the mud. The lower side of the engine pan was resting in the mud.

"I wonder if it would do any good to put on the chains?" William asked.

"I think we'd better wake up the Bronsons' chauffeur and get him to pull us out," Maisie said.

"Let's try the chains."

"It's an awfully dirty job."

"I'm game," said William.

The mud seemed bottomless, but William knocked a board off the Bronsons' fence to rest the jack on and got the wheel up. He had to stand in mud up to his knees, to dig mud away with his hands, to wallow in mud, but he did it.

"Don't you suppose we could run out on a board?" Maisie asked.

William got another board, but after two trials they gave that up. Each time the car ran off the board he had to jack the wheel up again. He was beginning to tire and he was plastered with mud to his eyes. He finally got a chain on. The motor spun the wheel. William tried pushing from the rear, but still the wheel spun.

"There's nothing for it but to wake up the Bronsons' chauffeur," Maisie said. "It's nearly five o'clock now."

"Why don't we leave the car here and walk in?" William suggested. He did not like the idea of waking up the Bronsons' chauffeur. There was no reason to advertise their predicament. And the Bronsons would think it a good story. William didn't want to be a good story.

"It's six miles," Maisie said. "I'd rather sleep in the car."

"Well," said William, "I'll go and see what I can do."

"I'll go with you," said Maisie Blaze.

"You stay here," said William. "I can do it."

"But I don't want to stay here all alone in the dark while you go way up to the Bronsons."

"All right," William said. He took her hand and started up the road. It was sloppy going.

"Let's be very quiet," he whispered to Maisie as they entered the Bronsons' gate. "We don't want to wake up the whole family."

"I should say not," Maisie whispered.

In that moment the air was split by a fierce bark. Instinctively they leaned against each other. The bark was the signal for a volley of barks, that arose in one vast crashing crescendo.

"It's that damn kennel of his," William said. "He's raising police dogs."

"I hope none of them are loose," said Maisie Blaze.

"If any of them were, we wouldn't be here," said William grimly.

They stole toward the garage, over which the chauffeur had his quarters. The dogs continued to bark like mad things. William and Maisie crept forward like a pair of burglars. They had reached the chauffeur's door when the night suddenly blazed with light.

"Hands up!" said a voice behind them.

William and Maisie turned and faced the voice. Bronson was standing in a second-story window with a shotgun in his hands.

"It's us," wailed Maisie Blaze.

Bronson slowly lowered his gun.

"Why, it's Hurlbut and Maisie Blaze," he said. "Wait a minute and I'll be down."

"Now we are in for it," said Maisie Blaze.

William made no comment. He knew it made little difference whether Margaret was home or not if she was going to hear about it anyway.

Bronson beckoned to them from the kitchen door.

"What on earth are you two up to? Lord, but you're a sight, Hurlbut—what have you been doing?"

"We're stuck in the mud," William explained with dignity. "We were going to wake up your chauffeur and get him to pull us out."

Bronson began to laugh. When he laughed he shook. And when he shook he laughed harder.

"It isn't funny to us, Bob," interposed Maisie Blaze.

"I'm sorry," Bronson apologized. "I'm awfully sorry. But do you know what time [illegible]

"Well," said Bronson thoughtfully, "perhaps you'd better."

Bronson waked up the chauffeur and, at the earnest solicitation of William, returned himself to bed. The chauffeur was irritable. But he got out a big car and dragged the speedster out of the mud.

It was six o'clock when William got the mud out of his hair and turned in, and he had to get up at half-past seven in order to be at the office by nine. William never missed a day at the office.

In the morning William snatched time to put his dinner clothes and his overcoat and his hat and his shoes in a suitcase. He thought they were still good, but he intended to drop them at the cleaner's on his way to the station; they were not the kind of things one leaves about the house.

He decided, in the interstices of a somewhat crowded day at the office that it would be best to tell Margaret about his experience in coming home from the country club—immediately. He could describe it briefly and humorously and without too much insistence on the hour when he got home.

But when he was face to face with Margaret at dinner that evening, he began to consider the possibility of not telling Margaret. He had neither the skill nor the control to give Margaret the true picture—to sketch in the casualness of the occasion, to show the utter fortuitousness of his misadventure, and to suggest firmly the triviality of the whole business.

Margaret's mind, would be certain to seize upon the more outstanding facts, instead of on the significant ones. Margaret would note the hour at which they had left the club, the hour at which they had awakened Mr. Bronson, the hour at which he had got to bed. Above all, Margaret would insist on the fact that he had been alone with Maisie Blaze. How could he make her see that time really had nothing to do with it? Or that his being with Maise Blaze was the merest chance? It might have been any other woman. That is, well, it might conceivably have been some other woman.,

He wished he could consult Maisie Blaze. He wanted to talk to Maise Blaze. Half the fun of a thing like that was in talking it over afterward. But he couldn't have that half unless he met Maisie by chance.

William arrived at the station the next morning five minutes early. He opened his morning paper, as he stood on the platform. But he did not read. He was suddenly aware that one of three men standing in a group behind him had mentioned his name.

"There's Hurlbut," one of them said.

"Extraordinary chap," another remarked.

William was aware that they were talking in much louder tones than necessary, that indeed they were talking for his ears.

"Regular old mud turtle," said the third member of the group.

"Yes," said the first man, "they say he likes to get out and slosh in the mud."

"Just buries himself in it."

"Any time of the day or night."

"But he prefers it just before daylight."

William turned and faced them and they all burst into loud guffaws.

Margaret was strangely tense at dinner that night. William knew that she knew. But he did not broach the subject. He didn't know how much she knew

After dinner Margaret took him upstairs. she dragged a shirt from the laundry bag behind his closet door. It was THE shirt. When he looked at it now, William was astonished that one shirt could carry so much mud; it looked as if you had washed it in mud and then stood off and thrown mud at it to see how much would stick.

Margaret held that shirt up and looked at William.

William looked at Margaret.

And then Margaret burst into tears.

William essayed to comfort her. He put his arm around her shoulders to draw her to him. But she flung him off.

"No," said Margaret. "No."

William made another attempt.

"Don't touch me!" Margaret shrilled.

William let his arms drop to his sides. Helpless, he surveyed the wreckage he had wrought. He couldn't put his arms around her; she wouldn't let him. He couldn't speak; there was nothing to say.

"I'm going away from Sparborough," Margaret said distinctly between sobs. "I won't live in the same town with that woman, and be-be-besides, our reputation is ruined."

"Nonsense," said William.

"E-e-everybody knows," said Margaret.

William discovered in the week that followed that everybody did know. Bronson had made a story out of it and told it everywhere. William met the story, or some ref-
